not the things which they taught. In so much that Caiphas, through this assistance of God's spirit, being otherwise a wicked man, yet pronounced the truth, That one must die for the people. Which therefore S. John the Evangelist ascribeth to his Chair and office, because he was High Priest that year. Ioan. 11.

Seeing then God's providence and continual assistance was so clear, and assured in the Church of the old Testament, [1][2] much more is the Church of Christ builded upon a sure rock, assured of his perpetual assistance, & always preserved from erring in Faith, or in general practice of Religion. And that by God's like assured ordinance of one supreme head and Judge, S. Peter, and his Successor: for whom our Saviour prayed, that his faith should not fail. Further commanding him, that he should confirm his brethren. All which we see is performed in the Successors of S. Peter, whereas the successors of the other Apostles are all failed long since. The same most assured stability of the Church of Christ, is further confirmed by the whole Law and Prophets. Namely, Deut. 32. and 33. where Moyses foretelleth more power and grace in the Church, to be collected in the Gentiles of all nations, than ever was in that of the Israelites or Jews. Likewise, 1. Reg. 2. The same was both prefigured and prophesied by holy Anna: The hungry (those that desire God's grace and glory) are filled: until the barren woman (the Church of the Gentiles) bare very many: and she that had many children was weakened. Shewing that the Church of the Jews had many, until the plentitude of Gentiles much more abounded. Wherefore the Psalmist inviteth all nations to praise God, saying: Psal. 116. Praise our Lord all ye Gentiles: praise him all ye peoples. Also 2. Reg. 7. God promised David, saying: [3] Thy Kingdom for ever before thy face, and thy throne shall be firm continually. [4] which was not verified in David's temporal Kingdom. For it was quickly divided, after Salomon's death, and a small part left to his son Roboam. And after the captivity in Babylon, his seed had only title and right without possession of royal throne. Again 2. Reg. 22. The same royal Prophet in his Canticle of thanksgiving, and last prophetical words (chap. 23.) much preferreth the spiritual Kingdom of Christ, before the earthly Kingdom of the Jews. But most specially and plainly in the Psalms: Psal. 2. Why did the Gentiles rage, and peoples meditate vain things? Signifying that the fury of all adversaries rageth in vain, against Christ and his Church. For I am appointed, by him (saith Christ of his Father) King over Sion, his holy hill. [5] I will give thee (saith God to his Son) the Gentiles for thine inheritance, [6] and thy possession the ends of the earth. Psal. 17. A people which I knew not, hath served me. Psal. 44. The Queen (the Church) stood on thy right hand in golden raiment, compassed with variety, of virtues, and diverse sorts of holy professions. Psal. 47. Mount Sion is founded with the exultation of the whole earth. For ever and ever he (Christ) shall rule us evermore. Psal. 86. Glorious things are said of thee, o city of God. But omitting innumerable other such texts, the 88. Psalm containeth a large prophecy of Christ and his Church, where S. Augustin giveth us this brief admonition: [7] Christiani estis, Christum agnoscite. You are Christians, agnise Christ. I will put (saith God) his hand in the sea, Christ's dominion in the Gentiles, and his right hand in the rivers; all sorts shall serve him. He shall be high above the Kings of the earth. Of the Church he addeth: I will put his seed for ever and ever, and his throne as the days of heaven. Neither do sins frustrate this promise of God, therefore it followeth: But if his children shall forsake my law: and will not walk in my judgements: If they shall profane my justices, and not keep my commandments; [8] What then, will Christ for all this abandon his Church, as he did the old Synagogue, of which God saith: Deut. 32. They have provoked me in that which was no God: and I will provoke them, in that which is no people? Not so. How then? I will visit, saith our Lord, their iniquities with a rod, and their sins with stripes. But my mercy I will not take away from him. This is a strong Firmament (saith S. Augustin) [9] God promiseth, yea sweareth, and will not lie to David, that his seed shall continue for ever. His throne as the Sun in God's sight, and the Moon perfected for ever. So this great Doctor sheweth by holy Scriptures against the Donatists, and in them against

CHAPTER VII.

Salomon's palace, 2. his house in the forest, 8. and the Queen's house is built. 13. Two great brazen pillars: 23. a sea (or laver) 27. ten brazen feet: 38. ten less lavatories, and other vessels, and implements pertaining to the Temple, adorned with images of Angels, and other creatures, are further described. [1]

[1] The beginning of the fifth age.

And his own house Salomon built in thirteen years, and brought it to perfection. 2 He built also the house of the forest of Libanus of an hundred cubits in length, & fifty cubits in breadth, and thirty cubits in height: and four galleries between pillars of cedar: for he had cut cedar trees into pillars. 3 And he decked the whole vault with boards of cedar, which was held up with five & forty pillars, And one order had fifteen pillars, 4 set one against another, 5 and looked one over against another, with equal space between the pillars, & over the pillars square beams in all equal. 6 And the porch of the pillars he made of fifty cubits in length, and thirty cubits in breadth: and another porch before the greater porch: and pillars, and tops upon the pillars. 7 He made also the porch of the throne, wherein the seat of judgment is; and covered it with cedar wood from the pavement unto the top. 8 And the little house, where they sat in judgment, was in the midst of the porch of like work. He made also a house for the daughter of Pharao (which Salomon had taken to wife) of such work, as also this porch. 9 All of chosen stones, which were sawed by a certain rule and measure both within and without: from the foundation to the top of the walls, and without unto the greater court. 10 And the foundations of chosen stones, great stones of ten or eight cubits. 11 And above there were hewed chosen stones of equal measure, and in like manner of cedar.

12 And the greater court round with three rews of hewed stones, and one rew of planed cedar, moreover also in the inner court of the house of our Lord, and in the porch of the house. 13 King Salomon also sent, and took Hiram from Tyre, 14 the son of a widow woman of the tribe of Nephthali, his father, a Tyrian, an artificer in brass, and full of wisdom, and intelligence, and skill to make all work of brass. Who when he was come to king Salomon, made all his work. 15 And he cast two brazen pillars, of eighteen cubits in height one pillar: and a line of twelve cubits compassed both pillars. 16 He made also two little heads, which should be put upon the heads of the pillars, cast of brass: five cubits high one little head, and five cubits the other little head: 17 and as it were in manner of a net, & of chains knit one to the other with marvelous work. Both little heads of the pillars were cast: seven rews of little nets in one little head, & seven little nets in the other little head. 18 And finished the pillars, and two rews round about every net, that they might cover the little heads, which were over the top of the pomegranates: in like manner did he also to the second little head. 19 And the little heads, that were upon the heads of the pillars, were made as it were with lily work, in the porch, of four cubits. 20 And again other little heads in the top of the pillars above, according to the measure of the pillar against the little nets: and of the pomegranates were two hundred rews round about the second little head. 21 And he set two pillars in the porch of the temple: & when he had erected the pillar on the right hand, he called the name thereof [1] Iachin: in like manner he erected the second pillar, & called the name thereof [2] Booz.

[1] * Firmness. [2] * in strength.

22 And upon the heads of the pillars he put a work in manner of a lily: and the work of the pillars was perfected. 23 He made also (a) a sea of founder's work, of ten cubits from brim to brim, round in compass, the height thereof was of five cubits, and a cord of thirty cubits did compass it round about.

(a) A vessel so called for the bigness being a great lavatory.

24 And the graving under the brim compassed it, ten cubits going about the lavatory: there were two rews of chamfered furrowed gravings cast. 25 And it stood upon twelve oxen, of which three looked to the North, and three to the West, and three to the South, and three to the East, and the sea was over them: whose hinder parts were all hid inward. 26 And the thickness of the lavatory was of three ounces: and the brim thereof as it were the brim of a chalice, and the leaf of crisped lily: it contained two thousand (b) bates.

(b) Batus containeth about five gallons: so this vessel contained ten thousand gallons.

27 And he made ten brazen feet, of four cubits in length every foot, and four cubits in breadth, and three cubits in height. 28 And the very work itself of the feet, was entergraven: and entergravings between the jointures. 29 And between the little crowns and the plaits, lions, and oxen, and Cherubs: and in the jointures likewise above: and under the lions & oxen as it were bands of brass hanging down. 30 And four wheels at every foot, and axletrees of brass: and at four sides as it were little shoulders under the lavatory cast, looking one against another. 31 The mouth also of the lavatory was inward in the top of the head: and that which appeared outward, was of one cubit all round, and together it had one cubit and a half: and in the corners of the pillars were diverse engravings: and the middle enterpillars square not round. 32 The four wheels also which were at the four corners of a foot, joined one to another under the foot: one wheel had in height a cubit and a half. 33 And they were such wheels as are accustomed to be made in a chariot: and their axletrees and spokes, and strakes, and naves, all cast. 34 For those four little shoulders also at every corner of one foot, were cast out of the foot and joined together. 35 And in the top of the foot was a certain roundness of half a cubit, so wrought, that the lavatory might be put thereon, having the engravings thereof, and diverse carvings of it-self. 36 He graved also in those ceilings, which were of brass, and in the corners, cherubs, and lions, and palmtrees, as it were in the similitude of a man standing, that they seemed not to be engraven, but put to round about. 37 After this manner made he ten feet, of one casting and measure, and like graving. 38 He made also ten lavatories of brass: one lavatory contained forty bates, and it was of four cubits: also at every foot, that is ten, he put so many lavatories. 39 And he set the ten feet, five on the right side of the temple, and five on the left: and the sea he put on the right side of the temple against the East toward the South. 40 Hiram therefore made cauldrons, and shovels, & little pots, and perfected all the work of king Salomon in the temple of our Lord. 41 Two pillars, and two cords of the little heads upon the little heads of the pillars: and two little nets, to cover the two cords, that were over the heads of the pillars. 42 And four hundred pomegranates in the two nets: two rews of pomegranates in every net, to cover the cords of the little heads, which were upon the heads of the pillars. 43 And ten feet, and ten lavatories upon the feet. 44 And one sea, and twelve oxen under the sea. 45 And cauldrons, & shovels, and little pots. All the vessels that Hiram made to king Salomon in the house of our Lord, were of bright latten. 46 In the champion country of Jordan did the king cast those things in a clay ground, between Socoth & Sarthan. 47 And Salomon placed all the vessels: but for the exceeding great multitude the brass could not be weighed. 48 And Salomon made all the vessels in the house of our Lord: an altar of gold, and a table, whereupon the loaves of proposition should be put, of gold: 49 and candlesticks of gold, five on the right hand, and five on the left against the oracle, of pure gold: and as it were little flowers, and lamps above of gold: and golden snuffers, 50 and water pots, and fleshhooks, and phials, and mortars, and censers, of most pure gold: and the hinges of doors of the inner Sanctum Sanctorum, and of the doors of the house of the temple, were of gold. 51 And Salomon perfected all the work that he did in the house of our Lord, and brought in the things that David his father (c) had sanctified, silver and gold, and the vessels, and laid them in the treasures of the house of our Lord.

(c) Had designed & dedicated to holy uses.

CHAPTER VIII.

The ark is brought in, and the temple dedicated. 10. A glorious cloud replenisheth it. 14. Salomon prayeth long to God, 55. blesseth the people, 62. and many victims are offered in this solemn festivity.

Then were gathered together all the ancients of Israel with the princes of the tribes, and the heads of the families of the children of Israel to king Salomon into Jerusalem: that they might carry the Ark of the covenant of our Lord out of the city of David, that is, out of Sion. 2 And all Israel assembled to king Salomon in the month of Ethanim, on a solemn day, that is the seventh month. 3 And all the ancients of Israel came, and the Priests took the ark, 4 and carried the ark of our Lord, and the tabernacle of covenant, and all the vessels of the Sanctuary, that were in the tabernacle: and the Priests and the Levites carried them. 5 And King Salomon, and all the multitude of Israel which was assembled unto him, went with him before the ark, and they immolated sheep and oxen without estimation and number. 6 And the priests brought in the ark of the covenant of our Lord into his place, into the oracle of the temple, into Sanctum Sanctorum under the wings of the Cherubs. 7 For the Cherubs spread their wings over the place of the ark, and covered the ark, and the bars thereof above. 8 And whereas the bars stood out, and the ends of them appeared without in the Sanctuary before the oracle, they appeared no farther outward, which also were there until this present day. 9 And in the ark there was (a) nothing else but two tables of stone, which Moyses put in it in Horeb, when our Lord made the covenant with the children of Israel, when they came out of the Land of Aegypt.

(a) There was no more within the ark, Deut. 10. but on the out side was the rod of Aaron, Nu. 17. Heb. 9. the golden pot with Manna, Exod. 16. Heb. 9. and the book of the law repeated by Moyses, Deut. 31.

10 And it came to pass, when the Priests were gone out of the Sanctuary, a cloud filled the house of our Lord, 11 and the Priests could not stand and minister for the cloud: for the glory of our Lord had filled the house of our Lord. 12 Then said Salomon: Our Lord said that he would dwell in a cloud. 13 Building I have built a house for thy habitation, thy most firm throne for ever. 14 And the king turned his face, and (b) blessed all the Church of Israel: for all the Church of Israel stood.

(b) Princes bless their people and parents their children.

15 And Salomon said: Bless be our Lord the God of Israel, who spake by his mouth to David my father, & in his own hands hath perfected it, saying: 16 Since the day that I brought my people Israel out of Aegypt, I chose no city of all the tribes of Israel, that a house might be built, and my name might be there: but I chose David to be over my people Israel. 17 And David my father would have built a house to the name of our Lord the God of Israel: 18 and our Lord said to David my father: In that thou hast thought in thy heart to build a house to my name, thou hast done well, casting this same thing in thy mind. 19 Nevertheless thou shalt not build me a house, but thy son, that shall come forth of thy reins, he shall build a house to my name. 20 Our Lord hath confirmed his word, which he spake: & I stand for David my father, & sit upon the throne of Israel, as our Lord hath spoken: and I have built a house to the name of our Lord the God of Israel. 21 And I have appointed there a place for the ark, wherein the covenant of our Lord is, which he made with our fathers, when they came out of the Land of Aegypt. 22 And Salomon stood before the altar of our Lord in the sight of the assembly of Israel, and extended his hands toward heaven, 23 and said: Lord God of Israel, there is no God like to thee in heaven above, and upon the earth beneath: which keepest covenant and mercy with thy servants, that walk before thee in all their heart. 24 Which hast kept to thy servant David my father, the things that thou hast spoken to him: by mouth thou didst speak, and with thy hands thou hast accomplished, as this day proveth. 25 Now therefore Lord God of Israel, keep unto thy servant David my father the things which thou hast spoken to him, saying: There shall not be taken away of thee a man before me, which sitteth upon the throne of Israel: (c) yet so if thy children shall keep their way, that they walk before me as thou hast walked in my sight.

(c) Salomon knew well God's conditional promise, but persevered not in keeping his commandments, and therefore a great part of the Kingdom was taken from his children, yet the right of the Kingdom of Juda remained to his seed even to Christ our Saviour.

26 And now Lord God of Israel, let thy words be established, which thou hast spoken to thy servant David my father. 27 Is it then to be thought that indeed God dwelleth upon the earth? For if heaven, and the heavens of heavens cannot contain thee, how much more this house, which I have built? 28 But look toward the prayer of thy servant, & to his petitions, o Lord my God: hear the hymn and the prayer, which thy servant prayeth before thee this day: 29 that thy eyes be opened upon this house night and day: upon the house, whereof thou saidst: My name shall be there: that thou hear the prayer, which thy servant prayeth in this place to thee. 30 That thou hear the request of thy servant & of thy people Israel, whatsoever they shall pray for in this place, & thou shalt hear in the place of thy habitation in heaven: and when thou hast heard, thou shalt be merciful, 31 If a man shall sin against his neighbour, & shall have any oath, wherewith he is held fast bound: & shall come because of the oath before thine altar into thy house, 32 thou shalt hear in heaven: and shalt do, and judge thy servants, condemning the impious, and rendering his way upon his head, and justifying the just, and (d) rewarding him according to his justice.

(d) Reward of good works.

33 If thy people Israel shall fly their enemies (because they will sin against thee) & doing penance and confessing to thy name, shall come, and pray, & beseech thee in this house; 34 hear in heaven, & forgive the sin of thy people Israel, and thou shalt reduce them unto the land, which thou gavest to their fathers. 35 If the heaven shall be shut, and it rain not, because of their sins, and praying in this place, they do penance to thy name, and shall be converted from their sins through their affliction: 36 hear them in heaven, and forgive the sins of thy servants, and of thy people Israel: and shew them a good way wherein they may walk, and give rain upon thy land, which thou has given to thy people in possession. 37 If famine arise in the land, or pestilence, or corrupt air, or blasting, or locust, or rust, and their enemy afflict them besieging the gates, all plague, all infirmity, 38 all cursing, and banning, that shall chance to any man of thy people Israel: if any man shall know the wound of his heart, and shall spread forth his hands in this house, 39 thou shalt hear in heaven, in the place of thy habitation, and shalt be merciful again, and shalt so do that thou give to every one according to his ways, as thou shalt see his heart (for thou only knowest the heart of all the children of men) 40 that they fear thee all the days, which they live upon the face of the land, which thou hast given our fathers. 41 Moreover also the stranger, which is not of thy people Israel, when he shall come from a far country for thy name (for thy great name shall be heard of, and thy strong hand, 42 and thy stretched out arm every-where) when therefore he shall come, and shall pray in this place, 43 thou shalt hear in heaven, in the firmament of thy habitation, & thou shalt do all things, for the which the stranger shall invocate thee: that all the peoples of the earth may learn to fear thy name, as thy people Israel, and may prove that thy name is invocated upon this house, which I have built. 44 If thy people shall go forth to war against their enemies, by the way, whithersoever thou shalt send them, they shall pray to thee against the way of the city, which thou hast chosen, and against the house, which I have built to thy name, 45 and thou shall hear in heaven their prayers, and their petitions, and shall do judgment for them. 46 But if they shall sin to thee (for there is no man which sinneth not) and thou being wrath shalt deliver them to their enemies, and they shall be led captive into the land of their enemies far or near, 47 and shall do penance in their (e) heart in the place of captivity, and converted shall beseech thee in their captivity, saying: We have sinned, we have done wickedly, we have dealt impiously:

(e) External works of penance, except they proceed from the heart, suffice not for remission of sin.

48 and shall return to thee in all their heart, and all their soul, in the land of their enemies, to the which they shall be led captive: and shall pray to thee against the way of their land, which thou gavest to their fathers, & of the city which thou hast chosen, & of the temple which I have built to thy name: 49 thou shalt hear in heaven, in the firmament of thy throne their prayers, and their petitions, and shall do their judgment for them: 50 and shalt be merciful to thy people, which sinned to thee, and to all their iniquities wherewith they have transgressed against thee: & thou shalt give mercy before them that shall have them captives, that they may have compassion on them. 51 For they are thy people, and thine inheritance, whom thou hast brought out of the Land of Aegypt, from the midst of the iron furnace. 52 That thy eyes be open to the petition of thy servant, & of thy people Israel, and thou hear them in all things for which they shall invocate thee. 53 For thou hast separated them to thee for an inheritance from all the peoples of the earth, as thou hast spoken by Moyses thy servant, when thou didst bring our fathers out of Aegypt, Lord God. 54 And it came to pass, when Salomon had accomplished praying to our Lord all this prayer and petition, he rose from the sight of the altar of our Lord: for he had fastened both knees on the ground, and had spread his hands toward heaven. 55 He stood therefore and blessed all the assembly of Israel with a loud voice, saying: 56 Blessed be our Lord, which hath given rest to his people Israel, according to all things that he hath spoken: there hath not failed so much as one word of all the good things, that he spake by Moyses his servant. 57 Be our Lord God with us, as he hath been with our fathers, not forsaking, nor rejecting us. 58 But incline he our hearts to him, that we may walk in all his ways, and keep his commandments, and his ceremonies, and judgments whatsoever he commanded our fathers. 59 And be these my words, wherewith I have prayed before our Lord, approaching to our Lord God day and night, that he may do judgment for his servant, and for his people Israel day by day: 60 that all the people of the earth may know, that our Lord he is God, and there is none other besides him. 61 Let our heart also be perfect with our Lord God, that we walk in his decrees, and keep his commandments, as also this day. 62 Therefore the king, and all Israel with him, did immolate victims before our Lord. 63 And Salomon killed pacific hosts, which he immolated to our Lord, of oxen two and twenty thousand, and of sheep an hundred twenty thousand: and they dedicated the temple of our Lord, the king, and the children of Israel. 64 In that day the king sanctified the midst of the court, that was before the house of our Lord: for he made the holocaust there, and sacrifice, and fat of the pacifics: because the brazen altar, that was before our Lord, was too little, and could not take the holocaust, and sacrifice, and fat of the pacifics. 65 Salomon therefore made in the time a solemn festivity, and all Israel with him, a great multitude from the entrance of Emath unto the River of Aegypt, before our Lord God, seven days and seven days, that is, fourteen days. 66 And in the eighth day he dismissed the people: Who blessing the king, went into their tabernacles rejoicing, and with a joyful heart for all the good things, that our Lord had done to David his servant, and to Israel his people.

CHAPTER IX.

Our Lord appearing again to Salomon, 4. admonisheth him and his people to keep the precepts, 6. threatening punishment if they do not. 10. The king of Tyre receiveth twenty cities of Salomon, but liketh them not. 14. Salomon buildeth more cities and towns. 20. Maketh diverse nations tributary. 24. The Queen repaireth to her house. 25. The king offereth victims thrice every year. 26. And fetcheth gold from Ophir.

And it came to pass when Salomon had perfected the building of the house of our Lord, & the king's house, and all that he wished & would have done, 2 our Lord appeared to him the second time, as he had appeared to him in Gabaon. 3 And our Lord said to him: I have heard thy prayer & thy petition which thou hast prayed before me: I have sanctified this house, which thou hast built, that I might put my name there for ever, and mine eyes and my heart shall be there always. 4 Thou also if thou wilt walk before me, as thy father walked, (a) in simplicity of heart, and in equity, and wilt do all things, which I have commanded thee, and wilt keep my ordinances and my judgments:

(a) External worship is not acceptable to God, except it proceed from internal sincerity and devotion. Wherefore S. Augustin saith: God is worshipped in faith, hope, and charity. Enchirid. c. 3.

5 I will set the throne of thy Kingdom over Israel for ever, as I have spoken to David thy father, saying: There shall not be taken away a man of thy stock from the throne of Israel. 6 But if by revolting you and your children shall turn away, not following me, nor keeping my commandments, and my ceremonies, which I have proposed to you, but shall go and worship strange gods, and adore them: 7 I will take away Israel from the face of the land, which I have given them, and the temple which I have sanctified to my name, I will cast away from my sight, and Israel shall be for a proverb, and for a fable to all peoples. 8 And this house shall be for an example: every one that shall pass by it, shall wonder, and hiss, and say: Why hath the Lord done thus to this land, and to this house? 9 And they shall answer: Because they have forsaken the Lord their God, which brought their fathers out of the Land of Aegypt, and have followed strange gods, and adored them, and worshipped them: therefore hath the Lord brought upon them all this evil. 10 And twenty years being complete, after that Salomon had built the two houses, that is, the house of our Lord, and the house of the king, 11 (Hiram the king of Tyre ministering to Salomon cedar trees & fir trees, and gold according to all that he had need) then Salomon (b) gave to Hiram twenty towns in the Land of Galilee.

(b) Salomon did not sell these cities, for he could not alienate them, but let the King of Tyre have the use and revenues in payment for timber, & for the gold which he sent.

12 And Hiram went from Tyre, to see the towns which Salomon had given him, and they pleased him not, 13 and he said: Are these the cities, which thou hast given me, brother? And he called them the land [1] Chabul, until this day.

14 Hiram also sent to king Salomon an hundred and twenty talents of gold. 15 This is the sum of the expenses, which king Salomon offered to build the house of our Lord, and his own house, and Mello, and the wall of Jerusalem, and Heser, and Mageddo, and Gazer. 16 Pharao the king of Aegypt came up and took Gazer, and burnt it with fire: And the Chananite, that dwelt in the city, he slew, and gave it for a dowry to his daughter the wife of Salomon. 17 Salomon therefore built Gazer, and Bethhoron the lower, 18 and Balaath, and Palmira in the Land of the wilderness. 19 And all the villages, that pertained to him, and were without wall, he fenced, and the cities of the chariots, and the cities of the horsemen, and whatsoever pleased him to build in Jerusalem, and in Libanus, and in all the land of his dominion. 20 All the people, that was remaining of the Amorrheites, and Hetheites, and Pherezites, and Heveites, and Jebusites, that are not of the children of Israel: 21 their children, that were remaining in the land, to wit, those whom the children of Israel could not abolish: Salomon made tributaries, until this day. 22 But of the children of Israel Salomon appointed not any man to serve, but they were men of war, and his servants, and Princes, and captains, and overseers of the chariots and horses. 23 And there were Princes over all the works of Salomon, made overseers, five hundred fifty, which had the people subject, and commanded over their appointed works. 24 And the daughter of Pharao went up out of the city of David into her house, which Salomon had built her: then did he build Mello. 25 Salomon also offered three times every year holocausts, and pacific victims upon the altar, which he had built to our Lord, and he burnt incense before our Lord: and the temple was perfected. 26 King Salomon also made a navy in Asiongaber, which is beside Ailath in the shore of the Redsea in the Land of Idumea. 27 And Hiram sent in that navy his men, that were mariners & skillful of the sea, with the servants of Salomon. 28 Who when they were come into Ophir, the gold taken thence of four hundred and twenty talents, they brought to king Salomon.

CHAPTER X.

The Queen of Saba coming to king Salomon, admireth his wisdom, magnificence, and order of government. 10. She giveth and receiveth gifts. 14. Salomon receiveth much gold diverse ways: 16. maketh golden targets, 18. a magnificent throne, 21. and many golden vessels. 25. Many bring him presents. 26. He hath many chariots, horsemen, 27. abundance of silver. 28. Merchants of diverse Kingdoms sell him horses.

But[1] the queen of (a) Saba also having heard the fame of Salomon, in the name of our Lord came to prove him in hard propositions.

[1]* A wonderful thing, that a Queen upon fame of a man's wisdom travelled so far to hear him speak, and to see his government. But it was God's inspiration to signify by this figure, that the Church of Christ should be gathered of the Gentiles in all nations. Kings, Queens and most potent Princes also submitting themselves to Christ. Isaie 49. (a) Part of Arabia is called Saba, near to Jury, but this Saba is beyond Arabia, as S. Hierom testifieth in Esaie 60. li. 17. it seemeth to be in Aethiopia: for our Saviour saith Mat. 12. The Queen of the South came from the ends of the earth, to hear the wisdom of Salomon.

2 And entering into Jerusalem with a great train, and riches, and camels carrying spices, and gold exceeding infinite, and precious stones, she came to king Salomon, and spake to him all things that she had in her heart. 3 And Salomon interpreted to her all the words, that she proposed: there was not a word, that the king could be ignorant of, and could not answer her. 4 And the queen of Saba seeing all the wisdom of Salomon, and the house which he had built, 5 and the meats of his table, and the habitations of his servants, and the orders of them that served, and their garments, cup-bearers, and the holocausts which he offered in the house of our Lord: (b) she had no longer spirit,

(b) As this Queen had no spirit, when she saw Salomon's wisdom, so the Church gathered of gentiles knowing Christ's grace, & finding the masters of Evangelical doctrine, casting away the spirit of pride, and laying off all haughtiness of mind, learned to distrust in herself, and to trust in the great mercy of her King. S. Greg. in Psal. 7. paeniten. to. 2.

6 and she said to the king: The report is true, which I have heard in my country, 7 concerning thy words, and concerning thy wisdom, and I did not believe them that told me, till myself came, and saw with mine eyes, & have proved that the half hath not been told me: greater is thy wisdom, and thy works, than the rumour, which I have heard. 8 Blessed are thy men, and blessed are thy servants, which stand before thee always, and hear thy wisdom. 9 Be the Lord thy God blessed, whom thou hast pleased, and that hath set thee upon the throne of Israel, for that the Lord hath loved Israel for ever, and hath appointed thee king, to do judgment and justice. 10 She therefore gave to the king an hundred and twenty talents of gold, and spices exceeding much, and precious stones: There was no more brought so much spice, as that which the queen of Saba gave to king Salomon. 11 (But the navy also of Hiram, which carried gold out of Ophir, brought from Ophir thyine trees exceeding many, and precious stones. 12 And the king made of the thyine trees the porches of the house of our Lord, and of the king's house, and harps & vials for the singers: there were not such thyine trees brought, nor seen until this present day. 13 And king Salomon gave to the queen of Saba all that she would, and asked of him: beside those things, which of himself he offered her for a royal gift. Who returned, and went into her country with her servants. 14 And the weight of the gold, that was brought to Salomon every year, was of six hundred sixty six talents of gold: 15 beside that, which the men brought, that were over the tributes, and merchants, and all that sold light wares, and all the kings of Arabia, and the Dukes of the land.

16 Salomon also made two hundred shields of most pure gold, six hundred sicles of gold did he allow for the plates of one shield. 17 And three hundred targets of tried gold: and three hundred pounds of gold garnished one target: and the king put them in the house of the forest of Libanus. 18 King Salomon also made a great throne of ivory: and covered it with gold exceeding yellow, 19 which had six steps: and the top of the throne was round in the hinder part: and two hands on either side holding the seat: and two lions stood at every hand. 20 And twelve little lions standing upon the six steps on either side: there was not such a work made in all Kingdoms. 21 Yea and all the vessels, out of the which king Salomon drunk, were of gold: and all the furniture of the house of the forest of Libanus of most pure gold: there was no silver, neither was it thought of any price in the days of Salomon, 22 because the king's navy, once in three years, went with the navy of Hiram on the sea into Tharsis, bringing thence gold, & silver, & the teeth of elephants, and apes, & peacocks. 23 King Salomon therefore was magnified above all the kings of the earth in riches, & wisdom. 24 And all the earth desired to see Salomon's face, that they might hear his wisdom, which God had given in his heart. 25 And every one presented him gifts, vessels of silver and gold, garments, and instruments for war, spices also, and horses, and mules every year. 26 And Salomon gathered together the chariots and horsemen, and there amounted to him a thousand four hundred chariots, and twelve thousand horsemen: and he disposed them in fenced cities, and with the king in Jerusalem. 27 And he made that there was as great aboundance of silver in Jerusalem, as of stones: and of cedar trees he caused such a multitude, as if it were sycamore trees, which grow in the plains. 28 And there were horses brought for Salomon out of Aegypt, and Coa, for the king's merchants bought them out of Coa, and brought them at a set price. 29 And a chariot of four horses came out of Aegypt, for six hundred sicles of silver, and one horse for an hundred and fifty. And after this manner did all the kings of the Hetheites, and of Syria sell horses.

CHAPTER XI.

Salomon loving and marrying many women of diverse nations, is drawn by them to idolatry. 9. God therefore offended suffereth Adad an Idumean, 23. Razon king of Damascus, 26. and Hieroboam his own servant to make war against him. 29. Ahias the Prophet foretelleth Hieroboam, that he shall reign over ten tribes, leaving but two to Salomon's heirs, 38. with promise to prosper, if he serve God. 42. Salomon dieth.

And king Salomon loved many women strangers, the daughter also of Pharao, and Moabites, & Ammonites, Idumeians, and Sidonians, & Hetheians: 2 of the nations, whereof our Lord said to the children of Israel: You shall not go in unto them, neither shall any of them come in unto yours: for they will most certainly turn away your hearts to follow their gods. To these therefore was Salomon coupled in most fervent love. 3 And he had wives as it were queens (a) seven hundred, and concubines three hundred: and the women turned away his heart.

(a) Though plurality of wives was then allowed, yet it was forbid to multiply many. Deut. 17.

4 And when he was now old, his heart was depraved by women, that he followed strange gods: neither was his heart perfect with our Lord his God, as the heart of David his father. 5 But Salomon worshipped Astarthee the goddess of the Sidonians, and Moloch the idol of the Ammonites. 6 And Salomon did that which was not liked before our Lord, and he accomplished not to follow our Lord, as David his father. 7 Then built Salomon a temple to Chamos the idol of Moab, in the mount that is against Jerusalem, and to Moloch the idol of the children of Ammon. 8 And in this manner did he to all his wives that were strangers, which burnt frankincense, & immolated to their gods. 9 Therefore our Lord was wrath with Salomon, because his mind was turned away from our Lord the God of Israel, who had appeared unto him the second time, 10 and had commanded him concerning this word, that he should not follow strange gods, & he kept not the things which our Lord commanded him. 11 Our Lord therefore said to Salomon: Because thou hast done this, and hast not kept my covenant, and my precepts, which I have commanded thee, breaking I will rent asunder thy Kingdom, and will give it to thy servant. 12 Nevertheless in thy days I will not do it because of David thy father: out of the hand of thy son I will rent it, 13 neither will I take away the whole Kingdom, but (b) one tribe I will give to thy son for David my servant, and (c) Jerusalem, which I have chosen.

(b) The tribe of Juda. (c) By Jerusalem is understood the tribe of Benjamin, wherein it stood: so there remained two tribes to Salomon's heirs.

14 And our Lord raised up an adversary to Salomon, Adad an Idumeite of the king's seed, who was in Edom. 15 For when David was in Idumea, and Joab the general of the warfare was gone up to bury them that were slain, and had slain all male kind in Idumea, [1]

[1] 2. Reg. 8.

16 for Joab tarried there six months, and all Israel, till he slew all male kind in Idumea. 17 Adad himself fled, & the men of Idumea of his father's servants with him, to go into Aegypt: and Adad was a little boy. 18 And when they rose out of Madian, they came into Pharan, and they took with them men of Pharan, and entered into Aegypt to Pharao the king of Aegypt: who gave him a house, and appointed him meats, and assigned him land. 19 And Adad found grace before Pharao exceedingly, in so much that he gave him to wife the german sister of his wife Taphnes the queen. 20 And the sister of Taphnes bare him a son Genubath, and Taphnes brought him up in the house of Pharao: & Genubath was dwelling at Pharao's house with his children. 21 And when Adad in Aegypt had heard, that David slept with his fathers, and that Joab the general of the warfare was dead, he said to Pharao: Dismiss me, that I may go into my country. 22 And Pharao said to him: For what lackest thou with me: that thou seekest to go into thine own country? But he answered: Nothing: yet I beseech thee that thou dismiss me. 23 God also raised up to him an adversary, Razon the son of Eliada, who had fled Adarezer the king of Soba his Lord: [1]

[1] 2. Reg. 10.

24 and he gathered men against him, and he became the captain of thieves, when David killed them: and they went to Damascus, and dwelt there, and they made him king in Damascus, 25 and he was an adversary to Israel (d) all the days of Salomon: and this is the evil of Adad, and hatred against Israel, and he reigned in Syria.

(d) From the time that Salomon fell to idolatry, he was more impugned by three perpetual adversaries, Adad, Razon, and Hieroboam; mystically signifying the flesh, the world, and the devil.

26 Jeroboam also the son of Nabath, an Ephratheite of Sareda, the servant of Salomon, whose mother was called Serva, a woman widow, lifted up his hand against the king. 27 And this is the cause of his rebellion against him, because Salomon built Mello, and filled up the breach of the city of David his father. 28 And Jeroboam was a strong man and mighty: and Salomon seeing the young man of a good wit and industrious, had made him chief over the tributes of all the house of Joseph. 29 It came to pass therefore at that time, that Jeroboam went out of Jerusalem, and the Prophet Ahias the Silonite found him in the way, covered with a new cloak: and they two only were in the field. 30 And Ahias taking his new cloak, wherewith he was covered, (e) cut it into twelve parts.

(e) This fact confirmed his words, that he spake seriously and feigned not.

31 And he said to Jeroboam: Take unto thee ten pieces: for thus saith our Lord the God of Israel: Behold I will rent the Kingdom out of the hand of Salomon, and will give thee ten tribes. 32 But one tribe shall remain to him for my servant David, and Jerusalem the city, which I have chosen of all the tribes of Israel: 33 because he hath forsaken me, and hath adored Astarthee the goddess of the Sidonians, and Chamos the god of Moab, and Moloch the god of the children of Ammon: and hath not walked in my ways, to do justice before me, and my precepts, and judgments, as David his father. 34 Neither will I take away all the Kingdom out of his hand, but I will make him Prince all the days of his life, for David my servant, whom I chose, who kept my commandments & my precepts. 35 But I will take away the Kingdom out of his son's hand, and will give thee ten tribes: 36 and to his son I will give one tribe, that there may remain a lamp to David my servant at all times before me in Jerusalem, the city which I have chosen, that my name might be there. 37 And thee will I take, and thou shalt reign over all things, that thy soul desireth, and thou shalt be king over Israel. 38 If therefore thou wilt hear all things, that I shall command thee, and wilt walk in my ways, and do that which is right before me, keeping my commandments and my precepts, as David my servant did: I will be with thee, and will build thee a faithful house, as I built a house to David, and I will deliver Israel to thee: 39 and I will afflict the seed of David upon this, but yet not always. 40 Salomon therefore would have killed Jeroboam: who arose, and fled into Aegypt to Sesac the king of Aegypt, and was in Aegypt until the death of Salomon. 41 And the rest of the words of Salomon, and all that he did, and his wisdom: behold they are all written in the Book of the words of the days of Salomon. 42 And the days that Salomon reigned in Jerusalem over all Israel, are forty years. 43 And Salomon (f) slept with his fathers, and was buried in the city of David his father, & Roboam his son reigned for him.

(f) Whether he repented and was saved or no, is uncertain.

CHAPTER XII.

Roboam following youngmen's counsel, 16. Jeroboam possesseth ten tribes of his Kingdom. 21. Which he endeavouring to recover by war, is admonished by a Prophet to cease. 26. Hieroboam setteth up golden calves to be adored, making temples, altars, and Priests fit for his purpose.

And [1] Roboam came into Sichem: for thither was all Israel gathered together to make him king.

[1] The third part.
The division of the Kingdom, Several reigns of certain Kings: and preaching of special Prophets.

2 But Jeroboam the son of Nabat, when he was yet in Aegypt fugitive from the face of king Salomon, hearing of his death; returned out of Aegypt. 3 And they sent and called him: Jeroboam therefore came, and all the multitude of Israel, and they spake to Roboam, saying. 4 Thy father laid a most hard yoke upon us: thou therefore diminish now a little of thy father's most hard empire, and of the most heavy yoke, that he laid upon us, and we will serve thee. 5 Who said to them: Go until the third day, and return to me. And when the people was gone, 6 King Roboam took counsel with the ancients, that assisted before Salomon his father, whiles he yet lived, and he said: What counsel do you give me, that I may answer this people? 7 Who said to him: If this day thou wilt yield to this people, and condescend to them, and grant to their petition, & wilt speak to them gentle words, they will be thy servants always. 8 Who left the counsel of the ancients, which they had given him, and admitted youngmen, that had been brought up with him, & waited on him, 9 and he said to them: What counsel give you me, that I may answer this people, which have said to me: Make the yoke lighter which thy father hath put upon us? 10 And the youngmen that had been brought up with him, said: Thus speak to this people, which have spoken to thee, saying: Thy father aggravated our yoke, do thou ease it. Thus shalt thou speak to them: My least finger is grosser than the back of my father. 11 And now my father laid upon you a heavy yoke, but I will add upon your yoke: my father beat you with scourges, but I will beat you with scorpions. 12 Jeroboam therefore came, and all the people to Roboam the third day, as the king had spoken, saying: Return to me the third day. 13 And the king answered the people rough words, leaving the counsel of the ancients, which they had given him, 14 and he spake to them according to the counsel of the youngmen, saying: My father made your yoke heavy, but I will add to your yoke: my father beat you with whips, but I will beat you with scorpions. 15 And the king condescended not to the people: because our Lord was turned away from him, (a) that he might raise up his word, which he had spoken in the hand of Ahias the Silonite, to Jeroboam the son of Nabat.

(a) This phrase noteth the sequel, not the final cause. As chap. 14. v. 9.

16 The people therefore seeing that the king would not hear them, answered him, saying: What part have we in David? Or what inheritance in the son of Isai? Go into thy tabernacles Israel, now see to thy house David. And Israel went into their tabernacles. 17 But over the children of Israel, whosoever dwelt in the cities of Juda, Roboam reigned. 18 King Roboam therefore sent Aduram, who was over the tributes: and all Israel stoned him, and he died, moreover king Roboam in haste went up into his chariot, and fled into Jerusalem: 19 and Israel revolted from the house of David, until this present day. 20 And it came to pass when all Israel had heard, that Jeroboam was returned, they sent, and called him, an assembly being gathered, and they made him king over all Israel, neither did any man follow the house of David beside the tribe of Juda only. 21 And Roboam came to Jerusalem, and gathered together all the house of Juda, and the tribe of Benjamin, an hundred fourscore thousand chosen men warriors, to fight against the house of Israel, and to reduce the kingdom to Roboam the son of Salomon. 22 But the word of our Lord came to Semeias the man of God, saying: 23 Speak to Roboam the son of Salomon, the king of Juda, and to all the house of Juda, and Benjamin, and the rest of the people, saying: 24 Thus saith our Lord: You shall not go up, neither shall you fight against your brethren the children of Israel: let every man return into his house, for this word is done by me. They heard the word of our Lord, & returned from their journey as our Lord had commanded them. 25 And Jeroboam built Sichem in mount Ephraim, and dwelt there: and departing thence he built Phanuel. 26 And Jeroboam said in his heart: Now will the Kingdom return to the house of David, 27 if this people shall go up to make sacrifices in the house of our Lord into Jerusalem: and the heart of this people will be turned to their lord Roboam the king of Juda, and they will kill me, and return to him. 28 And finding out (b) a device he made two golden calves, and said to them: Go up no more into Jerusalem: Behold thy gods Israel, which brought thee out of the Land of Aegypt.

(b) A devilish policy to make a religion conformable to the temporal state.

29 And he put one in Bethel, and the other in Dan: 30 and this thing was an occasion of sin: for the people went to adore the calf, as far as Dan. 31 And he made temples in the excelses, and Priests (c) of the abjects of the people, which were not of the children of Levi.

(c) For such a religion such Priests were fittest.

32 And he appointed a solemn day in the eighth month, the fifteenth day of the month, after the similitude of the solemnity, that was celebrated in Juda. And going up he made in like manner an altar in Bethel, to immolate to the calves, which he had framed: and he ordained in Bethel priests of the (d) excelses, which he had made.

(d) Places on hills, where they sacrificed calves, and other things to the images of calves.

33 And he went upon the altar, which he had built in

Bethel, the fifteenth day of the eighth month, which he had forged out of his own heart: and he made a solemnity to the children of Israel, and went up upon the altar, to burn incense.

CHAPTER XIII.

A Prophet sent from Juda to Bethel foretelleth the birth of Josias, and destruction of Jeroboam's altar, 4. whose hand being suddenly withered, 6. is restored by the Prophet's prayer. 11. The same Prophet is deceived by another Prophet, and slain by a lion. 33. Jeroboam proceedeth in impiety.

And behold a man of God came out of Juda, in the word of our Lord into Bethel, Jeroboam (a) standing upon the altar, and censing.

(a) This foreshewing long before the name of a child that should be born, importeth that he should do great things. See 4. Reg. 22.

2 And he cried out against the altar in the word of our Lord, and said: Altar, altar, thus saith our Lord: Behold a child shall be born to the house of David, named Josias, and he shall immolate upon thee priests of the excelses, which now do burn frankincense on thee, and he shall burn men's bones upon thee. 3 And he gave a sign in that day, saying: This shall be the sign, that our Lord hath spoken: Behold the altar shall be cloven, and the ashes on it shall be poured out. 4 And when the king had heard the word of the man of God, which he cried out against the altar in Bethel, he stretched forth his hand from the altar, saying: Take him. And his hand withered, which he stretched forth against him: neither was he able to draw it back upon him. 5 The altar also was cloven, and the ashes were poured out of the altar, according to the sign which the man of God had told before in the word of our Lord. 6 And the king said to the man of God: Beseech the face of our Lord thy God, and pray for me, that my hand may be restored me. And the man of God besought the face of our Lord, and the king's hand was restored to him, and it became as it was before. 7 And the king spake to the man of God: Come home with me, that thou mayst dine, and I will give thee gifts. 8 And the man of God answered the king: If thou wouldest give me the half part of thy house, I will not come with thee, nor eat bread, nor drink water in this place: 9 for so was it enjoined in the word of our Lord commanding: Thou shalt not eat bread, nor drink water, nor return by the way that thou camest. 10 He departed therefore by another way, and returned not by the way, that he came into Bethel. 11 And a certain Prophet being old dwelt in Bethel, to whom his sons came and told him all the works, that the man of God had done that day in Bethel: and the words which he had spoken to the king, they told their father. 12 And their father said to them: What way went he? His sons shewed him the way, by which the man of God was gone, which came out of Juda. 13 And he said to his sons: Saddle me an ass. Who when they had saddled it, he got up, 14 and went after the man of God, and found him sitting under a terebinth: and he said to him: Art thou the man of God that camest out of Juda? He answered: I am he. 15 And he said to him: Come home with me, that thou mayst eat bread. 16 Who said: I cannot return, nor come with thee, neither will I eat bread, nor drink water in this place: 17 because our Lord spake to me in the word of our Lord, saying: Thou shalt not eat bread, and thou shalt not drink water there, nor return by the way thou wentest. 18 Who said to him: I also am a Prophet like to thee: and (b) an Angel hath spoken to me in the word of our Lord, saying: Bring him back with thee into thy house, that he may eat bread, and drink water. He deceived him,

(b) This man of Bethel was indeed a Prophet of God, but in this lied wickedly, and so deceiving the other Prophet, made him to break God's commandment, for which he was slain. Whereupon Hieroboam (whom the wicked Prophet sought to please) was less afraid to proceed in Idolatry.

19 and brought him back with him: he did eat therefore bread in his house, and drunk water. 20 And when they sat at the table, the word of our Lord came to the Prophet, that brought him back. 21 And he cried out to the man of God, which came out of Juda, saying: Thus saith our Lord: Because thou hast not been obedient to the mouth of our Lord, and hast not kept the commandment which our Lord thy God commanded thee, 22 and hast returned, and eaten bread, and drunk water in the place wherein he commanded thee that thou shouldest not eat bread, nor drink water, thy dead body shall not be brought into the sepulchre of thy fathers. 23 And when he had eaten and drunk, he saddled his ass for the Prophet, whom he brought back. 24 Who when he was gone, a lion found him in the way, and (c) killed him, and his body was cast forth in the way: and the ass stood by him, and the lion stood by the dead body.

(c) Not only the deceiver, but also he that is deceived, is guilty and punishable for breaking God's commandment.

25 And behold, men passing by saw the dead body cast in the way, and the lion standing beside the body. And they came and divulged it in the city, wherein that old Prophet dwelt. 26 Which when that Prophet heard, which had brought him back out of the way, he said: It is the man of God, that was disobedient to the mouth of our Lord, and our Lord hath delivered him to the lion, & he hath torn him, and killed him according to the word of our Lord, that he spake to him. 27 And he said to his sons: Saddle me an ass. Who when they had saddled, 28 and he was gone, he found his dead body cast forth in the way, and the ass and the lion standing by the corpse: the lion (d) did not eat of the dead body, nor hurt the ass.

(d) By this it appeareth to be God's work and punishment.

29 The Prophet therefore took the corpse of the man of God, and laid it upon the ass, and returning brought it into the city of the old Prophet, that they might mourn for him. 30 And he laid his corpse in his own sepulchre: and they mourned for him: Alas, alas my brother. 31 And when they had mourned for him, he said to his sons: When I shall be dead, bury me in the sepulchre, wherein the man of God is buried: beside his bones lay my bones. 32 For assuredly the word shall come to pass, which he hath foretold in the word of our Lord against the altar that is in Bethel: and against all the temples of the excelses, that are in the cities of Samaria. 33 After these words Jeroboam returned not from his wicked way, but on the contrary part he made of the most abject of the people Priests of the excelses: Whosoever would, he filled his hand, and he was made a Priest of the excelses. 34 And for this cause did the house of Jeroboam sin, and was overthrown, and destroyed from the face of the earth.

CHAPTER XIV.

Ahias the Prophet foresheweth the ruin of Hieroboam's family: 12. namely the death of his son, for whom being sick, the mother consulteth the Prophet. 20. Hieroboam dieth, and his son Nadab reigneth. 21. Some also of the people of Juda committing idolatry and other sins, 25. the king of Aegypt invadeth and sacketh Hierusalem. 31. Roboam dieth and his son Abias reigneth.

At that time Abia the son of Jeroboam was sick. 2 And Jeroboam said to his wife: Arise, and change thy habit, that thou be not known to be the wife of Jeroboam, & go into Silo, where Ahias the Prophet is, which spake to me, that I should reign over this people. 3 Take also in thy hand ten loaves, & cracknels, & a vessel of honey, & go to him: for he will shew thee what shall happen to this child. 4 The wife of Jeroboam did as he had spoken: and rising up went into Silo, and came into the house of Ahias: but he could not see, because his eyes were dim for age. 5 And our Lord said to Ahias: Behold the wife of Jeroboam cometh in, to consult thee concerning her son that is sick: thus and thus shalt thou speak to her. When she therefore entered in, and dissembled to be that she was, 6 Ahias heard the sound of her feet entering in at the door, and said: Come in Jeroboam's wife: Why doest thou feign thyself to be another woman? But I am sent to thee a heavy messenger. 7 Go, and tell Jeroboam: Thus saith our Lord the God of Israel: Because I have exalted thee out of the midst of the people, and made thee Prince over my people Israel, 8 and have rent the Kingdom of the house of David, and given it to thee, and thou hast not been as my servant David, who kept my commandments; and followed me in all his heart, doing that which was well liked in my sight: 9 but has wrought evil above all, that have been before thee, and hast made thee strange and molten gods, (a) that thou mightest provoke me to anger, and hast rejected me behind thy back:

(a) Jeroboam did not wittingly and of purpose set up false gods, to the end he might provoke God to anger: for his intention only was to keep the people from going to Jerusalem, lest by that occasion they should return to Roboam their lord, King of Juda. ch. 12. v. 27. But by setting up idols he did provoke God consequently to anger. So here and in other places this phrase: that he might provoke: that it might be fulfilled, and the like, signifieth not the final cause, but the sequel of other facts, without direct intention.

10 therefore behold I will bring in evils upon the house of Jeroboam, and will strike of Jeroboam him that pisseth to the wall, and the inclosed, and the vilest in Israel: and I will cleanse the remains of the house of Jeroboam, as dung is wont to be cleansed till all be pure. 11 They that shall die of Jeroboam in the city, them the dogs shall eat: and they that shall die in the field, them the fowls of the air shall devour: because our Lord hath spoken. 12 Thou therefore arise, and go into thy house: and in the very entrance of thy feet into the city, the child shall die, 13 & all Israel shall mourn for him, and shall bury him: for this only of Jeroboam shall be brought into the sepulchre, because upon him hath been found a good word from our Lord the God of Israel, in the house of Jeroboam. 14 And our Lord will appoint to himself a king over Israel, that shall strike the house of Jeroboam in this day, and in this time: 15 and our Lord the God of Israel shall strike it, as a reed is wont to be moved in the water: and he shall pluck out Israel from this good country, which he gave to their fathers, and shall scatter them over the River: because they have made to themselves groves, to provoke our Lord. 16 And our Lord shall deliver Israel for the sins of Jeroboam, who hath sinned, and made Israel to sin. 17 The wife therefore of Jeroboam arose, and departed, and came into Thersa: and when she entered the threshold of the house, the child died, 18 and they buried him. And all Israel mourned for him according to the word of our Lord, which he spake in the hand of his servant Ahias the Prophet. 19 But the rest of the words of Jeroboam, how he fought, and how he reigned, behold they are written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Israel. 20 And the days, that Jeroboam reigned, are two and twenty years: and he slept with his fathers: and Nadab his son reigned for him. 21 Moreover Roboam the son of Salomon reigned in Juda: one and forty years old was Roboam when he began to reign: seventeen years reigned he in Jerusalem the city, which our Lord chose to put his name there, of all the tribes of Israel. And his mother's name was Naama an Ammonite. 22 And Judas did evil before our Lord, and provoked him above all things, that their fathers had done, in their sins which they sinned. 23 For they also built them altars, & statues, & groves upon every high hill, and under every tree full of green leaves: 24 yea and effeminates were in the land, and they did all the abominations of the gentiles, which our Lord destroyed before the face of the children of Israel.
25 And in the fifth year of the reign of Roboam, Sesac the king of Aegypt came up into Jerusalem, 26 and took the treasures of the house of our Lord, and the king's treasures, and all things he spoiled: the shields also of gold, which Salomon had made: 27 for the which Roboam made brazen shields, and delivered them into the hand of the captains of shield-bearers, and of them that kept watch before the door of the king's house. 28 And when the king went into the house of our Lord, they that had the office to go before, carried them: and afterward they recarried them to the armoury of the shield-bearers. 29 And the rest of the words of Roboam, and all that he did, behold they are written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Juda. 30 And there was war between Roboam and Jeroboam always. 31 And Roboam slept with his fathers, and was buried with them in the city of David: and his mother's name was Naama an Ammonite: and Abias his son reigned for him.

CHAPTER XV.

Abias reigneth wickedly in Juda three years. 8. After him his son Asa succeeding destroyeth idolatry, reigning forty one years. 16. Who having wars with the king of Israel, maketh league with the king of Syria. 24. Asa dying Josaphat succeedeth. 25. Nadab reigneth wickedly two years in Israel, is then slain by Baasa of the tribe of Issachar, 29. and his whole family is destroyed. 33. Baasa also reigneth wickedly twenty four years.

Therefore in the eighteenth year of king Jeroboam the son of Nabat, Abias reigned over Juda. 2 Three years reigned he in Jerusalem: the name of his mother was Maacha the daughter of Abessalom. 3 And he walked in all the sins of his father, which he had done before him: neither was his heart perfect with our Lord his God, as the heart of David his father. 4 But for David's sake our Lord his God gave him a lamp in Jerusalem, that he might raise up his son after him, and establish Jerusalem: 5 (a) because David had done right in the eyes of our Lord, & had not declined from all things, which he commanded him, all the days of his life, except the matter of Urias the Hetheite.

(a) David's posterity conserved for his sake.

6 But there was war between Roboam and Jeroboam all the time of his life. 7 And the rest of the words of Abias, and all that he did, are they not written in the Book of the words of the kings of Juda? And there was war between Abias and Jeroboam. 8 And Abias slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the city of David: and Asa his son reigned for him. 9 In the twentieth year therefore of Jeroboam the king of Israel reigned Asa the king of Juda. 10 And he reigned one and forty years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Maacha, the daughter of Abessalom. 11 And Asa did right before the sight of our Lord, as David his father: 12 and he took away the effeminate out of the land, and he purged all the filth of the idols, which his fathers had made. 13 Moreover he removed also Maacha his mother, that she should not be Princess in the sacrifice of Priapus, and in the grove which she had consecrated: and he destroyed her den, and brake the most filthy idol, and burnt it in the torrent cedron: 14 but (b) the excelses he did not take away. Otherwise the heart of Asa was perfect with our Lord all his days:

15 and he carried in those things, which his father had sanctified & vowed, into the house of our Lord, silver and gold, and vessels. 16 And there was war between Asa and Baasa the king of Israel all their days. 17 Baasa also the king of Israel went up into Juda, and built Rama, that no man might go out or come in of Asa's side the king of Juda. 18 Asa therefore taking all the silver and gold that remained in the treasures of the house of our Lord, and in the treasures of the king's house, gave it into the hands of his servants: and he sent to Benadad the son of Tabremon the son of Hezion, the king of Syria, which dwelt in Damascus, saying: 19 There is a league between me and thee, and betwixt my father and thy father: therefore I have sent thee gifts, silver and gold: and I desire thee that thou come, and make void the league, that thou hast with Baasa the king of Israel, and he may retire from me. 20 Benadad agreeing to king Asa, sent the Princes of his army into the cities of Israel, and they struck Ahion, & Dan, & Abeldomum of Maacha, & all Cenneroth, to wit, all the Land of Nephthali. 21 Which when Baasa had heard, he intermitted to build Rama, & returned into Thersa. 22 But king Asa sent word into all Juda, saying: Let no man be excused, and they took stones from Rama, and the timber thereof, wherewith Baasa had built, & Asa of it built Gabaa Benjamin and Maspha. 23 But the rest of all the words of Asa, & all his forces, & all that he did, & the cities that he built, are not these written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Juda? Howbeit in the time of his old age he was diseased in his feet. 24 And he slept with his fathers, & was buried with them in the city of David his father. And Josaphat his son reigned for him. 25 But Nadab the son of Jeroboam reigned over Israel the second year of Asa the king of Juda: and he reigned over Israel two years. 26 And he did that which is evil in the sight of our Lord, & walked in the ways of his father, and in his sins, wherewith he made Israel to sin. 27 And Baasa the son of Ahias of the house of Issachar, lay in wait against him, & struck him in Gebbethon, which is a city of the Philisthiims: for Nadab & all Israel besieged Gebbethon. 28 Baasa therefore slew him in the third year of Asa the king of Juda, and reigned for him. 29 And when he reigned, he struck (c) all the house of Jeroboam: he left not so much as one soul of his seed, till he destroyed him according to the word of our Lord, which he had spoken in the hand of Ahias the Silonite,

(c) The author of schism punished in his posterity.

30 for the sins of Jeroboam, which he had sinned, & wherewith he had caused Israel to sin, and for the offence, wherewith he provoked our Lord the God of Israel. 31 But the rest of the words of Nadab, and all that he wrought, are not these things written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Israel? 32 And there was war between Asa and Baasa the king of Israel all their days. 33 In the third year of Asa the king of Juda, reigned Baasa the son of Ahias over all Israel in Thersa four & twenty years. 34 And he did evil before our Lord, and walked in the ways of Jeroboam, and in his sins, wherewith he made Israel to sin.

CHAPTER XVI.

Jehu for prophesying the destruction of Baasa and his house, 7. is slain. 8. Yet his son Ela reigneth two years. 9. Then Zambri rebelleth, killeth Ela, and reigneth. 16. Part of the people choosing Amri (Prince of the army) their king, 18. Zambri desperately burneth himself and the king's palace. 21. Another part follow Thebni as king till his death. 23. Amri reigneth twelve years wickedly. 29. His son Achab succeedeth, marrieth Jezabel, and serveth Baal. 34. In the mean time Hiel repaireth Jericho.

And the word of our Lord came to Jehu the son of Hanani against Baasa, saying: 2 For so much as I have exalted thee out of the dust, and set thee duke over my people Israel, but thou hast walked in the way of Jeroboam, and hast made my people Israel to sin, that thou mightest anger me with their sins: 3 behold, I will cut down the posterity of Baasa, and the posterity of his house, and I will make thy house as the house of Jeroboam the son of Nabat. 4 Whosoever of Baasa shall die in the city, him shall the dogs eat: and whosoever of his shall die in the country, him shall the fowls of the air devour. 5 But the rest of the words of Baasa, and whatsoever he did, and his battles, are not these things written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Israel? 6 Baasa therefore slept with his fathers, and was buried in Thersa: and Ela his son reigned for him. 7 And when the word of our Lord came in the hand of Jehu the son of Hanani the Prophet against Baasa, and against his house, & against all the evil, that he had done before our Lord, to anger him in the works of his hands, that it should be made as the house of Jeroboam: for this cause he slew him, that is to say, Jehu the son of Hanani, the Prophet. 8 In the six and twentieth year of Asa the king of Juda, reigned Ela the son of Baasa over Israel in Thersa two years. 9 And his servant Zambri rebelled against him, the captain of the half part of the horsemen: and Ela was in Thersa drinking, and drunken in the house of Arsa the governor of Thersa. 10 Zambri therefore rushing in, struck and slew him in the seven & twentieth year of Asa the king of Juda, and he reigned for him. 11 And when he reigned, and sat upon his throne, he struck all the house of Baasa, and he left not of it one that could piss against a wall, and his kinsfolk and friends.

12 And Zambri destroyed all the house of Baasa, according to the word of our Lord, that he had spoken to Baasa in the hand of Jehu the Prophet, 13 for all the sins of Baasa, and the sins of Ela his son, who sinned, and made Israel to sin, provoking our Lord the God of Israel in their vanities. 14 But the rest of the words of Ela, and all that he did, are not these written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Israel?
15 In the seven and twentieth year of Asa the king of Juda, reigned Zambri seven days in Thersa: moreover the army besieged Gebbethon a city of the Philisthiims. 16 And when they heard that Zambri had rebelled, and slain the king, (a) all Israel made Amri their king, who was General of the warfare over Israel that day, in the camp.

(a) All those that were in the camp chose their General to be their King, and prevailed therein, though another half of Israel chose & followed another for a time.

17 Amri therefore went up, and all Israel with him from Gebbethon, and they besieged Thersa. 18 And Zambri seeing that the city should be taken, he went into the palace, & burnt himself with the king's house: and he died 19 in his sins, which he had sinned doing evil before our Lord, and walking in the way of Jeroboam, and in his sin, wherewith he made Israel to sin. 20 But the rest of the words of Zambri, and of his treason, and tyranny, are not these things written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Israel? 21 Then was the people of Israel divided into two parts: the half part of the people followed Thebni the son of Gineth, to make him king: & the half part Amri. 22 But the people that was with Amri, prevailed over the people that followed Thebni the son of Gineth: and Thebni died, and Amri reigned. 23 In (b) the one and thirtieth year of Asa the king of Juda^ Amri reigned over Israel, twelve years: in Thersa he reigned six years.

(b) Thebni being then dead he reigned peaceably, for he began his reign the 17. year of Asa. v. 15. & 16. and reigned in all 12. years.

24 And he bought the mount of Samaria of Somer for two talents of silver: & he built it, and he called the city which he had built by the name of Semer the lord of the mount of Samaria. 25 And Amri did evil in the sight of our Lord, & wrought wickedly above all, that were before him. 26 And he walked in all the way of Jeroboam the son of Nabat, and in his sins wherewith he made Israel to sin: that they might anger our Lord the God of Israel in their vanities. 27 But the rest of the words of Amri, and the battles he made, are not these things written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Israel? 28 And Amri slept with his fathers, and was buried in Samaria, and Achab his son reigned for him. 29 But Achab the son of Amri reigned over Israel the eight & thirtieth year of Asa the king of Juda. And Achab the son of Amri reigned over Israel in Samaria two and twenty years. 30 And Achab the son of Amri did evil in the sight of our Lord above all that were before him. 31 Neither did it suffice him that he walked in the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nabat: besides he took to wife Jezabel the daughter of Ethbaul the king of the Sidonians. And he went, and served Baal, and adored him. 32 And he set an altar to Baal in the temple of Baal, which he had built in Samaria,
33 and he planted a grove: and Achab added in his work, provoking our Lord the God of Israel above all the kings of Israel, that were before him. 34 In his days Hiel of Bethel built Jericho: (c) in Abiram his first born he founded it, and in Segub his last he set up the gates thereof: according to the word of our Lord, which he spake in the hand of Josue the son of Nun. [1]

(c) When Hiel began to build Jericho, his eldest son died, so the rest successively, that the last died when he finished the building: because God by the mouth of Josue had forbid the building thereof. [1] Iosue. 6.

CHAPTER XVII.

Elias by his prayer shutteth the heaven from raining. 2. Is fed by a crow, 8. and by a widow of Sareptha. 13. Whose pot of meal, and barrel of oil diminisheth not. 17. Her son dieth, and is raised to life.

And Elias the Thesbite of the inhabiters of Galaad said to Achab: Our Lord liveth the God of Israel, in whose sight I stand, if there shall be these years dew and rain, but according to the words of my mouth. 2 And the word of our Lord came to him, saying: 3 Depart from hence, and go against the East, and be hid in the Torrent Carith, which is against Jordan, 4 and there thou shalt drink of the torrent: and I have commanded the ravens that they feed thee there. 5 He therefore went, and did according to the word of our Lord: and when he was gone, he sat in the Torrent Carith, which is against Jordan. 6 The ravens also brought him bread and flesh in the morning, in like manner bread and flesh in the evening, and he drank of the torrent. 7 [1]But after certain days the torrent was dried: for it had not rained upon the earth.

[1]The Epistle on Tuesday in the 2. week of Lent.

8 Therefore the word of our Lord came to him, saying: 9 Arise, and go into Sareptha of the Sidonians, and thou shalt tarry there: for I have commanded a widow woman there to feed thee. 10 He arose and went into Sareptha. And when he was come to the gate of the city, the widow woman appeared to him gathering sticks, and he called her, and said to her: Give me a little water in a vessel, that I may drink. 11 And when she went to fetch it, he cried after her saying: Bring me also, I beseech thee, a morsel of bread in thy hand. 12 who answered: Our Lord thy God liveth, I have no bread, but so much meal in a pot as a hand can hold, and a little oil in a vessel: [1]behold I gather two sticks, that I may go in, and dress it for me & my son, that we may eat, and die.

[1]The Epistle on Friday in the 4. week of Lent.

13 To whom Elias said: fear not, but go, and do as thou hast said: but first make for me of the same meal a little hearth cake, & bring it to me: & for thyself & thy son thou shalt make afterward. 14 For thus saith our Lord the God of Israel: The pot of meal shall not fail, nor the vessel of oil be diminished until the day, wherein our Lord will give rain upon the face of the earth. 15 Who went and did according to the word of Elias: and he did eat, and she, and her house: and from that day 16 the pot of meal failed not, and the vessel of oil was not diminished, according to the word of our Lord, which he spake in the hand of Elias. 17 And it came to pass after these things, the son of the woman, the good wife of the house, fell sick, & the sickness was very vehement, so that there remained no breath in him, 18 She therefore said to Elias: what is to me and thee thou man of God? Comest thou unto me, that mine iniquities might be remembered, and thou mightest kill my son? 19 And Elias said to her: Give me thy son. And he took him from her bosom, and carried him into the upper chamber where himself abode, and laid him upon his bed. 20 And he cried to our Lord, and said: O Lord my God, (a)what, the widow also with whom I am after a sort sustained, hast thou afflicted, that thou wouldest kill her son?

(a) To this question (saith S. Augustin) the Prophet answered in spirit: No. For God killed not this child to afflict so good a mother, but to confirm her in true religion & comfort her by raising him from death. So Lazarus died not to remain dead, but to be raised to life, for God's more glory. Ioan. 11. v. 4. S. Aug. li. 2. q. 5. ad Simplicia.

21 And he stretched forth, and measured himself upon the child three times, and he cried to our Lord, and said: O Lord my God, let the soul of this child, I beseech thee, return into his body. 22 And our Lord heard the voice of Elias: and the soul of the child returned into him, and he revived. 23 And Elias took the child, and brought him down from the upper chamber into the lower house, and delivered him to his mother, and said to her: Behold thy son liveth. 24 And the woman said to Elias: Now, in this I have known that thou art a man of God, and the word of our Lord in thy mouth is true.

CHAPTER XVIII.

The third year of famine, Elias meeting the chief governor of Achab's house, hardly persuadeth him to tell Achab, that he is present. 17. Achab blameth Elias; but Elias freely avoucheth that not he, but Achab troubleth Israel. 19. By a miracle four hundred and fifty false prophets are convinced, 40. and are slain. 41. Elias prayeth and it raineth.

After many days the word of our Lord came to Elias, the third year, saying: Go, and shew thyself to Achab, that I may give rain upon the face of the earth. 2 Elias therefore went to shew himself to Achab: and there was sore famine in Samaria. 3 And Achab called Abdias the governor of his house: And Abdias did fear our Lord very much. 4 For when Jezabel killed the Prophets of our Lord, he took an hundred Prophets, and hid them by fifty and fifty in caves, and fed them with bread and water. 5 Achab therefore said to Abdias: Go into the land to all the fountains of waters, and into all valleys, if perhaps we may find grass, and save the horses and mules, and the beasts may not utterly perish. 6 And they divided the countries between them, that they might go circuit about them: Achab went one way, and Abdias another way severally. 7 And when Abdias was in the way, Elias met him: who when he knew him, (a) fell on his face, and said: My lord, art not thou Elias?

(a) Abdias adored Elias as the Prophet of God, and a holy man, not with civil honour, for in the world Abdias was the greater person, nor with divine honour, for that had been idolatry. It was therefore religious honour, called dulia, due to spiritual excellency of God's servants.

8 To whom he answered: I am. Go, and tell thy lord: Elias is here. 9 And he said: What have I sinned, that thou deliverest me thy servant into the hand of Achab, that he may kill me? 10 Our Lord thy God liveth, there is no nation or Kingdom, whither my lord hath not sent to seek thee; and all answering: He is not here; he adjured all kingdoms and nations, for that thou wast not found. 11 And now thou sayest to me: Go, and tell thy lord, Elias is here. 12 And when I am departed from thee, the Spirit of our Lord will carry thee into a place, that I know not: and I entering in shall tell Achab, and not finding thee, he will kill me: and thy servant feareth our Lord from his infancy. 13 Hath it not been told thee my lord, what I did when Jezabel killed the Prophets of our Lord, that I hid of the Prophets of our Lord an hundred men, by fifty and fifty in caves, and fed them with bread and water? 14 And now thou sayst: Go, and tell thy lord: Elias is here: that he may kill me? 15 And Elias said: The Lord of hosts liveth, before whose face I stand, this day will I appear to him. 16 Abdias therefore went to meet Achab, and told him: and Achab came to meet Elias. 17 And when he had seen him, he said: Art thou he that doest trouble Israel? 18 And he said: not I have troubled Israel, but thou, and the house of thy father, who have forsaken the commandments of our Lord, & have followed Baalim. 19 Nevertheless send now, and gather unto me all Israel in the mount of Carmel, and the Prophets of Baal four hundred fifty, and the Prophets of the groves four hundred, which eat of Jezabel's table. 20 Achab sent to all the children of Israel, and gathered together the Prophets in the mount of Carmel. 21 And Elias coming to all the people, said: (b) How long halt you on two sides? If our Lord be God, follow him: but if Baal, follow him. And the people did not answer him a word.

(b) Such zealous expostulation is necessary to all Neutrals in religion who are neither hot nor cold, but lukewarm, such as Angels detest Apoc. 3.

22 And Elias said again to the people: I only remain a Prophet of our Lord: and the Prophets of Baal are four hundred and fifty men. 23 Let two oxen be given us, and let them choose to themselves one oxe, and cutting it into pieces let them lay it upon wood, but put no fire under: and I will dress the other oxe, and will lay it upon wood, and put no fire under. 24 Invocate ye the names of your gods, & I will invocate the name of my Lord: and the God that shall hear by fire, let the same be God. And all the people answering said, A very good proposition. 25 Elias therefore said to the Prophets of Baal: Choose you one oxe, and make it first, because you are many: and invocate the names of your gods, and put no fire under. 26 Who when they had taken the oxe, which he gave them, they dressed it: and they invocated the name of Baal from morning until midday, saying: Baal hear us. And there was no voice, nor any that answered: and they leaped over the altar, that they had made. 27 And when it was now midday, Elias jested at them, saying: Cry with a louder voice: for he is God, and perhaps he speaketh, or is in his inn, or in the way, or at the least he sleepeth, that he must be waked. 28 They cried therefore with a loud voice, and cut themselves after their rite with knives and lancets, till they were all imbrued with blood. 29 And after the midday was past, and whilst they prophesied, the time was come, when they used to offer sacrifice, neither voice was heard, nor any did answer, nor attend them praying: 30 Elias said to all the people: Come unto me. And the people coming to him, he repaired the altar of our Lord, that was destroyed. 31 And he took twelve stones according to the number of the tribes of the children of Jacob, to whom the word of our Lord came, saying: Israel shall be thy name. 32 And he built of the stones an altar in the name of our Lord: and he made a water gutter, as it were by two furrows round about the altar, 33 And he laid the wood in order, and divided the oxe in joints, and laid it upon the wood, 34 and said: Fill four buckets with water, and pour upon the holocaust, and upon the wood. And again he said: Do it also the second time. Who having done it the second time, he said: The third time also do the same. And they did so the third time, 35 and the waters ran about the altar, and the trough of the conduit was filled. 36 And when it was now time that the holocaust should be offered, Elias the Prophet coming said: Lord God of Abraham, and Isaac, and Israel, shew this day that thou art the God of Israel, and I thy servant, and that according to thy commandment I have done all these things. 37 Hear me Lord, hear me (c) that this people may learn, that thou art our Lord God, and thou hast converted their heart again.

(c) When miracles are attempted for trial of the truth, the devil's power is restrained, & only the truth is testified: Our Lord working withal, & confirming the doctrine with signs following. Marc. ult.

38 And the fire of our Lord fell, and devoured the holocaust, and the wood, and the stones, licking also the dust, and the water, that was in the water gutter. 39 Which when all the people had seen, they fell on their face, and said: Our Lord he is God, our Lord he is God. 40 And Elias said to them: Apprehend the Prophets of Baal, and let not one escape of them. Whom when they had taken, Elias brought them to the Torrent Cison, and killed them there. 41 And Elias said to Achab: Go up, eat and drink: because there is sound of much rain. 42 Achab went up to eat and drink: and Elias went up into the top of Carmel, and flat on the earth put his face between his knees, 43 and he said to his servant: Go up, and look toward the sea. Who when he was gone up, and had looked, he said: There is nothing. And again he said to him: Return seven times. 44 And in the seventh time: Behold a little cloud as it were a man's foot came up from the sea. Who said: Go up and say to Achab: Yoke thy chariot and go down, lest the rain prevent thee. 45 And when he turned himself hither and thither, behold the heavens were darkened, and clouds, and wind, and there fell great rain. Achab therefore going up went into Jezrahel: 46 and the hand of our Lord was made upon Elias, and his loins girded he ran before Achab, until he came into Jezrahel.

CHAPTER XIX.

Elias flying Jezabel, in the desert eateth a hearth cake and drinketh water, brought by an Angel, and so goeth forty days and nights unto mount Horeb. 9. Lamenting that he alone is left of the Prophets of God, 15. God commandeth him to return to Damascus, and anoint Hazael king of Syria, Jehu king of Israel, and Eliseus a Prophet: 18. and telleth him, there remain seven thousand in Israel, which have not bowed to Baal.

And Achab told Jezabel all things that Elias had done, and how he had killed all the prophets with the sword. 2 And Jezabel sent a message to Elias, saying: These things do the gods to me, and these add they, if this hour tomorrow I make not thy soul as the soul of one of them. 3 Elias therefore was afraid, and rising he went whither soever his will carried him: and he came into Bersabee of Juda, and left his servant there, 4 and went forward into the desert, one day's journey. And when he was come, and sat under a juniper tree, he desired for his soul to die, and said: It sufficeth me Lord, take my soul: for I am not better than my fathers. 5 And he cast himself down, & slept in the shadow of the juniper tree: & behold an Angel of our Lord touched him, and said to him: Arise, and eat. 6 He looked, and behold at his head hearth-baked bread, and a vessel of water: he therefore did eat, & drink, & he slept again. 7 And the Angel of our lord returned the second time, & touched him, & said to him: Arise, eat: for thou hast yet a great way to go. 8 Who when he was risen, did eat & drink, and walked in the strength of that meat forty days, & forty nights, unto the mount of God, Horeb. 9 And when he was come thither, he tarried in a cave, and behold the word of our Lord unto him, and he said to him: What doest thou here Elias? 10 But he answered: With zeal have I been zealous for our Lord the God of hosts, because the children of Israel have forsaken thy covenant: thy altars have they destroyed, and thy Prophets they have slain with the sword, and (a) I alone am left, and they seek my life to take it away.

(a) Elias knew no other at that instant in the ten tribes, that were not partakers in idolatry; but there were indeed seven thousand (v. 18.) that bowed not their knees to Baal. And the whole Kingdom of Juda observed true religion, where Asa then reigned, and after him Josaphat: both good Kings, chap. 15. v. 11. 22. v. 43. 2. Par. 15. &, 17.

11 And he said to him: Come forth, and stand in the mount before our Lord: and behold our Lord passeth, and a great wind and strong, overthrowing mountains and breaking rocks before our Lord: not in the wind is our Lord, and after the wind an earth quake: not in the earth quake is our Lord, 12 and after the earth quake fire: not in the fire is our Lord, & after the fire a whistling of a gentle wind. 13 Which when Elias had heard, he covered his face with his mantle, and coming forth stood in the door of the cave, and behold a voice unto him, saying: What doest thou here Elias? 14 And he answered: With zeal have I been zealous for our Lord the God of hosts: because the children of Israel have forsaken thy covenant: thine altars they have destroyed, and thy Prophets they have slain with the sword, and I alone am left, and they seek my life to take it away. 15 And our Lord said to him: Go, and return into thy way by the desert of Damascus: and when thou art come thither thou (b) shalt anoint Hazael king over Syria,

(b) Elias prophesied that these two should be Kings, and cast his cloak over Elizeus. v. 19 Elizeus declared to Hazael that he should be King, 4. Reg. 8. another Prophet anointed Jehu, 4. Reg. 9.

16 and Jehu the son of Namsi thou shalt anoint king over Israel: and Eliseus the son of Saphat, which is of Abelmeula, thou shalt anoint prophet for thee. 17 And it shall be, whosoever shall escape the sword of Hazael, him Jehu shall kill: and whosoever shall escape the sword of Jehu, him shall Eliseus kill. 18 And I will leave me in Israel seven thousand men, whose knees have not been bowed before Baal, and every mouth, that hath not adored him kissing his hands. 19 Elias therefore departing thence, found Eliseus the son of Saphat, ploughing with twelve yoke of oxen, and he was one of them that ploughed with twelve yoke of oxen: and when Elias came to him, he cast his mantle upon him. 20 Who forthwith leaving the oxen ran after Elias, and said: Let me kiss, I pray thee, my father, and my mother, and so I will follow thee. And he said to him: Go, and return: for that which was my part, I have done to thee. 21 And returning from him, he took a yoke of oxen, and killed them, and sod the flesh with the plough of the oxen, and gave to the people, and they did eat: and rising up he departed, and followed Elias, and ministered to him.

CHAPTER XX.

The Syrians threatening and besieging Samaria, 13. God signifieth by a Prophet to Achab, that he shall have the victory, 20. which he obtaineth: 23. Also the second year fighting in the champion. 31. But saving the king of Syrian's life, and making league with him, 35. one of the children of the Prophets being slain, for not striking when he was so commanded, 37. another denounceth revenge to Achab; for not killing the Syrian king.

Moreover Benadad the king of Syria, gathered together all his host, and two and thirty kings with him, & horses, & chariots: & going up fought against Samaria, and besieged it. 2 And sending messengers to Achab the king of Israel into the city, 3 he said: Thus saith Benadad: Thy silver, and thy gold is mine: and thy wives, and thy principal children be mine. 4 And the king of Israel answered: According to thy word my lord king, I am thine, and all that is mine. 5 And the messengers returning, said: Thus saith Benadad, which sent us unto thee: Thy silver, and thy gold, and thy wives, and thy children thou shalt give me. 6 Tomorrow therefore this very hour I will send my servants to thee, and they shall search thy house, and the house of thy servants: and all that pleaseth them, they shall put in their hands, and take away. 7 And the king of Israel called all the ancients of the land, and said: Mark, and see that he seeketh to entrap us. For he sent to me for my wives, and children, and for the silver and gold: and I said not nay. 8 And all the ancients, and all the people said to him: Hear not, neither agree unto him. 9 He therefore answered the messengers of Benadad: Tell my lord the king: All things for the which thou didst send to me thy servant in the beginning I will do: but this thing I cannot do. 10 And the messengers returning made report unto him, who sent again, and said: These things do the gods to me, and these add they, if the dust of Samaria shall suffice for the handfuls of all the people, that followeth me. 11 And the king of Israel answering, said: Tell him (a) Let not the girded glory as the ungirded.

(a) Not at the putting on of armour, is time to boast of victory, but rather at putting it off. Those that are girded & strongly armed do unwisely in trusting their own strength, & contemning their adversaries: for by so doing they are often overthrown. And those that distrusting themselves trust in God, one way or other always prevail. A necessary lesson, both in temporal and spiritual warfare.

12 And it came to pass, when Benadad had heard this word, himself & the kings drank in pavilions, and he said to his servants: Beset the city, and they did beset it. 13 And behold a Prophet coming to Achab the king of Israel, said to him: Thus saith our Lord, Hast thou indeed seen all this exceeding great multitude? Behold, I will deliver them into thy hand this day: that thou mayst know, that I am the Lord. 14 And Achab said: By whom? And he said to him: Thus saith our Lord: By the servants of the princes of the provinces. And he said: Who shall begin to fight? And he said: Thou. 15 He therefore mustered the servants of the Princes of the provinces, and he found the number of two hundred thirty two: and he mustered after them the people, all the children of Israel, seven thousand. 16 And they went forth at noon. But Benadad drank all drunken in his tent. And two and thirty kings with him, which were come to aid him. 17 The servants thereof of the Princes of the provinces issued forth in the forefront. Benadad therefore sent. Who told him, saying: Men are come forth out of Samaria. 18 And he said: Whether they come for peace, take them alive: or else to fight, alive take ye them. 19 The servants therefore of the Princes of the provinces issued forth, and the rest of the army followed: 20 and every one struck the man that came against him: and the Syrians fled, and Israel pursued them. Benadad also the king of Syria fled on horseback with his horsemen. 21 Moreover the king of Israel issuing forth struck the horses and chariots, & he struck Syria with a great slaughter. 22 (And a Prophet coming to the king of Israel, said to him: Go, & take courage, & know, & see what thou doest: for the year following the king of Syria will come up against thee.) 23 But the servants of the king of Syria said to him: The gods of the mountains be their gods, therefore have they overcome us: but it is better that we fight against them in the champion, and we shall overcome them.

24 Thou therefore do this word: Remove all the kings from thine army, and put captains for them: 25 and repair the number of soldiers, that are slain of thine, and horses according to the old horses, & chariots according to the chariots, which thou hadst before: and we will fight against them in the champion, and thou shalt see that we shall overcome them. He believed their counsel, and did so. 26 Therefore after a year was passed, Benadad mustered the Syrians, and went up into Aphec, to fight against Israel.
27 Moreover the children of Israel were mustered, and taking victuals they went forth on the contrary side, and camped against them, as it were two little flocks of goats: but the Syrians filled the land. 28 (And a man of God coming, said to the king of Israel: Thus saith our Lord: Because the Syrians have said: The Lord is God of the mountains, and is not God of the Valleys, I will give all this great multitude into thy hand, and (b) you shall know that I am the Lord.)

(b) Many victories and other benefits were bestowed upon Achab, to make him know God: but he contemning them all remained in his impiety, and finally was slain ch. 22. v. 38.

29 And seven days did these, and they direct their armies one against the other, and in the seventh day was the battle fought, and the children of Israel struck of the Syrians an hundred thousand footmen in one day. 30 And they that remained in Aphec, fled into the city: and the wall fell upon seven and twenty thousand men, that were left. Moreover Benadad flying entered the city, into a chamber that was within a chamber,
31 and his servants said to him: Behold, we have heard that the kings of the house of Israel are merciful: Let us therefore put sackcloths on our loins, and cords on our heads, and go forth to the king of Israel: perhaps he will save our lives. 32 They girded their loins with sackcloths, and put cords on their heads, and came to the king of Israel, and said to him: Thy servant Benadad saith: Let my soul live, I beseech thee. And he said: If he be yet alive, he is my brother.
33 Which the men took for good luck: and in haste caught the word of his mouth, and said: Thy brother Benadad. And he said to them: Go and bring him to me. Benadad therefore came out to him, and he lifted him up into his chariot. 34 Who said to him: The cities which my father took from thy father, I will render: do thou make thee streets in Damascus, as my father made in Samaria, and I confederate will depart from thee. He therefore made a league, and dismissed him.
35 Then a certain man of the children of the Prophets said to his fellow in the word of our Lord: Strike me. But he would not strike. 36 To whom he said: Because thou wouldest not hear the word of our Lord, behold thou shalt depart from me, and a lion shall strike thee. And when he was departed a little from him, a lion found him, and slew him. 37 But finding also another man, he said to him: Strike me. Who struck him, and wounded him. 38 The Prophet therefore went, and met the king in the way, and with sprinkling of dust changed his face and his eyes. 39 And when the king passed by, he cried to the king, and said: Thy servant went forth to fight hand strokes: and when a certain man was fled, one brought him to me, and said: Keep this man: who if he shall slip away, thy life shall be for his life, or thou shalt pay a talent of silver. 40 And whilst I being troubled turned hither and thither, suddenly he appeared not. And the king of Israel said to him: This is thy judgment, which thyself hast decreed. 41 But he forthwith wiped off the dust from his face, and the king of Israel knew him, that he was of the prophets. 42 Who said to him: Thus saith our Lord: (c) Because thou hast let go out of thy hand a man worthy to die, thy life shall be for his life, and thy people for his people.

(c) Foolish pity in sparing a dangerous and common enemy is offensive to God, & severely punished by his justice.

43 The king of Israel therefore returned into his house, contemning to hear, & raging came into Samaria.

CHAPTER XXI.

Naboth for denying his vineyard to king Achab, is by queen Jezabel's commandment falsely accused, and stoned to death. 10. Achab hastening to possess the vineyard, Elias the Prophet threateneth him many evils, 23. and no less to Jezabel: both being obstinate in sin. 27. Yet Achab for fear of punishment, doth external works of penance, and thereby escapeth part of the temporal plagues.

And after these words, at that time Naboth the Jezrahelite had a vineyard, which was in Jezrahel, beside the palace of Achab the king of Samaria. 2 Achab therefore spake to Naboth, saying: Give me thy vineyard, that I may make me a garden of herbs, because it is nigh, and joining to my house, and (a) I will give thee for it a better vineyard: or if thou think it more commodious for thee, the price of silver, so much as it is worth.

(a) If no subject were lord of any land, but only at the King's pleasure & Kings were proper lords of all the lands in their Kingdoms, then Achab might have taken Naboth's vineyard; especially giving him a better, or money for it. Neither was it a vain scruple in Naboth, to conserve his ancester's inheritance. For both his denial is here justified, and Achab's extortion condemned. S. Ambrose li. 2. offic. c. 9. counteth Naboth a Martyr, See Annot. 1. Reg. 8.

3 To whom Naboth answered: Our Lord be merciful to me, that I give not the inheritance of my fathers to thee. 4 Achab therefore came into his house with indignation, and fretting upon the word that Naboth the Jezrahelite had spoken to him, saying: I will not give thee the inheritance of my fathers. And casting himself upon his bed, he turned away his face to the wall, and did not eat bread. 5 And Jezabel his wife went in unto him, and said to him: What is this matter, whereupon thy soul is grieved? And why eatest thou not bread? 6 Who answered her: I spake to Naboth the Jezrahelite, and said to him: Give me thy vineyard, taking money for it: or if it please thee, I will give thee a better vineyard for it. And he said: I will not give thee my vineyard. 7 Jezabel therefore his wife said to him: Thou art of great authority, and doest well govern the Kingdom of Israel: Arise, and eat bread, and be of good cheer, I will give thee the vineyard of Naboth the Jezrahelite. 8 She therefore wrote letters in the name of Achab, and signed them with his ring, and sent to the ancients, and the chief men that were in his city, and dwelt with Naboth. 9 And this was the tenor of the letters: Proclaim a fast, and make Naboth sit among the chief of the people, 10 and suborn two men the children of Belial against him, and let them bear false testimony: that he hath (b) blessed God and the king: and bring him forth, and stone him, and so let him die.

(b) To avoid horror of blasphemy holy scripture often useth the term blessing for cursing.

11 His citizens therefore the ancients and chief men, that dwelt with him in the city, did as Jezabel had commanded them, and as it was written in the letters which she sent to them: 12 they proclaimed a fast, and made Naboth sit among the chief of the people. 13 And two men the children of the devil being brought forth, they made them sit against him: but they, as devilish men, gave testimony against him before the multitude: Naboth hath blessed God and the king: for the which thing they brought him forth without the city, and killed him with stones. 14 And they sent to Jezabel, saying: Naboth is stoned, and is dead. 15 And it came to pass, when Jezabel had heard that Naboth was stoned, and dead, she spake to Achab: Arise, and possess the vineyard of Naboth the Jezrahelite, who would not agree unto thee, and give it taking money: for Naboth liveth not, but is dead. 16 Which when Achab had heard, to wit, that Naboth was dead, he arose, and went down into the vineyard of Naboth the Jezrahelite, to possess it. 17 The word of our Lord therefore came to Elias the Thesbite, saying: 18 Arise, and go down to meet Achab the king of Israel, who is in Samaria: behold he goeth down to the vineyard of Naboth, to possess it: 19 and thou shalt speak to him, saying: Thus saith our Lord: Thou hast slain, moreover also thou hast possest. And after these words thou shalt add: Thus saith our Lord: In this place, wherein the dogs have licked the blood of Naboth, they [1] shall lick thy blood also.

[1] * chap. 22. v. 38.

20 And Achab said to Elias: Hast thou found me thine enemy? Who said: I have found thee, for that thou art sold, to do evil in the sight of our Lord. 21 Behold I will bring evil upon thee, and will cut down thy posterity, and will kill of Achab him that pisseth against the wall, and the inclosed, and the last in Israel. 22 And I will make thy house, as the house of Jeroboam the son of Nabat, and as the house of Baasa the son of Ahias: because thou hast done to provoke me to anger, and hast made Israel to sin. 23 But of Jezabel also our Lord spake, saying: The dogs shall eat Jezabel in the field of Jezrahel. 24 If Achab die in the city, the dogs shall eat him: but if he die in the field, the fowls of the air shall eat him. 25 Therefore there was not such another as Achab, who (c) was sold to do evil in the sight of our Lord: for his wife Jezabel set him on,

(c) So addicted to wickedness, as if he had sold himself to the devil for some temporal profit, or pleasure: In your iniquities you are sold. Isaiae 50. S. Aug. q. 102. c. utro. test. S. Greg. ho. 10. in Ezech.

26 and he became abominable, in so much that he followed the idols, which the Amorrheites had made, whom our Lord consumed before the face of the children of Israel. 27 Therefore when Achab had heard these words, he rent his garments, and covered his flesh with haircloth, and fasted, and slept in sackcloth, and walked casting down his head. 28 And the word of our lord came to Elias the Thesbite, saying: 29 Hast thou not seen Achab humbled before me? Therefore, because he hath humbled himself for my sake, I will not bring in the evil in his days, but in his son's days will I bring the evil upon his house.

CHAPTER XXII.

Achab king of Israel consulting and believing false Prophets rather than Micheas a true Prophet, accompanied with Josaphat king of Juda, resolveth to fight against the Syrians for Ramoth Galaad. 26. Committeth Micheas to prison, 29. proceedeth to the war, 34. is slain, and Ochozias succeedeth. 41. Josaphat refuseth to traffic longer with Ochozias; dieth, & his son Joram reigneth. 52. Ochozias followeth the evil steps of his parent.

There passed therefore three years without war between Syria and Israel. 2 And in the third year, Josaphat the king of Juda went down to the king of Israel. 3 (And the king of Israel said to his servants: are you ignorant that Ramoth Galaad is ours, and we neglect to take it out of the hand of the king of Syria?) 4 And he said to Josaphat: Wilt thou come with me to fight into Ramoth Galaad? 5 And Josaphat said to the king of Israel: As I am, so thou also: my people and thy people are one: and my horsemen thy horsemen. And Josaphat said to the king of Israel: Ask, I beseech thee, this day the word of our Lord. 6 The king of Israel therefore assembled the prophets, about four hundred men, and he said to them: Shall I go into Ramoth Galaad to fight, or sit still? Who answered: Go up, and our Lord will give it into the king's hand. 7 And Josaphat said: (a) Is there not here some prophet of our Lord, that we may ask by him?

(a) The godly King Josaphat justly suspecting the schismatical false Prophets, advised the other King to consult a true Prophet of God.

8 And the king of Israel said to Josaphat: There is one man left, by whom we may ask our Lord: but I hate him, because he doeth not prophesy unto me good, but evil, Micheas the son of Jemla. To whom Josaphat said: Speak not so, o king. 9 The king of Israel therefore called a certain eunuch, and said to him: Make haste, and bring hither Micheas the son of Jemla. 10 And the king of Israel, and Josaphat the king of Juda sat each in his throne clothed with royal attire, in a court beside the door of the gate of Samaria, & all the Prophets prophesied before them. 11 And Sedecias the son of Chanaana made himself (b) horns of iron, and said: Thus saith our Lord: With these shalt thou strike Syria, till thou destroy it.

(b) False Prophets imitate true Prophets in some exterior things, to make their Prophecies seem more authentical. Such horns appeared in a prophetical vision to Zachary the Prophet. Zach. 1. v. 18.

12 And all the prophets in like manner prophesied, saying: Ascend into Ramoth Galaad, and go prosperously, & our Lord will deliver it into the king's hands. 13 But the messenger, that went to call Micheas, spake to him, saying: Behold the words of the prophets with one mouth preach good things to the king: let thy word therefore be like to theirs, and speak good things. 14 To whom Micheas said: Our Lord liveth, whatsoever our Lord shall tell me, that will I speak. 15 He therefore came to the king, and the king said to him: Micheas, shall we go into Ramoth Galaad to fight, or sit still? To whom he answered: (c) Ascend, and go prosperously, and our Lord will deliver it into the king's hands.

(c) The Prophet giveth not this for a resolute answer, but seeing the King will go, he prayeth he may go prosperously. And the King conceiveth no otherwise of his answer, and therefore urgeth him to answer resolutely in the next words: I adjure thee &c.

16 But the king said to him: I adjure thee again and again, that thou speak not to me but that which is true in the name of our Lord. 17 And he said: I saw all Israel dispersed in the mountains, as sheep not having a shepherd, and our Lord said: These have no master, let every man return into his house in peace.
18 (Therefore the king of Israel said to Josaphat: Did I not tell thee, that he doth not Prophesy me good, but always evil?) 19 But he adding, said: Therefore hear the word of our Lord: I saw our Lord sitting upon his throne, and all the host of heaven assisting him on the right hand and on the left: 20 and our Lord said: Who shall deceive Achab the king of Israel, that he may go up, and fall in Ramoth Galaad? And one saith these manner of words, and another otherwise. 21 And there came forth a spirit, and stood before our Lord, and said: I will deceive him. To whom our Lord spake: Wherein? 22 And he said: I will go forth, and be a lying spirit in the mouth of all his prophets. And our Lord said: Thou shalt deceive, and shalt prevail: (d) go forth, and do so.

(d) The coherence of the text sheweth that God only permitted, but commanded not the devil to deceive Achab. So S. Augustin. li. 2. q. ult. ad Simpli. S. Greg. li. 2. c. 21. Moral. and other fathers explicate this and like places.

23 Now therefore behold our Lord hath given the spirit of lying in the mouth of all thy prophets, that are here, and our Lord hath spoken evil against thee.
24 And Sedecias the son of Chanaana came, and smote Micheas on the cheek, and said: Hath the Spirit of our Lord left me, and hath it spoken to thee?
25 And Micheas said: Thou shalt see in that day, when thou shalt enter into thy chamber, (e) within the chamber to be hid.

(e) When this false Prophet heard that the King was slain he hid himself, fearing the King's sons, that they would kill him. Iosephus li. 8. c. 14. Antiq.

26 And the king of Israel said: Take Micheas, & let him tarry with Amon the governor of the city, and with Joas the son of Amelech, 27 and tell them: Thus saith the king: Cast this man into prison, and feed him with bread of tribulation, and water of distress, till I return in peace. 28 And Micheas said: If thou return in peace, our Lord hath not spoken in me. And he said: Hear all ye peoples. 29 Therefore the king of Israel went up, and Josaphat the king of Juda into Ramoth Galaad. 30 The king of Israel therefore said to Josaphat: Take armour, and go into the battle, and put on thine own garments. Moreover the king of Israel changed his habit, and went into the battle. 31 And the king of Syria had commanded the princes of his chariots thirty and two, saying: You shall not fight against any lesser, or greater, but against the king of Israel only. 32 When therefore the Princes of the chariots had seen Josaphat, they suspected that he was the king of Israel, & making a violent assault they fought against him: and Josaphat cried out. 33 And the Princes of the chariots perceived that he was not the king of Israel, and they ceased from him. 34 And a certain man bent his bow; directing the arrow at all adventure, and (f) by chance he struck the king of Israel between the lungs and the stomach. But he said to his coacher: Turn thy hand, and carry me out of the army, because I am grievously wounded.

(f) It happened by chance in respect of the archer's intention, but otherwise by God's providence directing his hand. So Achab's crafty persuading Josaphat to put on his kingly attire (v. 30.) himself fighting in vulgar armour, saved him not from just revenge.

35 The battle therefore was fought that day, and the king of Israel stood in his chariot against the Syrians, and he died in the evening: and the blood of the wound ran into the midst of the chariot, 36 and the herald sounded in all the army before the sun set, saying: Every man return into his city, and into his country. 37 And the king died, and was carried into Samaria: and they buried the king in Samaria, 38 & washed his chariot in the pool of Samaria, and the dogs licked his blood, and they washed the reins of the bridle, according to the word of our Lord which he had spoken. 39 But the rest of the words of Achab, and all that he did, and the house of ivory that he built, and of all the cities that he built, are not these things written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Israel? 40 Achab therefore slept with his fathers, and Ochozias his son reigned for him. 41 But Josaphat the son of Asa began to reign over Juda the fourth year of Achab the king of Israel. 42 Five and thirty years old was he when he began to reign, and five and twenty years he reigned in Jerusalem: the name of his mother was Azuba the daughter of Salai. 43 And he walked in all the way of Asa his father, and he declined not from it: and he did that which was right in the sight of our Lord. 44 But yet he took not away the excelses: for as yet the people did sacrifice, and burnt incense in the excelses. 45 And Josaphat had peace with the king of Israel. 46 But the rest of the words of Josaphat, and his works, which he did, and his battles, are not these things written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Juda? 47 Yea and the remnant of the effeminate, which remained in the days of Asa his father, he took out of the land. 48 Neither was there then a king appointed in Edom. 49 But king Josaphat had made navies on the sea, which should sail into Ophir for gold: and they could not go, because they were broken in Asiongaber. 50 Then said Ochozias the son of Achab to Josaphat: Let my servants go with thy servants in the ships. And Josaphat would not. 51 And Josaphat slept with his fathers, and was buried with them in the City of David his father: and Joram his son reigned for him. 52 And Ochozias the son of Achab began to reign over Israel in Samaria, in the seventeenth year of Josaphat the king of Juda, and he reigned over Israel two years. 53 And he did evil in the sight of our Lord, and walked in the way of his father and his mother, and in the way of Jeroboam the son of Nabat, who made Israel to sin. 54 He served also Baal, and adored him, and provoked our Lord the God of Israel, according to all things which his father had done.

THE ARGUMENT OF THE FOURTH BOOK OF KINGS.

THIS fourth Book prosecuteth the history of the two Kingdoms of Juda & Israel, to the several captivities of them both. Shewing many special virtues and heroical acts of good Kings, Prophets, and other godly persons; and diverse crimes of the wicked. For in Juda were some good kings, highly commended; some evil, whom God spared in this world for David's sake. [1] So that in both sorts King David's seed continued in his throne, and royal state (first in the twelve tribes, afterward in two) near four hundred fourscore years. And after the captivity (as will appear in the age ensuing) it was conserved in honour and estimation, till Christ our Saviour. [2] But in the Kingdom of Israel (or ten tribes) which stood about two hundred fifty years, was great change, by raising and extirpating royal families. All their Kings were bad, yet partly were set up by God himself, partly suffered to reign; and in both Kingdoms were true and false Prophets, God using the ministry of all, to his own glory, the good of his Church, and punishment of others, and sometimes of themselves. [3] So this Book may be divided into two parts. In the seventeen former chapters, are recorded jointly and mixtly the principal things done in both Kingdoms, till the captivity of the ten tribes. The other eight chapters contain other things done in Juda, until their captivity in Babylon.

[1] The Kingdom of Juda conserved in David's seed.

[2] Many royal families begun and destroyed in the Kingdom of Israel.

[3] This book divided into two parts.

THE FOURTH BOOK OF KINGS, ACCORDING TO THE HEBREWS, THE SECOND OF MALACHIM.

CHAPTER I.

Ochozias king of Israel consulting Beelzebub for his sickness, is blamed by Elias, and foretold, that he shall die. 9. Fire from heaven devoureth two Captains with each of them fifty men. 13. The third by his more modesty escapeth the like danger: 15. with him Elias cometh to the king. 17. The same king dieth, and his brother Joram succeedeth.

And [1] Moab moved war against Israel, after that Achab was dead.

[1] The first part.
Of things done in both Kingdoms, with the declination and ruin of Israel.

2 And Ochozias fell through the stanchions of his upper chamber which he had in Samaria, and was sick: and he sent messengers, saying to them: Go, consult Beelzebub the god of Accaron, whether I may live of this my infirmity. 3 And an Angel of our Lord spake to Elias the Thesbite, saying: Arise, and go up to meet the messengers of the king of Samaria, and thou shalt say to them: What^ is there not a God in Israel, that ye go to consult Beelzebub the god of Accaron?
4 Wherefore thus saith our Lord: From the bed on which thou art ascended, thou shalt not go down, but dying thou shalt die. And Elias went away.
5 And the messengers returned to Ochozias. Who said to them: Why are you returned? 6 But they answered him: A man met us, and said to us: Go, and return to the king that sent you, and you shall say to him: Thus saith our Lord: Dost thou therefore send to consult Beelzebub the god of Accaron, because there was no God in Israel? Therefore from the bed, which thou art upon, thou shalt not go down, but dying thou shalt die. 7 Who said to them: What shape and habit had that man, which met you, and spake these words? 8 But they said: A hairy man, and girded about his reins with a girdle of leather: Who said: (a) It is Elias the Thesbite.

(a) Elias was known by his much hair, and distinct habit, from ordinary men.

9 And he sent unto him a captain of fifty men, and the fifty that were under him. Who went up and said to him sitting in the top of the mount: Man of God; the king hath commanded that thou come down.

10 And Elias answering, said to the captain of fifty men: If I be a man of God, (b) let fire come down from heaven, and devour thee, and thy fifty. Fire therefore came down from heaven, and devoured him and the fifty men that were with him.

(b) In zeal of justice Elias procured fire from heaven to burn these proud captains and their men, as he procured fire to burn the holocaust, and then slew the false prophets. 3. Reg. 18. apud. Aug. li. 2. c. 20. de mirabil. S. Script.

11 And he sent again unto him another captain of fifty men, and his fifty with him. Who spake to him: Man of God, thus saith the king: Make haste, come down. 12 Elias answering said: If I be a man of God, let fire come down from heaven, and devour thee, and thy fifty. Fire therefore came down from heaven, & devoured him, & his fifty. 13 Again he sent a third captain of fifty men, and the fifty that were with him. Who when he was come, bowed his knees toward Elias, and prayed him and said: Man of God despise not my life and the lives of thy servants that are with me. 14 Behold fire came down from heaven, and hath devoured the two first captains of fifty men, and the fifties, that were with them: but now I beseech thee that thou have mercy on my life. 15 And an Angel of our Lord spake to Elias, saying: Go down with him, fear not. He therefore arose, and went down with him to the king, 16 and spake to him: Thus saith our Lord: Because thou hast sent messengers to consult Beelzebub the god of Accaron, as though there were not a God in Israel, of whom thou mightest ask the word, therefore from the bed which thou art ascended upon, thou shalt not descend, but dying thou shalt die. 17 He died therefore according to the word of our Lord which Elias spake, and Joram his brother reigned for him, in the second year of Joram the son of Josaphat the king of Juda: for he had no son.

18 But the rest of the words of Ochozias, which he wrought, are not these written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Israel?

CHAPTER II.

Eliseus will not part from Elias. 7. Fifty disciples follow them to Jordan. 8. The water is divided by Elias' cloak, and they two pass the dry channel. 9. Elias is assumpted in a fiery chariot, and his double spirit is given to Eliseus, 13. who returning by like miraculous means over Jordan, the disciples receive and honour him as their religious Superior. 16. They seek Elias, but find him not. 19. Eliseus amendeth the waters by casting in salt. 23. Boys are torn by bears for mocking Eliseus.

And it came to pass, when our Lord would take (a) up Elias by a hurl wind into [1] heaven, Elias and Eliseus went from Galgal.

(a) Whither Elias was carried being taken up into the air, is uncertain: but certain that he yet liveth, and must die. As S. Augustin teacheth li. 9. c. 6. de Gen. ad lit. See Annot. in Gen. 6. & Apocalip. 11. [1] * air or lower heaven.

2 And Elias said to Eliseus: Sit here, because our Lord hath sent me as far as Bethel. To whom Eliseus said: Our Lord liveth, and thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee. And when he was come down to Bethel, 3 the children of the prophets, that were in Bethel, went forth to Eliseus, and said to him: Doest thou know, that this day our Lord will take thy master from thee?

Who answered: I also know it: hold your peace. 4 And Elias said to Eliseus: Sit here, because our Lord hath sent me into Jericho. And he said: Our Lord liveth, and thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee. And when they were come to Jericho, 5 the children of the Prophets, that were in Jericho, came to Eliseus, and said to him: Doest thou know that this day our Lord will take away thy master from thee? And he said: I also know it, hold your peace. 6 And Elias said to him: Sit here, because our Lord hath sent me as far as Jordan. Who said: Our Lord liveth, and thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee: They went therefore both together, 7 and fifty men of the children of the Prophets followed them, who also stood over against them, far off: but they two stood upon Jordan. 8 And Elias took his mantle, and folded it together, and smote the waters, which were divided into two parts, and they both passed over by the dry land. 9 And when they were over, Elias said to Eliseus: Ask what thou wilt have me do for thee, before I be taken from thee. And Eliseus said: I beseech thee that in me may be (b) thy double spirit.

(b) He desired not the double spirit of his master, but the double spirit of prophesying, and of working miracles, which Elias had, v. 15.

10 Who answered: Thou hast asked a hard thing: Nevertheless if thou see me when I shall be taken from thee, thou shalt have that thou hast asked: but if thou see me not, thou shalt not have it. 11 And when they went forward, and going talked together, behold a fiery chariot, and fiery horses parted them two asunder: and Elias ascended by a hurl wind into heaven. 12 And Eliseus saw him, and cried: My father, my father, the chariot of Israel and the guider thereof. And he saw him no more: and he took his garments, and rent them in two pieces. 13 And he took up the mantle of Elias, that was fallen to him: and returning he stood upon the bank of Jordan, 14 and with the mantle of Elias, that fell down to him, he smote the waters, and they were not divided. And he said: Where is the God of Elias, now also? And he smote the waters, and they were divided this way and that way, and Eliseus passed over. 15 And the children of the prophets, that were in Jericho, over against him seeing him, said: The spirit of Elias hath rested upon Eliseus. And coming to meet him, (c) adored him flat to the ground,

(c) They adored him for his holiness, and because God had given him the spirit of so great a Prophet, not for worldly, but spiritual excellency, and therefore not with civil but religious honour.

16 and they said to him: Behold, there are with thy servants fifty strong men, that can go, and seek thy master, lest perhaps the spirit of our Lord hath taken him, and cast him upon one of the mountains, or into one of the valleys. Who said: Send not. 17 And they forced him, till he agreed, and said: Send. And they sent fifty men. Who when they had sought three days, found not. 18 And they returned to him: but he dwelt in Jericho, & he said to them: Did I not say to you: Send not? 19 The men also of the city said to Eliseus: Behold the habitation of this city is very good, as thyself my lord perceivest: but the waters are very ill, and the ground barren. 20 But he said: Fetch me a new vessel, and put salt into it. Which when they had brought, 21 going out to the fountain of the waters, he cast salt into it, and said: Thus saith our Lord: I have amended these waters, and death shall no more be in them, nor barrenness. 22 The waters therefore were amended until this day, according to the word of Eliseus, which he spake. 23 And from thence he went up into Bethel: & when he went up by the way, little lads came forth out of the city, and mocked him, saying: Come up baldhead, come up baldhead. 24 Who when he had looked back, he saw them, and cursed them in the name of our Lord: and two bears came forth out of the forest, and tore of them two & forty boys. 25 And from thence he went into the mount of Carmel, and from thence he turned into Samaria.

CHAPTER III.

Joram king of Israel accompanied with the kings of Juda & Edom, fighteth against the king of Moab, for not paying tribute according to their league. 9. Wanting waters 16. Eliseus procureth sufficient without rain: and prophesieth victory. 21. The king of Moab deceived by a vision is overthrown in the field. 26. Then being besieged immolateth his first begotten son: and the Israelites leave the siege.

And Joram the son of Achab reigned over Israel in Samaria the eighteenth year of Josaphat the king of Juda. And he reigned twelve years. 2 And he did evil before our Lord, but not as his father and mother: for he took away the statues of Baal, which his father had made. 3 Nevertheless in the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nabat, who made Israel to sin, he struck fast, and departed not from them.

4 Moreover Mesa the king of Moab, nourished many sheep, & he payed to the king of Israel an hundred thousand lambs, and an hundred thousand rams with their fleeces. 5 And when Achab was dead, he brake the league, which he had made with the king of Israel. 6 Therefore king Joram went forth that day out of Samaria, and mustered all Israel. 7 And he sent to Josaphat the king of Juda. Saying: The king of Moab is revolted from me, come with me against him to battle. Who answered: I will come up: he that is mine is thine: my people, thy people, & my horses thy horses. 8 And he said: What way shall we go up? But he answered: By the desert of Idumea. 9 Therefore the king of Israel, and the king of Juda, and the king of Edom went forward, and compassed seven days' journey, neither was there water for the army, and the beasts that followed them. 10 And the king of Israel said: Alas alas alas, our Lord hath gathered us three kings together, that he might deliver us into the hands of Moab. 11 And Josaphat said: Is there not here a prophet of our Lord, that we may beseech our Lord by him? And one of the servants of the king of Israel answered: Here is Eliseus the son of Saphat, which poured water upon the hands of Elias. 12 And Josaphat said: The word of our Lord is with him. And the king of Israel went down to him, and Josaphat the king of Juda, and the king of Edom. 13 And Eliseus said to the king of Israel: What is to me and thee? Go to the prophets of thy father, and thy mother. And the king of Israel said to him: Why hath our Lord gathered together these three kings, that he might deliver them into the hands of Moab? 14 And Eliseus said to him: The Lord of hosts liveth, in whose sight I stand, If I did not reverence the face of Josaphat the king of Juda, I would not certes have harkened to thee. Nor looked on thee. 15 But now bring me hither a player on instruments. And when the player sang, the hand of our Lord came upon him, & he said: 16 Thus saith our Lord: Make the channel of this torrent ditches and ditches. 17 For thus saith our Lord: You shall not see wind, nor rain: and this channel shall be filled with waters, & you shall drink, and your families, & your beasts. 18 And this is a small thing in the sight of our Lord: Moreover he will deliver also Moab into your hands. 19 And you shall strike every fenced city, and every principal city, and (a) shall cut down all fruitful trees, and shall stop up all fountains of waters, and every goodly field you shall cover with stones.

(a) It was forbid Deut. 20. to cut down fruit trees in the land of Chanaan, which the Israelite should posses, but the land of Moab pertained not to them, and so it was not prohibited to annoy that country upon just offence.

20 It came to pass therefore in the morning, when they used to offer the sacrifice, and behold, water came by the way of Edom, and the ground was filled with waters. 21 But all the Moabites hearing that the kings were come up to fight against them, they called together all that were girded with a belt upon them, and they stood in the borders. 22 And rising early in the morning, and the sun being now risen over-against the waters, the Moabites saw the waters over against them red, as it were blood, 23 and said: It is the blood of the sword: the kings have fought among themselves, and are slain one of another: now go on forward to the prey, Moab. 24 And they went forward into the camp of Israel: Moreover Israel rising up, struck Moab: but they fled before them. They therefore that had overcome, came and struck Moab, 25 and destroyed the cities: and every principal field they filled every man casting stones: and they stopt up all the fountains of waters: and cut down all trees that bare fruit, so that there remained only brick walls: and the city was beset of the slingers, and for a great part thereof was strucken. 26 Which when the king of Moab had seen, to wit, that the enemies had prevailed, he took with him seven hundred men that drew sword, to break in upon the king of Edom: & they could not. 27 And taking his first begotten son, that should have reigned for him, he offered him an holocaust upon the wall: and there was great indignation in Israel, and forthwith they retired from him, and returned into their country.

CHAPTER IV.

Eliseus so multiplieth a poor widow's oil, that she payeth her debts, and liveth of the rest. 8. By his prayers a Sunamite woman hath a son. 18. Which dying he raiseth to life. 38. He taketh away the bitterness of coloquintida, which by chance was put in the pot, 42. and feedeth many with few loaves.

And[1] a certain woman of the wives of the prophets cried to Eliseus, saying: Thy servant my husband is dead, and thou knowest that thy servant was one that feared God, and behold the creditor is come to take away my two sons to serve him.

[1] The Epistle on Tuesday in the third week of Lent.

2 To whom Eliseus said: What wilt thou that I do for thee? Tell me, what hast thou in thy house? But she answered: I thy handmaid have nothing in my house, but a little oil, to anoint me withal. 3 To whom he said: Go, borrow of all thy neighbours empty vessels not a few. 4 And go in, and shut thy door, when thou art within, thou and thy sons: and pour thereof into all these vessels: and when they shall be full, thou shalt take them away. 5 The woman therefore went, and shut the door upon her, and upon her sons: they brought her vessels, and she poured in. 6 And when the vessels were full, she said to her son: Bring me yet a vessel. And he answered: I have none. And the oil stood. 7 And she came, and told the man of God. And he said: Go, sell the oil, and pay thy creditor: and thou and thy sons live of the rest: 8 And there came a certain day, and Eliseus passed by Sunam: and there was there a great woman, which held him to eat bread: and when he passed often that way, he turned in to her to eat bread. 9 Who said to her husband: I perceive that this is a holy man of God, which passeth by us often. 10 Let us therefore make him a little chamber, and set him a little bed in it, and a table, and a stool, and a candlestick, that when he cometh to us he may tarry there. 11 There came therefore a certain day, and coming he turned in to the chamber, and rested there. 12 And he said to Giezi his servant: Call this Sunamite. Who when he had called her, and she stood before him, 13 he said to his servant: Speak to her: Behold thou hast diligently ministered to us in all things, what wilt thou that I do for thee? Hast thou any business, and wilt thou that I speak to the king, or the general of the warfare? Who answered: I dwell in the midst of mine own people. 14 And he said: What will she then that I do for her? And Giezi said: Ask not: for she hath no son, & her husband is old. 15 He therefore commanded him to call her: who when she was called, and stood before the door, 16 he said to her: At this time, this self same hour, if life accompany, thou shalt have a son in thy womb. But she answered: Do not I beseech thee my lord, man of God, do not lie to thy handmaid. 17 And the woman conceived, and brought forth a son in that time, and in the self-same hour, that Eliseus had said. 18 And the child grew. And upon a certain day, when going forth he went to his father, unto the reapers, 19 he said to his father: My head acheth, my head acheth. But he said to his servant, take him, and bring him to his mother, 20 who when he had taken him, and brought him to his mother, she set him upon her knees until noon, and he died. 21 And she went up, and laid him upon the bed of the man of God, and shut the door: and going forth. 22 called her husband, and said: Send with me, I beseech thee, one of the servants, & an ass, that I may run to the man of God, and return. 23 Who said to her: For what cause doest thou go to him? The Calends be not today, nor the Sabbath. Who answered: I will go. 24 And she saddled the ass, and commanded her servant: drive, and make haste, make no stay in going. And do that which I command thee.

25 [1]She therefore went forward, and came to the man of God into mount Carmel: and when the man of God saw her over against him, he said to Giezi his servant: Behold that Sunamite.

[1]The Epistle on Thursday in the 4. week of Lent.

26 Go therefore to meet her, & say to her: Is all well about thee & about thy husband, and about thy son? Who answered: Well. 27 And when she was come to the man of God into the mount, she caught his feet: and Giezi came to remove her. And the man of God said: Let her alone, for her soul is in anguish, and our Lord hath hid it from me, & hath not told me. 28 Who said to him: Did I ask a son of my lord? Did I not say to thee: Mock me not? 29 And he said to Giezi: Gird thy loins, and take my staff in thy hand, & go. If a man meet thee, salute him not: and if any man salute thee, answer him not: and thou shalt put my staff upon the face of the child. 30 Moreover the mother of the child said: Our Lord liveth, and thy soul liveth, I will not leave thee. He arose therefore, and followed her.

31 But Giezi was gone before them, and had put the staff upon the face of the child, and there was not voice, nor sense: and he returned to meet him, and told him, saying: [a]The child is not risen.

[a] God sent his law by his servant, and it availed not to mankind dead in sins. But he coming and accommodating himself to our infirmity, participating our death we are quickened. So S. Augustin mystically applieth this figurative miracle to Christ and his Church. li. 12. c. 35. cont. Faust. Manich. and many like things of the old Testament he sheweth to be figures of the new.

32 Eliseus therefore went into the house, and behold the child lay dead on his bed: 33 and going in he shut the door upon him, and upon the child, and prayed to our Lord. 34 And he went up, and lay upon the child, and he put his mouth upon his mouth, and his eyes upon his eyes, & his hands upon his hands: and he bowed himself over him, and the child's flesh was warmed. 35 But he returning, walked up and down in the house, once hither and thither: and he went up, and lay upon him: and the child gaped seven times, and opened his eyes. 36 And he called Giezi, and said to him: Call this Sunamite. Who being called, went in unto him: Who said: Take thy son. 37 She came and fell at his feet, and adored upon the ground: and took her son, and went out, 38 and Eliseus returned into Galgal. And there was a famine in the land, and the children of the Prophets dwelt before him; and he said to one of his servants: Set on a great pot, and seethe broth for the children of the Prophets. 39 And one went out into the field to gather wild herbs: and he found as it were a wild vine, and gathered of it the colocynthides of the field, and filled his mantle, and returning cut it into the pot of broth, for he knew not what it was. 40 They therefore poured it to their fellows, to eat: and when they had tasted of the broth, they cried, saying: Death is in the pot, man of God. And they could not eat. 41 But he said: Bring meal, and when they had brought it, he cast it into the pot, and said: pour in for the multitude, that they may eat. And there was no more any bitterness in the pot.

CHAPTER V.

Naaman the general captain of Syria is cleansed of leprosy, by washing himself as Eliseus appointeth him seven times in Jordan: 15. professeth his belief in one God promising to serve him. 20. Giezi taketh gifts of Naaman, 25. and is strucken with leprosy.

Naaman [1] the General of the warfare of the king of Syria, was a great man with his lord, & honourable: for by him our Lord gave health to Syria: and he was a valiant man and rich, but a leper.

[1] The Epistle on Monday in the 3. week of Lent.

2 Moreover out of Syria there were come forth robbers, and had led away captive out of the Land of Israel a little girl, which waited upon the wife of Naaman. 3 Who said to her mistress: I would my lord had been with the prophet, that is in Samaria: surely he would have cured him from the leprosy, which he hath. 4 Naaman therefore went in to his lord, and told him saying: Thus and thus hath the wench of the Land of Israel spoken. 5 And the king of Syria said to him: Go, & I will send letters to the king of Israel. Who when he was set forward, & had taken with him ten talents of silver, & six thousand pieces of gold, & ten change of raiment, 6 he brought the letters to the king of Israel, in these words: When thou shalt receive this letter, know that I have sent to thee Naaman my servant, that thou mayest cure him of his leprosy. 7 And when the king of Israel had read the letters, he rent his garments, & said: Am I God, that I can kill, and give life, because this man hath sent to me, that I should cure a man of his leprosy? Mark, and see that he seeketh occasions against me. 8 Which when Eliseus the man of God had heard, to wit, that the king of Israel had rent his garments, he sent to him, saying: Why hast thou rent thy garments? Let him come to me, & let him know that there is a prophet in Israel 9 Naaman therefore came with horses & chariots: & stood at the door of the house of Eliseus: 10 and Eliseus sent a messenger to him, saying: Go & be washed seven times in Jordan, and thy flesh shall receive health, & thou shalt be clean. 11 Naaman being angry departed, saying: I thought he would come out to me, and standing would invocate the name of the Lord his God, and touch with his hand the place of the leprosy, and cure me. 12 What^ are not Abana and Pharphar, the rivers of Damascus, better than all the waters of Israel, that I may be washed in them, and be made clean? Therefore when he had turned himself, & went away with indignation, 13 his servants came unto him, & spake to him. Father, & if the Prophet had said a great thing to thee, certes, thou shouldest have done it: how much more whereas now he said unto thee: Be washed, and thou shalt be clean? 14 He went down, and washed in Jordan seven times according to the word of the man of God, and his flesh was restored, as the flesh of a little child, and he was made clean. 15 And returning to the man of God with all his train, he came, and stood before him, & said: In very deed I know that there is no other God in all the earth, but only in Israel. I beseech thee therefore to take a benediction of thy servant. 16 But he answered: Our Lord liveth, before whom I stand, I will not take it. And when he would have forced him, he did in nowise agree. 17 And Naaman said: As thou wilt, but I beseech thee: grant unto me thy servant, that I may take of (a) the earth the burden of two mules: for thy servant will no more make holocaust or victim to strange gods, but to the Lord.

(a) In respect of God's special electing and sanctifying the land of Chanaan, by his true religion, Naaman rightly esteemed that earth fitter for an altar than the earth of his own country.

18 But this only is it, for which thou shalt beseech the Lord for thy servant: when my master shall go into the temple of Remmon, to adore, and he leaning upon my hand, if I shall adore in the temple of Remmon, he adoring in the same place, that the Lord pardon me thy servant for this thing. 19 Who said to him: Go in peace. He therefore went from him in the spring time of the earth. 20 And (b) Giezi the servant of the man of God said: My master hath spared Naaman this Syrian, that he took not of him the things which he brought: Our Lord liveth, I will run after him, and will take something of him.

(b) Giezi prefigured Judas the false Apostle of Christ, and all those that buy or sell spiritual things for money, who by their avarice lose God's grace, and gain infamy in this world, and eternal damnation in the next. S. Aug. ser. 208. de tempore.

21 And Giezi followed at the back of Naaman: whom when he saw running toward him, he lept down from his chariot to meet him, and said: Are all things well? 22 And he said: Well. My master hath sent me to thee, saying: Even now there are come to me two young men from mount Ephraim, of the children of the Prophets: give them a talent of silver, and two change of raiment. 23 And Naaman said: It is better that thou take two talents. And he forced him, and bound the two talents of silver in two bags, and the double raiment, and laid it upon two of his servants, who also carried it before him. 24 And when he was come now in the evening, he took it out of their hand, and laid it up in the house, and dismissed the men, and they departed. 25 And himself going in stood before his master. And Eliseus said: From whence comest thou Giezi? Who answered: Thy servant hath not gone any whither. 26 But he said: Was not my heart present, when the man returned out of his chariot to meet thee? Now therefore thou hast received silver, and taken raiment, to buy olivets, and vineyards, and sheep, and oxen, and servants, and handmaids. 27 But the leprosy also of Naama shall cleave to thee, and to thy seed, for ever. And he went out from him a leper as it were snow.

ANNOTATIONS.
CHAP. V.

[1] The case of going to heretical service, and Naaman's going to the temple of an idol differ in diverse respects.
Difference of times.

[2] Mat. 10.

[3] Of places.

[4] Rom. 1.
2. Pet. 1.

[5] Of persons.

[6] Tim. 2.

[8] D. Bristow's Motive. 23.

[9] Personal presence at heretical service in England, a distinctive sign of conformity to heresy.

19. Go in peace.] Schismatics, as they are commonly (but improperly) now called in England, which being in mind and judgement Catholics, go sometimes to Protestants common prayers, or sermons, draw an excuse of their fact, from this warrant of the Prophet, permitting a Nobleman of Syria to go and serve his King in the temple, when he adored an Idol. [1] But whosoever will duly consider this example, shall find great difference in respect of the times, places, persons, and of the very doubts proposed, between this man's case and ours. For before Christ's Gospel was promulgate, neither all Articles of faith were so expressly taught, nor the external profession thereof so strictly commanded, as now they are in time of more grace, which giveth more aid to man's weakness, wherein also more perfection is required, and therefore our Saviour exacteth of all to confess him, and his Religion, before men: else he will deny them before his Father. [2] Likewise in the place, [3] where this Nobleman dwelt, his presence in the temple, and service to the King, could not be accounted a revolt from true religion, which was never professed there, nor be scandalous to any man, being all Infidels: but in a christian country, where all bear the name of Christians, especially where men are at controversy about the true Christian religion, all that frequent, or repair to the same assemblies, for public service of God, are reputed to be of the same religion; or else dissemblers, as it were to have no care of religion, knowing God, and not glorifying him as God, and revolting from the truth which they had learned. [4] The difference also of persons is great. [5] For this Nobleman having before his conversion served his King, in the office of sustaining him, when he bowed to the Idol, if he should have refused to do the same, it would rather have been supposed that he disdained his Master, or shewed disloyalty, than thought, that he refrained for religion: whereas in our case, very few do such temporal service, about the King in the church: and such as do carry the sword, sceptre, or the like, are accounted of that religion, which is there practised; except they manifest the contrary, as this man did, and our men commonly do not. Yea if any do say they are Catholics, and yet go to the Protestants' church, they are counted of that rank S. Paul speaketh of, which confess they know God, but deny him in their deeds.[6] And those which refuse such an office, cannot be judged disloyal, because it is sufficiently known, that Catholics refuse of mere conscience. Another most especial difference is in the things demanded.[7] This Syrian promising expressly before the Prophet, and his own great train, that he would never again serve false gods, and that he would serve the only true God, and for that purpose carried earth with him, to make an Altar for Sacrifice, and returning home preached the miracle wrought in himself, desired not to do any thing, whereby he might seem to serve an Idol: [8]but that when the King leaning upon him should adore Remmon, he might bow with his master, not adoring the Idol, for he resolve & promised the contrary, but adoring God Almighty, in whom now he believed. And this the Prophet approved, in that time, place, and person to be lawful. [9]But those that now in England go to Protestants' service, or sermons, do neither publicly renounce all heresies, nor profess to frequent Mass, the true Sacrifice of the Christian Church, nor avouch the erecting of an Altar, but go to Church, to shew themselves obedient to the Parliament law, which abandoned the true Divine Service, and in place thereof appointed and commanded all to be present at a new form of common prayer, thereby making it a distinctive sign of conformity, and participation in that religion, which these dissemblers in their conscience know to be false.

This example therefore doth in no sort warrant their going to the heretical Church: but contrarywise admonisheth all to take resolution in our case (as Naaman did in his) of our Eliseus, or spiritual Superior, and if he should say: Go in peace, then might they plead an excuse, but he saith: None can go without incurring grievous sin, and eternal damnation. The case being so much different from Naaman's. [1]It is indeed more like to that of Eleazarus, and other Machabees, who were commanded by eating swine's flesh, to depart from the law of God, and their fathers.[2] Which by no means was lawful to do, nor to make shew of doing it, but rather to die, as they did most gloriously.

[1] A case very like to ours.

CHAPTER VI.

Eliseus maketh iron to swim upon the water: 8. leadeth the king of Syria his men (sent to apprehend him) blindly into Samaria. 20. Where their eyes being opened, they are courteously entertained, and freely dismissed. 24. The Syrians besiege Samaria. 26. For extreme famine a mother eateth her child. 31. And the king commandeth to kill Eliseus.

And the children of the Prophets said to Eliseus: Behold the place, wherein we dwell before thee is strait for us. 2 Let us go as far as Jordan, and take out of the wood every man some timber, that we may build there a place to dwell in. Who said: Go. 3 And one of them said: Come therefore thou also with thy servants. He answered: I will come. 4 And he went with them. And when they were come to Jordan they cut wood. 5 And it chanced, that when one had cut down timber, the head of the axe fell into the water: and he cried out, and said: Alas alas alas my lord, this same also I (a) did borrow.

(a) His grief was great, because he had not means to recompence the loss to the owner.

6 And the man of God said: where fell it? And he shewed him the place: he therefore cut off a piece of wood, and cast it thither: and the iron did swim, 7 and he said: Take it up. Who stretched forth his hand, & took it. 8 And the king of Syria fought against Israel, & took counsel with his servants, saying: In that and that place let us lay embushments. 9 Therefore the man of God sent to the king of Israel, saying: Beware thou pass not into such a place: because the Syrians are there in embushments. 10 The king of Israel therefore sent to the place, which the man of God had told him, and prevented him, and looked well to himself there not once or twice. 11 And the heart of the king of Syria was troubled for this thing. And calling together his servants, he said: Why do you not tell me who is the betrayer of me to the king of Israel? 12 And one of his servants said: Not so my lord king, but Eliseus the prophet, which is in Israel, telleth the king of Israel all words, whatsoever thou shalt speak in thy privy chamber. 13 And he said to them: Go, and see where he is: that I may send, and take him. And they told him, saying: Behold in Dothan. 14 He therefore sent thither horses and chariots, and the force of his army: who when they were come in the night, they beset the city. 15 And the servant of the man of God rising early, went out, and saw an army round about the city, and horses and chariots: & he told him, saying: Alas alas alas my lord, what shall we do. 16 But he answered: Fear not: for there are more with us than with them. 17 And when Eliseus had prayed, he said: Lord open the eyes of this man, that he may see. And our Lord opened the eyes of the servant, and (b) he beheld: and lo the mountain full of horses, and of fiery chariots round about Eliseus.

(b) A husbandman, in Yorkshire called Ketle had the gift to see evil spirits, whereby he often detected & hindered their bad purposes. Neu. brig. li. 2. c. 21. Rer. Anglic.

18 But the enemies went down to him: moreover Eliseus prayed to our Lord, saying: Strike, I beseech thee, this people with blindness. And our Lord smote them, that they saw not, according to the word of Eliseus. 19 And Eliseus said to them: This is not the way, neither is this the city: follow me, and I will shew you the man, whom you seek. He therefore led them into Samaria: 20 and when they were entered into Samaria, Eliseus said: Lord open the eyes of these men, that they may see. And our Lord opened their eyes, and they saw themselves to be in the midst of Samaria. 21 And the king of Israel said to Eliseus, when he had seen them: Shall I strike them, my father? 22 And he said: Thou shalt not strike them: for thou didst not take them with thy sword, and thy bow, that thou mayst strike them: but (c) set bread & water before them, that they may eat & drink, and go to their master.

23 And a great preparation of meats was set before them, and they did eat and drink, and he dismissed them, and they went away to their master, & the robbers of Syria came no more into the Land of Israel. 24 And it came to pass after these things, Benadad the king of Syria gathered together all his army, & went up, and besieged Samaria. 25 And there was a great famine in Samaria: and so long it was besieged, till the head of an ass was sold for four score silver pieces, & the fourth part of a cabe of pigeon's dung, for five silver pieces. 26 And when the king of Israel passed by the wall, a certain woman cried out to him, saying: Save me my lord king. 27 Who said: No, our Lord save thee: how can I save thee? Of the floor, or of the press? And the king said to her: What aileth thee? Who answered: 28 This woman said to me: Give thy son, that we may eat him today, and my son we will eat tomorrow: 29 We therefore boiled my son, and did eat him. And I said to her the next day: Give thy son, that we may eat him. Who hath hid her son. 30 Which when the king had heard, he rent his garments, and passed by the wall. And all the people saw the hair-cloth, which he wore next upon his flesh. 31 And the king said: These things do God to me, and these add he, if the head of Eliseus the son of Saphat shall stand upon him this day. 32 But Eliseus sat in his house, & the ancients sat with him. He therefore sent a man before: & before that messenger came, he said to the ancients: Do you know that this murderer's son hath sent to cut off my head? See therefore, when the messenger shall come, shut the door, and suffer him not to enter in: for behold the sound of his master's feet is behind him. 33 Whilst he was yet speaking to them, the messenger appeared, which came to him. And he said: Behold, this so great evil is of our Lord: what shall I look for more of our Lord?

CHAPTER VII.

Eliseus Prophesieth plenty of corn the next day, and death to a chief man that will not believe it. 3. Four Lepers going to yield themselves to the Syrians, 6. who by God's providence are frighted and fled away, 9. bring news thereof to Samaria, 12. which by trial is found truth. 16. And so there is plenty of corn, and the incredulous nobleman is trod to death with press of multitude in the gate, as the Prophet foretold.

And Eliseus said: Hear ye the word of our Lord: Thus saith our Lord: At this time tomorrow a bushel of flour shall be at one stater, and two bushels of barley at one stater, in the gate of Samaria. 2 One of the Dukes, upon whose hand the king leaned, answering the man of God, said: If our Lord shall make floodgates in heaven, (a) can that possibly be which thou speakest? Who said: Thou shalt see it with thine eyes, and shalt not eat thereof.

(a) Discourse of man's reason cannot reach to the power of God, who can do all that he will, and will do all that he saith: therefore the incredulous are justly punished. v. 20.

3 There were therefore four men lepers, beside the entrance of the gate: who said one to another: What mean we to be here till we die? 4 Whether we enter into the city, we shall die for famine: or whether we tarry here, die we must: come therefore, & let us run away to the camp of Syria. If they spare us, we shall live: but if they will kill us, we shall die nevertheless. 5 They arose therefore in the evening, to come to the camp of Syria. And when they were come to the beginning of the camp of Syria, they found no man there. 6 For our Lord had made them in the camp of Syria to hear the sound of chariots, & horses, & of a very great army: & they said one to another: Behold the king of Israel hath for wages hired against us the kings of the Hetheites, & of the Aegyptians, & they are come upon us. 7 They arose therefore, & fled in the dark, & left their tents, and their horses and asses in the camp, and fled desirous to save their lives only. 8 Therefore when these lepers were come to the beginning of the camp, they entered into one tabernacle, and did eat and drink: and they took thence silver, and gold, and raiment, and went, and hid it: again they returned to another tabernacle, and from thence likewise taking away they hid it. 9 And they said one to another: We do not well: for this is a day of good tidings. If we shall hold our peace, and will not tell until morning, we shall be blamed of a heinous offence: Come, let us go, and make report in the king's court. 10 And when they were come to the gate of the city, they told them saying: We went to the camp of Syria, and found no man there, but horses, and asses tied, and the tents pitched. 11 The porters therefore went, and told it to the king within his palace. 12 Who arose in the night, and said to his servants: I tell you what the Syrians have done to us: They know that we suffer great famine, and therefore they are gone out of the camp and lie hid in the fields, saying: When they shall come forth out of the city, we will take them alive, and then we may enter into the city. 13 But one of his servants answered: Let us take five horses that are remaining in the city (because they only are in the whole multitude of Israel for the other are consumed) and sending, we may try. 14 They brought therefore two horses, and the king sent into the camp of the Syrians, saying, Go ye, and see. 15 Who went after them as far as Jordan: and behold all the way was full of raiment, and vessels, which the Syrians had cast away, when they were amazed, and the messengers returning told the king. 16 And the people going forth spoiled the camp of Syria: & a bushel of floor became at one stater, and two bushels of barley at one stater, according to the word of our Lord. 17 Moreover the king appointed that Duke on whose hand he leaned, to stand at the gate: whom the multitude trod in the entrance of the gate, and he died, according as the man of God had spoken, when the king came down to him. 18 And it came to pass according to the word of the man of God, which he spake to the king, when he said: Two bushels of barley shall be at one stater, and a bushel of floor at one stater, this very time tomorrow in the gate of Samaria: 19 When that Duke answered the man of God, and said: Although our Lord would make floodgates in the heaven, can this be done which thou speakest? And he said to him: Thou shalt see with thine eyes, and shalt not eat thereof. 20 It chanced therefore to him as it was foretold, and the people trod him in the gate, and he died.

CHAPTER VIII.

After seven years famine foretold by Eliseus, the Sunamite woman returning home, recovereth her lands and revenues. 7. Eliseus foresheweth the death of Benadad king of Syria, and cruel reign of Hazael. 16. Joram reigning in Juda, the Idumeans revolt from him: also Lobna. 23. He dieth, and his son Ochozias succeedeth.

And Eliseus spake to the woman, whose son he restored to life, saying: Arise, go thou and thy house, and sojourn wheresoever thou shalt find: for our Lord hath called a famine, and it shall come upon the land seven years. 2 Who arose, and did according to the word of the man of God: and going with her household, she sojourned in the land of the Philisthiims many days. 3 And when the seven years were ended, the woman returned out of the Land of the Philisthiims: and she went forth to speak to the king for her house, and for her lands. 4 And the king spake with Giezi the servant of the man of God, saying: Tell me all the marvelous things that Eliseus hath done. 5 And when he had told the king how he had raised a dead man, the woman appeared, whose son he had revived, crying to the king for her house and her lands. And Giezi said: My lord king, this is the woman, and this is her son, whom Eliseus raised. 6 And the king asked the woman: who told him. And the king gave her an eunuch, saying: Restore her all things that are hers, and all the revenues of the lands, from the day that she left the land until this present. 7 Eliseus also came to Damascus, & Benadad the king of Syria was sick: & they told him, saying: The man of God cometh hither. 8 And the king said to Hazael: Take with thee presents, & go to meet the man of God, & consult the Lord by him, saying: Can I escape of this mine infirmity? 9 Hazael therefore went to meet him, having with him presents, & all good things of Damascus, the loads of forty camels. And when he stood before him, he said: Thy son Benadad the king of Syria hath sent me to thee, saying: Can I recover of this mine infirmity? 10 And Eliseus said to him: Go, tell him: (a) Thou shalt be healed: but our Lord hath shewed me that dying he shall die.

(a) This was true in some sense, sickness ending when death came.

11 And he stood with him, and was troubled so far that he blushed: and the man of God wept. 12 To whom Hazael said: Why doeth my lord weep? But he said: Because I know what evils thou wilt do to the children of Israel. Their fenced cities thou wilt burn with fire, and their young men thou wilt kill with the sword, & their little ones thou wilt dash in pieces, and women with child thou wilt divide. 13 And Hazael said: What am I thy servant a dog, that I should do this great thing? And Eliseus said: Our Lord hath shewed me that thou shalt be king of Syria. 14 Who when he was departed from Eliseus, came to his master, who said to him: What said Eliseus to thee? But he answered: He told me: Thou shalt recover health. 15 And when the next day was come, he took a coverlet, and poured water thereon, and spread it upon his face: who being dead, Hazael reigned for him. 16 In the fifth year of Joram the son of Achab the king of Israel, and of Josaphat the king of Juda, reigned Joram the son of Josaphat the king of Juda. 17 He was two and thirty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned eight years in Jerusalem. 18 And he walked in the ways of the kings of Israel, as the house of Achab had walked: for (b) the daughter of Achab was his wife: and he did that which is evil in the sight of our Lord.

(b) Athalia v. 26. is called the daughter of Amri. Wherefore it seemeth that either she was the adopted daughter of her brother Achab, or is there called the daughter of her grandfather.

19 But our Lord would not destroy Juda, for David his servant, as he had promised him, to give him a lamp to him, & to his children always. 20 In his days revolted Edom, from being under Juda, and made to it-self a king. 21 And Joram came to Seira, and all the chariots with him: and he arose in the night, and struck the Idumeans, that had beset him, and the captains of the chariots, and the people fled into their tabernacles. 22 Edom therefore revolted from being under Juda, until this day. Then Lobna also revolted at that time. 23 But the rest of the words of Joram, and all that he did, are not these things written in the Book of the words of the kings of Juda? 24 And Joram slept with his fathers, and was buried with them in the city of David, and Ochozias his son reigned for him. 25 In the twelfth year of Joram the son of Achab the king of Israel, reigned Ochozias the son of Joram the king of Juda. 26 Two and twenty years old was Ochozias when he began to reign, and he reigned one year in Jerusalem: the name of his mother was Athalia the daughter of Amri the king of Israel. 27 And he walked in the ways of the house of Achab: & he did that which is evil before our Lord, as the house of Achab: for he was the son in law of the house of Achab. 28 He went also with Joram the son of Achab, to fight against Hazael the king of Syria in Ramoth Galaad, and the Syrians wounded Joram. 29 Who returned to be cured in Jezrahel: because the Syrians wounded him in Ramoth fighting against Hazael the king of Syria. Moreover Ochozias the son of Joram the king of Juda went down to visit Joram the son of Achab into Jezrael, because he was sick there.

CHAPTER IX.

Jehu is anointed king of Israel, 7. to destroy the house of Achab and Jezabel. 14. He presently killeth Joram king of Israel. 27. Likewise Ochozias king of Juda. 30. Also Jezabel, who is eaten by dogs.

And Eliseus the Prophet called one of the children of the Prophets, and said to him: Gird thy loins, and take this little box of oil in thy hand, and go into Ramoth Galaad. 2 And when thou shalt come thither, thou shalt see Jehu the son of Josaphat the son of Namsi: and going in thou shalt raise him out of the midst of his brethren, and shalt bring him into an inner chamber. 3 And holding the little box of oil, thou shalt pour upon his head, and shalt say: Thus saith our Lord: I have anointed thee king over Israel. And thou shalt open the door, and fly, and shalt not stay there. 4 The young man therefore the child of a Prophet went into Ramoth Galaad, 5 and entered in thither: and behold the captains of the army sat, and he said: I have a word to thee o prince: And Jehu said: to whom of us all? But he said: To thee o prince. 6 And he arose, and went into the chamber: but he poured oil upon his head, and said: Thus saith our Lord the God of Israel: I have anointed thee king over the people of the Lord of Israel, 7 and thou shalt strike the house of Achab thy master, and I will revenge the blood of my servants the Prophets, and the blood of all the servants of the Lord of the hand of Jezabel. 8 And I will destroy all the house of Achab, and kill of Achab him that pisseth against a wall, and the shut up, and the meanest in Israel. 9 And I will make the house of Achab as the house of Jeroboam the son of Nabat, and as the house of Baasa the son of Ahias. 10 Jezabel also the dogs shall eat in the field of Jezrahel, neither shall there be any to bury her. And he opened the door, & fled. 11 And Jehu went forth to his master's servants. Who said to him: Are all things well? Why came this mad man to thee? Who said to them: You know the man, and what he spake. 12 But they answered: It is false, but rather do thou tell us. Who said to them: Thus and thus he spake to me: and he said: Thus saith our Lord, I have anointed thee king over Israel. 13 They therefore made haste, and every man taking his mantle laid it under his feet after the similitude of a judgment seat, and they sounded the trumpet, & said: Jehu hath the Kingdom. 14 Jehu therefore the son of Josaphat the son of Namsi conspired against Joram: Moreover Joram had besieged Ramoth Galaad, he and all Israel against Hazael the king of Syria: 15 and was returned to be cured in Jezrael of the wounds, for the Syrians had wounded him, fighting against Hazael the king of Syria. And Jehu said: If it please you, let no man go forth fugitive out of the city, lest he go, and tell in Jezrahel. 16 And he mounted, and went into Jezrahel: for Joram was sick there, and Ochozias the king of Juda was come down to visit Joram. 17 The watchman therefore, that stood upon the tower of Jezrahel, saw the troop of Jehu coming, & said: I see a troop. And Joram said: Take a Chariot, and send to meet them, and let him that goeth say: Are all things well? 18 He went therefore, that was gotten up into the chariot, to meet him, and said: Thus saith the king: Are all things peaceable? And Jehu said: What hast thou to do with peace? Pass, and follow me. The watchman also told, saying: The messenger came to them, & returneth not. 19 He sent also the second chariot of horses: and he came to them, & said: Thus saith the king: Is there peace? And Jehu said: What hast thou to do with peace? Pass, & follow me. 20 And the watchman told, saying: He is come as far as they, & returneth not: and it is the pace as it were the pace of Jehu the son of Namsi, for he goeth amain. 21 And Joram said: Make ready the chariot. And they made ready his chariot, and Joram the king of Israel went forth, and Ochozias the king of Juda, each in their chariots, and they went forth to meet Jehu, and found him in the field of Naboth the Jezrahelite. 22 And when Joram had seen Jehu, he said: Is there peace Jehu? But he answered: What peace? The fornications of Jezabel thy mother, and her many sorceries are in their vigour. 23 And Joram turned his hand, and flying said to Ochozias: Treason Ochozias. 24 Moreover Jehu bent his bow with his hand, and struck Joram between the shoulders: and the arrow went out through his heart, & immediately he fell in his chariot. 25 And Jehu said to captain Badacer: Take him, throw him forth in the field of Naboth the Jezrahelite: for I remember when I and thou sitting in a chariot did follow Achab this man's father, that our Lord lifted up this burden upon him, saying: 26 If not for the blood of Naboth, and (a) for the blood of his children, which I saw yesterday, saith our Lord, I requite thee not in this field saith our Lord. Now therefore take him, & throw him into the field according to the word of our Lord.

27 But Ochozias the king of Juda seeing this, fled by the way of the house of the garden: & Jehu pursued him, and said: This man also strike ye in his chariot. And they struck him in the going up of Gaver, which is beside Jeblaam: who fled into Mageddo, and died there. 28 And his servants laid him upon his chariot, and carried him into Jerusalem: and they buried him there in his sepulchre with his fathers in the City of David. 29 In the eleventh year of Joram the son of Achab, reigned Ochozias over Juda, 30 and Jehu came into Jezrahel. Moreover Jezabel hearing of his entrance, painted her face with stibic stone, and decked her head, & beheld through the window 31 Jehu coming at the gate, and said: Can there be peace to Zambri, that killed his master? 32 And Jehu lifted up his face to the window, and said: What is she? And two or three eunuchs bowed themselves to him. 33 But he said to them: Cast her down headlong, and they threw her down and the wall was sprinkled with the blood, and the hoofs of the horses trod her. 34 And when he was entered in to eat and to drink, he said: Go, and see that cursed woman, and bury her: because she is a king's daughter. 35 And when they went to bury her, they found nothing but the skull, and the feet, and the extreme parts of the hands. 36 And returning they told him. And Jehu said: It is the word of our Lord, which he spake by his servant Elias the Thesbite, saying: In the field of Jezrahel shall the dogs eat the flesh of Jezabel. 37 and the flesh of Jezabel shall be as dung upon the face of the earth in the field of Jezrahel, so that they which pass by shall say: Is this that same Jezabel?

CHAPTER X.

The Samaritans fearing the force of Jehu, choose no other king, but offer him their service: 6. and by his commandment kill the late king's seventy sons. 12. Forty two brothers of Ochozias late king of Juda are slain. 15. Jehu making league with Jonadab, utterly destroyeth Achab's house. 18. By a stratagem killeth all the worshipers of Baal, 26. burneth his statua, & turneth his temple into a jakes: 28. but maintaineth Jeroboam's golden calves. 31. The Assyrians afflict Israel. 34. Jehu dieth, and his son Joachaz reigneth.

And Achab had seventy sons in Samaria: Jehu therefore wrote letters, and sent into Samaria to the chief of the city, and to the ancients, & to them that brought up Achab's children, saying: 2 As soon as you shall receive these letters, ye that have your master's sons, & chariots, & horses, & fenced cities, & armour, 3 choose the better, & him that shall please you of your master's sons, & set him upon his father's throne, & fight for the house of your lord. 4 They were sore afraid, and said: Behold two kings could not stand before him, & how shall we be able to resist? 5 The overseers therefore of the house, and the rulers of the city, & the ancients, & the tutors sent to Jehu, saying: We are thy servants, whatsoever thou shalt command we will do, neither will we make us a king: Do thou whatsoever pleaseth thee. 6 And he wrote letters to them again the second time, saying: If you be mine, and obey me, take the heads of your master's sons, and come to me this very hour tomorrow into Jezrahel. Moreover the king's sons, seventy men were brought up with the chief of the city. 7 And when the letters were come to them, they took the king's sons, and slew seventy men, and put their heads in baskets, and sent them to him into Jezrahel. 8 And a messenger came, and told him, saying: They have brought the heads of the king's sons. Who answered: Lay them in two heaps by the entrance of the gate until morning. 9 And when it was light he went forth, and standing said to all the people: You are just: If I have conspired against my master, and have slain him, who hath strucken all these? 10 See therefore now there hath not fallen of the words of our Lord on the ground, which our Lord spake upon the house of Achab, and our Lord hath done that which he spake in the hand of his servant Elias. 11 Jehu therefore smote all that were left of the house of Achab in Jezrahel, and all his nobles, and familiars, and Priests, till there remained no relics of him. 12 And he arose, and came into Samaria: and when he was come to the cabin of the shepherds in the way, 13 he found the brethren of Ochozias the king of Juda, and he said to them: What are you? Who answered: We are the brethren of Ochozias, and are come down to salute the king's sons, & the queen's sons. 14 Who said: Take them alive. Whom when they had taken alive, they killed them in the cistern beside the cabin, two and forty men, & he left not any of them. 15 And when he was gone thence, he found (a) Jonadab the son of Rechab coming to meet him, and he blessed him. And he said to him: Is thy heart right as my heart with thy heart? And Jonadab said: It is. If it be so, quoth he, give me thy hand. Who gave him his hand. But he lifted him up to him into the chariot,

(a) This Jonadab instituted a peculiar rule of religious abstinence: which his posterity duly observed. Jerem. 35.

16 and said to him: Come with me, and see my zeal for our Lord. And being set in his chariot, 17 he brought him into Samaria. And he struck all that were left of Achab in Samaria, till there was not one, according to the word of our Lord, which he spake by Elias. 18 Jehu therefore assembled all the people, & said to them: Achab worshipped Baal a little, but (b) I will worship him more.

(b) Jehu sinned in feigning, and causing others to sacrifice to Baal, his zeal wanting both discretion and equity: for evil must not be done that good may come thereof. Rom. 3.

19 Now therefore call to me all the Prophets of Baal, and all his servants, and all his Priests: let there be none but that he come, for I have a great sacrifice to Baal: He that shall be wanting shall not live. Moreover Jehu did this craftily, that he might destroy the worshippers of Baal. 20 And he said: Sanctify a solemn day to Baal. And he called 21 and sent into all the borders of Israel, and all the servants of Baal came: there was left not one that came not. And they entered into the temple of Baal: and the house of Baal was filled, from one end to the other. 22 And he said to them that were over the garments: Bring forth garments for all the servants of Baal. And they brought them forth garments. 23 And Jehu going in, and Jonadab the son of Rechab into the temple of Baal, said to the worshippers of Baal: Search, and see lest perhaps there be any with you of the servants of the Lord, but that there be the servants of Baal only. 24 They therefore went in to make victims and holocausts: but Jehu had prepared him without fourscore men, and said to them: Whosoever shall escape of these men, whom I will bring into your hands, his life shall be for the life of him. 25 And it came to pass, when the holocaust was ended, Jehu commanded his soldiers and captains: Go in and strike them, let none escape. And the soldiers and captains struck them in the edge of the sword, and cast them forth: and they went into the city of the temple of Baal, 26 and brought forth the statue out of Baal's temple, and burnt it, 27 and brake it in pieces. They destroyed also the temple of Baal, & made a jakes for it until this day. 28 Jehu therefore destroyed Baal out of Israel: 29 but yet from the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nabat, who made Israel to sin, he departed not, neither forsook he the golden calves, that were in Bethel, and Dan. 30 And our Lord said to Jehu: (c) Because thou hast diligently done that which was right, and that pleased in mine eyes, and hast done all things that were in my heart, against the house of Achab: thy children shall sit upon the throne of Israel to the fourth generation.

31 Moreover Jehu observed not to walk in the law of our Lord the God of Israel in all his heart: for he departed not from the sins of Jeroboam, who had made Israel to sin. 32 In those days our Lord began to be weary of Israel: and Hazael smote them in all the coasts of Israel, 33 from Jordan against the East quarter, all the land of Galaad, & Gad, & Ruben, & Manasses, from Aroer, which is upon the Torrent Arnon, and Galaad, and Basan. 34 But the rest of the words of Jehu, and all that he did, and his strength, are not these things written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Israel? 35 And Jehu slept with his fathers, and they buried him in Samaria: and Joachaz his son reigned for him. 36 And the days which Jehu reigned over Israel be eight and twenty years, in Samaria.

CHAPTER XI.

Athalia killing all the king's progeny (except Joas, who is saved by his aunt) usurpeth the Kingdom. 4. But the seventh year Joiada the high Priest crowneth Joas king. 13. causeth Athalia to be slain, 17. and maketh covenant between God, the king, and the people.

But Athalia the mother of Ochozias seeing her son dead, arose, and (a) slew all the king's seed.

(a) Ambition cause of much cruelty.

2 But Josaba king Joram's daughter, the sister of Ochozias, taking Joas the son of Ochozias, stole him out of the midst of the king's children, that were slain, and his nurse out of the bed chamber: and hid him from the face of Athalia, that he should not be slain. 3 And he was with her six years secretly in the house of our Lord. Moreover Athalia reigned over the land. 4 And in the seventh year (b) Joiada sent and taking the centurions and the soldiers brought them in to him into the temple of our Lord, and made a covenant with them: and adjuring them in the house of our Lord, shewed them the king's son:

(b) Our Saviour calleth this high-Priest Zacharias; which signifieth blessed of our Lord, for the justice which he did towards Athalia and Joas. S. Hierom. li. 4. in Math. c. 23.

5 and commanded them, saying: This is the thing, which you must do. 6 Let the third part of you go in on the Sabbath, and keep the watch of the king's house. And let a third part be at the gate Sur: and let a third part be at the gate behind the dwelling of the shieldbearers: and you shall keep the watch of the house of Messa. 7 But let two parts of you all that go forth on the Sabbath, keep the watch of the house of our Lord about the king. 8 And you shall guard him round about, having weapons in your hands: and if any man shall enter the precinct of the temple, let him be slain: and you shall be with the king coming in and going out. 9 And the centurions did according to all things, that Joiada the Priest had commanded them: and every one taking their men, that went in on the Sabbath, with them that went out in the Sabbath, came to Joiada the Priest. 10 Who gave them the spears, and the weapons of king David, which were in the house of our Lord. 11 And they stood every one having their weapons in their hand, on the right side of the temple, unto the left side of the altar, and of the temple, about the king. 12 And he brought forth the king's son, and put upon him the diadem, and the covenant: and they made him king, and anointed him: and clapping with the hand, said: God save the king. 13 And Athalia heard the voice of people running: and she going into the multitudes into the temple of our Lord, 14 saw the king standing upon the tribunal seat according to the manner, and the singers, and trumpets near him, and all the people of the land rejoicing, and sounding the trumpets: and she rent her garments, and cried: A conspiracy, a conspiracy. 15 But Joiada commanded the centurions, that were over the army, and said to them: Lead her forth without the precinct of the temple, and whosoever shall follow her, let him be strucken with the sword. For the Priest had said: Let her (c) not be slain in the temple of our Lord.

(c) Great respect is to be had of holy places. Whereof cometh the privilege of Sanctuaries.

16 And they laid hands on her: and threw her by the way of the entrance of the horses, beside the palace, and she was slain there. 17 Joiada therefore made a covenant between our Lord, and the king, and between the people, that it should be the people of our Lord, and between the king and the people. 18 And all the people of the land entered into the temple of Baal, and destroyed his altars, and his images they brake in pieces stoutly: Mathan also the priest of Baal they slew before the altar. And the priest set guards in the house of our Lord. 19 And he took the centurions, and the legions of Cerethi and Phelethi, and all the people of the land, and they brought the king from the house of our Lord: and they came by the way of the gate of the shieldbearers into the palace, and he sat upon the throne of the kings. 20 And all the people of the land rejoiced, and the city was quiet: but Athalia was slain with the sword in the king's house. 21 And Joas was seven years old, when he began to reign.

CHAPTER XII.

Joas willeth the Priests to repair what needeth in the temple, receiving all the money offered there. 6. Which they not performing, the high Priest provideth that all is amended, 16. the Priests receiving only the money due to themselves. 17. Hazael king of Syria taking Geth, and threatening Jerusalem is pacified with money. 19. Joas is treacherously slain by his servants, and his son Amasias reigneth.

In the seventh year of Jehu reigned Joas: and he reigned forty years in Jerusalem. The name of his mother was Sebia of Bersabee. 2 And Joas did right before our Lord all the days, that Joiada the Priest taught him. 3 But yet the excelses he took not away: for the people immolated and burnt incense in the excelses. 4 And Joas said to the Priests: All the money of the sanctified things, which is brought into the temple of our Lord by the passengers, which is offered for the (a) price of a soul, and which of their own accord, and of their own free heart they bring into the temple of our Lord:

(a) That is, the ordinary oblation for each particular person. Exod. 30.

5 Let the Priests take it according to their order, and maintain reparations of the house, if they shall see any thing that needeth reparation. 6 Therefore until the three and twentieth year of king Joas, the Priests did not make reparations of the temple. 7 And king Joas called Joiada the high Priest and the Priests, saying to them: Why make you not the reparations of the temple? Take you therefore money no more according to your order, but render it to the reparation of the temple. 8 And the Priests were prohibited to take money any more of the people, and to make the reparations of the temple. 9 And Joiada, the high Priest took [1]a treasury, and opened a hole in the top, & set it by the altar at the right hand of them that go into the house of our Lord, and the Priests that kept the doors did cast into it all the money, that was brought to the temple of our Lord.

10 And when they saw that there was very much money in the treasury, the king's scribe, and the high priest went up, and poured it out, and counted the money, that was found in the house of our Lord: 11 and they gave it according to number and measure into their hand, which did oversee the masons of the house of our Lord: who bestowed it on carpenters, and on masons, such as wrought in the house of our Lord, 12 and made reparations: and on them that hewed stones, and that they should buy trees, and stones, that were hewed, so that the reparation of the house of our Lord was accomplished in all things, which had need of cost to uphold the house. 13 But yet there were not made of the same money the water pots of the temple of our Lord, and the fleshhooks, and censers, and trumpets, and every vessel of gold and silver, of the money that was brought into the temple of our Lord. 14 For it was given them that did the work, that the temple of our Lord might be repaired: 15 and there was no account made with those men that received the money to distribute it to the crafts men, but upon their fidelity they bestowed it. 16 But the money for offence, & the money for sins, they brought not into the temple of our Lord, because it was the Priests'. 17 Then Hazael the king of Syria went up, & fought against Geth, and took it: and directed his face to go up to Jerusalem. 18 For which cause Joas the king of Juda took all the sanctified things, which Josaphat, and Joram, and Ochozias his fathers the kings of Juda had (b) consecrated, and which himself had offered: and all the silver, that could be found in the treasures of the temple of our Lord, and in the king's palace: and sent it to Hazael the king of Syria, and he retired from Jerusalem.

(b) Dedicated to holy use.

19 But the rest of the words of Joas, and all that he did, are not these things written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Juda? 20 And his servants arose, & conspired among themselves, and struck Joas in the house of Mello in the descent of Sella. 21 For Josachar the son of Semaath, and Jozabad the son of Somer his servants, struck him, and he died: and they buried him with his fathers in (c) the city of David, and Amasias his son reigned for him.

(c) He as buried in the city but not in the sepulcher of the Kings. 2. Paral. 24. for his impiety in the later part of his life.

CHAPTER XIII.

Joachaz king of Israel is afflicted by the Syrians, 4. and delivered. 6. Yet destroyeth not idolatry: 8. dieth, and his son Joas followeth his evil steps. 14. Eliseus being sick willeth the king to shoot, 18. and to strike the earth: who striking thrice, is told that he shall thrice strike the Syrians. 20. Eliseus dieth, and a dead man is revived touching his bones. 22. Joas recovereth that which the Syrians had taken from Israel.

In the three and twentieth year of Joas the son of Ochozias the king of Juda, reigned Joachaz the son of Jehu over Israel in Samaria, seventeen years. 2 And he did evil before our Lord, and followed the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nabat, who made Israel to sin, and declined not from them.

3 And the fury of our Lord was wrath against Israel, and he delivered them into the hand of Hazael the king of Syria, and into the hand of Benadad the son of Hazael, always. 4 But Joachaz besought the face of our Lord, and our Lord heard him: for he saw the distress of Israel, that the king of Syria had broken them:
5 and our Lord gave a saviour to Israel, and they were delivered out of the hand of the king of Syria: and the children of Israel dwelt in their tabernacles as yesterday and the day before. 6 But yet they departed not from the sins of Jeroboam who made Israel to sin, but they walked in them: for the grove also remained in Samaria. 7 And there were left to Joachaz of the people but fifty horsemen, and ten chariots, and ten thousand footmen: for the king of Syria had slain them, and had brought them as dust by threshing in the barn floor. 8 But the rest of the words of Joachaz, & all that he did, & his strength, are not these things written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Israel? 9 And Joachaz slept with his fathers, and they buried him in Samaria: and Joas his son reigned for him. 10 In the seven and thirtieth year of Joas the king of Juda, reigned Joas the son of Joachaz over Israel in Samaria sixteen years, 11 and he did that which is evil in the sight of our Lord, he declined not from all the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nabat, who made Israel to sin, but he walked in them. 12 But the rest of the words of Joas, and all that he did, and his strength, how he fought against Amasias the king of Juda, are not these things written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Israel? 13 And Joas slept with his fathers: but Jeroboam sat upon his throne. Moreover Joas was buried in Samaria with the kings of Israel. 14 And Eliseus was sick of an infirmity, whereof also he died: and Joas the king of Israel went down to him, and wept before him, and said: My father, my father, the chariot of Israel and the guarder thereof. 15 And Eliseus said to him: fetch a bow and arrows. And when he had brought him a bow and arrows. 16 he said to the king of Israel: Put thy hand upon the bow. And when he had put his hand, Eliseus put his hands over the king's hands, 17 and said: Open the east window. And when he had opened it, Eliseus said: Shoot an arrow. And he shot. And Eliseus said: The arrow of the salvation of our Lord, and the arrow of salvation against Syria: and thou shalt strike Syria in Aphec, till thou consume it. 18 And he said: Take up the arrows. Who when he had taken them again, he said to him: Strike the earth with a javelin. And when he had strucken three times, and stood still, 19 the man of God was angry with him, & said: (a) If thou hadst strucken five or six or seven times, thou hadst strucken Syria even to destruction: but now three times shalt thou strike it.

(a) It was revealed to the Prophet that so often as the King should strike the earth, so often he should have victories against the Syrians, but not how often he would strike on the earth.

20 Eliseus therefore died, and they buried him. And the rovers of Moab came into the land the same year.
21 And certain persons burying a man, saw the rovers, & threw the body in the sepulchre of Eliseus. Which when it had touched the bones of Eliseus, the man revived & stood upon his feet. 22 Hazael therefore the king of Syria afflicted Israel all the days of Joachaz: 23 and our Lord had mercy on them, and returned to them for his covenant, which he had with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob: and he would not destroy them, nor utterly cast them away, until this present time. 24 And Hazael the king of Syria died, and Benadad his son reigned for him. 25 Moreover Joas the son of Joachaz, took the cities out of the hand of Benadad the son of Hazael, which he had taken out of the hand of Joachaz his father by the right of war, three times did Joas strike him, and he delivered the cities to Israel.

CHAPTER XIV.

Amasias king of Juda killeth those that had slain his father, 7. and striketh Edom. 8. Provoking Joas king of Israel to war, receiveth a contemptible answer: 11. provoking again is beaten in battle, and Jerusalem is ransact. 15. Joas dieth, and his son Jeroboam followeth the bad steps of the first Jeroboam; yet recovereth many places lost before, and dying his son Zacharias reigneth.

In the second year of Joas the son of Joachaz the king of Israel reigned Amasias the son of Joas the king of Juda. 2 Five and twenty years old was he when he began to reign: and nine & twenty years he reigned in Jerusalem, the name of his mother was Ioadan of Jerusalem. 3 And he did right before our Lord, but yet not as David his father. He did according to all things, which Joas his father did: 4 but this only that he took not away the excelses: for yet the people immolated, and burnt incense in the excelses. 5 And when he obtained the Kingdom, he smote his servants, which had slain the king his father: 6 but their children that killed him, he did not put to death, according to that which is written in the book of the law of Moyses, as our Lord commanded, saying: The fathers shall not die for the children, neither shall the children die for the fathers: but every one shall die in his own sin.[1]

7 He smote Edom in the Vale of Salt pits ten thousand, and took the rock in battle, & called the name thereof, Jectehel, until this present day. 8 Then Amasias sent messengers to Joas the son of Joachaz, the son of Jehu the king of Israel, saying: Come (a) let us see one another.

(a) Amongst Kings being at variance, Seeing one another importeth as much as to fight a battle.

9 And Joas the king of Israel sent again to Amasias the king of Juda saying: A thistle of Libanus sent to a cedar tree, which is in Libanus, saying: Give thy daughter to my son to wife. And the beasts of the forest, that are in Libanus, passed & trod the thistle. 10 Thou striking hast prevailed over Edom, and thy heart hath puffed thee up: be content with the glory, and sit in thy house: Why provokest thou evil, that thou mayst fall & Juda with thee? 11 And Amasias agreed not. And Joas the king of Israel went up, and they saw each other, he & Amasias the king of Juda in Bethsames a town of Juda. 12 And Juda was strucken before Israel, & every man fled into their tabernacles. 13 But Joas the king of Israel did take Amasias the king of Juda the son of Joas, the son of Ochozias, in Bethsames, & brought him into Jerusalem: and he brake down the wall of Jerusalem, from the gate of Ephraim unto the gate of the corner, four hundred cubits. 14 And he took all the gold, and silver, and all the vessels, that were found in the house of our Lord, and in the king's treasures, and hostages, and returned into Samaria. 15 But the rest of the words of Joas which he did, and his strength, wherewith he fought against Amasias the king of Juda, are not these things written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Israel? 16 And Joas slept with his fathers, and was buried in Samaria with the kings of Israel: and Jeroboam his son reigned for him. 17 And Amasias the son of Joas the king of Juda lived, after that Joas the son of Joachaz the king of Israel was dead, fifteen years. 18 But the rest of the words of Amasias, are not these things written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Juda? 19 And there was a conspiracy made against him in Jerusalem: But he fled into Lachis. And they sent after him into Lachis, and killed him there. 20 And they carried him away upon horses, and he was buried in Jerusalem with his fathers in the City of David. 21 And all the people of Juda took Azarias sixteen years old, and made him king for his father Amasias. 22 He built Aelath, and restored it to Juda, after that the king slept with his fathers. 23 In the fifteenth year of Amasias the son of Joas the king of Juda, reigned Jeroboam the son of Joas the king of Israel in Samaria, one and forty years: 24 and he did that which is evil before our Lord. He departed not from all the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nabat, who made Israel to sin. 25 He restored the borders of Israel from the entrance of Emath, unto the Sea of the wilderness, according to the word of our Lord the God

CHAPTER XV.

Azarias beginneth well, 4. afterward (for offering incense on the altar, 2. Paralip. 26.) is strucken with leprosy, cast out of the temple, and from conversation with the people, his son Joathan ruling the Kingdom. 8. Sellum killeth Zacharias king of Israel and reigneth in his place. 14. After one month Manahem killeth Sellum and reigneth also wickedly. 19. Maketh league with the Syrians, 22. dieth, and his son Phaceia reigneth. 25. Phacee killeth him, and reigneth. 29. The Assirians spoil the country, and carry away many captives. 30. Osee killeth Phacee and reigneth. 32. In the mean time Joathan reigning in Juda is infested with enemies, 38. dieth, and his son Achaz reigneth.

In the seven and twentieth year of Jeroboam the king of Israel reigned (a) Azarias the son of Amasias the king of Juda.

(a) Otherwise called Ozias. 2. Paral. 26. Mat. 1.

2 He was sixteen years old, when he began to reign, and two and fifty years he reigned in Jerusalem: the name of his mother was Jechelia of Jerusalem. 3 And he did that which was liked before our Lord, according to all things that his father Amasias did 4 But the excelses he destroyed not: as yet the people sacrificed, & burnt incense in the excelses. 5 And our Lord struck the king, and he was (b) a leper until the day of his death, & he dwelt in a free house a-part: but Joathan the king's son governed the palace, and judged the people of the land.

(b) This punishment was inflicted upon him for his presumption to offer incense on the altar, 2. Paral. 26.

6 But the rest of the words of Azarias, and all that he did, are not these things written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Juda? 7 And Azarias slept with his fathers: and they buried him with his ancestors (c) in the city of David, & Joathan his son reigned for him.

(c) He was buried honorably in the city of David, that is, near to the walls, but in the field, because he was a leper even to his death. 2. Paral. 24.

8 In the eight and thirtieth year of Azarias the king of Juda, reigned Zacharias the son of Jeroboam over Israel in Samaria six months: 9 and he did that which is evil before our Lord, as his fathers had done: he departed not from the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nabat, who made Israel to sin. 10 And Sellum the son of Jabes conspired against him: and smote him openly, killed him, and reigned for him. 11 but the rest of the words of Zacharias, are not these written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Israel? 12 This is the word of our Lord, which he spake to Jehu, saying: Thy children shall sit unto the fourth generation upon the throne of Israel. And so it came to pass. 13 Sellum the son of Jabes reigned the nine and thirtieth year of Azarias the king of Juda: and reigned one month in Samaria. 14 And Manahem the son of Gadi went up from Thersa: and he came into Samaria, and smote Sellum the son of Jabes in Samaria, and slew him, and reigned for him. 15 But the rest of the words of Sellum, and his conspiracy, wherewith he wrought treason, are not these things written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Israel? 16 Then Manahem struck Thapsa and all that were in it and the borders thereof from Thersa, for they would not open unto him: and he slew all women thereof that were with child, and ripped them. 17 In the nine and thirtieth year of Azarias the king of Juda, reigned Manahem the son of Gadi over Israel ten years in Samaria. 18 And he did that which was evil before our Lord: he departed not from the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nabat, who made Israel to sin all his days. 19 Phul also the king of the Assyrians came into the land, and Manahem gave to Phul a thousand talents of silver, that he should aid him, and establish his Kingdom. 20 And Manahem put a tax of silver upon Israel, on them that were mighty and rich to give the king of the Assyrians, fifty sicles of silver every man: and the king of the Assyrians returned, and tarried not in the land. 21 But the rest of the words of Manahem, and all that he did, are not these things written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Israel? 22 And Manahem slept with his fathers: and Phaceia his son reigned for him. 23 In the fiftieth year of Azarias the king of Juda reigned Phaceia the son of Manahem over Israel in Samaria two years: 24 and he did that which was evil before our Lord: he departed not from the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nabat, who made Israel to sin. 25 And Phacee the son of Romelia, his captain conspired against him, and struck him in Samaria, in the tower of the king's house beside Argob and beside Arie, and with him fifty men of the children of the Galaadites, and he slew him, and reigned for him. 26 But the rest of the words of Phaceia and all that he did, are not these things written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Israel. 27 In the two and fiftieth year of Azarias the king of Juda reigned Phacee the son of Romelia over Israel in Samaria twenty years. 28 And he did that which was evil before our Lord: he departed not from the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nabat, who made Israel to sin. 29 In the days of Phacee the king of Israel came Theglathphalasar the king of Assur, and (d) took Aion, and Abel, the house of Maachat & Janoe, and Cedes, and Asor, and Galaad, and Galilee, and all the land of Nephthali: and transported them unto the Assyrians.

(d) Some men of Ruben, Gad, Manasses, and Nephthali, were carried captives into Assyria.

30 And Osee the son of Ela conspired, and lay in wait against Phacee the son of Romelia, and struck him, and slew him: and he reigned for him the twentieth year of Joatham the son of (e) Ozias

31 But the rest of the words of Phacee, and all that he did, are not these things written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Israel? 32 In the second year of Phacee the son of Romelia the king of Israel, reigned Joatham the son of Ozias the king of Juda. 33 Five and twenty years old was he when he began to reign, and sixteen years he reigned in Jerusalem: the name of his mother was Jerusa, the daughter of Sadoc. 34 And he did that which was liked before our Lord: according to all things, which Ozias his father had done, did he work. 35 Howbeit the excelses he took not away: as yet the people immolated, and burnt incense in the excelses: he built the highest gate of the house of our Lord. 36 But the rest of the words of Joatham, and all that he did, are not these things written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Juda? 37 In those days our Lord began to send into Juda^ Rasin the king of Syria, and Phacee the son of Romelia. 38 And Joatham slept with his fathers, and was buried with them in the city of David his father, and Achaz his son reigned for him.

CHAPTER XVI.

Achaz king of Juda besides other idolatry, sacrificeth his own son to idols. 5. The kings of Israel and Syria besieging Jerusalem, the Assyrians are hired to relieve it. 10. Achaz causeth Urias to make an altar like to one in Damascus, 14. in place of God's altar: 17. removeth diverse other things pertaining to divine service, 19. dieth, and his son Ezechias reigneth.

In the seventeenth year of Phacee the son of Romelia reigned Achaz the son of Joatham king of Juda. 2 Twenty years old was Achaz when he began to reign, and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem: he did not that which was pleasing in the sight of our Lord his God, as David his father. 3 But he walked in the way of the kings of Israel: moreover also he consecrated his son, making him pass through fire according to the idols of the Gentiles: which our Lord destroyed before the children of Israel. 4 He immolated also victims, and burnt incense in the excelses, and on the hills, and under every tree full of green leaves. 5 Then went up Rasin the king of Syria, & Phacee the son of Romelia the king of Israel into Jerusalem to fight: and when they besieged Achaz, they were not able to overcome him. 6 At that time Rasin the king of Syria restored Aila to Syria, and threw out the Jews out of Aila: and the Idumeians came into Aila, and dwelt there unto this day. 7 And Achaz sent messengers to Theglathphalasar the king of the Assyrians, saying: I am thy servant, and thy son: come up, and save me out of the hand of the king of Syria, and from the hand of the king of Israel, which are risen together against me. 8 And when he had gathered together the silver and gold, that could be found in the house of our Lord, & in the king's treasures, he sent gifts to the king of the Assyrians. 9 Who also agreed to his will: for the king of the Assyrians went up into Damascus, and wasted it: and he transferred the inhabitants thereof to Cyrene, but Rasin he slew. 10 And king Achaz went forth to meet Theglathphalasar the king of the Assyrians into Damascus, and when he had seen the altar of Damascus, king Achaz sent to Urias the Priest a pattern of it, and a similitude according to all the work thereof, 11 And Urias the Priest built an altar, according to all things, which king Achaz had commanded, from Damascus, so did the Priest Urias, whilst king Achaz came from Damascus. 12 And when the king was come from Damascus, he saw the altar and worshipped it: and went up and immolated holocausts, and his sacrifice, 13 & offered libaments, & poured the blood of the pacifics, which he had offered upon the altar. 14 Moreover the altar of brass that was before our Lord, he removed from the face of the temple, and from the place of the altar, and from the place of the temple of our Lord: and he set it at the side of the altar toward the North. 15 King Achaz also commanded Urias the Priest, saying: Upon the greater altar offer the morning holocaust, and the evening sacrifice, and the king's holocaust, and his sacrifice, and the holocaust of the whole people of the land, and their sacrifices, and their libaments: and all the blood of the holocaust, and all the blood of the victim thou shalt pour out upon it: but the altar of brass shall be prepared ready at my pleasure. 16 Urias therefore the Priest did according to all things, which king Achaz had commanded him. 17 And king Achaz took the engraven feet, and the lavatory that was upon them: and he took down the [1]sea from the oxen of brass, that held it up, and put it upon the pavement paved with stone.

[1] * the great vessel.

18 The [1]Musach also of the Sabbath, which he had built in the temple: and the entry of the king outward he turned into the temple of our Lord, because of the king of the Assyrians.

[1] * the place where the King offered.

19 But the rest of the words of Achaz, which he did, are not these written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Juda? 20 And Achaz slept with his fathers, and was buried with them in the city of David, and Ezechias his son reigned for him.

CHAPTER XVII.

Salmanazar king of the Assyrians maketh Osee king of Israel tributary, and perceiving his endeavour to be delivered thereof, imprisoneth him; after three years siege taketh Samaria, and carrieth the people captive into Assyria. 7. All which God permitteth for diverse great sins here recited. 25. The new inhabitants of the country not knowing God, are devoured by lions. Whereupon a true Priest is sent to instruct them: 29. but they leaving the rites of true religion do mix the same with idolatry.

In the twelfth year of Achaz king of Juda, reigned Osee the son of Ela in Samaria over Israel nine years. 2 And he did evil before our Lord: but not as the kings of Israel, that had been before him. 3 Against him came up Salmanasar king of the Assyrians, and Osee was made servant to him, and payed him tributes. 4 And when the king of the Assyrians had found, that Osee endeavouring to rebel had sent messengers to Sua the king of Aegypt, that he might not pay tributes to the king of the Assyrians, as every year he was accustomed, he besieged him, and cast him bound into prison. 5 And he ranged through all the land: and going up to Samaria, he besieged it three years. 6 And in the ninth year of Osee, the king of Assyrians took Samaria, and transferred Israel unto the Assyrians: and he put them in Hala, & in Habor beside the river of Gozan, in the cities of the Medes. 7 For it came to pass, when the children of Israel had sinned to our Lord their God, which brought them out of the land of Aegypt, & out of the hand of Pharao the king of Aegypt, they worshipped strange gods. 8 And they walked according to the rite of the Gentiles, which our Lord had consumed in the sight of the children of Israel, & of the kings of Israel: because they had done in like manner. 9 And the children of Israel offended our Lord their God with words not right: & built them excelses in all their cities from the Tower of watchmen unto the fenced city. 10 And they made them statues & groves on every high hill, & under every thick woody tree: 11 & burnt there incense upon the altars after the manner of the Gentiles, which our Lord removed from their face: & they did wicked things, provoking our Lord. 12 And they worshipped the filths, whereof our Lord commanded them that they should not do this thing. 13 And our Lord testified in Israel and in Juda by the hand of all the Prophets & Seers, saying: Return from your most wicked ways, and keep my precepts and ceremonies, according to all the law which I commanded your fathers: and as I have sent to you in the hand of my servants the Prophets. 14 Who heard not, but hardened their neck according to the neck of their fathers, who would not obey our Lord their God. 15 And they cast away his ordinances, and the covenant that he made with their fathers, and the testifications, wherewith he contested them: and they followed vanities, and did vainly: and they followed the Gentiles, that were round about them, concerning which our Lord had commanded them, that they should not do as they did. 16 And they forsook all the precepts of our Lord their God: and made to themselves two molten calves, and groves, and adored all the host of heaven: and they served Baal, 17 and consecrated their sons, and their daughters through fire: and they gave themselves to divinations, and soothsayings: and they delivered up themselves to do evil before our Lord, (a) that they might provoke him.

(a) That is, consequently they did provoke him, as 3. Reg. 14. v. 9.

18 And our Lord was wrath with Israel vehemently, and took them away from his sight, and there remained but the tribe of Juda only. 19 But neither Juda itself kept the commandments of our Lord their God: but walked in the errors of Israel, which it had wrought. 20 And our Lord rejected all the seed of Israel, and afflicted them, and delivered them into the hand of the spoilers, till he threw them away from his face: 21 even now from that time, when Israel was rent from the house of David, and made Jeroboam the son of Nabat their king: for Jeroboam separated Israel from our Lord, and made them sin a great sin. 22 And the children of Israel walked in all the sins of Jeroboam, which he had done: and they departed not from them, 23 until our Lord took away Israel from his face, as he had spoken in the hand of all his servants the Prophets: and Israel was transported out of their land unto the Assyrians, until this day. 24 And the king of the Assyrians brought from Babylon, and from Cutha, and from Avah, and from Emath, and from Sepharvaim: and placed them in the cities of Samaria for the children of Israel: who possessed Samaria, and dwelt in the cities thereof. 25 And when they began to dwell there, they feared not our Lord: and our Lord sent lions upon them, which killed them. 26 And it was told the king of the Assyrians, and said: The nations, which thou hast transferred, and made to dwell in the cities of Samaria, know not the ordinances of the God of the land: and the Lord hath sent lions upon them: and behold they kill them, for that they know not the rite of the God of the land. 27 And the king of the Assyrians commanded, saying: Bring thither one of the Priests, which you brought thence captive, and let him go, and dwell with them: and let him teach them the ordinances of the God of the land. 28 Therefore when one of those Priests, which were led captive from Samaria, was come, he dwelt in Bethel, and taught them how they should worship our Lord. 29 And every Nation framed their own god, and put them in the high temples, which the Samaritans had made, Nation and Nation in their cities, where they dwelt. 30 For the men of Babylon made Socothbenoth: and the Cutheites made Nergel: and the men of Emath made Asima. 31 Moreover the Heveites made Nebahaz and Tharthac. And they that were of Sepharvaim burnt their children in fire, to Adramelech, and Anamelech the gods of Sepharvaim, 32 and nevertheless they (b) worshipped our Lord. And they made to themselves of the vilest persons Priests of the excelses, and they placed them in the high temples.

(b) Not truly worshipped but made shew to worship. For true worship of God admitteth not worship of any false god. v. 34.

33 And when they worshipped our Lord, they served also their own gods according to the custom of the Nations out of the which they were transported to Samaria: 34 until this present day they follow the old manner: they fear not our Lord, neither keep they his ceremonies, and judgments, and law, and the commandment, which our Lord commanded the children of Jacob, whom he surnamed Israel: 35 and he had made a covenant with them, and had commanded them, saying: Fear not strange gods, and adore them not, neither worship them, and immolate not to them. 36 But the Lord your God, which brought you out of the Land of Aegypt in great strength, and a stretched out arm, him fear ye, and him adore, and to him do ye immolate. 37 The ceremonies also, and judgments, and law, and the commandment, that he wrote you, keep ye, that you may do them always: and fear not strange gods. 38 And the covenant, that he made with you, forget not: neither do ye worship strange gods, 39 but fear our Lord your God, and he will deliver you out of the hand of all your enemies. 40 But they heard not, but did according to their old custom. 41 These Nations therefore were fearing our Lord, but nevertheless serving their idols also: for both their children and nephews, as their fathers did, so do they until this present day.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Ezechias destroyeth all place of idolatry in Juda, breaking also the brazen serpent, made by Moyses, because the people offered incense to it. 9. The captivity of the ten tribes is repeated. 13. Ezechias not able to resist the Assyrians payeth much money to them. 17. They nevertheless send forces against Jerusalem, reproach the king, blaspheme God, and terrify the people.

Acts of other Kings till the captivity of Juda.

In [1] the third year of Osee the son of Ela king of Israel, reigned Ezechias the son of Achaz king of Juda.

[1] The second part.

2 Five and twenty years old was he when he began to reign: and he reigned nine and twenty years in Jerusalem: the name of his mother was Abi the daughter of Zacharias. 3 And he did that which was good before our Lord, according to all things which David his father had done. 4 He destroyed the excelses, and brake the statues in pieces, and cut down the groves, and brake the brazen serpent, which Moyses had made: for until that time the children of Israel (a) burnt incense to it: and he called the name thereof [1] Nohestan.

(a) This image of a serpent not only when it wrought miraculous health, but also long after was worthily reserved in memory of the benefit: but when the people offered sacrifice unto it, which is proper to God only, good Ezechias did laudably break it. And to shew that there was no deity in it: called it Nohestan, that is, a piece of brass. And so in the Catholic Church when any holy Relic or Image is abused, it is taken away, or the error otherwise corrected. See S. Aug. l. 10. c. 8. civit. Ser. 14. de verb. Apost. & 101. de temp. [1] * a piece of brass.

5 He trusted in our Lord the God of Israel: Therefore after him there was not the like to him in all the kings of Juda, yea neither among them that were before him: 6 and he cleaved to our Lord, and departed not from his steps, and he did his commandments, which our Lord commanded Moyses. 7 Wherefore our Lord also was with him, and in all things, to the which he proceeded, he behaved himself wisely. He rebelled also against the king of the Assyrians, and served him not. 8 He struck the Philisthians as far as Gaza, and all the borders, from the Tower of watchmen unto the fenced city. 9 In the fourth year of king Ezechias, which was the seventh year of Osee the son of Ela the king of Israel, came up Salmanasar the king of the Assyrians into Samaria, and assaulted it, 10 and took it. For after three years, in the sixth year of Ezechias, that is, the ninth year of Osee the king of Israel, Samaria was taken: 11 and the king of the Assyrians transported Israel unto the Assyrians, and placed them in Hala, and in Habor, rivers of Gozan in the cities of the Medes: 12 because they heard not the voice of our Lord their God, but transgressed his covenant: all things, that Moyses the servant of our Lord commanded, they heard not, neither did they it. 13 In the fourteenth year of king Ezechias, came up Sennacherib the king of Assyrians to all the fenced cities of Juda: and took them. 14 Then sent Ezechias the king of Juda messengers to the king of the Assyrians into Lachis, saying: I have sinned, retire from me: and all that thou shalt put upon me, I will bear. Therefore the king of the Assyrians put a tax upon Ezechias the king of Juda, three hundred talents of silver, and thirty talents of gold. 15 And Ezechias gave all the silver that was found in the house of our Lord, and in the king's treasures. 16 At that time Ezechias brake the doors of the temple of our Lord, and the plates of gold, which he had fastened on them, and gave them to the king of the Assyrians. 17 But the king of the Assyrians sent Tharthan, and Rabsaris, and Rabsaces from Lachis to king Ezechias, with a strong power to Jerusalem: who when they were come up they came to Jerusalem, and stood beside the conduit of the upper pool, which is in the way of the fuller's field. 18 And they called the king: and there went out to them Eliacim the son of Helcias governor of the house and Sobna the Scribe and Joahe the son of Asaph, the [1] register.

19 And Rabsaces said to them: Speak to Ezechias: Thus saith the great king, the king of Assyrians: What is this confidence, that thou doest stay upon? 20 Perhaps thou hast taken counsel to prepare thyself to battle. Wherein hast thou confidence, that thou darest to rebel? 21 Dost thou hope in Aegypt, a staff of reed & broken, upon which if a man lean, broken into splinters it will enter into his hand, & pierce it? So is Pharao the king of Aegypt, to all that have confidence in him. 22 But if you will say to me: We have confidence in our Lord God: is not this he, whose excelses and altars Ezechias hath taken away: & he commanded Juda and Jerusalem: Before this altar shall you adore in Jerusalem? 23 Now therefore pass to my lord the king of the Assyrians, & I will give you two thousand horses, and see whether you be able to have riders for them. 24 And how can you resist before one prince of the least servants of my lord? Hast thou confidence in Aegypt for the chariots and horsemen? 25 Why^ am I come up without the will of the Lord to destroy it? The Lord said to me: Go up to this land, (b) and destroy it.

(b) He falsely addeth of his own that he should destroy it. For Isaias prophesied the contrary, that the Assyrians' camp should be destroyed Isaie. 37. and so it came to pass. ch. 19. v. 35. 2. Paral. 32.

26 And Eliacim the son of Helcias, and Sobna, and Joahe said to Rabsaces: We pray thee that thou speak to us thy servants in Syriac: for we understand this tongue: and speak not to us in the Jews' language, the people hearing it, which is upon the wall. 27 And Rabsaces answered them, saying: What^ did my lord send me to thee, that I should speak these words, & not rather to the men that sit upon the wall, that they may eat their own dung, and drink their urine with you? 28 Rabsaces therefore stood, and cried out with a loud voice in the Jews' language, & said: Hear ye the words of the great king, the king of the Assyrians. 29 Thus saith the king: Let not Ezechias seduce you: for he shall not be able to deliver you out my hand. 30 Neither let him give you confidence upon the Lord, saying: Our Lord delivering will deliver us, and this city shall not be given into the hand of the king of the Assyrians. 31 Do not hear Ezechias. For thus saith the king of the Assyrians: Do with me that which is profitable for you, and come forth to me: & every man shall eat of his vineyard, & of his fig tree: and you shall drink waters of your own cisterns, 32 till I come, & transport you into a land, that is like to your land, into a fruitful land, and plentiful of wine, a land of bread and of vineyards, a land of olivets & of oil and honey, and you shall live, and shall not die. Hear not Ezechias, who deceiveth you, saying: Our Lord will deliver us. 33 (c) Did the gods of Nations deliver their land from the hand of the king of Assyrians?

(c) Pagans and Heretics are foolish & impudent to compare their false gods and fancies with God almighty and Catholic Religion.

34 Where is the god of Emath & Arphad? Where is the god of Sepharvaim, of Ana, and Ava? Did they deliver Samaria out of my hand? 35 What are they among all the gods of nations, which have delivered their country out of my hand, that the Lord can deliver Jerusalem out of my hand? 36 The people therefore held their peace, and did not answer him any thing: for they had received the king's commandment that they should not answer him. 37 And Eliacim the son of Helcias, governor of the house, and Sobna the scribe, and Joahe the son of Asaph register came to Ezechias, their garments rent, and told him the words of Rabsaces.

CHAPTER XIX.

Ezechias in affliction requesteth the prayers of Isaias the Prophet. 6. Who assureth him of God's help. 8. The king of the Assyrians still threateneth and blasphemeth. 15. Ezechias prayeth, 20. and God hearing the prayers of the one, and blasphemies of the other, 28. promiseth to protect Jerusalem. 35. An Angel in one night killeth an hundred four score and five thousand of the Assyrian's camp, their king returneth to Ninive, is there slain by two of his own sons, and another son reigneth in his place.

Which things when Ezechias the king had heard, he rent his garments, and was covered with sackcloth, and entered into the house of our Lord. 2 And he sent Eliacim the governor of the house, and Sobna the scribe, & the ancients of the Priests covered with sackcloths, to Isaias the Prophet the son of Amos. 3 Who said to him: Thus saith Ezechias: This day is a day of tribulation, and rebuke, and of blasphemy: the children are come to the birth, and the woman in travail hath not strength. 4 If perhaps our Lord thy God will hear all the words of Rabsaces, whom the king of the Assyrians his master hath sent to upbraid the living God, and reprove with words, which our Lord thy God hath heard: and make thou prayer for the remnants that are found. 5 The servants thereof of king Ezechias came to Isaie. 6 And Isaie said to them: Thus shall you say to your master: Thus saith our Lord: Fear not for the words, which thou hast heard, with which the servants of the king of the Assyrians have blasphemed me. 7 Behold I will send into him a spirit, and he shall hear a message, and shall return into his country, and I will overthrow him with the sword in his country. 8 Rabsaces therefore returned, and found the king of Assyrians expugning Lobna: for he heard that he was departed from Lachis. 9 And when he had heard of Tharaca the king of Aethiopia, saying: Behold, he is come forth to fight against thee: and went against him, he sent messengers to Ezechias, saying: 10 Say this to

Ezechias the king of Juda: Let not thy God seduce thee, in whom thou hast confidence: neither say thou: Jerusalem shall not be delivered into the hands of the king of the Assyrians. 11 For thou thyself hast heard what the kings of the Assyrians have done to all the countries, how they have spoiled them, canst thou therefore only be delivered? 12 Why, have the gods of the Nations delivered all those, whom my fathers have destroyed, to wit, Gozan and Haran, and Reseph, and the children of Eden, which were in Thelassar? 13 Where is the king of Emath, and the king of Arphad, and the king of the city of Sepharvaim, of Ana and Ava? 14 Therefore when Ezechias had received the letters of the hand of messengers, and had read them, he went up into the house of our Lord, and laid them open (a) before our Lord,

(a) Before the Ark and Propitiatory, being the special place of prayer.

15 and prayed in his sight, saying: Lord God of Israel, which sittest upon the cherubins, thou art the only God of all the kings of the earth: thou madest heaven and earth: 16 Incline thine ear, and hear: open Lord thine eyes, and see: and hear all the words of Sennacherib, who hath sent to upbraid unto us the living God. 17 In very deed Lord, the kings of the Assyrians have destroyed Nations, and the countries of all. 18 And they have cast their gods into fire: for they were not gods, but the works of men's hands of wood and stone, and they destroyed them. 19 Now therefore, O Lord our God, save us from his hand, that all the Kingdoms of the earth may know, that thou art the Lord the only God. 20 And Isaie the son of Amos sent to Ezechias, saying: Thus saith our Lord the God of Israel: That which thou hast besought me concerning Sennacherib the king of the Assyrians, I have heard. 21 This is the word that our Lord hath spoken of him: The (b) virgin daughter of Sion hath despised thee, & scorned thee: Behind thy back hath the daughter of Jerusalem wagged her head.

(b) Though many in the Kingdom of Juda fell to idolatry, yet in respect of the rest publicly professing true faith and religion the Church is still called a virgin, and despiseth idolaters, blasphemers, & false gods.

22 Whom hast thou upbraided, & whom hast thou blasphemed? Against whom hast thou exalted thy voice, and lifted up thine eyes in high? Against the holy one of Israel. 23 By the hand of thy servants thou hast upbraided our Lord, and hast said: In the multitude of my chariots have I climbed the height of mountains, in the top of Libanus, and have cut down high cedars thereof, and the chosen fir-trees of it. And I have entered into the borders thereof, & the forest of the (c) carmel thereof

(c) A pleasant hill in the forest.

24 have I cut down. And I have drunk strange waters, and have dried up with the steps of my feet all the waters inclosed. 25 Why, hast thou not heard what I have done from the beginning? From ancient days I have made that thing, and now I have brought it to effect: and fenced cities shall be into ruin of little hills bickering together. 26 And they that sit in them, weak of hand, they have trembled & are confounded, they became as the grass of the field, and the green herb of the roofs of houses, which withered before it came to ripeness. 27 Thy habitation, and thy going out, and thy coming in, and thy way I have known before, and thy fury against me. 28 Thou hast been mad against me, and thy pride hath ascended into mine ears: I therefore will put a ring in thy nostrils, and a bit in thy lips, and will bring thee back into the way, by the which thou camest. 29 And to thee Ezechias this shall be a sign: Eat this year what thou shalt find: and in the second year, the things that grow of themselves: moreover in the third year sow ye and reap: plant ye vineyards, and eat the fruit of them. 30 And whatsoever shall be left of the house of Juda, shall take root downward, and bear fruit upward. 31 For out of Jerusalem there shall remnants go forth, and that which is to be saved from the mount of Sion: the zeal of the Lord of hosts shall do this. 32 Wherefore thus saith our Lord^ of the king of the Assyrians: He shall not enter into this city, nor shoot arrow into it, neither shall shield occupy it, nor munition compass it. 33 By the way, that he came, he shall return: and into this city he shall not enter, saith our Lord. 34 And I will protect this city, and will save it for myself, and for

David my servant. 35 It came to pass therefore in that night, an Angel of our Lord came, and struck in the camp of the Assyrians an hundred eighty five thousand. And when he was risen early, he saw all the bodies of the dead, 36 and Sennacherib the king of the Assyrians departing went away, and tarried in Ninive. 37 And when he adored in the temple of Nesroch his god, Adramelech and Sarasar his sons struck him with the sword, and they fled into the land of the Armenians, and Asarhaddon his son reigned for him.

CHAPTER XX.

Ezechias being sick is told by Isaias that he shall die: but praying to God obtaineth fifteen years longer life, 8. and in confirmation thereof receiveth a sign in Achaz dial, returning back ten lines. 12. To the Assyrians bringing him presents, he sheweth all his treasures. 16. Which Isaias reproving Prophesieth the captivity of Juda. 20. Ezechias dieth, and his son Manasses reigneth.

In those days Ezechias was sick even to death: & Isaie the son of Amos the prophet came and said to him: Thus saith our Lord God: Take order with thy house, for thou shalt die, and shalt not live. 2 Who turned his face to the wall, and prayed our Lord, saying: 3 I beseech thee Lord, remember I pray thee how I have walked before thee in truth, and in a perfect heart, and have done that which is liked before thee. Ezechias therefore wept with great weeping. 4 And before Isaie was gone out of the midst of the court, the word of our Lord came to him, saying: 5 Return, and tell Ezechias the Prince of my people: Thus saith our Lord the God of David thy father: I have heard thy prayer, and seen thy tears: and behold I have healed thee, the third day thou shalt go up to the temple of the Lord. 6 And I will add to thy days fifteen years: yea & out of the hand of the king of Assyrians I will deliver thee, and this city, and I will protect this city for my sake, and for David my servant. 7 And Isaie said: Fetch me a bunch of figs. Which when they had brought, and had laid it upon his sore, he was cured. 8 And Ezechias had said to Isaie: What sign shall there be, that our Lord will heal me, and that I shall go up the third day to the temple of our Lord? 9 To whom Isaie said: This shall be the sign from our Lord, that our Lord will do the word, which he hath spoken: Wilt thou that the shadow go forward ten times, or that it go back so many degrees. 10 And Ezechias said: It is an easy matter for the shadow to go forward ten times, neither will I that this be done, but that it return back ten degrees. 11 Isaie therefore the Prophet invocated our Lord, & brought back the shadow by (a) the lines, by the which it was now gone down in the dial of Achaz, backward ten degrees.

(a) If these ten lines import so many hours, then the dial going forwards again, by like degrees, this day was increased by twenty hours, & so was longer than that in which Iosue procured stay of the sun the space of one day, to wit of twelve hours, Iosue 10. as S. Dyonise thinketh. Epist: ad Policarp: See Glossa ord. in Iosue.

12 In that time Berodach Baladan, the son of Baladan, the king of the Babylonians sent letters & gifts to Ezechias: for he had heard that Ezechias had been sick. 13 And Ezechias rejoiced in their coming, and he shewed them the house of aromatical spices, and gold and silver, and diverse precious odours, ointments also, and the house of his vessels, and all that he had in his treasures. There was not any thing which Ezechias shewed them not in his house, and in all his power. 14 And Isaie the Prophet came to king Ezechias, and said to him: What said these men? Or from whence came they to thee? To whom Ezechias said: From a far country they came to me out of Babylon. 15 But he answered: What saw they in thy house? Ezechias said: They saw all things whatsoever are in my house: there is nothing that I have not shewed them in my treasures. 16 Isaie therefore said to Ezechias, hear the word of our Lord: 17 Behold the days shall come, and all things shall be taken away, that are in thy house, and that thy fathers have laid up until this day, into Babylon: there shall not any thing remain, saith our Lord. 18 Yea of the children also that come forth of thee, whom thou shalt beget shall be taken away, and they shall be eunuchs in the palace of the king of Babylon. 19 Ezechias said to Isaie: The word of our Lord which thou hast spoken is good: be there peace and truth in my days. 20 But the rest of the words of Ezechias, and all his strength, and how he made a pool, & a conduit, & brought waters into the city, are not these things written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Juda? 21 And Ezechias slept with his fathers, and Manasses his son reigned for him.

CHAPTER XXI.

For the enormous impiety of Manasses, 10. God threateneth destruction of the Kingdom. 16. He spilleth innocent blood, 18. dieth, and his son Amon reigneth also wickedly, 23. is slain by his servants, and his son Josias reigneth.

Twelve years old was Manasses, when he began to reign, & he reigned five and fifty years in Jerusalem: the name of his mother was Haphsiba. 2 And he did evil in the sight of our Lord, according to the idols of the Nations, which our Lord destroyed from the face of the children of Israel: 3 And he was turned, and built the excelses, which Ezechias his father had destroyed: and he set up altars to Baal, and made groves, as Achab the king of Israel had done: and he adored all the host of heaven, and worshipped it. 4 And he built altars in the house of our Lord, of the which our Lord said: In Jerusalem I will put my name. 5 And he built altars to all the host of heaven in the two courts of the temple of our Lord. 6 And he made his son pass through fire: and he used soothsaying, and observed divinations, and made pythons, and multiplied enchanters, to do evil before our Lord, & to provoke him. 7 He set also the idol of the grove, which he had made in the temple of our Lord: concerning the which our Lord spake to David, and to Salomon his son: In this temple, & in Jerusalem, which I have chosen out of all the tribes of Israel, I will put my name for ever. 8 And I will no more make the foot of Israel to be moved out of the land, which I gave to their fathers: yet so if in work they shall keep all things that I have commanded them, & all the law which my servant Moyses commanded them. 9 But they heard not: but were seduced by Manasses, to do evil (a) above the Nations, which our Lord destroyed before the face of the children of Israel

(a) the Jews sinned more grievously revolting from the Law of God, and contemning the admonitions of holy Prophets, than the nations that had neither law nor Prophets to instruct them.

10 And our Lord spake in the hand of his servants the Prophets, saying: 11 Because Manasses the king of Juda hath done these most wicked abominations, passing all things that the Amorrheites did before him, and hath made Juda also to sin in his filths:
12 therefore thus saith our Lord the God of Israel: Behold I will bring in evils upon Jerusalem and Juda: that whosoever shall hear it, both his ears shall tingle.
13 And I will stretch out upon Jerusalem the cord of Samaria, and the weight of the house of Achab: and I will wipe out Jerusalem, as tables are wont to be wiped out, and wiping out I will turn it, and draw often the pencil upon the face thereof. 14 (b) But I will leave remnants of mine inheritance, and will deliver them into the hands of their enemies: and they shall be unto waste, and unto spoil to all their adversaries:

(b) God still preserved some in true religion, though they also suffered tribulations with the wicked, for the general sins of the king and people. Psal. 88. v. 35. Yea this King Manasses in captivity became virtuous and recovered his Kingdom. 2. Paralip. 33.

15 because they have done evil before me, and have continued provoking me, from the day that their fathers came out of Aegypt, until this day.
16 Moreover Manasses shed also innocent blood exceeding much, till he filled Jerusalem even to the mouth: beside his sins, wherein he made Juda to sin, to do evil before our Lord. 17 But the rest of the words of Manasses, and all that he did, and his sin, which he sinned, are not these things written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Juda? 18 And Manasses slept with his fathers, and was buried in the garden of his house, in the garden of Oza: and Amon his son reigned for him. 19 Two and twenty years old was Amon when he began to reign: two years also he reigned in Jerusalem: the name of his mother was Messalemeth the daughter of Jeteba. 20 And he did evil in the sight of our Lord, as Manasses his father had done. 21 And he walked in all the way, by the which his father had walked: and he served the filths, which his father had served, and he adored them, 22 and forsook our Lord the God of his fathers, and walked not in the way of our Lord. 23 And his servants lay in wait against him, and slew the king in his house. 24 But the people of the land struck all them, that had conspired against king Amon: and made Josias his son their king for him. 25 But the rest of the words of Amon which he did, are not these written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Juda? 26 And they buried him in his sepulchre, in the garden of Oza: and Josias his son reigned for him.

CHAPTER XXII.

Josias repaireth the temple, and Divine service. 8. The book of law is found, 11. whereupon they consult our Lord, 15. and are foretold that much evil shall fall upon them, 18. but the good king shall die in peace.

Eight years old was Josias when he began to reign, he reigned one & thirty years in Jerusalem: the name of his mother was Idida, the daughter of Hadaia of Besecath. 2 And he did that which was liked before our Lord, and walked in all the ways of David his father: he declined not to the right hand, or to the left. 3 And in the eighteenth year of king Josias, the king sent Saphan the son of Aslia, the son of Messulam, the scribe of the temple of our Lord, saying to him: 4 Go to Helcias the high Priest, that the money may be gathered into a sum, which hath been brought into the temple of our Lord, which the porters of the temple have gathered of the people, 5 and let it be given to the workmen by the overseers of the house of our Lord, who also shall distribute it to them that work in the temple of our Lord, to make the reparations of the temple: 6 that is, to the carpenters and masons, and to them that mend broken places: and that timber may be bought, and stones out of the quarries, to repair the temple of our Lord. 7 Yet let not the money which they receive be accounted to them, but let them have it in their power, and upon their fidelity. 8 And Helcias the high Priest said to Saphan the scribe: I have found the Book of the law in the house of our Lord: and Helcias gave the volume to Saphan, who also did read it. 9 Saphan also the scribe came to the king, and reported unto him that which he had commanded, and said: Thy servants have gathered into a sum the money, which is found in the house of our Lord: and they have given it to be distributed to the workmen, by the overseers of the works of the temple of our Lord. 10 Saphan also the scribe told the king, saying: Helcias the priest hath given me a Book. Which when Saphan had read before the king, 11 and the king had heard the words of the law of our Lord, he rent his garments. 12 And he willed Helcias the Priest, and Ahicam the son of Saphan, and Achobor the son of Micha, and Saphan the Scribe, and Asaia the king's servant, saying: 13 Go and consult our Lord for me, and for the people, and for all Juda, concerning the words of this volume, which is found: for the great wrath of our Lord is kindled against us: because our fathers have not heard the words of this Book, to do all that is written for us. 14 Helcias therefore the Priest, and Ahicam, and Achobor, and Saphan, and Asaia went to Holda a prophetess, the wife of Sellum, the son of Thecua, the son of Araas keeper of the garments, who dwelt in Jerusalem in the (a) second: and they spake to her.

15 And she answered them: Thus saith our Lord the God of Israel: Tell the man, that sent you to me:

CHAPTER XXIII.

Josias reading the law before the people, they all promise to serve God. 4. All things belonging to Idolatry are cast forth of the temple, 8. and other places of Juda. 15. He also destroyeth the altar in Bethel (not removing the bones of a Prophet) 19. and other altars in Samaria: killeth the false Priests. 21. And maketh a notorious great Pasch. 26. Yet God threateneth the captivity of Juda for their sins. 29. Josias is slain in battle by the king of Aegypt: and his son Joachaz reigneth. Who after three months is deposed by the king of Aegypt, and his brother Eliacim, henceforth called Joakim, made king.

And they reported to the king that which she had said. Who sent: and all the ancients of Juda and Jerusalem were assembled to him. 2 And the king went up to the temple of our Lord, & all the men of Juda, and all that dwelt in Jerusalem with him Priests and Prophets, and all the people from little to great: and in hearing of all he read all the words of the Book of the covenant, which was found in the house of our Lord. 3 And the king stood upon the step: and made a covenant with our Lord, to walk after our Lord, and keep his precepts, and testimonies, and ceremonies, with all their heart, and with all their soul, and to perform the words of this covenant, which were written in that Book: and the people agreed to the covenant: 4 And the king willed Helcias the high priest, and the priests of the second order, and all the porters that they should cast out of the temple of our Lord all the vessels that had been made to Baal, and in the grove, and to all the host of heaven: & he burnt them without Jerusalem in the Valley cedron, and carried the dust of them into Bethel. 5 And he destroyed the Soothsayers, which the kings of Juda had appointed to sacrifice in the excelses in the cities of Juda, and round about Jerusalem: and them that burnt incense to Baal, and to the Sun, and to the Moon, and to the twelve signs, and to all the host of heaven. 6 And he caused the grove to be carried forth out of the house of our Lord without Jerusalem in the Valley cedron, and he burnt it there, and brought it into dust, and threw it upon the sepulchres of the common people. 7 He destroyed also the little houses of the effeminates, which were in the house of our Lord, for the which the women wove as it were little houses of the grove. 8 And he gathered together all the priests of the cities of Juda: and he contaminated the excelses, where the priests did sacrifice from Gabaa unto Bersabee: and he destroyed the altars of the gates in the entrance of the door of Josue chief of the city, which was on the left hand of the gate of the city. 9 Howbeit the priests (a) of the excelses went not up to the altar of our Lord in Jerusalem: but only they did eat azymes in the midst of their brethren.

(a) Because they had offered sacrifice to false gods and in unlawful places, they were suspended from offering any more sacrifice at all.

10 He contaminated also Topheth, which is in the Valley of the son of Ennom: that no man should consecrate his son or daughter by fire to Moloch.

11 He took away also the horses, which the kings of Juda had given to the sun, in the entrance of the temple of our Lord, beside the chamber of Nathanmelech the eunuch, who was in Pharurim: and the chariots of the sun he burnt with fire. 12 The altars also that were upon the roofs of the upper chamber of Achaz, which the kings of Juda had made, and the altars which Manasses had made in the two courts of the temple of our Lord, the king destroyed: and he ran from thence, and sprinkled the ashes of them into the Torrent cedron. 13 The excelses also that were in Jerusalem, on the right side of the Mount of offence, which Salomon the king of Israel had built to Astaroth the idol of the Sidonians, and to Chamos the scandal of Moab, and to Melchom the abomination of the children of Ammon, the king destroyed. 14 And he brake in pieces the statues, and cut down the groves: and he filled their places with the bones of dead men. 15 Moreover the altar also, that was in Bethel, and the excelse, which Jeroboam the son of Nabat had made, who made Israel to sin: and that altar, and excelse he destroyed, and burnt, and brake into powder, and the grove also he burnt. 16 And Josias turning, saw there sepulchres, that were in the mount: and he sent & took the bones out of the sepulchres, and burnt them upon the altar, & polluted it according to the word of our Lord, which the man of God spake, who had foretold these things. 17 And he said: What title is that, which I see? And the citizens of that city answered: It is the sepulchre of the man of God, which came from Juda, and foretold these things which thou hast done upon the altar of Bethel. 18 And he said: Let him alone, let no man move his bones. And his bones remained untouched with the bones of the Prophet, that came out of Samaria. 19 Moreover all the temples of the excelses, which were in the cities of Samaria, which the kings of Israel had made to provoke our Lord, Josias took away: and he did to them according to all the works, which he had done in Bethel. 20 And he slew all the Priests of the excelses, that were there upon the altars: and he burnt men's bones upon them: and turned into Jerusalem. 21 And he commanded all the people, saying: Make a Phase to our Lord your God, according as it is written in the Book of this covenant. 22 For (b) there was not such a Phase made from the days of the Judges, which judged Israel, and of all the days of the kings of Israel, and of the kings of Juda.

(b) Josephus writeth that this godly King gave thirty thousand lambs and kids to the poor people for their Pasch, & three thousand oxen for Holocausts. The Priests also and Levites added more of their own. li. 10. Antiq. c. 5.

23 as in the eighteenth year of king Josias this Phase was made to our Lord in Jerusalem. 24 Yea and the Pythons, and Soothsayers, and the images of idols, and the filths, and the abominations, that had been in the land of Juda and Jerusalem, Josias took away: that he might establish the words of the law, that were written in the Book, which Helcias the Priest found in the temple of our Lord. 25 There was no king before him like to him, that turned to our Lord in all his heart, and in all his soul, and in all his power according to all the law of Moyses: neither after him did there arise the like to him. 26 But yet our Lord was not averted from the wrath of his great fury, wherewith his fury was wrath against Juda: for the provocations, wherewith (c) Manasses had provoked him.

(c) Albeit Manasses repented, and was restored to God's favour, & to his Kingdom 2. Paral. 3. Yet his sins were temporally punished, both in himself, and his posterity.

27 Our Lord therefore said: Juda also will I take away from my face, as I have taken away Israel: and I will reject this city, which I chose^ Jerusalem, and the house whereof I said: My name shall be there. 28 But the rest of the words of Josias, and all that he did, are not these things written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Juda? 29 In his days came up Pharao Nechao the king of Aegypt, against the king of Assyrians to the river Euphrates: and Josias the king went to meet him: and was slain in Mageddo, when he had seen him. 30 And his servants carried him dead from Mageddo: & they brought him into Jerusalem, and buried him in his sepulchre. And the people of the land took Joachaz the son of Josias: and they anointed him, and made him king for his father. 31 Three and twenty years old was Joachaz when he began to reign, and he reigned three months in Jerusalem: the name of his mother was Amital, the daughter of Jeremie of Lobna. 32 And he did evil before our Lord, according to all things which his fathers had done. 33 And Pharao Nechao bound him in Rebla, which is in the land Emath, that he should not reign in Jerusalem: and he set a penalty upon the land, an hundred talents of silver, and a talent of gold. 34 And Pharao Nechao made Eliacim king the son of Josias, for Josias his father: and turned his name Joakim. Moreover he took Joachaz and brought him into Aegypt, and he died there. 35 And Joakim gave the silver and the gold to Pharao, when he had taxed the land upon every man, that it might be payed according to the precept of Pharao: and he exacted of every man according to his ability, as well silver as gold of the people of the land: to give unto Pharao Nechao. 36 Five and twenty years old was Joakim, when he began to reign: and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem: the name of his mother was Zebida the daughter of Phadaia of Ruma. 37 And he did evil before our Lord according to all things, which his fathers had done.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Joakim serveth the king of Babylon three years. 2. Many rovers infest his country. 5. He dieth, and his son Joachin reigneth. 10. The king of Babylon carrieth king Joachin, and all the chief persons and treasures into Babylon, 17. appointing Matthanias, whom he nameth Sedecias, king of Juda. 20. Who revolteth from the king of Babylon.

In his days came up Nabuchodonosor the king of Babylon, and Joakim was made his servant three years: and he rebelled against him again. 2 And our Lord sent in upon him the rovers of the Chaldees, and the rovers of Syria, and the rovers of Moab, and the rovers of the children of Ammon: and he sent them into Juda, to destroy it, according to the word of our Lord, which he had spoken by his servants the Prophets. 3 And this by the word of our Lord was done against Juda, to take it away before him for all the sins of Manasses which he did, 4 and for the innocent blood, that he had shed, and filled Jerusalem with the blood of innocents: and for this thing God would not be made propitious. 5 But the rest of the words of Joakim, and all that he did, are not these things written in the Book of the words of the days of the kings of Juda? And Joakim (a) slept with his fathers.

(a) Not dying in peace, for he was slain by Nabuchodonosor, Iosephus li. 10. c. 8. Ant. And his body was cast out of the city, according as Jeremy Prophesied. c. 22. with the burial of an ass shall he be buried. &c.

6 and Joachin his son reigned for him. 7 And the king of Aegypt added no more to come out of his country: for the king of Babylon had taken all that had been the king's of Aegypt, from the river of Aegypt, unto the river Euphrates. 8 Eighteen years old was Joachin when he began to reign, and he reigned three months in Jerusalem: the name of his mother was Nohesta the daughter of Elnathan of Jerusalem. 9 And he did evil before our Lord, according to all things which his father had done. 10 And that time came up the servants of Nabuchodonosor the king of Babylon into Jerusalem, & the city was compassed with forts. 11 And Nabuchodonosor the king of Babylon came to the city with his servants to assault it. 12 And Joachin the king of Juda went forth to the king of Babylon, he and his mother, and his servants, and his nobles, and his eunuchs: and the king of Babylon received him the eighth year of his reign. 13 And he brought forth from thence all the treasures of the house of our Lord, and the treasures of the king's house: & he cut in pieces all the golden vessels, which Salomon the king of Israel had made in the temple of our Lord, according to the word of our Lord. 14 And he transported all Jerusalem, & all the Princes, and all the strong men of the army, ten thousand into captivity: and every artificer & incloser: and nothing was left, saving the poor sort of the people of the land. 15 He transported also Joachin into Babylon, and the king's mother, and the king's wives, and his eunuchs: and the judges of the land he led into captivity from Jerusalem into Babylon. 16 And all the strong men, seven thousand, and the artificers, and inclosers a thousand, all valiant men and warriors: and the king of Babylon led them captives into Babylon. 17 And he appointed Matthanias his uncle for him: and called his name Sedecias. 18 One and twenty years old was Sedecias when he began to reign, and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem: the name of his mother was Amital, the daughter of Jeremie of Lobna. 19 And he did evil before our Lord, according to all things which Joakim had done. 20 For our Lord was wrath against Jerusalem and against Juda, till he cast them away from his face: and Sedecias (b) revolted from the king of Babylon.

(b) In this he grievously offended having sworn to serve him. And therefore Ezechiel c. 17. foretelleth the misery that will fall upon him, shall he that broke covenant escape? &c.

CHAPTER XXV.

Nabuchodonosor king of Babylon besieging Jerusalem two years, the soldiers pressed with famine fly away. King Sedecias also flyeth, 5. is taken and brought before Nabuchodonosor. 7. All his sons are slain in his sight: his eyes are put out, and he is carried into Babylon: the temple, the kings palace, and other houses burned; the wall destroyed, the people carried captive 12. except poor husbandmen. 13. All vessels of brass, silver, and gold, broken and transported. 18. Saraias high Priest, and other principal men are slain. 22. Godolias made governor, 25. is slain by Ismael. 27. Joachin is delivered from prison, and exalted by a new king of Babylon.

And it came to pass in the ninth year of his reign, the tenth month, the tenth day of the month, came Nabuchodonosor the king of Babylon, himself and all his army unto Jerusalem, and they beset it: and built rampires round about it. 2 And the city was shut up & trenched about until the eleventh year of king Sedecias, 3 the ninth day of the month: and there was a sore famine in the city, neither was there bread for the people of the land. 4 And a breach was made into the city: and all the men of war fled in the night by the way of the gate, which is between the double wall toward the king's garden (moreover the Chaldees besieged the city round about.) Sedecias therefore fled by the way, that leadeth to the champion of the wilderness. 5 And the army of the Chaldees pursued the king, and overtook him in the plain of Jericho: and all the warriors, that were with him, were dispersed, and forsook him. 6 They therefore having taken the king, brought him to the king of Babylon into Reblatha, who spake judgment with him. 7 And he slew the sons of Sedecias before his face, and he (a) put out his eyes, and bound him with chains, and (b) brought him into Babylon.

(a) Certain false Prophets persuaded the King and the people not to believe the Prophets, which forewarned them of these calamities, because (said they) they contradict one another, Jeremy saying (ch. 31. & 34.) the eyes of Sedecias should see the eyes of Nabuchodonosor, and should be led into Babylon: and Ezechiel saying (c. 12. v. 13.) that he should not see Babylon. (b) Both saying most truly: for he was carried thither after his eyes were put out. Iosephus. li. 10. Antiq. c. 10.

8 The fifth month, the seventh day of the month, that is, the nineteenth year of the king of Babylon, came Nabuzardan the General of the army, the servant of the king of Babylon into Jerusalem. 9 And he burnt the house of our Lord, the king's house, and the houses of Jerusalem, and every house he burnt with fire. 10 And all the army of the Chaldees, which was with the General of the soldiers, destroyed the walls of Jerusalem round about. 11 And Nabuzardan the General of the army, transported the remnant of the people that remained in the city, and the fugitives, that were fled to the king of Babylon, and the rest of the common people. 12 And of the poor of the land he left dressers of vineyards and husbandmen. 13 And the brazen pillars, that were in the temple of our Lord, and the feet, and the sea of brass, which was in the house of our Lord, the Chaldees brake, and transported all the brass into Babylon. 14 The pots also of brass, and mazers, and forks with three teeth, and cups, and little mortars, and all the vessels of brass, in the which they ministered, they took away. 15 Moreover also the censers, and phials: those that were of gold: and that were of silver, the General of the warfare took, 16 that is, two pillars, one sea, and the feet which Salomon had made in the temple of our Lord: there was (c) no weight of the brass of all the vessels.

(c) There was so exceeding much, that they well could not, or did not weigh it.

17 One pillar had eighteen cubits in height: and the little head of brass upon it was three cubits in height: and the net, and the pomegranates upon the little head of the pillar, all of brass: the second also had the like adorning. 18 Also the general of the army took Saraias the chief Priest, and Sophonias the second Priest, and three porters. 19 And of the city one Eunuch, which was captain over the men of war: and five men of them that waited before the king, whom he found in the city, and Sopher the captain of the army, who proved the young soldiers of the people of the land: and threescore men of the common people, which were found in the city. 20 Whom Nabuzardan the General of the army taking, brought them to the king of Babylon into Reblatha. 21 And the king of Babylon struck them, and slew them in Reblatha in the land of Emath: and Juda was transported out of their land.

22 And he made Godolias the son of Ahicam the son of Saphan Governor over the people, that was left in the land of Juda, which Nabuchodonosor the king of Babylon had left. 23 Which when all the captains of the soldiers had heard, they and the men that were with them, to wit, that the king of Babylon had appointed Godolias, there came to Godolias into Maspha Ismael the son of Nathanias, and Johanan the son of Caree, and Saraia the son of Thanehumeth a Netophathite, and Jezonias the son of Maachathi, they and their fellows. 24 And Godolias sware to them and to their companions, saying: Be not afraid to serve the Chaldees: tarry in the country, and serve the king of Babylon, and it shall be well with you. 25 But it came to pass in the seventh month, there came Ismahel the son of Nathanias, the son of Elisama of the king's seed, and ten men with him: and struck Godolias, who also died: yea the Jews also and the Chaldees, that were with him in Maspha. 26 And all the people rising up from little to great, and the captains of the soldiers, came into Aegypt fearing the Chaldees. 27 But it came to pass in the seven & thirtieth year of the Transmigration of Joachin the king of Juda, in the twelfth month, the seven and twentieth day of the month: Evilmerodach the king of Babylon, in the year that he began to reign, (d) lifted up the head of Joachin the king of Juda out of prison.

(d) By God's special providence King Joachin (otherwise called Jechonias 2. Par. 3. & Mat. 1.) is exalted, and set over all the Jews: unto whom others succeed in like authority, and so is fulfilled the prophecy of Jacob Gen. 49. The sceptre shall not be taken from Juda, nor a duke of his thigh till he come that is to be sent.

28 And he spake unto him courteously: and he set his throne above the throne of the kings, that were with him in Babylon. 29 And he changed his garments, which he had in the prison, and he did eat bread always in his sight, all the days of his life. 30 A certain provision also he appointed for him without intermission, which was also given him of the king day by day, all the days of his life.

THE ARGUMENT OF PARALIPOMENON.

[1] PARALIPOMENON, that is, A supplement of things omitted, called by the Hebrews Dibre haiamim, The words of the days, or Chronicle, is an Abridgement, briefly shewing, besides diverse other genealogies, from the beginning of the world, the faith and religion both of the progenitors, and offspring of the Patriarch Jacob, whose progeny God chose and made his peculiar people; and in that nation more particularly recounting the Acts of King David, and other Kings of his line, till they were led captive into Babylon. A book of such and so great importance (saith S. Hierome) [2] as whosoever without it arrogateth the knowledge of Scriptures, may mock himself. The author is uncertain, but probably it seemeth to be gathered by Esdras, out of other books and traditions, for the perfecting of the old Testament: and is undoubtedly canonical Scripture. In Hebrew it is all one book, but being large, is with the Greeks and Latins parted into two. [3] And the first book may be divided into three principal parts. [4] The first nine chapters contain diverse genealogies, first by the only right line from Adam to Noe, then by diverse lines of Noe's progeny, but most specially of Jacob's twelve sons. In the tenth chapter the rejection, and death of King Saul is repeated. The other nineteen chapters are all of David, to wit, of his election to be King, and inunction, his virtues, his faults also, and his special acts, concerning God's service, government of the people, and provision made for building God's Temple.

THE FIRST BOOK OF PARALIPOMENON. IN HEBREW, DIBRE HAIAMIM.

CHAPTER I.

The genealogy of Adam in the right line to Noe, and his three sons, Sem, Cham, and Japhet. 5. The generations of Japhet, 8. of Cham, 17. and of Sem. 24. The right line of Sem to Abraham. 26. Abraham's generations by the line of Ismael, 32. by the sons of Cetura, 34. and by the line of Isaac, and his son Esau; 43. with their kings, 51. and dukes. [1]

[1] The first part.
Genealogies partly of other progenies of Adam, but specially of Jacob's issue.

Adam, (a) Seth, Enos,

(a) Adam had two other sons before Seth, but Cain's race was utterly extinguished by the flood, and Abel had no children.

2 Cainan, Malaleel, Jared, 3 Henoch, Mathusale, Lamech, 4 Noe, Sem, Cham, and Japheth. 5 The sons of Japheth: Gomer, and Magog, & Madai, and Javan, Thubal, Mosoch, Thiras. 6 Moreover the sons of Gomer: Ascenez, and Riphath, and Thogorma. 7 And the sons of Javan: Elisa and Tharsis, Cethim and Dodanim. 8 The sons of Cham: Chus, and Mesraim, and Phut, and Chanaan. 9 And the sons of Chus: Saba, and Hevila, Sabatha, and Regma, and Sabathaca. Moreover the sons of Regma: Saba, and

Dadan. 10 And Chus begat Nemrod: this began to be mighty in the earth. 11 But Mesraim begat Ludim, and Anamim, and Laabim, and Nephtuim,
12 Phetrusim also, and Casluim: from whom came Philisthiim, & Caphthorim. 13 But Chanaan begat Sidon his firstborn, the Hetheite also, 14 and the Jebuseite, and the Amorrhite, and the Gergesite, 15 & the Heveite, & the Aracite, & the Sinite.
16 The Aradium also, and the Samarite, & the Hamathite. 17 The sons of Sem: Aelam, and Assur, and Arphaxad, and Lud, and Aram, & Hus, and Hul, and Gether, and Mosoch. 18 And Arphaxad begat Sale, who also begat Heber. 19 Moreover to Heber were born two sons, the name of one was Phaleg, because in his days the earth was divided; and the name of his brother Jectan. 20 And Jectan begat Elmodad, & Saleph, and Asarmoth, and Jare, 21 Adoram also, and Usal, and Decla, 22 Hebal also, and Abimael, and Saba, moreover 23 also Ophir, and Hevila, and Jobab. All these are the sons of Jectan: 24 Sem, Arphaxad, Sale,
25 Heber, Phaleg, Ragau, 26 Serug, Nachor, Thare,
27 Abram, this is (b) Abraham.

(b) As before the right line of Adam to Noe, so here from his son Sem to Abram. For mystery sake God changed his name to Abraham. Gen. 17.

28 And the sons of Abraham, Isaac and Ismael.
29 And these are the generations of them. The first-begotten of Ismael, Nabajoth, and Cedar, and Adbeel, and Mabsam, 30 and Masma, and Duma, Massa, Hadad, and Thema, 31 Jetur, Naphis, Cedma. These are the sons of Ismahel. 32 And the sons of Cetura Abraham's concubine, which she bare: Zamran, Jecsan, Madan, Madian, Jesboc, and Sue. Moreover the sons of Jecsan: Saba, and Dadan. And the sons of Dadan: Assurim, and Latussim, and Laomim.
33 And the sons of Madian: Epha, and Epher, and Henoch, and Abida, and Eldaa. All these the sons of Cetura. 34 And Abraham begat Isaac: whose sons were Esau, and Israel. 35 The sons of Esau: Eliphaz, Rahuel, Jehus, Ihelom, and Core. 36 The sons of Eliphaz: Theman, Omar, Sephi, Gathan, Cenez, Thamna, Amalec. 37 The sons of Rahuel: Nahath, Zaza, Samma, Meza. 38 The sons of Seir: Lotan, Sobal, Sebeon, Ana, Dison, Eser, Disan. 39 The sons of Lotan: Hori, Homam. And the sister of Lotan was Thamna.
40 The sons of Sobal: Alian, and Manahath, and Ebal, Sephi, and Onam. The sons of Sebeon: Aia and Ana. The sons of Ana: Dison. 41 The sons of Dison: Hamram, and Eseban, and Jethran, and Charan.
42 The sons of Eser: Balaan, and Zavan, and Jacan. The sons of Disan: Hus and Aran. 43 These be the kings, that reigned in the Land of Edom, before there was a king over the children of Israel: Bale the son of Beor: and the name of his city, Denaba. 44 And Bale died, and Jobab the son of Zare of Bosra, reigned for him. 45 And when Jobab also was dead, Husam of the Land of the Themanes reigned for him. 46 And Husam also died, and Adad the son of Badad reigned for him, who struck Madian in the Land of Moab: and the name of his city was Avith. 47 And when Adad also was dead, Semla of Masreca reigned for him. 48 But Semla also died, and there reigned for him Saul of Rohoboth, which is situate besides the river. 49 Saul also being dead, Balanan, the son of Achobor reigned for him.
50 But this also died, and Adad reigned for him: whose city's name was Phau, and his wife was called Meetabel the daughter of Matred, the daughter of Mezaab. 51 And Adad being dead, there began to be dukes in Edom for kings: duke Thamna, duke Alva, duke Jetheth, 52 duke Oolibama, duke Ela, duke Phinon, 53 duke Cenez, duke Theman, duke Mabsar, 54 duke Magdiel, duke Hiram. These be the dukes of Edom.

ANNOTATIONS.

◦Differences of names, numbers, & times, found in holy

BECAUSE in diverse holy Scriptures, and especially in these Books of Paralipomenon, ◦many difficulties occur concerning diverse persons, and places; as also difference of numbers, and times; in reconciling whereof the holy Fathers and Doctors have much laboured, making sometimes large commentaries to satisfy themselves, and other diligent searchers of the truth, and to remove the obloquies of detractors from the authority of holy Scripture, whose learned explications of such obscurities if we should cite, it would be over-long, and contrary to our purpose of brief Annotations; here once for often, we will present to the vulgar reader, certain clear and ordinary rules, by which the learned Divines do reconcile such apparent contradictions.

[1] First, it is evident by sundry examples, that many persons, places, and some other things had diverse names, & so are sometimes called by one name, sometimes by another. [2] Secondly (which is more common) many were called by the same names, and so must be distinguished by the differences of times, places, qualities, or other circumstances. [3] Thirdly, in genealogies and other histories, children are not always called the sons, or daughters of their natural parents, but sometimes of legal fathers; [4] and sometimes also of those that adopted them for their children; and sometimes of their grandfathers, or former progenitors. [5] Fourthly, sometime for mystery sake, another number is expressed, being true in the mystical sense, differing from the precise number according to the history. As in the genealogy of Christ the Evangelist counteth thrice fourteen generations from Abraham to our Saviour, [6] differing from the history of the old Testament. [7] Fifthly, even in the history itself, sometimes holy Scripture counteth only the greater numbers, omitting the lesser, and in some other addeth also the odd numbers. [8] Sixthly, the Scriptures speak often by tropes, as mentioning part for the whole, or the whole for the part; so by the figure Synecdoche, Christ is said to have been three days dead, that is, one whole day & part of other two. And some King living or reigning so many years and part of another, and his successor reigning the other part, each part is counted to each of them for a whole year, and so a year is added, more than is in the precise number. [9] Seventhly, sometimes the sons reigned together with their fathers, as Joathan reigned his father Ozias yet living. 4. Reg. 15. and so both their reigns are sometimes counted, sometimes their several years, as every one reigned alone. [10] Eighthly, the times of vacancies, in the government of the Judges, reigns of Kings, and the like, are sometimes omitted in calculation, sometimes adjoined to the predecessor, or successor. [11] Ninthly, sometimes the holy Scripture mentioneth the only time that one lived or reigned well, as it were blotting out the rest with oblivion. So Saul is said to have reigned two years (1. Reg. 13.) who well and evil reigned much longer. [12] Tenthly, by error in writing, words, names, and especially numbers may easily be changed, and cannot easily be corrected. By these or other like means, all the holy Scriptures may be defended, [13] though none ought to presume by his private spirit, to understand and expound all Scriptures; which are hard not only by reason of their profound sense, surpassing man's natural capacity, but also for that in outward appearance, sometimes there seem to be contradictions, but indeed neither are, nor can be uttered by the Holy Ghost, the Spirit of truth, Inditer of the whole sacred Bible. [14] And therefore we must rely upon God's Spirit, speaking in his spouse the Church, commended unto us by those Scriptures, whereof we are sufficiently assured.

5 Therefore all the sons of Juda, were five. And the sons of Phares, Hesron and Hamul. 6 The sons also of Zara: Zamri, & Ethan, and Eman, Chalcal also, and Dara, together five. 7 And the sons of Charmi: (b) Achar, who troubled Israel, and sinned in the theft of the anathema.

(b) Either this man had two names, or there is error in the last letter, here, or Iosue 7.

8 The sons of Ethan: Azarias. 9 And the sons of Hesron that were born to him: Jerameel, & Ram, & Calubi. 10 Moreover Ram begat Aminadab, & Aminadab begat Nahasson, the Prince of the children of Juda. 11 Nahasson also begat Salma, of whom was born Booz. 12 But Booz begat Obed, who also begat Isai. 13 And Isai begat the first-begotten Eliab, the second Abinadab, the third Simmaa, 14 the fourth, Nathanael, the fifth Raddai, 15 the sixth Asom, the seventh David. 16 Whose sisters were Sarvia, & Abigail. The sons of Sarvia: Abisai, Joab, and Asael, three. 17 And Abigail bear Amasa, whose father was Jether the Ismaelite. 18 But (c) Caleb the son of Hesron took a wife named Azuba, of whom he begat Jerioth: and her sons were Jaser, and Sobab, and Ardon.

(c) Otherwise called Calubi. v. 9.

19 And when Azuba was dead, Caleb took to wife Ephratha: who bare him Hur. 20 Moreover Hur begat Uri, and Uri begat Bezeleel. 21 After these things Hesron went in to the daughter of Machir the father of Galaad, & took her, when he was threescore years old: who bare him Segub. 22 But Segub also begat Jair, and possessed three and twenty cities in the Land of Galaad. 23 And he took Gessur, and Aram, the towns of Jair, and Canath, and the villages thereof, threescore cities, all these are (d) the sons of Machir the father of Galaad.

(d) By sons, as often elsewhere, are understood nephews & other offspring.

24 And when Hesron was dead, Caleb went into Ephrata. Hesron also had to wife, Abia, who bare him Ashur the father of Thecua. 25 And there were born sons to Jerameel, the first-begotten of Hesron, Ram his first-born, and Buna, and Aram, and Asom, and Achia.
26 Jerameel married also another wife, named Atara, which was the mother of Onam. 27 But the sons also of Ram the first-begotten of Jerameel, were Moos, Jamin, and Acar. 28 And Onam had sons Semei, & Jada. And the sons of Semei: Nadab, and Abisur:
29 But the name of Abisur's wife, was Abihail, who bare him Ahobban, & Molid. 30 And the sons of Nadab were Saled, and Apphaim. And Saled died without children. 31 But the son of Apphaim, Jesi: which Jesi begat Sesan. Moreover Sesan begat Oholai. 32 And the sons of Jada the brother of Semei: Jether, and Jonathan. But Jether also died without children. 33 Moreover Jonathan begat Phaleth, and Ziza. These were the sons of Jerameel. 34 And Sesan had no sons, but daughters: and a servant an Aegyptian, named Jeraa. 35 And he gave him his daughter to wife: who bare him Ethei.
36 And Ethei begat Nathan, and Nathan begat Zabad, 37 Zabad also begat Ophlal, and Ophlal begat Obed. 38 Obed begat Jehu, Jehu begat Azarias, 39 Azarias begat Helles, and Helles begat Elasa, 40 Elasa begat Sisamoi, Sisamoi begat Sellum, 41 Sellum begat Icamia, and Icamia begat Elisama. 42 And the sons of Caleb the brother of Jerameel: Mesa his first-begotten, he is the father of Ziph: & the sons of Maresa the father of Hebron. 43 Moreover the sons of Hebron, Core, and Thaphua, and Recem, and Samma. 44 And Samma begat Raham, the father of Jercaam, and Recem begat Sammai. 45 The son of Sammai, Maon: and Maon the father of Bethsur. 46 And Epha the concubine of Caleb bare Haran, and Mosa, and Gezez. Moreover Haran begat Gezez. 47 And the sons of Jahaddai, Regom, and Joathan, and Gesan, and Phalet, and Epha, and Saaph.

48 The concubine of Caleb Maacha bare Saber, and Tharana. 49 And Saaph the father of Madmena begat Sue the father of Machbena, and the father of Gabaa. But the daughter of Caleb, was Achsa. 50 These were the sons of Caleb the son of Hur the first-begotten of Ephrata, Sobal the father of Cariathiarim. 51 Salma the father of Bethlehem, Hariph the father of Bethgader. 52 And there were sons of Sobal the father of Chariathiarim, he that saw the half of the [1] restings.

53 And of the kindred of Cariathiarim, the Jethrites, and Aphuthites, and Semathites, and Maseretes. Out of these issued the Saraites, and Esthaolites. 54 The sons of Salma, Bethlehem, and Netophathi, the (e) Crowns of the house of Joab, and the Half of the resting of Sarai.

(e) Valiant men by whose help Joab got victories and triumphant crowns.

55 The kindreds also of the scribes dwelling in Jabes, singing and sounding, and abiding in tabernacles. These are the Cineites, which came from Heate of the father of the house of Rechab.

CHAPTER III.

The sons of king David. 10. the line of the kings of Juda from Salomon to Josias. 15. With diverse generations of the same Josias.

But David had these sons, which were born to him in Hebron: the first begotten Amnon of Achinoam the Jesraelite, the second Daniel of Abigail the Carmelite, 2 the third Absalom the son of Maacha the daughter of Tolmai the king of Gessur, the fourth Adonias the son of Aggith, 3 the fifth Saphatias of Abital, the sixth Jethraham of Egla his wife. 4 Six sons therefore were born to him in Hebron, where he reigned seven years and six months. And in Jerusalem he reigned three and thirty years.

5 Moreover in Jerusalem^ sons were born to him, Simmaa, and Sobab, and Nathan, and Salomon, four of Bethsabee the daughter of Ammiel, 6 Jebaar also and Elisama, 7 and Eliphaleth, and Noge, and Nepheg, and Japhia, 8 moreover Elisama, and Eliada, and Elipheleth, nine: 9 all these the sons of David, beside the sons of his concubines: and they had a sister Thamar. 10 And the son of Salomon, Roboam: whose son Abia begat Asa. Of this also was born Josaphat, 11 the father of Joram: which Joram begat Ochozias, of whom rose Joas: 12 and his son Amasias begat Azarias. Moreover Azarias the son of Joathan 13 begat Achaz, the father of Ezechias, of whom was born Manasses. 14 But Manasses also begat Amon the father of Josias. 15 And the sons of Josias were, the firstbegotten Johanam, the second (a) Joakim, the third Sedecias, the fourth Sellum.

(a) S. Matthew omitteth this Joakim, and counteth Jechonias as the son of Josias. The same Jechonias was also otherwise called Joachin, 4. Reg. 24. v. 6. & 25. v. 27. S. Hierom. li. 1. in Matth.

16 Of Joakim was born Jechonias, and Sedecias. 17 The sons of Jechonias were Asir, Salathiel, 18 Melchiram, Phadaia, Senneser and Jecemia, Sama, and Nadabia. 19 Of Phadaia were born Zorobabel and Semei. Zorobabel begat Mosollom, Hananias, and Salomith their sister: 20 Hasaba also, and Ohol, and Barachias, and Hasadias, Josabhesed, five. 21 And the son of Hananias, Phaltias the father of Jeseias, whose son was Raphaia. This man's son also Arnan, of whom was born Obdia, whose son was Sechenias. 22 The son of Sechenias: Semeia, whose sons were Hattus, and Jegaal, and Baria, and Naaria, & Saphat, (b) six in number.

(b) Semeia with his five sons are counted six sons of Sechenias, though Semeia only was his proper son, the other his nephews. See annotation. ch. 1. num. 3.

23 The sons of Naaria, Elioenai, and Ezechias, and Ezricam, three. 24 The sons of Elioenai, Oduia, and Eliasub, & Pheleia, and Accub, and Johanan, and Dalaia, and Anani, seven.

CHAPTER IV.

Other genealogies of Juda, 24. and of Simeon, 29. by whom the progeny of Cham, 42. and relics of Amalecites are subdued.

The sons of Juda: Phares, Hesron, and Charmi, and Hur, and Sobal. 2 But Raia the son of Sobal begat Jahath, of whom were born Ahumai, and Laad. These be the kindreds of Sarathi. 3 This also is the stock of Etam: Jezrahel, and Jesema, and Jedebos. And the name of their sister Asalelphuni. 4 And Phanuel the father of Gedor, and Ezar the father of Hosa, these are the sons of Hur the first begotten of Ephratha the father of Bethlehem. 5 But Assur the father of Thecua had two wives, Halaa, and Naara. 6 And Naara bare him Oozam, and Hepher, and Themani, & Ahasthari. These are the sons of Naara. 7 Moreover the sons of Halaa, Sereth, Isaar, and Ethnan. 8 And Cos begat Anob, and Soboba, and the kindred of Aharehel the son of Arum. 9 And Jabes was honorable above his brethren, and his mother called his name Jabes, saying: Because I bare him in sorrow. 10 But (a) Jabes invocated the God of Israel, saying: If blessing thou wilt bless me, and wilt enlarge my borders, and thy hand be with me, and thou wilt make that I be not oppressed by malice. And God granted the things that he prayed for.

(a) In joining a vow to his prayer he imitated holy Jacob. Gen. 28. And they both desired temporal things for the better serving of God, & advancing his glory; especially that they might be assisted with grace not to yield to tentations, nor sin of malice.

11 And Caleb the brother of Sua begat Mahir, who was the father of Esthon. 12 Moreover Esthon begat Bethrapha, and Phesse, and Tehinna the father of the city of Naas: these are the men of Recha. 13 And the sons of Cenez, Othoniel, and Saraia. Moreover the sons of Othoniel, Hathath, and Maonathi. 14 Maonathi begat Ophra, and Saraia begat Joab (b) the father of the Vale of Artificers: for there were artificers.

(b) Chief lord of the valley; where the artificers dwelt that made the Temple.

15 And the sons of Caleb the son of Jephone, Hir, & Ela, and Naham. The sons also of Ela: Cenez. 16 The sons also of Jaleleel: Ziph, and Zipha, Thiria, and Asrael. 17 And the sons of Esra, Jether, and Mered, and Epher, and Jalon, and he begat Mariam, and Sammai, and Jesba the father of Esthamo. 18 Also his wife Judaia, bare Jared the father of Gedor, and Heber the father of Socho, and Icuthiel the father of Zanoe. And these are the sons of Bethia the daughter of Pharao, whom Mered took. 19 And the sons of the wife of Odaia the sister of Naham the father of Ceila, Garmi, and Esthamo, which was of Macathi. 20 The sons also Simon, Amnon, and Rinna the son of Hanan, and Thilon. And the sons of Jesi, Zoheth, and Benzoheth. 21 The sons of Sela the son of Juda: Her the father of Lecha, and Laada the father of Maresa, and the kindreds of their house that work silk in the House of oath. 22 And he that made the Sun to stand, and the men of Lying, and Secure, and Burning, which were Princes in Moab, & which returned into Lahem. And these are old words. 23 These are potters, dwelling in Plantings, and in Hedges, with the king in his works, and they abode there. 24 The sons of Simeon: Namuel, and Jamin, Jarib, Zara, Saul: 25 Sellum his son, Mapsam his son, Masma his son. 26 The sons of Masma: Hamuel his son, Zachur his son, Semei his son. 27 The sons of Semei sixteen, and six daughters: but his brethren had not many sons, and the whole kindred could not reach to the sum of the children of Juda. 28 And they dwelt in Bersabee, and Molada, and Hasarsuhal, 29 and in Bala, and in Asom, and in Tholad, 30 and in Bathuel, and in Hormi, and in Siceleg, 31 and in Bethmarcaboth, and in Hasarsusim, and in Bethberai, and in Saarim. These were their cities until king David. 32 Their towns also: Etam, & Aen, Rhemmon, and Thochen, and Asan, five cities. 33 And all their villages round about these cities unto Baal. This is their habitation, and the distribution of their dwellings. 34 Mosabab also and Jemlech, and Josa the son of Amasias, 35 and Joel, & Jehu the son of Josabia, the son of Saraia, the son of Asiel. 36 and Elioenai, & Jacoba, & Isuhaia, & Asaia, & Adiel, and Ismiel, & Banaia, 37 Ziza also the son of Zephei the son of Allon the son of Adaia, the son of Semri the son of Samaia. 38 These renowned Princes in their kindreds, and in the house of their affinities they were multiplied exceedingly. 39 And they went forth to enter into Gador as far as the East side of the valley, and to seek pastures for their flocks. 40 And they found fat pastures, and very good, and a country very large and quiet and fruitful, in the which before had dwelt the stock of Cham. 41 These therefore, whom before we described by name, came in the days of Ezechias the king of Juda: and they struck their tabernacles, and the inhabitants that were found there, & clean destroyed them until this present day: and they dwelt for them, because they found there most fat pastures. 42 Also of the children of Simeon there went into mount Seir five hundred men, having their Princes Phaltias and Naaria and Raphaia and Oziel the sons of Jesi: 43 and they struck the remnant of the Amalecites, which were able to escape, and they dwelt there for them until this day.

CHAPTER V.

Genealogies of Ruben, whose birth-right, concerning double portion, is translated to Joseph, the principality of Juda, with their special acts. 11. Also of Gad, 18. who with Ruben, and the half tribe of Manasses, subdue the Agarenes: 25. but for their sins are led captive into Assyria.

Also the sons of Ruben the first-begotten of Israel (for he was his first-begotten: (a) but when he had violated his father's bed, his first-birth-right was given to the sons of Joseph the son of Israel, and he was not reputed for the first-begotten.

2 Moreover Judas, which was the strongest among his brethren, of his stock sprang the Princes: but the first-birth-right was reputed to Joseph.) 3 The sons then of Ruben the first-begotten of Israel: Enoch, and Phallu, Esron, and Charmi. 4 The sons of Joel: Samia his son, Gog his son, Semei his son. 5 Micha his son, Reia his son, Baal his son, 6 Beera his son, whom Theglathphalnasar the king of the Assyrians led away captive, and he was Prince in the tribe of Ruben. 7 And his brethren, and all his kindred, when they were numbered by their families, had these Princes Jehiel, and Zacharias. 8 Moreover Bala the son of Azaz, the son of Samma, the son of Joel, he dwelt in Aroer as far as Nebo, and Beelmeon. 9 Against the east quarter also he dwelt unto the entrance of the desert, and the river Euphrates. For they possessed a great number of cattle in the land of Galaad. 10 And in the days of Saul they fought against the Agarenes, and slew them, and dwelt for them in their tabernacles, in all the quarter, that looketh to the East of Galaad. 11 But the children of Gad dwelt over-against them in the land of Basan, as far as Selcha: 12 Johel the head, and Sapham the second: and Janai, & Saphat in Basan. 13 And their brethren according to the houses of their kindreds, Michael, and Mosollam, and Sebe, and Jorai, and Jacan, and Zie, & Heber, seven. 14 These are the sons of Abihail, the son of Huri, the son of Jara, the son of Galaad, the son of Michael, the son of Jesesi, the son of Jeddo, the son of Buz. 15 Also the brethren of the son of Abdiel, the son of Guni, prince of the house in their families. 16 And they dwelt in Galaad, and in Basan, and in the towns thereof, and in all the suburbs of Saron, unto the borders. 17 All these were numbered in the days of Joathan the king of Juda, and in the days of Jeroboam the king of Israel. 18 The children of Ruben, and of Gad, and the half tribe of Manasses, men of war, carrying shields, and swords, and bending the bow, and taught to battles, four and forty thousand and seven hundred threescore going forth to fight. 19 They fought against the Agarenes, but the Itureians, and Naphis, and Nodab 20 gave them aid. And the Agarenes were delivered into their hands, and all that were with them, because they called upon God when they fought: and he heard them, (b) because they believed in him.

(b) Of these and the like, S. Paul saith: By faith they overcame Kingdoms. Heb. 11.

21 And they took all that they possessed, Camels fifty thousand, and sheep two hundred fifty thousand, and asses two thousand, and of men an hundred thousand souls. 22 And many fell down wounded: for it was the battle of our Lord. And they dwelt for them until the transmigration. 23 Also the children of the half tribe of Manasses possessed the land, from the coasts of Basan unto Baal, Hermon, and Sanir, & mount Hermon, for the number was great. 24 And these were the Princes of the house of their kindred, Epher, & Jesi, and Eliel, & Esriel, and Jeremia, and Odoia, and Jediel, most valiant men and mighty, & renowned Princes in their families. 25 But they forsook the God of their fathers, and fornicated after the gods of the peoples of the land, whom God took away before them. 26 And the God of Israel raised up the spirit of Phul king of the Assyrians, and the spirit of Thelgathphalnasar king of Assur: and he transported Ruben, and Gad, and the half tribe of Manasses, and brought them into Lahela, and into Habor, and to Ara, and to the river of Gozan, until this day.

CHAPTER VI.

12 and Achitob begat Sadoc, and Sadoc begat Sellum, 13 Sellum begat Helcias, and Helcias begat Azarias, 14 Azarias begat Saraias, & Saraias begat Josedec. 15 Moreover Josedec went forth, when our Lord transported Juda and Jerusalem by the hands of Nabuchodonosor. 16 The sons then of Levi: Gerson, Caath, and Merari. 17 And these be the names of the sons of Gerson: Lobni and Semei. 18 The sons of Caath: Amram, and Isaar, and Hebron, and Oziel. 19 The sons of Merari: Moholi and Musi. And these are the kindreds of Levi according to their families. 20 Gerson, Lobni his son, Jahath his son, Zamma his son, 21 Joah his son, Addo his son, Zara his son, Jethrai his son. 22 The sons of Caath, Aminadab his son, Core his son, Asir his son, 23 Elcana his son, Abiasaph his son, Asir his son. 24 Thahath his son, Uriel his son, Ozias his son, Saul his son. 25 The sons of Elcana: Amasai, and Achimoth, 26 & Elcana: The sons of Elcana: Sophai his son, Nahath his son, 27 Eliab his son, Jeroham his son, Elcana his son. 28 The sons of Samuel: the first-begotten Vasseni, and Abia. 29 And the sons of Merari, Moholi: Lobni his son, Semei his son, Oza his son, 30 Sammaa his son, Haggia his son, Asaia his son. 31 These are they, whom David appointed over the singing men of the house of our Lord, since the Ark was placed: 32 & they ministered before the tabernacle of testimony, singing, until Salomon built the house of our Lord in Jerusalem: & they stood according to their order in the ministry. 33 And these are they, which assisted with their sons, of the sons of Caath, Hemam singing man, the son of Joel, the son of Samuel, 34 the son of Elcana, the son of Jeroham, the son of Eliel, the son of Thohu, 35 the son of Suph, the son of Elcana, the son of Mahath, the son of Amasai, 36 the son of Elcana, the son of Johel, the son of Azaria, the son of Sophonias, 37 the son of Thahath, the son of Asir, the son of Abiasaph, the son of Core, 38 the son of Isaar, the son of Caath, the son of Levi, the son of Israel. 39 And his brother Asaph, who stood on his right hand, Asaph the son of Barachias, the son of Samaa, 40 the son of Michael, the son of Basaia, the son of Melchia. 41 the son of Athanai, the son of Zara, the son of Adaia, 42 the son of Ethan, the son of Zamma, the son of Semei. 43 the son of Jeth, the son of Gerson, the son of Levi. 44 And the children of Merari their brethren, on the left hand, Ethan the son of Cusi, the son of Abdi, the son of Maloch, 45 the son of Hasabia, the son of Amasia, the son of Helcias, 46 the son of Amasai, the son of Boni, the son of Somer, 47 the son of Moholi, the son of Musi, the son of Merari, the son of Levi. 48 Their brethren also the Levites, which were ordained for all the ministry of the tabernacle of the house of our Lord. 49 But Aaron, and his sons burnt incense upon the altar of holocaust, and upon the altar of incense, for every work of Sancta Sanctorum: and to pray for Israel according to all things, which Moyses the servant of God commanded. 50 And these are the sons of Aaron: Eleazar his son, Phinees his son, Abisue his son. 51 Bocci his son, Ozi his son, Zarahia his son, 52 Meraioth his son, Amarias his son, Achitob his son, 53 (b) Sadoc his son, Achimaas his son.

(b) In Sadoc. (3. Reg. 2.) the high Priesthood was reduced to the line of Eleazar which by God's ordinance was translated to Heli of Ithamar's line: but still continued in the line of Aaron. The rest of Sadoch's line by Achimaas &c. to Josedech in the captivity appeareth before, v. 9. ad 15.

54 And these are their habitations by the towns and confines, to wit, of the sons of Aaron, according to the kindreds of the Caathites: for they were fallen to them by lot. 55 They gave therefore to them Hebron in the Land of Juda, and the suburbs thereof round about: 56 but the fields of the city, and the towns to Caleb the son of Jephone. 57 Moreover to the sons of Aaron they gave cities, to fly unto, Hebron, and Lobna, and the suburbs thereof, 58 Jether also and Esthemo with the suburbs thereof, yea and Helon, and Dabir with their suburbs: 59 Asan also and Bethsemes, & their suburbs. 60 And of the tribe of Benjamin: Gabee and the suburbs thereof, Almath with the suburbs thereof, Anothoth also with the suburbs thereof. All the cities, thirteen, by their kindreds. 61 And to the children of Caath the residue of their kindred they gave of the half tribe of Manasses in possession ten cities. 62 Moreover to the children of Gerson by their kindreds of the tribe of Issachar, and of the tribe of Aser, and of the tribe of Nephthali, and of the tribe of Manasses in Basan, thirteen cities. 63 And to the sons of Merari by their kindreds of the tribe of Ruben, and of the tribe of Gad, & of the tribe of Zabulon, they gave by lot twelve cities. 64 Also the children of Israel gave to the Levites cities, and their suburbs: 65 and they gave by lot, of the tribe of the children of Juda, and of the tribe of the children of Simeon, & of the tribe of the children of Benjamin, these cities, which they called by their names, 66 and to them, that were of the kindred of the sons of Caath, & the cities in their borders were of the tribe of Ephraim. 67 They therefore gave them cities, to fly unto, Sichem with the suburbs thereof in mount Ephraim, and Gazer with the suburbs thereof, 68 Jecmaan also with the suburbs thereof, & Bethhoron in like manner, 69 moreover Helon also with the suburbs thereof, and Gethremmon in like manner. 70 Moreover of the half tribe of Manasses Aner & the suburbs thereof, Balaam & the suburbs thereof: to wit, to them, which were left of the kindred of the sons of Caath. 71 And to the sons of Gerson of the kindred of the half tribe of Manasses, Gaulon in Basan, & the suburbs thereof, & Astaroth with the suburbs thereof. 72 Of the tribe of Issachar, Cedes & the suburbs thereof, & Dabereth with the suburbs thereof, 73 Ramoth also & the suburbs thereof, & Anem with the suburbs thereof. 74 And of the tribe of Aser: Masal with the suburbs thereof, and Abdon in like manner, 75 Hucac also and the suburbs thereof, & Rohob with the suburbs thereof. 76 Moreover of the tribe of Nephthali, Cedes in Galilee and the suburbs thereof, Hamon with the suburbs thereof, and Cariathaim, and the suburbs thereof. 77 And to the rest of the sons of Merari: of the tribe of Zabulon Remmono and the suburbs thereof, and Thabor with the suburbs thereof: 78 beyond Jordan also over against Jericho, against the East of Jordan, of the tribe of Ruben, Bosor in the wilderness with the suburbs thereof, and Jassa with the suburbs thereof, 79 Cademoth also and the suburbs thereof, and Mephaath with the suburbs thereof. 80 Moreover also of the tribe of Gad, Ramoth in Galaad and the suburbs thereof, and Manaim with the suburbs thereof, 81 Yea and Hesebon with the suburbs thereof, and Jezer with the suburbs thereof.

CHAPTER VII.

Genealogies of Issachar, 6. Benjamin, 13. Nephthali, 44. Manasses, 20. Ephraim, 30. and Aser.

Moreover the sons of Issachar: Thola, and Phua, Jasub & Simeron, four, 2 The sons of Thola: Ozi and Raphaia, and Jeriel, and Jemai, and Jebsem, and Samuel. Princes by the houses of their kindreds. Of the stock of Thola were numbered most valiant men in the days of David, two and twenty thousand six hundred. 3 The sons of Ozi: Izrahia, of whom were born Michael, and Obadia, and Joel, and Jesia, five, all Princes. 4 And with them by their families and peoples, ready girded to battle, most valiant men, six and thirty thousand: for they had many wives, and children. 5 Their brethren also through all the kindred of Issachar, most strong to fight, were numbered four score and seven thousand. 6 The sons of Benjamin: Bela, and Bechor, and (a) Jadihel, three.

(a) Gen. 46. this third son is called Asbel: & seven more are there recited. And so in the rest is much difference: but all may be reconciled by such rules as are noted. chap. 1.

7 The sons of Bela: Esbon, and Ozi, and Oziel, and Jerimoth, and Urai, five Princes of their families, and most strong to fight, and their number was twenty two thousand and thirty four. 8 Moreover the sons of Bechor: Zamira, and Joas, and Eliezer, and Elioenai, and Amri, and Jerimoth, and Abia, and Anathoth, and Almath. All these the sons of Bechor. 9 And there were numbered by their families Princes of their kindreds most valiant unto battle, twenty thousand and two hundred. 10 Moreover the sons of Jadihel: Balan. And the sons of Balan: Jehus, and Benjamin, and Aod, and Chanana, and Zethan, and Tharsis, Ahisahar. 11 All these the sons of Jadihel, Princes of their kindreds, most valiant men, seventeen thousand, & two hundred going forth to battle. 12 Sepham also, & Hapham, the sons of Hir: and Hasim the sons of Aher. 13 And the sons of Nephthali: Jasiel, and Guni, and Jezer, and Sellum, the sons of Bala. 14 Moreover the son of Manasses, Ezriel: & his concubine the Syrian bare Machir the father of Galaad. 15 And Machir took wives for his sons Happhim, & Saphan: & he had a sister named Maacha: the name of the second Salphaad, and to Salphaad were born daughters. 16 And Maacha the wife of Machir bare a son, and she called his name Phares: moreover the name of his brother, was Sares: and his sons, Ulam and Recen. 17 And the son of Ulam, Badan. These are the children of Galaad, the son of Machir, the son of Manasses. 18 And his sister (b) Queen bare (c) Goodlieman, & Abiezer, & Mohola.

(b) Molecheth, Regina; Queen. (c) Ishod, Virum decorum, that is, A comely, personable, or goodly man. So we leave the Hebrew names in this place because S. Jerom, and the whole Church doth so in the Latin text, which we translate.

19 And the sons of Semida were, Ahin, & Sechem, and Leci, & Anian. 20 And the sons of Ephraim: Suthala, Bared his son, Thahath his son, Elada his son, Thahath his son, and this man's son Zabad, 21 and this man's son Suthala, and this man's son Ezer, and Elad: and the men of Geth^ born in the land slew them, because they came down to invade their possessions. 22 Ephraim therefore their father mourned many days, and his brethren came to comfort him. 23 And he went in unto his wife: who conceived and bare a son, and he called his name Beria, for that he was born in the evils of his house: 24 and his daughter was Sara, who built Bethhoron, the nether and the upper, and Ozensara. 25 Moreover his son Rapha, and Reseph, and Thale, of whom was born Thaan, 26 who begat Laadan: this man's son also was Ammiud, who begat Elisama, 27 of whom was born Nun, who had Josue his son. 28 And their possession and habitation was Bethel with her daughters, and against the east of Noran, and on the west quarter of Gazer and her daughters, Sichem also with her daughters, as far as Asa with her daughters. 29 Also near the children of Manasses Bethsan & her daughters, Thanach and her daughters, Mageddo and her daughters: Dor & her daughters. In these dwelt the children of Joseph, the son of Israel. 30 The children of Aser: Jemna, and Jesua, and Jessui, and Baria, and Sara their sister. 31 And the sons of Baria: Heber, & Melchiel: he is the father of Barsaith. 32 And Heber begat Jephlat, & Somer, and Hotham, & Suaa their sister. 33 The son of Jephlat: Phosech, & Chamaal, and Asoth: these be the sons of Jephlat. 34 Moreover the sons of Somer: Ahi, and Roaga, and Haba, and Aram. 35 and the sons of Helem his brother: Supha, and Jemna, and Selles, and Amal. 36 The sons of Supha: Sue, Harnapher, and Sual, and Beri, and Jamra, 37 Bosor, and Hod, & Samma, Salusa, & Jethran, & Bera. 38 The sons of Jether: Jephone, and Phaspha, and Ara. 39 And the sons of Olla: Aree, and Haniel and Resia. 40 All these be the sons of Aser, Princes of their kindreds, the chosen and most valiant dukes of dukes: and their number of the age that was fit for battle, was six and twenty thousand.

CHAPTER VIII.

The progeny of Benjamin is further recited unto Saul: 33. and his Issue.

And Benjamin begat Bale his first begotten, Asbel the second, Ahara the third, 2 Nohaa the fourth, and Rapha the fifth. 3 And the sons of Bale were: Addar, and Gera, and Abiud, 4 Abisue also, and Naaman, and Ahoe, 5 and also Gera, and Sephuphan, and Huram. 6 These are the sons of Ahod, Princes of their kindreds that dwelt in Gabaa, which were transported into Manahath. 7 And Naaman, and Achia, and Gera he transported them, and begat Oza, and Ahiud. 8 Moreover he begat Saharaim in the country of Moab, after he dismissed Husim and Bara his wives. 9 And of Hodes his wife he begat Jobab, and Sebia, and Mosa, and Molchom, 10 Jehus also, and Sechia, and Marma. All these the sons of Asel. 39 And the sons of Esec his brother, Ulam the first-begotten, and Jehus the second, and Eliphalet the third. 40 And the sons of Ulam were most strong men, and archers of great force: and having many sons and nephews, unto an hundred fifty. All these the children of Benjamin.

CHAPTER IX.

Who of Israel (after the captivity) first inhabited Jerusalem. 10. Who exercised the offices of Priests, 14. and Levites, 35. with repetition of part of Saul's progeny.

All Israel therefore (a) was numbered: and the sum of them was written in the Book of the kings of Israel & Juda and they were transported into Babylon for their sin.

(a) The genealogies of all Israel being hitherto recited before their captivity, others are now added which first returned to Jerusalem after their release.

2 And they that dwelt first in their possessions and in their cities: Israel, and the Priests, and the Levites, and the Nathineans. 3 There dwelt in Jerusalem of the children of Juda, and of the children of Benjamin, also of the children of Ephraim, and Manasses. 4 Othei the son of Ammiud, the son of Amri, the son of Omrai, the son of Bonni, of the sons of Phares the son of Juda. 5 And of Siloni: Asaia the first-begotten, and his sons. 6 And of the sons of Zara: Jehuel, and their brethren, six hundred ninety. 7 Moreover of the sons of Benjamin: Salo the son of Mosollam, the son of Oduia the son of Asana: 8 and Jobania the son of Jeroham: and Ela the son of Ozi the son of Mochori: and Mosollam the son of Saphatias, the son of Rahuel, the son of Jebania, 9 and their brethren by their families, nine hundred fifty six. All these Princes of their kindreds by the houses of their fathers. 10 And of the Priests: Jedaia, Joiarib, and Jachin: 11 Azarias also the son of Helcias, the son of Mosollam, the son of Sadoc, the son of Maraioth, the son of Achitob, high Priest of the house of God. 12 Moreover Adaias the son of Jeroham, the son of Phassur, the son of Melchias: and Maasai the son of Adiel, the son of Jezra, the son of Mosollam, the son of Mosollamith, the son of Emmer. 13 their brethren also Princes by their families a thousand seven hundred three score, most able men of strength to the work of the ministry in the house of God. 14 And of the Levites: Semeia the son of Hassub the son of Ezricam, the son of Hasebia of the sons of Merari. 15 Bacbacar also a carpenter, and Galal, and Mathania the son of Micha, the son of Zechri the son of Asaph: 16 and Obdia the son of Semei, the son of Galal, the son of Idithun: and Barachia the son of Asa, the son of Elcana, who dwelt in the courts of Netophati. 17 And the porters: Sellum, and Accub, and Telmon, and Ahimam: and their brother Sellum the Prince, 18 until that time, in the king's gate toward the east, waited by their courses of the children of Levi. 19 But Sellum the son of Core the son of Abiasaph, the son of Core, with his brethren, and his father's house, these are the Corites over the works of the ministry, keepers of the entrances of the tabernacle: and their families in course keeping the entrance of the camp of our Lord. 20 And Phinees the son of Eleasar, was their Prince before our Lord. 21 Moreover Zacharias the son of Mosollamia, porter of the gate of the tabernacle of testimony. 22 All these chosen men for porters, at every gate, two hundred twelve: and appointed out in their proper towns: Whom David and Samuel the seer appointed, upon their fidelity. 23 as well them as their sons, in the doors of the house of our Lord, and in the tabernacle by their courses. 24 By the four winds were the porters: that is to say, toward the East, and toward the West, & toward the North, & toward the South. 25 And their brethren dwelt in villages, & came upon their Sabbaths from time to time. 26 To these four Levites was committed all the number of porters, & they were over the chambers, and treasures of the house of our Lord. 27 Also round about the temple of our Lord they abode in their watches: that when it was time, they in the morning might open the doors. 28 Of these men's stock there were also over the vessels of the ministry: for by number the vessels were both brought in and carried out. 29 Of them also they that had the implements of the sanctuary committed unto them, did oversee the flour, and wine, and oil, and frankincense, and spices. 30 And the sons of Priests made ointments of the spices. 31 And Mathathias a Levite the first-begotten of Sellum the Corite, was overseer of those things, which were fried in the frying pan. 32 Moreover of the children of Caath their brethren, there were over the loaves of proposition, to prepare always new every Sabbath. 33 These are the chief of the singing men by the families of the Levites, which abode in the chambers, that they might day and night continually serve in their ministry. 34 The heads of the Levites, Princes in their families, tarried in Jerusalem. 35 And in Gabaon abode Jehiel the father of Gabaon, and the name of his wife Maacha. 36 His first-begotten son Abdon, and Sur, and Cis, and Baal, and Ner, and Nadab, 37 Gedor also, and Ahio, and Zacharias, and Macelloth. 38 Moreover Macelloth begat Samaan, these dwelt over against their brethren in Jerusalem, with their brethren. 39 And Ner begat Cis: and Cis begat Saul: and Saul begat Jonathas, and Melchisua, and Abinadab, and Esbaal. 40 And the son of Jonathas, Meribbaal: & Meribbaal begat Micha. 41 Moreover the sons of Micha, Phithon, & Melech, & Tharaa, and Ahaz. 42 And Ahaz begat Jara, & Jara begat Alamath, & Azmoth, & Zamri. And Zamri begat Mosa. 43 And Mosa begat Banaa: whose son Raphaia begat Elasa: of whom was born Asel. 44 Moreover Asel had six sons of these names, Ezricam, Bochru, Ismael, Saria, Obdia, Hanan, these are the sons of Asel.

CHAPTER X.

King Saul with his three sons are slain by the Philistians, 8. who spoils the army and carry away Saul's head. 11. The men of Jabes Galaad bury his body and his sons, fasting for them seven days. And the Kingdom is translated to David.

And [1] the Philisthiims fought against Israel, and the men of Israel fled from the Palesthines, and they fell wounded in mount Gelboe.

[1] The second part.
King Saul and all his family overthrown.

2 And when the Philisthians were come near pursuing Saul and his sons, they struck Jonathas, and Abinadab, and Melchisua the sons of Saul. 3 And the battle grew sore against Saul, and the archers found him, and wounded him with arrows. 4 And Saul said to his esquire: Draw thy sword, and kill me: lest perhaps these uncircumcised come, and deride me. But his harness-bearer would not, being frighted with fear: Saul therefore caught his sword, and fell upon it. 5 Which when his harness-bearer had seen, to wit, that Saul was dead, himself also fell upon his sword, and died. 6 Saul therefore died, and his three sons, and all his house fell together. 7 Which when the men of Israel had seen that dwelt in the champion, they fled: and Saul and his sons being dead, they forsook their cities, and were dispersed hither and thither: and the Philisthiims came, and dwelt in them. 8 The next day therefore the Philisthiims taking away the spoils of them that were slain, found Saul and his sons lying on mount Gelboe. 9 And when they had spoiled him, and cut off his head, and stripped him of his armour, they sent into their land, that it should be carried about, & should be shewed in the temples of the idols, and to the people: 10 & his armour they dedicated in the temple of their god, and the head they nailed up in the temple of Dagon. 11 When the men of Jabes Galaad had heard this, to wit, all things that the Philisthiims had done upon Saul, 12 every one of the valiant men arose, and took the bodies of Saul and of his sons, and brought them into Jabes, & buried their bones under an oak, that was in Jabes, and they fasted seven days.

13 Saul therefore died for his iniquities, for that he (a) transgressed the commandment of our Lord which he had commanded, and kept it not: yea and besides also consulted the Pythoness,

(a) He offered Sacrifice on an Altar without warrant. 1. Reg. 13.
And destroyed not the Amalecites, as he was commanded. 1. Reg. 15.

14 and trusted not in our Lord: for the which he slew him, and transferred his Kingdom to David the son of Isai.

CHAPTER XI.

David is elected and anointed king. 5. He overthroweth the Jebuseites taking the tower of Sion in Jerusalem, and prospereth. 10. His valiant men, and their heroical acts are recited. 17. He desiring water from the cistern of Bethleem, will not drink it, but offereth it in sacrifice, because it is brought with danger of his valiant men's lives. 20. Other valiant men of the second order, are likewise recited.

All [1] Israel therefore was gathered together to David in Hebron, saying: We are thy bone, and thy flesh.

[1] The third part.
King David's reign and his special acts.

2 Yesterday also, and the day before, when Saul as yet reigned, thou wast he that didst lead out and lead in Israel: for to thee our Lord thy God said: Thou shalt feed my people Israel, and thou shalt be Prince over it.
3 All the ancients therefore of Israel came to the king into Hebron, and David entered into a league with them before our Lord: and they anointed him king over Israel, according to the word of our Lord, which he spake in the hand of Samuel. 4 David also went, and all Israel into Jerusalem. This is Jebus, where the Jebuseites were the inhabiters of the land. 5 And they that dwelt in Jebus, said to David: Thou shalt not come in here. Moreover David took the tower of Sion, which is the City of David, 6 & he said: Every one that shall among the first strike the Jebusite, shall be the Prince & chief captain. Joab therefore the son of Sarvia went up first, and was made the Prince. 7 And David dwelt in the tower, and therefore it was called the City of David. 8 And he built the City round about from Mello unto a round compass, and Joab built the rest of the city. 9 And David prospered going and increasing, and the Lord of hosts was with him. 10 These are the Princes of the valiant men of David, which holp him to be made king over all Israel according to the word of our Lord, which he spake to Israel 11 And this is the number of David's strong ones: Jesbaam the son of Hachamoni Prince among thirty: this man lifted up his spear upon three hundred^ wounded at one time.
12 And after him Eleazar his uncle's son an Ahohite, who was among the three mighties. 13 This was with David in Phesdomim, when the Philisthiims were gathered to that place into battle: and the field of that country was full of barley, and the people was fled from the face of the Philisthiims. 14 These stood in the midst of the field, and defended him: and when they had strucken the Philistheans, our Lord gave great health to his people. 15 And there went down three of the thirty Princes to a rock, wherein David was, to the cave of Odollam, when the Philisthiims had camped in the Vale Raphaim. 16 Moreover David was in a hold, and the ward of the Philisthimes in Bethlehem.
17 David therefore desired and said: O that some man would give me water of the cistern of Bethlehem, which is in the gate. 18 These three therefore went forward through the midst of the camp of the Philisthiims, and drew water of the cistern of Bethlehem, which was in the gate, & brought it to David to drink: who would not, but rather offered it to our Lord, 19 saying: God forbid that in the sight of my God I should do this, and should drink the blood of these men: because in the peril of their lives they have brought me the water. And for this cause he would not drink. These things did the three most valiants.

20 Abisai also the brother of Joab^ he was Prince of three, and he lifted up his spear against three hundred^ wounded, and he was among three most renowned, 21 and among the second three he the noble one, and Prince of them: but yet unto the three first he raught not. 22 Banaias the son of Joiada a most valiant man, of Cabseel: who had done many facts, he struck the (a) two Ariel of Moab: & he went down, and slew the lion in the midst of the cistern in the time of snow.

(a) Two stout men of Moab, as if they had been lions. 2. Reg. 23. v. 20.

23 And he struck the Aegyptian, whose stature was of five cubits, and which had a spear as the weaver's beam: he therefore went down to him with a rod, and by force took away the spear that he held in his hand, and slew him with his own spear. 24 These things did Banaias the son of Joiada, who was among the three valiants most renowned, 25 the first among thirty, but yet the three he raught not: and David made him of his counsel. 26 Moreover the most valiant men in the army, Asahel the brother of Joab, and Elchanan the son of his uncle of Bethlehem, 27 Sammoth an Arorite, Helles a Phalonite, 28 Ira the son of Acces a Thecaite, Abiezer an Anathothite, 29 Sobbochai an Husathite, Ilai an Ahohite, 30 Maharai a Netophathite, Heled the son of Baana a Netophathite. 31 Ethai the son of Ribai of Gabaath the children of Benjamin, Banaia a Pharatonite 32 Hurai of the Torrent Gaas, Abiel an Arbathite, Azmoth a Bauramite, Eliaba a Salabonite.
33 The sons of Assem a Gezonite, Jonathan the son of Sage an Ararite, 34 Ahiam the son of Sachar an Ararite, 35 Eliphal the son of Ur, 36 Hepher a Mecherathite, Ahia Phelonite, 37 Hesro a Carmelite, Naarai the son of Azbai, 38 Joel the brother of Nathan, Mibahar the son of Agarai. 39 Selec an Ammonite, Naharai a Berothite the armour-bearer of Joab the son of Sarvia, 40 Ira a Jethreite, Gareb a Jethreite, 41 Urias the Hetheite, Zabad the son of Oholi, 42 Adina the son of Siza a Rubenite the Prince of the Rubenites, and with him thirty: 43 Hanan the son of Maacha, and Josaphat a Mathanite, 44 Ozia an Astarothite, Samma, and Jehiel the sons of Hotham an Arorite, 45 Jedihel the son of Zamri, and Joha his brother a Thosaite, 46 Eliel a Mahumite, and Jeribai, and Josaia the sons of Elnaim, and Jethma a Moabite, Eliel, and Obed, and Jasiel of Masobia.

CHAPTER XII.

Who followed David when he fled from Saul. 23. And who came into Hebron to make him king.

These also came to David into Siceleg, when as yet he fled from Saul the son of Cis, the which were most valiant and excellent warriors, 2 drawing the bow, & hurling with both hands stones in slings, & shooting arrows directly: of the brethren of Saul of Benjamin. 3 The Prince Ahiezer, and Joas the sons of Samaa a Gabaathite, and Jaziel, and Phallet the sons of Azmoth, and Beracha, and Jehu an Anothothite. 4 Samaias also a Gabaonite the most valiant amongst the thirty and above the thirty. Jeremias, and Jeheziel, and Johanan, & Jezabad a Gaderothite. 5 And Eluzai, and Jerimuth, and Baalia, & Samaria, and Saphatia an Haruphite. 6 Elcana, and Jesia, and Azareel, and Joezer, and Jesbaam of Carehim: 7 Joela also, and Zabadia the sons of Jeroham of Gedor. 8 Yea and of Gaddi also there fled to David, when he lay hid in the desert most valiant men, & the best warriors, holding shield and spear: their faces as the faces of a lion, & swift as the roe-bucks on the mountains: 9 Ezer the Prince, Obdias the second, Eliab the third, 10 Masmana the fourth, Jeremias the fifth, 11 Ethi the sixth, Eliel the seventh, 12 Johanan the eight, Elzebad the ninth, 13 Jeremias the tenth, Machbanai the eleventh, 14 these of the children of Gad were the Princes of his army. The meanest was captain over an hundred soldiers, & the greatest, over a thousand. 15 These are they which passed Jordan the first month, when it used to flow over his banks: & they chased away all that dwelt in the valleys toward the east quarter and the west.

16 And there came also of Benjamin, & of Juda to the hold, wherein David abode. 17 And David went out to meet them, & said: If you be come peaceably to me for to help me, my heart be joined to you, but if you lie in wait against me for my adversaries, whereas I have no iniquity in my hands, the God of our fathers see, and judge. 18 But the spirit came on Amasai the Prince among thirty, & he said: We are thine, o David, & with thee, o son of Isai: peace, peace be to thee, and peace to thy helpers, for thy God helpeth thee. David therefore received them, and appointed them Princes of the band. 19 Moreover of Manasses there fled to David, when he came with the Philisthiims against Saul to fight, and he fought not with them: because the Princes of the Philisthiims taking counsel sent him back, saying: with the peril of our head will he return to his lord Saul. 20 Therefore when he returned into Siceleg, there fled to him of Manasses, Ednas, and Jozabab, and Jedihel, and Michael, and Ednas, & Jozabad, and Eliu, and Salathi, the Princes of a thousand in Manasses. 21 These did aid David against the rovers: for they were all most valiant men, & were made commanders in the army. 22 Yea & there came every day to David to help him, till it became a great number, as it were (a) the army of God.

(a) An army of many good men, well disposed in order and concord, is called the army of God, like the great number of Angels, which to us are innumerable. Iob. 25.

23 This also is the number of the commanders of the army, which came to David, when he was in Hebron, to transfer the kingdom of Saul to him, according to the word of our Lord. 24 The children of Juda bearing shield and spear, six thousand eight hundred well appointed to battle. 25 Of the children of Simeon valiant men to fight, seven thousand one hundred. 26 Of the children of Levi, four thousand six hundred. 27 Joiada also Prince of the stock of Aaron, and with him three thousand seven hundred. 28 Sadoc also a young man of goodly towardness, and the house of his father, Princes twenty two. 29 And of the children of Benjamin the brethren of Saul, three thousand: for a great part of them as yet followed the house of Saul. 30 Moreover of the children of Ephraim twenty thousand eight hundred valiant of strength, men renowned in their kindreds. 31 And of the half tribe of Manasses, eighteen thousand, every one by their names, came to make David king. 32 Also of the children of Issachar men of understanding, that knew all times to command what Israel should do, Princes two hundred: and all the rest of the tribe did follow their counsel. 33 Moreover of Zabulon such as went forth to battle, and stood in array well appointed with armour of war, there came fifty thousand to aid, not in a double heart. 34 And of Nephthali, commanders a thousand: & with them furnished with shield & spear, seven & thirty thousand. 35 Of Dan also prepared to battle, twenty eight thousand six hundred. 36 And of Aser going forth to fight, & provoking in battle, forty thousand. 37 And beyond Jordan of the children of Ruben & of Gad, & the half part of the tribe of Manasses, furnished with armour of war, an hundred twenty thousand. 38 All these men of war well appointed to fight, with perfect heart came into Hebron, to make David king over all Israel: yea & all the rest of Israel were of one heart, that David should be made king. 39 And they were there with David three days eating and drinking: for their brethren had prepared for them. 40 Yea and they that were near them as far as Issachar, and Zabulon, and Nephthali, brought loaves on Asses, and on camels, and on mules, and upon oxen, to eat: meal, figs, raisins, wine, oil, beeves, muttons, in all aboundance, for there was joy in Israel.

CHAPTER XIII.

The Ark is brought from Abinadab's house, 8. David and others dancing before it. 9. Oza for touching it is strucken dead. 13. Whereupon David fearing to bring it to Jerusalem, it remaineth three months in the house of Obededom.

And David took counsel with the tribunes, and centurions, and all the commanders, 2 and he said to all the assembly of Israel: If it please you, & if the word which I speak proceed from our Lord God, let us send to the rest of our brethren into all the countries of Israel, & to the Priests, & Levites, that dwell in the suburbs of the cities, that they may be gathered together unto us, 3 and we may bring again unto us the Ark of our God: for we sought it not in the days of Saul. 4 And the whole multitude answered that it should be so done: for the word had pleased all the people. 5 David therefore assembled all Israel from Sihor of Aegypt, till thou enter into Emath, to bring the Ark of God from Cariathiarim. 6 And David went up, and every man of Israel to the hill of Cariathiarim which is in Juda, to fetch thence the Ark of our God sitting upon the Cherubim, where his name is invocated. 7 And they laid the Ark of God upon a new wain, out of the house of Abinadab. And Oza and his brother did drive the wain. 8 Moreover David, & all Israel played before our Lord with all their might in songs, and on harps, and psalteries, and timbrels, and cymbals, and trumpets. 9 And when they were come to the Floor of Chidon, Oza stretched forth his hand, to hold up the Ark: for the oxe being wanton had made it lean a little a-side. 10 Our Lord therefore was angry against Oza, & struck him, for that he had touched the Ark: and he died there before our Lord. 11 And David was strucken sad, because our Lord had divided Oza: and he called that place, the Division of Oza until this present day. 12 And he feared God at that time, saying: How may I bring in the Ark of God unto me? 13 And for this cause he brought it not unto himself, that is, into the city of David, but turned it away into the house of (a) Obededom the (b) Getheite.

(a) Obededom was a Levite, (c. 15. v. 18.) and therefore more meet to keep the ark: (b) Called a Getheite because he had dwelt in the town of Geth.

14 Therefore the Ark of God remained in the house of Obededom three months: & our Lord blessed his house, and all things that he had

CHAPTER XIV.

King David provideth timber, and work men to build his own house: 3. marrieth more wives, and hath many children, 8. overthroweth the Philistians, 13. twice.

Hiram also the king of Tyre sent messengers to David, and cedar trees, and artificers for walls, and timber, to build him a house. 2 And David knew that our Lord had established him to be king over Israel, and that his Kingdom was exalted over his people Israel. 3 David also took other wives in Jerusalem: and he begat sons, and daughters. 4 And these be their names, that were born to him in Jerusalem: Samua, and Sobab, Nathan, and Salomon. 5 Jebahar, and Elisua, and Eliphalet, 6 Noga also, and Napheg, and Japhia, 7 Elisama, and Baalaida, and Eliphalet. 8 And the Philisthiims hearing that David was anointed for king over all Israel, they went up all to seek him: which when David had heard, he went out to meet them. 9 Moreover the Philisthiims coming, were spread abroad in the Vale Raphaim. 10 And David consulted our Lord, saying: Shall I go up to the Philistians, and wilt thou deliver them into my hand? And our Lord said to him: Go up, and I will deliver them into thy hand. 11 And when they were come up into Baalpharasim, David struck them there, and said: God hath divided mine enemies by my hand, as waters are divided: and therefore the name of that place was called Baal Pharasim. 12 And they left there their gods, which David commanded to be burnt. 13 And other time also the Philisthiims invaded, and were dispersed in the Vale. 14 And David consulted God again, and God said to him: Go not up after them, retire from them, & thou shalt come against them over against the pear-trees. 15 And when thou shalt hear the sound of one going in the top of the pear-trees, then shalt thou issue forth to battle. For God is gone forth before thee, to strike the camp of the Philisthiims. 16 David therefore did as God had commanded him, & struck the camp of the Philisthians from Gabaon unto Gazera. 17 And the name of David was bruited in all countries, and our Lord gave the dread of him over all nations.

CHAPTER XV.

With solemnity the Ark is brought into Jerusalem, carried by the Priests and Levites, 16. with music of diverse sorts, 26. Sacrifice of thanksgiving is offered. 29. Michol derideth David's devotion.

He made also houses for himself in the city of David: and built a place for the Ark of God, and pitcht a tabernacle for it. 2 Then said David: It is unlawful that the Ark of God be carried of any man, but of the Levites: whom our Lord chose to carry it, and to minister unto himself for ever. 3 And he gathered together all Israel into Jerusalem, that the Ark of God might be brought into his place, which he had prepared for it. 4 Moreover also the sons of Aaron, and the Levites. 5 Of the children of Caath, Uriel was the Prince, and his brethren an hundred twenty. 6 Of the sons of Merari, Asaia the Prince: and his brethren two hundred twenty. 7 Of the sons of Gersom, Joel the Prince: and his brethren an hundred thirty. 8 Of the sons of Elisaphan, Semeias the Prince: and his brethren two hundred. 9 Of the sons of Hebron, Eliel the Prince: and his brethren eighty. 10 Of the sons of Oziel, Aminadab the Prince: and his brethren an hundred twelve. 11 And David called Sadoc and Abiathar the Priests, and the Levites, Uriel, Asaia, Joel, Semeia, Eliel, and Aminadab: 12 and he said to them: You that are the Princes of the Levitical families, be sanctified with your brethren, and fetch the Ark of our Lord the God of Israel to the place, which is prepared for it: 13 lest as from the beginning, because you were not present, our Lord struck us: so now also it come to pass, we doing some unlawful thing. 14 The Priests therefore, and the Levites were sanctified, to carry the Ark of our Lord the God of Israel. 15 And the sons of Levi took the Ark of God, as Moyses had commanded, according to the word of our Lord, upon their shoulders, on bars. 16 And David said to the Princes of the Levites, that they should appoint of their brethren singing men on musical instruments, to wit, on nables, and harps, and cymbals, that the sound of joy might resound on high. 17 And they appointed Levites: Heman the son of Joel, and of his brethren Asaph the son of Barachias: and of the children of Merari, their brethren: Ethan the son of Casaia. 18 And with them their brethren: in the second order, Zacharias, & Ben, & Jaziel, and Semiramoth, and Jahiel, and Ani, Eliab, and Banaias, and Maasias, and Mathathias, and Eliphalu, and Macenias, and Obededom, and Jehiel, porters. 19 Moreover them that sang, Heman, Asaph and Ethan: sounding on brazen cymbals. 20 And Zacharias, and Oziel, and Semiramoth, and Jahiel, and Ani, and Eliab, and Maasias, and Banaias upon nables sang mysteries. 21 Moreover Mathathias, and Eliphalu, and Macenias, and Obededom, and Jehiel, and Ozaziu, upon harps for the octave sang a triumphant song. 22 And Chonenias the Prince of the Levites, was chief over Prophecy, to begin the melody: for he was very cunning. 23 And Barachias, and Elcana: door keepers of the Ark. 24 Moreover Sebenias, and Josaphat, and Nathanael, and Amasai, and Zacharias, and Banaias, and Eliezer Priests, sounded with trumpets, before the Ark of God: and Obededom, and Jehias kept the door of the Ark. 25 Therefore David and all the ancients of Israel, and the tribunes, went to fetch the Ark of the covenant of our Lord, out of the house of Obededom with joy. 26 And when God had holpen the Levites, which carried the Ark of the covenant of our Lord, there were immolated seven oxen, and seven rams. 27 Moreover David was clothed with a robe of fine linen, & all the Levites that carried the Ark, and the singing men, and Chonenias the Prince of prophecy among the singers: and David also was clothed with an (a) Ephod of linen.

28 And all Israel brought the Ark of the covenant of our Lord in jubilee, and sounding with the sound of shalm, and with trumpets, and cymbals, and nables, and harps. 29 And when the Ark of the covenant of our Lord was come unto the city of David, Michol the daughter of Saul looking forth through a window, saw David the king dancing and playing, and she despised him in her heart.

CHAPTER XVI.

The Ark is placed in a tabernacle. Sacrifice is offered. David blesseth the people, 4. disposeth the offices of Levites, 8. and maketh a Psalm of praise to God.

They therefore brought the Ark of God, and set it in the midst of the tabernacle, which David had pitched for it: and they offered holocausts, and pacifics before God. 2 And when David had finished offering holocausts, and pacifics, he (a) blessed the people in the name of our Lord.

(a) Not only King David being a holy Prophet, but any other Superior might bless his subjects.

3 And he divided to all throughout every one, from man unto woman, a loaf of bread, and a piece of roasted beef, and flour fried with oil. 4 And he (b) appointed before the Ark of our Lord of the Levites, that should minister, and should remember his works, and glorify, and praise our Lord the God of Israel:

(b) That he also disposed certain offices to Levites was by special privilege, which was no prejudice to the high Priest's authority, for superior power is proved by God's institution, rather than by facts, either of good men, which do many things by way of dispensation, or of evil usurping without warrant, that to them pertaineth not. For it is clear that God instituted supreme spiritual power in the high Priest, Deut. 17.
And all kings and temporal princes are to receive the law at the Priest's hand, ibidem. v. 18. Eleazar the high Priest was appointed to consult our Lord for Iosue, Nu. 18. Finally by God's ordinance, the law of truth was in the mouth of Priests. Malac. 2.

5 Asaph the Prince, and the second after him Zacharias: moreover Jahiel, and Semiramoth, and Jehiel, and Mathathias, and Eliab, and Banaias, and Obededom: and Jehiel over the instruments of psaltery, and the harps: and Asaph to sound upon the cymbals: 6 but Banaias, and Jaziel Priests, to sound the trumpet continually before the Ark of the covenant of our Lord. 7 In that day David made Asaph, prince to confess to our Lord and his brethren. 8 Confess ye to our Lord, and invocate his name: make his inventions known among the peoples.[1]

9 Chant to him, and sing to him: & tell ye all his marvelous things. 10 Praise ye his holy name: let the heart of them rejoice, that seek our Lord. 11 Seek ye our Lord, and his power: seek ye his face always. 12 Remember his marvelous things which he hath done: his signs, and the judgements of his mouth. 13 The seed of Israel his servant: the children of Jacob his elect. 14 He is the Lord our God: in all the earth are his judgements. 15 Remember for ever his covenant: the word, which he commanded unto a thousand generations. 16 Which he covenanted with Abraham: and his oath with Isaac. 17 And he appointed it to Jacob for a precept: and to Israel for an everlasting covenant: 18 Saying: To thee will I give the Land of Chanaan: the cord of your inheritance. 19 When they were few in number: small and sojourners thereof. 20 And they passed from nation into nation: and from Kingdom to another people. 21 He suffered not any man to calumniate them: but rebuked kings for their sake. 22 Touch not my anointed: and unto my Prophets be not malicious. 23 Sing ye to our Lord all the earth: shew forth from day to day his salvation.[1]

[1] Psa. 95.

24 Tell his glory among the gentiles: among all peoples his marvelous works. 25 Because our Lord is great, and laudable exceedingly: and terrible over all gods. 26 For all the gods of the peoples, be idols: but our Lord made the heavens. 27 Confession and magnificence before him: strength and joy in his place. 28 Bring to our Lord ye families of peoples: bring to our Lord glory and empire. 29 Give our Lord glory, to his name, elevate sacrifice, and come ye in his sight: and adore our Lord in holy honour. 30 Let all the earth be moved before his face: for he founded the world unmovable. 31 Let the heavens be glad, and the earth rejoice: and let them say among nations, Our Lord hath reigned. 32 Let the sea thunder, and the fullness thereof: let the fields rejoice, and all things that are in them. 33 Then shall the trees of the forest praise before our Lord: because he is come to judge the earth. 34 Confess ye to our Lord, because he is good: because his mercy is for ever.[1]

35 And say ye: Save us o God our Saviour: and gather us together, and deliver us out of the nations, that we may confess to thy holy name, and may rejoice in thy songs. 36 Blessed be our Lord the God of Israel from eternity unto eternity: and let all the people say: Amen, and hymn to God. 37 He therefore left Asaph there before the Ark of the covenant of our Lord, and his brethren to minister in the presence of the Ark continually day by day, & in their courses.

38 Moreover Obededom, and his brethren sixty eight: and Obededom the son of Idithun, and Hosa he appointed for porters. 39 And Sadoc the Priest, and his brethren Priests, before the tabernacle of our Lord in the excelse, which was in Gabaon, 40 that they should offer holocausts to our Lord upon the altar of holocaust continually, morning and evening, according to all things that are written in the law of our Lord, which he commanded Israel. 41 And after him Heman, and Idithun, and the rest of the chosen men, every one by his name to confess unto our Lord: because his mercy is for ever. 42 Heman also and Idithun sounding the trumpet, and quavering on the cymbals, and all musical instruments to sing unto God: and the sons of Idithun he made porters. 43 And all the people returned into their house: and David, to bless also his house.

CHAPTER XVII.

David determining to build a Temple, 11, is admonished by Nathan the Prophet, that not he, but his son, shall build it; and be established in the Kingdom. 16. David extolleth God's benignity towards him and the people.

And when David dwelt in his house, he said to Nathan the Prophet: Behold I dwell in a house of cedar: and the Ark of the covenant of our Lord is under skins. 2 And Nathan said to David: All things, that are in thy heart do: for God is with thee. 3 Therefore that night the word of God came to Nathan, saying: 4 Go, and speak to David my servant: Thus saith our Lord: Thou shalt not build me a house to dwell in. 5 For neither have I remained in house from the time, that I brought out Israel, until this day: but I have been always changing places of tabernacle, & in tent, 6 abiding with all Israel. Did I speak to one, at the least, of all the judges of Israel whom I commanded to feed my people, and did I say: Why have you not built me a house of cedar? 7 Now therefore so shalt thou speak to my servant David: Thus saith the Lord of hosts: I took thee, when in the pastures thou didest follow the flock, that thou shouldest be Prince of my people Israel. 8 And I have been with thee whither soever thou wentest: and I have slain all thine enemies before thee, and have made thee a name as of one of the great ones, that are renowned in the earth. 9 And I have given a place to my people Israel: it shall be planted, and shall dwell therein, and shall be moved no more, neither shall the children of iniquity consume them, as from the beginning, 10 since the days that I gave judges to my people Israel, & humbled all thine enemies. I therefore tell thee, that our Lord will build thee (a) a house.

(a) That is continue and preserve thy seed, & family, as we see it performed even to the B. Virgin Mary and Christ of the house of David. Mat. 1. Luc. 2. 3.

11 And when thou shalt have accomplished thy days to go to thy fathers, I will raise up thy seed after thee, which shall be of thy children: and I will establish his Kingdom. 12 He shall build me a house, and I will confirm his throne for ever. 13 I will be to him for a father, and he shall be to me for a son: and my mercy I will not take from him, as I took from him, that was before thee. 14 And I will establish him in my house, and in my Kingdom for ever: and his throne shall be most firm for ever. 15 According to all these words, and according to all this vision, so spake Nathan to David. 16 And when king David came, and sat before our Lord, he said: Who am I Lord God, and what is my house, that thou shouldest give me such things? 17 But this also hath seemed little in thy sight, and therefore thou hast spoken concerning the house of thy servant for time to come also: and hast made me renowned above all men Lord God. 18 What can David add farther, whereas thou hast so glorified thy servant, and known him? 19 Lord for thy servant according to thy heart thou hast done all this magnificence, and would have all thy great wonders to be known. 20 Lord, there is not the like to thee: and there is none other beside thee, of all whom we have heard with our ears. 21 For what other is there, as thy people Israel, one nation in the earth, to the which God went, to deliver it and make it his people, and with his greatness & terrors cast out the nations before the face of it, which he delivered out of Aegypt? 22 And thou hast made thy people Israel to be thy people for ever, and thou Lord art made the God thereof. 23 Now therefore Lord, the word, which thou hast spoken to thy servant, and concerning his house, be it confirmed for ever, and do as thou hast spoken. 24 And let thy name remain and be magnified for ever: and let it be said: The Lord of hosts is God of Israel, & the house of David his servant permanent before him. 25 For thou Lord my God hast revealed the ear of thy servant, to build him a house: and therefore thy servant hath found confidence, to pray before thee. 26 Now therefore Lord thou art God: & thou hast spoken to thy servant so great benefits. 27 And thou hast begun to bless the house of thy servant, that it be always before thee: for thee o Lord blessing it, it shall be blessed for ever.

CHAPTER XVIII.

King David hath great victories, making many nations tributary. 15. His chief officers are recounted.

And it came to pass after these things, that David struck the Philisthiims, and humbled them, and took away Geth, and her (a) daughters out of the hand of the Philisthiims,

(a) The lesser towns and villages are commonly called the daughters of some great town or city to which they pertain.

2 and struck Moab; and the Moabites were made David's servants, offering him gifts. 3 At that time David struck Adarezer also the king of Soba of the country of Hemath, when he went on to dilate his empire as far as the river Euphrates. 4 David therefore took a thousand chariots of his, & seven thousand horsemen, & twenty thousand footmen, & he houghsinewed all the chariot horses, saving an hundred chariots, which he reserved to himself. 5 And the Syrian also of Damascus came moreover, to give aid to Adarezer the king of Soba, but David struck also of his two & twenty thousand men. 6 And he put soldiers in Damascus, that Syria also should serve him, & bring gifts. And our Lord holp him in all things, to the which he went. 7 David also took the golden quivers, which the servants of Adarezer had, and he brought them into Jerusalem. 8 Moreover of Thebath, and Chun, the cities of Adarezer, very much brass, of which Salomon made the brazen Sea, and Pillars, and brazen vessels. 9 Which when Tou the king of Hemath had heard, to wit, that David had strucken all the army of Adarezer the king of Soba, 10 he sent Adoram his son to king David, to desire peace of him, and to congratulate him that he had strucken, and had overthrown Adarezer: for Tou was adversary to Adarezer. 11 But all the vessels also of gold, and silver, and brass^ king David (b) consecrated to our Lord, with the silver and gold, which he had taken out of all the nations, as well of Idumea, and Moab, and the children of Ammon, as of the Philisthiims & Amalec.

(b) That which is dedicated to sacred use, is consecrated to God.

12 And Abisai the son of Sarvia struck Edom in the Vale of salt pits, eighteen thousand: 13 and he appointed a garrison in Edom, that Idumea should serve David, and our Lord saved David in all things to which he went. 14 David therefore reigned over all Israel, & did judgement and justice to all his people. 15 Moreover Joab the son of Sarvia was over the army, and Josaphat the son of Ahilud commenter. 16 And Sadoc the son of Achitob, and Ahimelech the son of Abiathar, Priests: and Susa, Scribe. 17 Banaias also the son of Joiada over the legions Cerethi, and Phelethi: moreover the sons of David the chief at the king's hand.

CHAPTER XIX.

The king of Ammon evil entreating king David's men, whom he had courteously sent to condole the death of his father, is overthrown in battle, 16. with the Assyrians his hired confederates.

And it chanced that Naas the king of the children of Ammon died, and his son reigned for him. [1]

2 And David said: I will do mercy with Hanon the son of Naas: for his father hath done me pleasure. And David sent messengers to comfort him upon the death of his father. Who when they were come into the land of the children of Ammon, to comfort Hanon, 3 the Princes of the children of Ammon said to Hanon: Thou thinkest perhaps, that David for honour sake toward thy father hath sent some that should comfort thee; neither markest thou, that his servants are come to thee to espy, and seek out, and search thy land. 4 Therefore Hanon made the servants of David bald, and shaved them, and cut away their coats from the buttocks to the feet, and sent them away. 5 Who when they were gone, and had sent word to David, he sent to meet them (for they had sustained great reproach) and commanded them to tarry in Jericho, till their beard grew, and then they should return. 6 And the children of Ammon seeing, that they had done injury to David, as well Hanon as the rest of the people, they sent a thousand talents of silver, to hire them chariots and horsemen out of Mesopotamia, and from Syria Maacha, and from Soba. 7 And they hired two and thirty thousand chariots, & king Maacha with his people. Who when they were come, camped over against Medaba. The children of Ammon also being gathered together out of their cities, came to the battle. 8 Which when David had heard, he sent Joab, and all the host of valiant men: 9 and the children of Ammon issuing forth, put their army in array beside the gate of the city: and the kings, that were come to aid him, stood apart in the field. 10 Joab therefore understanding that battle was made against him before and behind, chose the most valiant men of all Israel, and marched on against the Syrian. 11 And the rest of the people he gave under the hand of Abisai his brother: and they went forth against the children of Ammon. 12 And he said: If the Syrian shall overcome me, thou shalt aid me: and if the children of Ammon shall overcome thee, I will aid thee. 13 Take courage, and let us play the men for our people, and for the cities of our God: and our Lord will do that which is good in his sight. 14 Joab therefore marched on, and the people that were with him, against the Syrian to battle: and he put them to flight. 15 Moreover the children of Ammon seeing that the Syrian was fled, themselves also fled from Abisai his brother, and went into the city: and Joab also returned into Jerusalem. 16 But the Syrian seeing that he was fallen before Israel, sent messengers, and brought the Syrian, that was beyond the river: and Sophach the General of Adarezer's war, was their captain. 17 Which when it was told David, he gathered together all Israel, and passed Jordan, and fell upon them, & directed his army against him, they fighting on the contrary part.

18 And the Syrian fled from Israel: and David slew of the Syrians seven thousand chariots, and forty thousand footmen, and Sophach General of the army.
19 And the servants of Adarezer seeing themselves to be overcome of Israel, fled to David, and served him: and Syria would no more give aid to the children of Ammon.

CHAPTER XX.

King David prospereth in war against the Ammonites, 4. and Philisthiims, 6. among whom Jonathan David's nephew by his brother, killeth a monstrous giant, which had twelve fingers and twelve toes.

And [1] it came to pass after the compass of a year, at such time when kings are wont to go forth to battle, Joab gathered together the army and force of war, and spoiled the land of the children of Ammon: and went on and besieged Rabba. Moreover David tarried in Jerusalem, when Joab struck Rabba, and destroyed it.

2 And David took the crown of Melchom from his head, and found in it a talent weight of gold, and most precious pearls, and he made himself thereof a diadem: he took also the spoils of the city very much. 3 And the people that was therein, he brought forth: and he made harrows, and sleds, and chariots shod with Iron to pass over them, so that they were cut asunder, and broken in pieces: so did David to all the cities of the children of Ammon: and he returned with all his people into Jerusalem. 4 After these things there was war begun in Gazer against the Philisthians: in which Sobochai the Husathite struck Saphai of the kindred of Raphaim, and humbled them. 5 Another battle also was fought against the Philisthians, wherein Adeodatus the son of Saltus a Bethlehemite struck the brother of Goliath the Getheite, the staff of whose spear was as it were a weaver's beam. 6 But another battle also happened in Geth, wherein there was a very long man, having fingers and toes by six & six, that is, together four & twenty: who also was born of the stock of Rapha. 7 This man blasphemed Israel: and Jonathan the son of Samaa the brother of David struck him. These be the children of Rapha in Geth, which fell by the hand of David and of his servants.

CHAPTER XXI.

David sinneth in numbering his people, 8. repenteth, and prayeth, yet is punished, many dying of the plague, 15. till God shewing mercy spareth the rest. 16. David accusing himself and excusing the people is commanded by the Angel to offer sacrifice, which he (22. buying ground for an altar) 26. performeth.

But (a) [1] Satan rose against Israel: and moved David to number Israel.

(a) By God's permission David was tempted and overcome. 2. Reg. 24. [1] 2. Reg. 24.

2 And David said to Joab, and to the Princes of the people: Go, and number Israel from Bersabee unto Dan, and bring me the number that I may know.
3 And Joab, answered: Our Lord increase his people an hundred fold more than they are: are they not^ my lord king^ all thy servants? Why doth my lord seek this, which may be reputed for a sin to Israel? 4 But the king's word prevailed more: and Joab went forth, and went about all Israel: and returned to Jerusalem.
5 And he gave David the number of them, whom he had surveyed: and all the number of Israel was found a thousand thousand & an hundred thousand men that drew sword: and of Juda four hundred seventy thousand men of war. 6 For Levi and Benjamin he numbered not: because Joab unwillingly executed the king's commandment. 7 And that which was commanded displeased God: and he struck Israel.

8 And David said to God: I have sinned exceedingly in that I would do this: I beseech thee take away (b) the iniquity of thy servant, because I have done foolishly.

(b) King David was not without faith, nor hope, and yet was contaminate with iniquity, from which he prayed to be delivered.

9 And our Lord spake to Gad the Seer of David, saying: 10 Go, & speak to David, & tell him: Thus saith our Lord: I give thee the choice of three things, choose one which thou wilt, & I will do it to thee. 11 And when Gad was come to David, he said to him: Thus saith our Lord: Choose which thou wilt: 12 either three years' famine: or three months to fly from thine enemies, and not to be able to escape their sword: or three days the sword of our Lord, and pestilence to be in the land, & the Angel of our Lord to kill in all the coasts of Israel: now therefore see what I shall answer him, that sent me. 13 And David said to Gad: I am on every side in great distress: but it is better, that I fall into the hands of our Lord, because his mercies be many, than into the hands of men. 14 Our Lord therefore sent the pestilence in Israel: and there fell of Israel seventy thousand men. 15 He sent also an Angel into Jerusalem, to strike it: and when it was strucken, our Lord saw, and had compassion upon the greatness of the evil, and commanded the Angel, that smote: It is sufficient, now let thy hand cease. Moreover the Angel of our Lord stood beside the floor of Ornan the Jebusite. 16 And David lifting up his eyes, saw the Angel of our Lord standing between heaven & earth, and a sword drawn in his hand, turned against Jerusalem: and they fell as well he as the ancients clothed in hair cloths, flat on the earth. 17 And David said to God: Am not I he, that commanded the people to be numbered? It is I that have sinned: it is I that have done the evil: this flock what hath it deserved? Lord my God let thy hand be turned I beseech thee upon me, and upon my father's house: and let not thy people be strucken. 18 And the Angel of our Lord commanded Gad to tell David, that he should go up, and build an altar to our Lord God in the floor of Ornan the Jebusite. 19 David therefore went up according to the word of Gad, which he had spoken to him in the name of our Lord. 20 Moreover Ornan when he had looked up, and seen the Angel, and his four sons with him, they hid themselves. For at that time he threshed wheat in the floor. 21 Therefore when David came to Ornan, Ornan beheld him, and went forth to meet him out of the floor, and adored him flat on the ground. 22 And David said to him: Give me the place of thy floor, that I may build therein an altar to our Lord: so that thou take as much silver as it is worth, and the plague may cease from the people. 23 And Ornan said to David: Take it, and let my lord the king do whatsoever pleaseth him: yea the oxen also I give for holocaust, and [1]the drays for wood, and wheat for sacrifice: I will give all things willingly.

24 And king David said to him: It shall not be so, but I will give thee silver as much as it is worth: for I may not take it from thee, and so offer to our Lord holocausts given gratis. 25 David therefore gave Ornan for the place, six hundred sicles of gold of most just weight. 26 And he built there an altar to our Lord: and he offered holocausts, and pacifics, and he invocated our Lord, and he heard him (c) in fire from heaven upon the altar of holocaust.

(c) God shewed by sending fire miraculously to burn the sacrifice, that he had heard David's prayer.

27 And our Lord commanded the Angel: & he turned his sword into the scabbard. 28 David therefore forthwith seeing that our Lord had heard him in the floor of Ornan the Jebusite, immolated victims there. 29 But the tabernacle of our Lord, which Moyses made in the desert, and the altar of holocausts, was at that time in the excelse of Gabaon. 30 And David could not go to the altar to pray God there: for he had been frighted with exceeding fear, seeing the sword of the Angel of our Lord.

CHAPTER XXII.

Workmen and all necessaries being prepared, 6. David commandeth Salomon to build the Temple, for so God hath appointed. 13. Exhorteth him to serve God, 17. and other principal men to assist him.

And David said: This is the house of God, and this is an altar for holocaust to Israel. 2 And he commanded that the proselytes of the land of Israel should be gathered together, and he appointed of them masons to hew stones and polish them, that the house of God might be built. 3 David prepared also very much iron for the nails of the gates, and for the joinings and jointures: & of brass an innumerable weight. 4 The cedar-trees also could not be esteemed, which the Sidonians and Tyrians brought down to David. 5 And David said: Salomon my son is yet a little child and delicate, and the house which I would have to be builded to our Lord, must be such as may be renowned in all countries: I therefore will prepare him necessaries. And for this cause before his death he prepared all the expenses. 6 And he called Salomon his son: and commanded him that he should build a house to our Lord the God of Israel. 7 And David said to Salomon: My son, it was my will to have built a house to the name of our Lord my God. 8 But the word of our Lord was made to me, saying: Thou hast shed much blood, and fought very many battles, thou canst not build a house to my name, so much blood being shed before me: 9 the son, which shall be born to thee, shall be a most quiet man: for I will make him rest from all his enemies round about: and for this cause, he shall be called (a) Peaceable: and I will give peace and quietness in Israel all his days.

(a) Salomon signifieth Peaceable, and therein, as in many other things, prefigured Christ, who amongst other names is called Prince of peace. Isai. 9.

10 He shall build a house to my name, and he shall be to me for a son, and I will be to him for a father: and I will establish the throne of his Kingdom over Israel for ever. 11 Now therefore my son, Our Lord be with thee, and do thou prosper, and build the house of our Lord thy God, as he hath spoken of thee. 12 Our Lord also give thee wisdom and understanding, that thou mayst be able to rule Israel, and to keep the law of our Lord thy God. 13 For then thou shalt be able to prosper, if thou shalt keep the commandments, and judgments, which our Lord commanded Moyses to teach Israel: take courage and play the man, fear not, neither be dismayed. 14 Behold I in my poverty have prepared the charges of the house of our Lord, of gold an hundred thousand talents, and of silver a thousand thousand talents, but of brass, & of iron there is no weight, for the number is surpassed with the greatness: timber & stones I have prepared to all the charges. 15 Thou hast also very many artificers, hewers of stones, and masons, and carpenters, and of all occupations most skillful to make work 16 in gold and silver and brass and iron, whereof there is no number. Rise therefore, and do it, and our Lord will be with thee. 17 David also commanded all the Princes of Israel, that they should help Salomon his son. 18 You see, quoth he, that our Lord your God is with you, and hath given you rest round about, and hath delivered all your enemies into your hands, and the land is subdued before our Lord, and before his people. 19 Give therefore your heart and your souls, to seek our Lord your God: and arise, and build a sanctuary to our Lord God, that the Ark of the covenant of our Lord, and the vessels consecrated to our Lord, may be brought into the house, which is built to the name of our Lord.

CHAPTER XXIII.

King David being old constituteth Salomon king, 3. disposeth the offices of Levites, 7. to wit, the families of Gerson, 12. of Caath, 21. and of Merari: (26. ceasing to carry the tabernacle.) 27. to serve in the temple.

David therefore being old and full of days, made Salomon his son king over Israel

2 And he gathered all the Princes of Israel, and the Priests and Levites. 3 And the Levites were numbered from thirty years and upward: and there were found thirty eight thousand men. 4 Of these were chosen, and distributed into the ministry of the house of our Lord four and twenty thousand: and of the overseers and judges, six thousand. 5 Moreover four thousand porters: and as many singing to our Lord on instruments, which he had made to sing on. 6 And (a) David distributed them by the courses of the children of Levi, to wit, of Gerson, and Caath, and Merari.

(a) Aaron's sons being consecrated Priests according to God's ordinance, Levit. 8. & the Levites to do other offices about the tabernacle, Num. 3. & 4. King David (with Sadoc the high Priest, & other chief men. c. 24. v. 6.) disposed them by lots which should serve by course, to sing & play on instruments, as well in the tabernacle now resting in Jerusalem, v. 26. as in the Temple when it should be built.

7 The sons of Gerson: Leedan, and Semei. 8 The sons of Leedan: the Prince Jahiel, and Zethan, and Joel, three. 9 The sons of Semei: Salomith, and Hosiel, and Aram, three: these be the Princes of the families of Leedan. 10 Moreover the sons of Semei: Leheth, and Ziza, and Jaus, and Baria: these be the sons of Semei, four. 11 And Leheth was the first, Ziza the second: moreover Jaus and Baria had not many children, and therefore they were counted in one family, and in one house. 12 The children of Caath: Amram, and Isaar, Hebron, and Oziel, four. 13 The sons of Amram, Aaron, and Moyses. And Aaron was separated to minister in Sancta Sanctorum, he and his sons for ever, and to burn incense to our Lord according to his rite, and to bless his name for ever. 14 The sons of Moyses also the man of God were numbered in the tribe of Levi. 15 The sons of Moyses: Gersom and Eliezer: 16 the sons of Gersom: Subuel the first. 17 And the sons of Eliezer were: Rohobia the first: and Eliezer had no more sons. Moreover the children of Rohobia were multiplied exceedingly. 18 The sons of Isaar: Salomith the first. 19 The sons of Hebron: Jeriau the first, Amarias the second, Jahaziel the third, Jecmaan the fourth. 20 The sons of Oziel: Micha the first, Jesia the second. 21 The sons of Merari: Moholi, and Musi. The sons of Moholi: Eleazar and Cis. 22 And Eleazar died, and had no sons but daughters, and the sons of Cis their brethren took them. 23 The sons of Musi: Moholi, and Eder, and Jerimoth, three. 24 These be the children of Levi in their kindreds and families, Princes by courses, and number of every head, that did the works of ministry of the house of our Lord from twenty years, and upward. 25 For David said: Our Lord the God of Israel hath given rest to his people, and the habitation of Jerusalem for ever. 26 Neither shall it be the office of the Levites to carry any more the tabernacle, and all the vessels thereof to minister. 27 According to the last precepts also of David the number of the children of Levi shall be numbered from twenty years & upward. 28 And they shall be under the hand of the sons of Aaron for the service of the house of our Lord, in the entrances, and in the chambers, and in the place of purification, and in the Sanctuary, and in all the works of the ministry of the temple of our Lord. 29 And the Priests over the loaves of proposition, and for the sacrifice of flour, and for cakes and azymes, and the frying pan and to roast, and over all weight and measure. 30 But the Levites to stand in the morning to confess, and sing to our Lord: and in like manner at evening, 31 as well in the oblation of the holocausts of our Lord, as in the Sabbaths and Calends, and the rest of the solemnities, according to the number, and ceremonies of every thing, continually before our Lord. 32 And let them keep the observations of the tabernacle of covenant, and the rite of the Sanctuary, and the observance of the children of Aaron their brethren, that they minister in the house of our Lord.

CHAPTER XXIV.

King David disposeth sixteen families of Eleazar, and eight of Ithamar, 7. by lots, 19. to serve in the Temple, according to their Priestly function, 20. likewise principal Levites in their offices.

Moreover to the sons of Aaron these were the partitions: The sons of Aaron: Nadab, and Abiu, and Eleazar, and Ithamar. 2 But Nadab and Abiu died before their father without children: and Eleazar and Ithamar did the function of priesthood. 3 And David divided them, that is, Sadoc of the sons of Eleazar, and Ahimelech of the sons of Ithamar, according to their courses and ministry. 4 And there were found many more children of Eleazar among the principal men, than children of Ithamar. And he divided to them, that is, to the children of Eleazar, Princes by their families sixteen: and to the children of Ithamar by their families and houses eight. 5 Moreover he divided both families between themselves by lots: for there were (a) Princes of the Sanctuary, and Princes (b) of God, as well of the children of Eleazar, as of the children of Ithamar.

(a) They were called Princes of the Sanctuary in respect of Sacrifices, & other sacred functions. (b) And Princes of God in regard of their spiritual jurisdiction in the Church, or house of God.

6 And Semeias wrote them, the son of Nathanael the Scribe a Levite, before the king and Princes, and Sadoc the Priest, and Ahimelech the son of Abiathar, the Princes also of the Priestly and Levitical families: one house, which was over the rest, Eleazar's, and another house, which had the rest under it, Ithamar's. 7 And the first lot came forth to Joiarib, the second to Jedei, 8 the third to Harim, the fourth to Seorim, 9 the fifth to Melchia, the sixth to Maiman, 10 the seventh to Accos, the eighth to Abia, 11 the ninth to Jesua, the tenth to Sechenia, 12 the eleventh to Eliasib, the twelfth to Jacim, 13 the thirteenth to Hoppha, the fourteenth to Isbaab, 14 the fifteenth to Belga, the sixteenth to Emmer, 15 the seventeenth to Hezir, the eighteenth to Aphses, 16 the nineteenth to Pheteia, the twentieth to Hezechiel, 17 the one and twentieth to Jachin, the two and twentieth to Gamul, 18 the three and twentieth to Dalaiau, the four and twentieth to Maaziau. 19 These be their courses according to their ministries, to enter into the house of our Lord, and according to their rite under the hand of Aaron their father: as our Lord the God of Israel had commanded. 20 Moreover of the children of Levi, which were remaining, there was Subael of the children of Amram: and of the children of Subael, Jehedeia. 21 Also of the children of Rohobia the Prince of Jesias. 22 And the son of Isaari Salemoth, & the son of Salemoth Jahath: 23 and his son Jeriau the first, Amarias the second, Jahaziel the third, Jecmaan the fourth. 24 The son of Oziel, Micha: the son of Micha, Samir. 25 The brother of Micha, Jesia: and the son of Jesia, Zacharias. 26 The sons of Merari: Moholi and Musi. The son of Oziau: Benno. 27 The son also of Merari: Oziau, and Soam, and Zacchur, and Hebri. 28 Moreover the son of Moholi: Eleazar, who had no children. 29 And the son of Cis, Jeramael. 30 The sons of Musi: Moholi, Eder, and Jerimoth. These be the sons of Levi according to the houses of their families. 31 And they also did cast lots against their brethren the sons of Aaron before David the king, and Sadoc, and Ahimelech, and the Princes of the Priestly and Levitical families, as well the elder as the younger. Lot divided all equally.

CHAPTER XXV.

Four sons of Asaph, six of Idithun, and fourteen of Heman, chief musicians, 7. with their brethren in all two hundred and fourscore, 8. are distributed by Lots, in four and twenty companies, to serve in the temple.

Therefore David, and the officers of the host separated for the ministry the sons of Asaph, and Heman, and (a) Idithun: which should (b) prophesy on harps, and psalteries, and cymbals, according to their number serving the office dedicated to them.

(a) Otherwise called Ethan, ch. 9. v. 44. c. 15. (b) They played on instruments, Psalms, and Canticles, made by Prophets.

2 Of the sons of Asaph: Zacchur, and Joseph, and Nathania, and Asarela, the sons of Asaph: under the hand of Asaph prophesying near the king. 3 Moreover Idithun: the sons of Idithun, Godolias, Sori, Jeseias, and Hasabias, and Mathathias, six, under the hand of their father Idithun, who prophesied on harp over them that confessed and praised our Lord. 4 Of Heman also: the sons of Heman Bocciau, Mathaniau, Oziel, Subuel, and Jerimoth, Hananias, Hanani, Eliatha, Geddelthi, and Romemthiezer, & Jesbacassa, Mellothi, Othir, Mahazioth: 5 all these the sons of Heman the Seer of the king in the words of God, that he might exalt the horn: & God gave to Heman fourteen sons and three daughters. 6 All under their fathers were distributed to sing in the temple of our Lord, on cymbals, & psalteries, and harps, for the ministries of the house of our Lord near the king: to wit, Asaph, and Idithun, and Heman. 7 And the number of them with their brethren, that taught the song of our Lord, all the teachers two hundred eighty eight. 8 And they did cast lots by their courses, equally as well the elder as the younger, the learned and the unlearned together. 9 And the first lot came forth to Joseph, which was of Asaph. The second to Godolias, to him and his sons, and his brethren twelve. 10 The third to Zachur, to his sons and his brethren twelve. 11 The fourth to Isari, to his sons and his brethren twelve. 12 The fifth to Nathanias, to his sons and his brethren twelve. 13 The sixth to Bocciau, to his sons and his brethren twelve. 14 The seventh to Isreela, to his sons and his brethren twelve. 15 The eighth to Jesaia, to his sons and his brethren twelve. 16 The ninth to Mathanias, to his sons and his brethren twelve. 17 The tenth to Semeias, to his sons and his brethren twelve. 18 The eleventh to Azareel, to his sons and his brethren twelve. 19 The twelfth to Hasabia, to his sons and his brethren twelve. 20 The thirteenth to Subael, to his sons and his brethren twelve. 21 The fourteenth to Mathathias, to his sons and his brethren twelve. 22 The fifteenth to Jerimoth, to his sons and his brethren twelve. 23 The sixteenth to Hananias, to his sons and his brethren twelve. 24 The seventeenth to Jesbacassa, to his sons and his brethren twelve. 25 The eighteenth to Hanani, to his sons and his brethren twelve. 26 The nineteenth to Mellothi, to his sons and his brethren twelve. 27 The twentieth to Eliatha, to his sons and his brethren twelve. 28 The one and twentieth to Othir, to his sons and his brethren twelve. 29 The two & twentieth to Geddelthi, to his sons and his brethren twelve. 30 The three and twentieth to Mahazioth, to his sons and his brethren twelve. 31 The four and twentieth to Romemthiezer, to his sons and his brethren twelve.

CHAPTER XXVI.

Porters are designed by lots to watch at four gates of the temple: 20. others made keepers of the holy treasure, & vessels, 30. Officers also appointed in the two tribes and half over Jordan, for God's service and the king's.

And the divisions of the porters: of the Corites Meselemia, the son of Core, of the sons of Asaph. 2 The sons of Meselemia: Zacharias the first-begotten, Jadihel the second, Zabadias the third, Jathanael the fourth, 3 Aelam the fifth, Johanan the sixth, Elioenai the seventh. 4 And the sons of Obededom Semeias the first-begotten, Jozabad the second, Joaha the third, Sachar the fourth, Nathanael the fifth, 5 Ammiel the sixth, Issachar the seventh, Phollathi the eight: because our Lord blessed him. 6 And to Semei his son were born sons, the chief of their families: for they were most valiant men. 7 The sons then of Semeias: Othni, and Raphael, and Obed, Elizabad, and his brethren most valiant men: Eliu also, and Samachias. 8 All these of the sons of Obededom: they, & their sons, & their brethren most able to minister, sixty two of Obededom. 9 Moreover the sons of Meselemia, and their brethren most strong, eighteen. 10 And of Hosa, that is, of the sons of Merari: Semri the Prince (a) for he had not a first-begotten, and therefore his father made him chief)

(a) Either his first son was dead, or was not fit to be chief over the rest.

11 Helcias the second, Tabelias the third, Zacharias, the fourth: all these the sons, and brethren of Hosa, thirteen. 12 These were divided into porters, that the Princes also of the watches, even as their brethren, might minister in the house of our Lord. 13 Lots therefore were cast equally, both to little, and great, by their families, for every one of the gates. 14 The lot then of the East fell to Selemia. Moreover to Zacharias his son, a most wise man, and skillful, the North quarter chanced by lot. 15 But to Obededom and his sons, toward the South: in which part of the house was the Council of the ancients. 16 Sephim, and Hosa toward the West, by the gate which leadeth to the way of ascent: watch against watch. 17 And toward the East six Levites: and toward the North four a day: and toward the South likewise in a day four: and where the Council was, two and two. 18 In the cells also of the porters toward the West four in the way: and two at every cell. 19 These be the divisions of the porters of the sons of Core, and of Merari 20 Moreover Achias was over the treasures of the house of God, and the vessels of the holy places. 21 The sons also of Ledan, the sons of Gersonni: of Ledan princes of the families, Ledan, and Gersonni, Jehieli. 22 The sons of Jehieli: Zathan, and Joel, his brethren over the treasures of the house of our Lord, 23 to the Amramites, and Isaarites, and Hebronites, and Ozielites. 24 And Subael the son of Gersom, the son of Moyses, chief over the treasures. 25 His brethren also Eliezer, whose son Rahabia, and his son Isaias, and his son Joram, his son also Zechri, and his son Selemith. 26 Selemith himself, and his brethren over the treasures of the sanctified holy things, which David the king (b) sanctified, and the Princes of families, and the centurions, and the captains of the host

(b) Things are sanctified by designation to holy use.

27 of the wars, and of the spoils of the battles, which they had consecrated to the maintenance and furniture of the temple of our Lord. 28 And all these things did Samuel the Seer sanctify, and Saul the son of Cis, and Abner the son of Ner, and Joab the son of Sarvia: and all that had sanctified them by the hand of Selemith, and of his brethren. 29 But the chief over the Isaarites was Chonenias, and his sons, to the works abroad over Israel, to teach and judge them. 30 Moreover the Hebronites Hasabias, and his brethren most able men, a thousand seven hundred were chief over Israel beyond Jordan against the West, in all the works of our Lord, & for the ministry of the king. 31 And the Prince of the Hebronites was Jeria according to their families and kindreds. In the fortieth year of king David they were numbered, and there were found most valiant men in Jazer Galaad, 32 and his brethren of stronger age, two thousand seven hundred Princes of families. And David the king made them overseers over the Rubenites and the Gaddites, and the half tribe of Manasses, for all the ministry of God, and the king.

CHAPTER XXVII.

Twelve military tribunes, with four and twenty thousand under every one, by course of months serve about the king, 16. Other twelve tribunes of the people govern in several tribes. 25. Prefects also are made over the king's treasures, cattles, and other commodities in the court, camp, and country.

And the children of Israel according to their number, the Princes of families, tribunes, and centurions, and overseers, that ministered to the king according to their companies, coming in and going out every month in the year, every one was chief over four and twenty thousand. 2 Over the first company the first month Jesboam was chief the son of Zabdiel, and under him four & twenty thousand. 3 Of the sons of Phares, the Prince of all the Princes in the host the first month. 4 The company of the second month had Dudia an Ahohite, & after him another named Macelloth, which governed part of four and twenty thousand. 5 Captain also of the third company in the third month, was Banaias the son of Joiada the Priest: and in his division four and twenty thousand. 6 The same is Banaias the most valiant among thirty, and above the thirty, and over his company Amizabad his son was chief. 7 The fourth, in the fourth month, Asahel the brother of Joab, and Zabadias his son after him: and in his company four and twenty thousand. 8 The fifth, in the fifth month, Prince Samaoth, a Jezerite: and his company four and twenty thousand. 9 The sixth, in the sixth month, Hira the son of Acces a Thecuite: and in his company four and twenty thousand. 10 The seventh, in the seventh month, Helles a Phallonite of the children of Ephraim: and in his company four and twenty thousand. 11 The eight, in the eighth month, Sobochai an Husathite of the stock of Sarahi: and in his company four and twenty thousand. 12 The ninth, in the ninth month, Abiezer an Anathothite of the children of Jemini: and in his company four and twenty thousand. 13 The tenth, in the tenth month, Marai, & he a Netophathite of the stock of Zarahi: & in his company four and twenty thousand. 14 The eleventh in the eleventh month, Banaias, a Pharathonite of the children of Ephraim: & in his company four & twenty thousand. 15 The twelfth, in the twelfth month, Holdai a Netophathite, of the stock of Gothoniel: and in his company four and twenty thousand. 16 Furthermore there were chief over the tribes of Israel, over the Rubenites, Duke Eliezer the son of Zechri: over the Simeonites, Duke Saphatias the son of Maacha: 17 over the Levites, Hasabias the son of Camuel: over the Aaronites, Sadoc: 18 over Juda, Eliu the brother of David: over Issachar, Amri the son of Michael: 19 over the Zabulonites, Jesmaias the son of Abdias: over the Nephthalites, Jerimoth the son of Ozriel: 20 over the children of Ephraim, Osee the son of Ozaziu: over the half tribe of Manasses, Joel the son of Phadaia: 21 and over the half tribe of Manasses in Galaad, Jaddo the son of Zacharias: and over Benjamin, Jasiel the son of Abner. 22 But over Dan, Ezrihel the son of Jeroham: these be the Princes of the children of Israel. 23 And David (a) would not number them from twenty years downward: because our Lord had said that he would multiply Israel as the stars of heaven.

(a) King David having heretofore offended in commanding to number the whole people, 2. Reg. 24. would not now attempt to number all (which were indeed innumerable, but only those that were to be disposed of in special services.

24 Joab the son of Sarvia began to number, and finished not: because upon this there fell wrath upon Israel: and therefore the number of them that were numbered, was not registered in the chronicles of king David. 25 And over the king's treasures was Azmoth the son of Adiel, and over those treasures, which were in the cities, and in the towns, and in the towers, Jonathan the son of Ozias was president. 26 And over husbandry, and the husbandmen, which tilled the ground, Ezri the son of Chelub was overseer: 27 and over the dressers of vineyards, Semeias a Romathite: and over the wine cellars, Zabdias an Aphonite. 28 For over the Olivets and the fig-groves, which were in the champion, was Balanam a Gederite: and over the oil cellars, Joas. 29 Furthermore over the herds that fed in Saron, the overseer was Setrai a Saronite: and over the oxen in the valleys, Saphat the son of Adli: 30 but over the camels, Ubil an Ismaelite: and over the asses, Jadias a Meronathite: 31 over the sheep also Jaziz an Agarene. All these, Princes of the substance of king David. 32 And Jonathan David's uncle, a counsellor, a man wise and learned: He and Jahiel the son of Hachamoni were with the king's sons. 33 Achitophel also the king's counsellor, and Chusai an Arachite the king's friend. 34 After Achitophel was Joiada the son of Banaias, and Abiathar. And the Prince of the king's army was Joab.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Again king David calling all his states together, with commemoration of God's singular favour in electing him, and Salomon, 8. exhorteth them all, and namely his son to serve God sincerely: 10. and to build the temple, describing in what form to make it.

David[1] therefore called together all the Princes of Israel, the Dukes of the tribes, and the heads of the companies, which ministered to the king: the tribunes also and the centurions, and them that were chief over the substance and possessions of the king, and his sons with the eunuchs, and the mighty, and all the most valiant in the host of Jerusalem.

2 And when the king had risen up, and stood, he said: Hear me my brethren, and my people: I meant to have built a house, wherein the Ark of our Lord might rest, and the foot stool of the feet of our God: and to build it I prepared all things. 3 [1]But God said to me: Thou shalt not build a house to my name: because thou art a man of war, and hast shed blood

[1] 2. Reg. 7.

4 Howbeit our Lord the God of Israel chose me of all the house of my father, to be king over Israel for ever: for (a) of Juda he chose the Princes: moreover of the house of Juda, my father's house: and of the sons of my father, it pleased him to choose me king over all Israel.

(a) So Jacob prophesied, that the royal sceptre should come to the tribe of Juda, & therein remain till Christ. Gen. 49.

5 Yea and of my sons (for our Lord hath given me many sons) he hath chosen Salomon my son, to sit in the throne of the Kingdom of our Lord over Israel, 6 and he said to me: Salomon thy son shall build my house, and my courts: for him have I chosen to me for a son, and I will be to him for a father. 7 And I will confirm his Kingdom for ever, if he shall persevere to do my precepts, and my judgments, as (b) at this day.

(b) It is here evident, that Salomon was sometime the true servant and child of God, keeping his precepts & as certain, that he fell into great sins, & lost God's grace, & finally it is doubtful in what state he died. 3. Reg. 11. whereby is convinced their vain fancy that think, he who is once the child of God can never fall, nor become a wicked man.

8 Now then before all the assembly of Israel in the hearing of our God, keep ye, and search all the commandments of our Lord God: that you may possess the good land, & may leave it to your children after you for ever. 9 And thou Salomon my son, know the God of thy father, and serve him with a perfect heart, and a voluntary mind: for our Lord searcheth all hearts, and understandeth all cogitations of minds. If thou seek him, thou shalt find: but if thou forsake him he will reject thee for ever. 10 Now therefore because our Lord hath chosen thee to build the house of the Sanctuary, take courage, and perfit it. 11 And David gave to Salomon his son a description of the porch, and of the temple and of the cellars, and of the upper loft, and of the chambers in the inner rooms, and of the house of the propitiation, 12 moreover also of all the courts, which he had thought upon, and of the chambers round about, for the treasures of the house of our Lord, and for the treasures of the holy things, 13 and of the divisions of the Priests and the Levites, for all the works of the house of our Lord, and for all the vessels of the ministry of the temple of our Lord. 14 Gold in weight for every vessel of the ministry. A weight of silver also according to the diversity of the vessels and works. 15 And for golden candlesticks also, and their lamps, gold according to the measure of every candlestick, and of the lamps. In like manner also for the silver candlesticks, and for their lamps, according to the diversity of the measure, he delivered a weight of silver. 16 He gave also gold for tables of proposition, according to the diversity of the tables: in like manner also silver for other silver tables. 17 For flesh-hooks also, and phials, and censers of most pure gold, and for little lions of gold, according to the quality of the measure he distributed a weight, for lion and lion. In like manner also for lions of silver he separated a diverse weight of silver. 18 And for the Altar whereupon incense is burnt, he gave most pure gold: that of it might be made a similitude of the chariot of the Cherubs spreading their wings, and covering the Ark of the covenant of our Lord. 19 All things, quoth he, came written with the hand of our Lord unto me: that I might understand all the works of the pattern. 20 David also said to Salomon his son: Deal manfully, and take courage, and do it: fear not, and be not dismayed: for our Lord my God will be with thee, and will not leave thee, nor forsake thee, till thou perfit all the work of the ministry of the house of our Lord. 21 Behold the divisions of the Priests and the Levites, for every ministry of the house of our Lord, assist thee, and are ready, and as well the Princes know, as the people, to do all thy precepts.

CHAPTER XXIX.

King David once more by word, and example of his own bountifulness, inviteth others to assist in building the temple, 6. whereto the Princes and people contribute much. 10. So after praises, 18. prayers, 21. and sacrifices offered to God, 22. Salomon is anointed king. 26. And king David dieth blessedly, having reigned forty years.

And David the king spake to all the assembly: Salomon my son alone hath God chosen, as yet a child and a little tender one: for the work is great, neither is the habitation prepared for man, but for God. 2 And I with all my ability have prepared the expenses of the house of my God. Gold for vessels of gold, and silver for them of silver, brass for them of brass, iron for them of iron, wood for them of wood: and onyx stones, and as it were [1]stibians, and of diverse colours, and every precious stone, and marble of Paros most abundantly:

[1] * a kind of fine white stone.

3 and above these things, which I have offered into the house of my God, I give (a)of mine own peculiar goods, gold & silver unto the temple of my God, beside those things, which I have prepared for the holy house:

(a) That which he had already vowed & prepared he counted not his own, and now giveth more to the building & furnishing of the Temple.

4 Three thousand talents of gold of the gold of Ophir: and seven thousand talents of most approved silver, to guilt the walls of the temple. 5 And wheresoever there needeth gold, of gold: and wheresoever there needeth silver, of silver: let the works be made by the hands of the artificers: and if any man offer voluntarily, let him fill his hand today, and offer what he will to our Lord. 6 The Princes therefore of the families promised, and the nobles of the tribes of Israel, the tribunes also and the centurions, and the Princes of the king's possessions. 7 And they gave unto the works of the house of our Lord, of gold, five thousand talents, and ten thousand solidos: of silver ten thousand talents, and of brass eighteen thousand talents: of iron also an hundred thousand talents. 8 And with whomsoever were found stones, they gave them into the treasures of the house of our Lord, by the hand of Jahiel the Gersonite. 9 And the people rejoiced, when they promised vows of their own accord: because they did offer them to our Lord with all their heart: yea and David the king rejoiced with great joy. 10 And he blessed our Lord before all the multitude, and he said: Blessed art thou, o Lord the God of Israel, our father, from eternity unto eternity. 11 Thine o Lord is the magnificence, and might, and glory, and victory: and to thee is the praise: for all things that be in heaven, and in the earth, are thine: thine o Lord is the Kingdom, & thou art over all Princes. 12 Thine are riches and thine is glory: thou hast dominion over all, in thy hand is power and might: in thy hand greatness, and the empire of all things. 13 Now therefore our God we confess to thee, and we praise thy glorious name. 14 Who am I, and what is my people, that we can promise thee all these things? All are thine: and things that we received of thy hand, we have given thee. 15 For we are pilgrims before thee, and strangers, (b)as all our fathers. Our days are as a shadow upon the earth, and there is no abiding.

(b) As Abraham, Isaac, Jacob & others were strangers in respect of Chanaan: so both they, and also David, Salomon, and all men in this world, are pilgrims in respect of heaven. Heb. 13.

16 Lord our God, all this plenty, which we have prepared that a house might be built to thy holy name, is of thy hand, and all things are thine. 17 I know my God that thou provest the hearts, and lovest simplicity, wherefore I also in the simplicity of my heart, gladly have offered all these things: and thy people, which is here found, I have seen with great joy offer thee donaries. 18 Lord God of Abraham, and Isaac, and Israel our fathers, keep for ever this will of their heart, and let this mind remain always to the honour of thee. 19 To Salomon also my son give a perfect heart, that he keep thy commandments, thy testimonies, and thy ceremonies, and do all things: and build the house, the expenses whereof I have prepared. 20 And David commanded the whole assembly: Bless ye our Lord God. And all the assembly blessed our Lord the God of their fathers: and they (c) bowed themselves, & adored God, and then the king.

(c) Albeit they did the same exterior act of honour to God and the King: yet in their mind and intention they gave divine honour to God, and civil to the King. See Exod. 20.

21 And they immolated victim to our Lord: and they offered holocausts the day following, oxen a thousand, rams a thousand, lambs a thousand with their libaments, and with all rite most aboundantly for all Israel. 22 [1] And they did eat, and drink before our Lord in that day with great joy. And they anointed the second time Salomon the son of David. And they anointed him to our Lord for the Prince, and Sadoc for the high Priest.

[1] 3. Reg. 1. v. 34.

23 And Salomon sat upon the throne of our Lord as king for David his father, and he pleased all: and all Israel obeyed him. 24 Yea and all the princes, and men of might, and all the sons of king David gave their hand, and were subject to Salomon the king. 25 Our Lord therefore magnified Salomon over all Israel: & gave him the glory of a Kingdom, such as no king of Israel had before him. 26 David therefore the son of Isai reigned over all Israel. 27 And the days that he reigned over Israel, were forty years: in Hebron he reigned seven years, and in Jerusalem three & thirty years. 28 And he died in a good old age, full of days, and riches, & glory. And Salomon his son reigned for him. 29 But the acts of king David the first and the last are written in the Book of Samuel the Seer, and in the Book of (d) Nathan the Prophet, and in the Volume of Gad the Seer:

(d) Either Nathan and Gad writ the later part of the first book, and the second book of Kings, or else their books are not now extant.

30 and of all his Kingdom, and strength, and of the times, that passed under him, either in Israel, or in all the Kingdoms of the earth.

THE ARGUMENT OF THE SECOND BOOK OF PARALIPOMENON.

[1] The connection of this book with the former.

[2] 1. Par. 1.

[3] The contents divided into two parts.

[1][2] As the former book sheweth, how after many generations from the beginning of the world, God selecting one special nation for his peculiar people, and the same being afterwards made a kingdom, the Sceptre thereof, both by God's and the people's election, came to David, and his son Salomon: [3] So this book declareth that first Salomon reigned peaceably over the whole kingdom. in the nine first chapters. Then, in the other twenty seven chapters, relateth how the same Kingdom was divided, ten tribes being taken away (the history whereof is but here briefly touched) and two only, with the title of the kingdom of Juda, were possessed, by succession of nineteen kings, all of David's and Salomon's issue, in royal estate till the captivity in Babylon.

THE SECOND BOOK OF PARALIPOMENON IN HEBREW, DIBRE HAIAMIM.

CHAPTER I.

Salomon established in the throne, offereth a thousand hosts of sacrifice, 7. asking wisdom, 12. it is given him; with riches, and temporal glory, which he asked not. 14. He provideth many chariots and horsemen.

Salomon [1] therefore the son of David was strengthened in his Kingdom, and our Lord was with him, and magnified him on high.

[1] The first part.
Salomon's reign in the whole Kingdom.

2 And Salomon commanded all Israel, the tribunes, and the centurions, & the dukes, and judges of all Israel, and the Princes of the families: 3 and he went with all the multitude into the Excelse of Gabaon, where was the tabernacle of the covenant of our Lord, which Moyses the servant of God made, in the wilderness. 4 [1] For David had brought the Ark of God from Cariathiarim into the place, which he had prepared for it, & where he had pitcht a tabernacle for it, that is, in Jerusalem:

5 The altar also of brass, which Beseleel the son of Uri the son of Hur had made, was there before the tabernacle of our Lord: which also Salomon sought, and all the assembly. 6 And Salomon went up to the altar of brass, before the tabernacle of the covenant of our Lord, and offered on it a thousand hosts.
7 And behold in that very night God appeared to him, saying: Ask what thou wilt that I may give it thee.
8 And Salomon said to God: Thou hast done great mercy with my father David: and hast made me king for him. 9 Now therefore Lord God be thy word fulfilled, which thou hast promised to David my father: for thou hast made me king over thy people great in number, which is so innumerable as the dust of the earth. 10 Give me wisdom and intelligence, that I may come in and go out before thy people: for who can worthily judge this thy people, which is so great?
11 And God said to Salomon: Because this rather hath pleased thy heart, and thou hast not asked riches, and substance, and glory, nor their lives that hate thee, no nor many days of life: but hast desired wisdom and knowledge, that thou mayst be able to judge my people, over which I have made thee king:

12 Wisdom and knowledge are given thee: and riches, and substance, and glory I will give thee, so that none among the kings neither before thee, nor after thee shall be like thee. 13 Salomon therefore came from the Excelse of Gabaon into Jerusalem before the tabernacle of covenant, and reigned over Israel. 14 And he gathered to him chariots and horsemen, and there amounted to him a thousand four hundred chariots, and twelve thousand horsemen: and he caused them to be in the cities of the chariots, and with the king in Jerusalem. 15 And the king gave silver and gold in Jerusalem (a) as stones, and cedar-trees as sycamores, which grow in the champion in great multitude.

(a) It is the manner of holy scripture to express things exceeding vulgar capacity by the figure Hyperbole.

16 And there were horses brought him from Aegypt, and from Coa by the king's merchants, which went, and bought by a price, 17 a chariot of four horses for six hundred pieces of silver, & an horse for an hundred fifty: in like manner of all the kingdoms of the Hetheites, and of the kings of Syria market was made.

CHAPTER II.

Other workmen being provided to build the Temple, 7. Salomon procureth a cunning artificer from the king of Tyre, and special timber, 16. to be cut, and sent from thence.

And Salomon determined to build a house to the name of our Lord, and a palace for himself. 2 And he numbered seventy thousand men that carried on their shoulders, and eighty thousand that should hew stones in the mountains, and overseers of them three thousand six hundred. [1]

3 He sent also to Hiram the king of Tyre, saying: As thou didst with David my father, and didst send him cedar-trees, to build him a house, wherein also he dwelt: 4 so do with me that I may build a house to the name of our Lord my God, that I may consecrate it to burn incense before him, and to perfume with aromatical spices, and to the everlasting proposition of loaves, and for holocausts, morning and evening, on the sabbaths also, and the new moons, and the solemnities of our Lord God for ever, which are commanded Israel. 5 For the house which I desire to build, is great: for our God is great above all gods.
6 Who then can be able to build him a worthy house? If heaven, and the heavens of heavens cannot contain him: how great am I, that I may build him a house? But to this end only, that incense may be burnt before him. 7 Send me therefore a cunning man, that hath skill to work in gold, and silver, brass, & iron, purple, scarlet, and hyacinth, and that knoweth to make engraved works with these artificers, which I have with me in Jewry, and Jerusalem, whom David my father prepared. 8 But send me also cedar-trees, fir-trees, and pine trees from Libanus: for I know that thy servants have skill to hew the timber of Libanus, and my servants shall be with thy servants, 9 that many trees may be prepared for me. For the house which I desire to build, is exceeding great, and glorious. 10 Moreover to the workmen, that shall hew the trees, thy servants, I will give for victuals of wheat twenty thousand cores, and of barley as many cores, & of wine twenty thousand, metretes, of oil also twenty thousand sates. 11 And Hiram the king of Tyre by letters, which he sent to Salomon, said: Because the Lord loved his people, therefore hath he made thee to reign over it, 12 And he added, saying: Blessed be the Lord the God of Israel, that made heaven & earth, who hath given to David the king a son wise and learned, and of understanding, and prudent, to build a house to the Lord, and a palace for himself. 13 I therefore have sent thee a man wise and most skillful, Hiram (b) my father,

(b) It is probable, that this man had instructed the king of Tyre in true religion of one God whom he confesseth, v. 11. 12. and that therefore the King called him his father.

14 the son of a woman of the daughters of Dan, whose father was a Tyrian, who knoweth to work in gold, and silver, brass, and iron, and marble, and in timber, in purple also, and in hyacinth, and silk, and scarlet: and that knoweth to grave all engraving, and to devise wisely whatsoever in the work is necessary with thy artificers, & with the artificers of my lord David thy father. 15 The wheat therefore, & barley, & oil, and wine, which thou my lord hast promised, send to thy servants. 16 And we will cut down the trees out of Libanus, as many as shall be necessary for thee, and will convey them in boats by the sea unto Joppe: and it shall be thy part to transport them into Jerusalem. 17 Salomon therefore numbered all the men, that were proselytes in the land of Israel, after the numbering which David his father numbered, and they were found an hundred fifty three thousand & six hundred. 18 And he made of them seventy thousand, that should carry burdens on their shoulders, and eighty thousand, that should cut stones out of the mountains: & three thousand and six hundred overseers of the work of the people.

CHAPTER III.

The Temple is begun to be built in mount Moria, the fourth year of Salomon's reign: 3. the form whereof is described, and the precious matter, 8. especially of Sancta Sanctorum: 14. with a costly veil, 15. and two excellent pillars before the gate.

1 And Salomon began to build the house of our Lord in Jerusalem, in mount (a) Moria, which had been shewed to David his father, in the place, which (b) David had prepared in the floor of Ornan the Jebusite.

(a) This mount Moria, signifying vision, was so named by Abraham, who was there ready to sacrifice his son Isaac Gen. 22. (b) And David, by the appointment of an Angel, offered there sacrifice. 2. Reg. 24. 1. Par. 21.

2 [1] And he began to build in the second month, in the fourth year of his Kingdom.

3. Reg. 6.

3 And these be the foundations, which Salomon laid, to build the house of God, of length in the first measure sixty cubits, of breadth twenty cubits. 4 But the porch before the front, which was extended in length according to the measure of the breadth of the house, of twenty cubits: moreover the height was of an hundred twenty cubits: and he did gild it on the inside with most pure gold. 5 Also the greater house he covered with wooden boards of fir tree, & he fastened on plates of fine gold throughout: and he graved in it palm-trees, and as it were little chains embracing one another. 6 He paved also the floor of the Temple with most precious marble, in much beauty. 7 Moreover it was most tried gold, of the plates whereof he covered the house, and the beams thereof, and the posts, and the walls, and the doors: and he graved Cherubs in the walls. 8 He made also the house of Sanctum Sanctorum: the length according to the breadth of the house, of twenty cubits: and the breadth likewise of it twenty cubits: and he covered it with plates of gold, as it were six hundred talents. 9 Yea and he made nails of gold, so that every nail weighed fifty sicles a piece: the upper chambers also he covered with gold. 10 He made also in the house of Sanctum Sanctorum two Cherubs of statuary work: and he covered them with gold. 11 The wings of the Cherubs were extended twenty cubits, so that one wing had five cubits, and touched the wall of the house: and the other having five cubits, touched the wing of the other Cherub. 12 In like manner the wing of the other Cherub, had five cubits, and touched the wall: and his other wing of five cubits, touched the wing of the other Cherub. 13 Therefore the wings of both the Cherubs were spread forth, and were extended twenty cubits: and they stood upright on their feet, and their faces were turned to the utter house. 14 He made also a veil of hyacinth, purple, scarlet, and silk: & wove in it Cherubs. 15 Before the doors also of the temple two pillars, which had five and thirty cubits in height:

CHAPTER IV.

The forms of the brazen altar, 2. of the lavatory (or Sea) with figures of twelve oxen, 6. of other ten small lavatories, 7. ten candlesticks, 8. ten tables, and an hundred basins, a great hall for the Priests, 10. and other vessels, and ornaments of the Temple are described.

He made also an altar of brass (a) of twenty cubits in length, and of twenty cubits in breadth, and of ten cubits in height.

(a) As well the Temple as the Altars, and other appertinances were made after the form of Moyses' Tabernacle altars of sacrifice & incense, and the rest: but greater in quantity, of more precious matter, & more excellent workmanship.

2 (b) A Sea also cast, ten cubits from brim to brim, round in compass: it had five cubits in height, and a cord of thirty cubits did compass it round about.[1]

(b) A great brazen vessel, and some other things that were not before. [1] 3. Reg. 7.

3 There was also under it the similitude of oxen, and certain engravings of ten cubits on the outside compassed the belly of the Sea, as it were with two rews. 4 and the oxen were cast: and the Sea it-self was set upon the twelve oxen, of the which three looked toward the North, and other three to the West: moreover other three to the South, and the three that remained, to the East, having the Sea put upon them: and the hinder parts of the oxen were inward under the sea. 5 Moreover the thickness thereof had the measure of a palm, and the brim thereof was as it were the brim of a chalice, or of a crisped lily: and it held three thousand metretes. 6 He made also ten lavatories: and set five on the right hand, and five on the left, that they might wash in them all things, that they would offer for holocaust: moreover in the Sea the Priests were washed. 7 And he made also (c) ten golden candlesticks, according to the fashion which they were commanded to be made by: and he set them in the temple, five on the right hand, and five on the left.

(c) Also a greater number of candlesticks, and other the like.

8 Moreover also ten tables: and he set them in the temple, five on the right hand, and five on the left. Phials also of gold an hundred. 9 He made also the court of the Priests, and a great hall: and doors in the hall, which he covered with brass. 10 Moreover he set the Sea on the right side against the East toward the South. 11 And Hiram made cauldrons, and flesh-hooks, and phials: and accomplished all the king's work in the house of God: 12 that is to say, two pillars, and the [1] chapiters and the heads, and as it were certain little nets, which should cover the heads over the chapiters.

13 Pomegranates also four hundred, and two little nets, so that two rews of the pomegranates were joined to each little net, which covered the pommels, and the heads of the pillars. 14 He made feet also, and lavatories, which he put upon the feet: 15 one sea, also twelve oxen under the sea. 16 And the cauldrons, and flesh-hooks, and phials. All the vessels did Hiram his father make for Salomon in the house of our Lord of most pure brass. 17 In the country of Jordan did the king cast them, in a clay ground between Socot and Saredatha. 18 And the multitude of vessels was innumerable, so that the weight of the brass was not known. 19 And Salomon made all the vessels of the house of God, and the golden altar, and the tables, and upon them the loaves of proposition, 20 the candlesticks also with their lamps to give light before the oracle, according to the rite, of most pure gold: 21 and certain flourishing things, and lamps, and golden tongs all were made of most fine gold. 22 The vessels also of perfume and censers, and phials, and little mortars, of most pure gold. And he graved the doors of the inner temple, that is, in Sancta Sanctorum: and the doors of the temple without^ of gold. And so all the work was finished which Salomon made in the house of our Lord.

CHAPTER V.

Many gifts are offered. 4. The Ark is brought with great solemnity into the Temple. 6. Innumerable hosts are offered, 11, with excellent music, and the Temple is replenished with the glory of God.

Salomon therefore brought in all the things, that David his father had vowed, the silver, & gold, & all the vessels he put in the treasures of the house of God. 2 [1]After which things he gathered together all the ancients of Israel, and all the Princes of the tribes, and the heads of families, of the children of Israel into Jerusalem, to bring (a)the Ark of the covenant of our Lord from the City of David, which is Sion.

[1]3. Reg. 7.(a) Another Ark was not made, because that was most holy and most excellent, which Moyses made. Likewise other holy things of the tabernacle were brought into the Temple with great solemnity.

3 There came therefore unto the king all the men of Israel in the solemn day of the seventh month. 4 And when all the ancients of Israel were come, the Levites carried the Ark, 5 and brought it in, and all the furniture of the tabernacle. Moreover the Priests with the Levites did carry the vessels of the Sanctuary, which were in the tabernacle. 6 And king Salomon, and all the assembly of Israel, and all that were gathered before the Ark, immolated rams, and oxen without any number: for so great was the multitude of victims. 7 And the Priests brought in the Ark of the covenant of our Lord into his place, that is, to the oracle of the temple, into Sancta Sanctorum under the wings of the cherubs: 8 so that the cherubs spread their wings over the place wherein the Ark was set, and covered the Ark itself with his bars. 9 And the heads of the bars, wherewith the Ark was carried, because they were a little longer, appeared before the oracle: but if a man had been a little outward, he could not see them. The Ark therefore was there until this present day. 10 And there was nothing in the Ark, but the two tables, which Moyses had put in Horeb, when our Lord gave the law to the children of Israel coming out of Aegypt. 11 And the Priests being gone out of the Sanctuary (for all the Priests that could be found there, were sanctified, neither as yet at that time were the courses, & the order of the ministries divided among them) 12 as well the Levites as the singing men, that is, both they which were under Asaph, and they which were under Heman, and they which were under Idithun, their sons, and brethren revested with fine linen cloths, sounding cymbals, and psalteries, and harps, standing at the East side of the Altar, and with them Priests an hundred twenty, sounding with trumpets. 13 Therefore all sounding together, both with trumpets, and voice, and cymbals, and organs, and with diverse kind of musical instruments, and lifting up their voice on high: the sound was heard far off, so that when they began to praise our Lord, and to say: Confess to our Lord, because he is good, because his mercy is for ever: the house of God was filled with a cloud, 14 that the Priests could not stand and minister for the darkness. For the glory of our Lord had filled the house of God.

CHAPTER VI.

Salomon blesseth the people, 4. prayeth to God, giving thanks for benefits received, 16. and requesting continual protection, and that God will hear the prayers of the people, 32. yea also of strangers that pray in the Temple.

Then Salomon said: Our Lord promised that he would dwell (a) in darkness:

(a) God shewed his presence by the dark cloud which replenished the Temple.

2 and I have built a house to his name, that he might dwell there for ever. 3 And the king turned his face, and blessed all the multitude of Israel (for all the multitude stood attent) and said: 4 Blessed be our Lord the God of Israel, who in work hath accomplished that, which he spake to David my father, saying: 5 From the day, that I brought my people out of the Land of Aegypt, I chose not a city of all the tribes of Israel, that a house might be built in it to my name: neither did I choose any other man, to be Duke in my people Israel. 6 but I chose Jerusalem, that my name may be in it: and I chose David, that I might appoint him over my people Israel. 7 And whereas David my father had meant to build a house to the name of our Lord the God of Israel, 8 our Lord said to him: Because thy will was this, that thou wouldest build a house to my name, thou hast done well certes to have such a will: 9 howbeit thou shalt not build the house, but thy son, which shall come out of thy loins, he shall build a house to my name. 10 Our Lord therefore hath accomplished his word, which he spake: and I am risen for David my father, and sit upon the throne of Israel, as our Lord hath spoken: and have built a house to the name of our Lord the God of Israel. 11 And I have put in it the Ark, wherein is the covenant of our Lord, which he made with the children of Israel: 12 He therefore stood before the Altar of our Lord, over against all the multitude of Israel, and stretched forth his hands. 13 For Salomon had made an eminent place of brass, and had put it in the midst of the [1] temple, having five cubits of length, and breadth, & three of height: & he stood upon it: and afterward (b) kneeling over against all the multitude of Israel, and (c) his hands lifted up toward heaven,

[1] * Basilicae. (b) Kneeling, (c) Lifting up hands, stretching forth arms, and the like external gestures do much help internal attention in prayer, & also stir up others to godly imitation: and therefore hath been much practised by devout persons both in the old and new Testament.

14 he said: Lord God of Israel, there is not the like God to thee in heaven and in earth: which keepest covenant and mercy with thy servants, that walk before thee in all their heart: 15 which hast performed to thy servant David my father what things soever thou hadst spoken to him: and the things that by mouth thou hadst promised, in work thou hast accomplished, as also the present time proveth. 16 Now therefore Lord God of Israel, fulfill to thy servant my father David, what soever thou didst speak to him, saying: There shall not fail of thee a man before me, to sit upon the throne of Israel: yet so if thy children keep their ways, and walk in my law, as thou also hast walked before me. 17 And now Lord God of Israel, be thy word confirmed, which thou hast spoken to thy servant David. 18 Is it credible then that God should dwell with men upon the earth? If heaven & the heavens of heavens do not take thee, how much more this house, which I have built? 19 But to this end only it is made, that thou shouldest respect the prayer of thy servant, & his supplication Lord my God: and mayst hear the prayers, which thy servant poureth out before thee: 20 that thou open thine eyes upon this house days and nights, upon the place, wherein thou hast promised that thy name should be invocated, 21 and wouldest hear the prayer, which thy servant prayeth in it: and mayst hear the prayers of thy servant, and of thy people Israel. Whosoever shall pray in this place, hear out of thy habitation, that is^ from the heavens, & be propitious. 22 If any man shall sin against his neighbour, and come ready to swear against him, and bind himself with a curse before the altar in this house: 23 thou shalt hear from heaven, and shalt do the judgment of thy servants, so that thou render to the unjust his way upon his own head, and revenge the just, rewarding him according to his justice. 24 If thy people Israel shall be overcome of their enemies, (for they will sin to thee) & converted shall do penance, and beseech thy name, and pray in this place, 25 thou shalt hear from heaven, and be thou propitious to the sin of thy people Israel, and reduce them into the land, which thou gavest them, and their fathers. 26 If the heaven being shut, there fall no rain for the sins of the people, and they shall beseech thee in this place, and shall confess to thy name, & shall be converted from their sins, when thou shalt afflict them, 27 hear from heaven o Lord, and forgive the sins of thy servants and of thy people Israel, and teach them the good way, by the which they may go: and give rain to thy land, which thou hast given thy people to possess. 28 If famine shall arise in the land, and pestilence, rust, and blast, and locust, & bruch, and the enemies, wasting the countries, shall besiege the gates of the city, and all plague and infirmity shall press them: 29 if any of thy people Israel shall pray, knowing their plague and infirmity, and shall spread forth their hands in (d) this house,

(d) In this chapter & often elsewhere it is evident, that places dedicated to God's service are more acceptable to him, than other places.

30 thou shalt hear from heaven, to wit, out of thy high habitation, & be thou propitious, & render to every one according to his ways, which thou knowest him to have in his heart: (for thou only knowest the hearts of the children of men:) 31 that they may fear thee, & walk in thy ways all the days, that they live upon the face of the land, which thou hast given to our fathers. 32 The Foreigner also, which is not of thy people Israel, if he come from a far country, for thy strong hand, & thy stretched out arm, and adore in this place: 33 thou shalt hear from heaven thy most firm habitation, and shalt do all things, for the which that pilgrim shall invocate thee: that all the peoples of the earth may know thy name, and may fear thee, as thy people Israel, and may know, that thy name is invocated upon this house, which I have built. 34 If thy people shall go forth to war against their adversaries, by the way that thou shalt send them, shall adore thee against the way wherein is this city, which thou hast chosen, & the house, which I have built to thy name: 35 thou shalt from heaven hear their prayers, and petition, and do thou revenge. 36 And if they shall sin to thee (for there is no man that sinneth not) & thou be angry with them, and deliver them to the enemies, and they lead them captive into a far country, or which is near at the least, 37 and being converted in their heart in the land, to the which they were led captive, shall do penance, and shall beseech thee in the land of their captivity, saying: We have sinned, we have done wickedly, we have dealt unjustly: 38 and shall return to thee in all their heart, and in all their soul, in the land of their captivity, to the which they were led, shall adore thee against the way of their land, which thou gavest their fathers, & of the city, which thou hast chosen, & of the house, which I have built to thy name: 39 thou shall hear from heaven, that is, from thy firm habitation their prayers, and do thou judgment, and forgive thy people, although sinful: 40 for thou art my God: let thine eyes, I beseech thee, be opened, and let thine ears be attent to the prayer, that is made in this place. 41 Now therefore arise Lord God in thy rest, thou and the Ark of thy strength: Let thy Priests Lord God put on salvation, and thy Saints rejoice in good things. 42 Lord God turn not away from the face of thy Christ: remember the mercies of David thy servant.

CHAPTER VII.

Fire from heaven devoureth the holocausts, and glory replenisheth the Temple. 5. More sacrifices are offered, 8. and the Temple is dedicated, with seven days solemnity, the eighth day collection is made. 12. God signifieth that he hath heard Salomon's prayer, 17. conditionally (as it was made) if they serve him, 19. otherwise he will punish them.

And when Salomon had finished to pour out his prayers, fire descended from heaven, and devoured the holocausts & victims: and the majesty of our Lord filled the house. 2 Neither could the Priests enter into the Temple of our Lord, because the majesty of our Lord had filled the temple of our Lord. 3 Yea and all the children of Israel saw the fire descending, and the glory of our Lord upon the house: and falling flat on the earth upon the pavement paved with stone, they adored, and praised our Lord: Because he is good, because his mercy is for ever. 4 And the king and all the people immolated victims before our Lord. 5 King Salomon therefore killed hosts, of oxen twenty two thousand, of rams an hundred twenty thousand: and the king and all the people dedicated the house of God. 6 And the Priests stood in their offices: and the Levites with the instruments of the songs of our Lord, which David the king made to praise our Lord: Because his mercy is for ever, singing (a) the hymns of David by their hands: moreover the Priests sounded with trumpets before them, and all Israel stood.

(a) As the Temple was the special place of prayer, chosen by God, v. 12. so special Hymns, Psalms and other set forms of blessing are more grateful to God, and more effectual to his servants.

7 Salomon also sanctified the midst of the court before the temple of our Lord: for he had offered there the holocausts, & the fat of the pacifics: because the brazen altar, which he had made, could not sustain the holocausts and the sacrifices and the fat. 8 Salomon therefore made a solemnity at that time seven days, and all Israel with him, an assembly very great, from the entrance of Emath to the Torrent of Aegypt. 9 And he made in the eighth day an assembly, because he had dedicated the altar seven days, and had celebrated the solemnity seven days. 10 Therefore in the three and twentieth day of the seventh month, he dismist the people to their tabernacles, rejoicing and being glad for the good, that our Lord had done to David, and Salomon, and Israel his people. 11 And Salomon accomplished the house of our Lord, and the house of the king, and all that he had disposed in his heart to do, in the house of our Lord, and in his own house, and he prospered. 12 And our Lord appeared to him by night, and said: I have heard thy prayer, and have chosen this place to me for a house of sacrifice. 13 If I shall shut heaven, and rain fall not, and shall bid and command the locust to devour the land, and shall send pestilence into my people: 14 and my people being converted upon whom my name is invocated, shall beseech me, and seek out my face, and shall do penance from their most wicked ways: I also will hear from heaven, and will be propitious to their sins, and will save their land. 15 Mine eyes also shall be opened, and mine ears erected to his prayer, that shall pray in this place. 16 For I have chosen, and have sanctified this place, that my name may be there for ever, and mine eyes and my heart may remain there all days. 17 Thou also if thou walk before me, as David thy father walked, & shalt do according to all things, which I have commanded thee, and shalt keep my justices and judgments: 18 I will raise up the throne of thy Kingdom, as I promised to David thy father, saying: There shall not be taken away of thy stock a man, that shall be Prince in Israel. 19 But if you shall be turned away, and shall forsake my justices, and my precepts, which I have proposed to you, and going shall serve strange gods, and adore them, 20 I will pluck you out of my land, which I have given you: and this house, which I have sanctified to my name, I will cast away from my face, and will deliver it for a parable, and an example to all peoples. 21 And this house shall be for a proverb to all passengers, and they shall say being astonished: Why hath the Lord done so to this land, and to this house? 22 And they shall answer: Because they forsook the Lord the God of their fathers, who brought them out of the Land of Aegypt, and took hold of strange gods, and adored them, and worshipped them: therefore are all these evils come upon them.

CHAPTER VIII.

Salomon buildeth diverse cities, 7. maketh the residue of the Chananites tributary, 12. offereth the ordinary hosts of sacrifices in the solemn feasts. 14. Disposeth the Priests and Levites in their offices, as David had ordained: 17. and sendeth ships to fetch gold from Ophir.

And twenty years being complete after that Salomon built the house of our Lord, and his own house: 2 he built the cities, which Hiram had given to Salomon, and made the children of Israel dwell there. 3 He went also into Emath Suba, and obtained it. 4 And he built Palmira in the desert, and he built other cities very well fenced in Emath. 5 And he built Beth horon the upper, and Beth horon the nether, walled cities having gates and barrigates and locks. 6 Balaath also and all the strongest cities that were Salomon's, and all the cities of the chariots, and the cities of the horsemen. All things whatsoever Salomon would, and disposed, he built in Jerusalem, and in Libanus, and in all the land of his dominion. 7 All the people that was left of the Hetheites, & Amorrheites, & Pherezites, and Heveites, & Jebuseites, which were not of the stock of Israel, 8 of their children, & of the posterity, which the children of Israel had not slain, Salomon subdued to be tributaries, until this day. 9 Moreover of the children of Israel he set not to serve the king's works: for they were men of war, and the chief Captains, and Princes of his chariots, and horsemen. 10 And all the Princes of king Salomon's army were two hundred fifty, which taught the people. 11 But the daughter of Pharao he removed from the city of David, into the house which he had built for her. For the king said: My wife shall not dwell in the house of David the king of Israel (a) because it is sanctified: because the Ark of our Lord is entered into it.

(a) Salomon was yet so far from communicating with Infidels, that he suffered not his wife an infidel to be present where the Ark of God had been placed. 1. Par. 15.

12 Then Salomon offered holocausts to our Lord upon the altar of our Lord, which he had built before the porch, 13 that every day there might be offering on it, according to the precept of Moyses in the Sabbaths, and in the Calends, and in the festival days thrice a year, that is to say, in the Solemnity of Azymes, and in the Solemnity of weeks, and in the Solemnity of tabernacles. 14 And he appointed according to the disposition of David his father the offices of the Priests in their ministries: and the Levites, in their order, that they should praise, and minister before the Priests according to the rite of every day: and the porters in their divisions by gate and gate: for so David the man of God had commanded. 15 Neither did they transgress of the king's commandments as well the Priests as the Levites, touching all things, that he had commanded, and in the custodies of the treasures. 16 Salomon had all expenses prepared, from the day that he founded the house of our Lord, until the day wherein he perfited it. 17 Then went Salomon into Asiongaber, and into Ailath to the coast of the Red sea, which is in the Land of Edom. 18 And Hiram sent unto him by the hands of his servants, ships, and cunning mariners, and they went with Salomon's servants into Ophir, and they took from thence four hundred fifty talents of gold, and brought it to king Salomon.

CHAPTER IX.

The queen of Saba admireth Salomon's wisdom, 9. giveth and receiveth presents. 13. Of the great store of treasure which is yearly brought in, 13. King Salomon maketh precious armour, 17. a throne, 20. and plate. 24. Other kings send him gifts, so he aboundeth in glory, and riches. 29. After forty years reign he dieth, and his son Roboam succeedeth.

The [1] queen of Saba also, when she had heard the fame of Salomon, came to prove him in hard propositions in Jerusalem, with great riches, and camels, which carried spices, and very much gold, and precious stones. And when she was come to Salomon, she spake to him what things soever were in her heart.

2 And Salomon expounded to her all things that she propounded: neither was there any thing, that he made not plain unto her. 3 Who after she saw, to wit, the wisdom of Salomon, and the house which he had built, 4 moreover also the meats of his table, and the habitations of his servants, and the offices of his ministers, and their garments, the cup-bearers also, and their garments, and the victims, which he immolated in the house of our Lord: there was no spirit in her any longer, she was so astonished. 5 And she said to the king: The word is true, which I heard in my country of thy virtues and wisdom. 6 I did not believe them that told it, until myself was come, and mine eyes had seen, and I had proved scarce the half part of thy wisdom to have been told me: thou hast passed the fame with thy virtues. 7 Blessed are thy men, and blessed are thy servants, which assist before thee at all time, and hear thy wisdom. 8 Be the Lord thy God blessed, who would ordain thee over his throne, king (a) of the Lord thy God. Because God loveth Israel, & will preserve it for ever: therefore hath he set thee king over it, to do judgments and justice.

(a) They are called kings of God, which reign by his grace & according to his will. Whereupon they use this style. By the grace of God, K. of England, Jerusalem. &c.

9 And she gave to the king an hundred twenty talents of gold, and spices exceeding much, and most precious stones: there were not such spices, as these, which the queen of Saba gave to king Salomon. 10 But the servants of Hiram also with the servants of Salomon brought gold from Ophir, & Thym-trees, & most precious stones: 11 whereof the king made, to wit, of the Thym-trees, stairs in the house of our Lord, and in the king's house, harps also and psalteries for the singing men: never were there seen such trees in the Land of Juda. 12 And king Salomon gave to the queen of Saba all things that she would, and that she asked, and many more things than she brought to him: who returning, went into her country with her servants. 13 And the weight of the gold, that was brought to Salomon every year was six hundred sixty six talents of gold: 14 beside that sum, which the legates of diverse nations, and the merchants were accustomed to bring, and all the kings of Arabia, and the Dukes of the lands, which brought gold and silver to Salomon. 15 King Salomon therefore made two hundred golden spears, of the sum of six hundred pieces of gold, which were spent in every spear: 16 also three hundred golden shields of three hundred pieces of gold, with which every shield was covered: and the king put them in the armoury, which was beset with a wood. 17 The king also made a great throne of ivory, and covered it with most fine gold. 18 six steps also, wherewith the going up was to the throne, and a foot-stool of gold, and two little arms on either side, and two lions standing by the little arms, 19 yea and other twelve little lions standing upon the steps on both sides: there was not such a throne in all kingdoms. 20 All the vessels also of the king's table were of gold, and the vessels of the house of the forest of Libanus of most pure gold. For silver in those days was reputed for nothing. 21 For the king's ships went into Tharsis with the servants of Hiram, once in three years: and they brought from thence gold and silver, and ivory, and apes, and peacocks. 22 Salomon therefore was magnified above all the kings of the earth for riches and glory. 23 And all the kings of the earth desired to see Salomon's face, that they might hear the wisdom, which God had given in his heart. 24 And they brought him gifts, vessels of silver, and gold, and garments, and armour, and spices, horses, and mules, every year. 25 Salomon also had forty thousand horses in the stables, and of chariots, and horsemen twelve thousand, and he placed them in the cities of the chariots, and where the king was in Jerusalem. 26 He exercised also authority over all the kings from the river Euphrates unto the land of the Philisthians, and unto the borders of Aegypt. 27 And he made so great plenty of silver in Jerusalem as it were of stones: and of cedars so great a multitude as of sycamores, which grow in the champion. 28 And horses were brought him out of Aegypt, & all countries. 29 But the rest of the works of Salomon the first and the last are written in the words of Nathan the Prophet, and in the Books of Ahias the Silonite, in the Vision also of Addo the Seer, against Jeroboam the son of Nabat. 30 And Salomon reigned in Jerusalem over all Israel forty years. 31 And he (b) slept with his fathers: and they buried him in the city of David: and Roboam his son reigned for him.

CHAPTER X.

Roboam requested by Jeroboam and the people to lighten their yoke of service, 6. leaving the counsel of the ancient, and following young counsellers, threateneth to press the people: 16. whereupon many revolt from him.

And[1][2] Roboam went forth into Sichem: for thither all Israel was assembled, to make him king.

2 Which when Jeroboam the son of Nabat heard, who was in Aegypt (for he was fled thither from Salomon) forthwith he returned. 3 And they called him, and he came with all Israel & spake to Roboam, saying: 4 Thy father pressed us with a most hard yoke, do thou command lighter things than thy father, who laid upon us a heavy servitude, and ease thou a little of the burden, that we may serve thee. 5 Who said: After three days return ye to me. And when the people was gone, 6 he took counsel with the Ancients, which stood before his father Salomon, whiles he yet lived, saying: What counsel give you, that I may answer the people? 7 Who said to him: If thou wilt please this people, and pacify them with words of clemency, they will serve thee at all times. 8 But he forsook the counsel of the Ancients, and began to treat with young men, that had been brought up with him, and were in his train. 9 And he said to them: What seemeth to you? Or what shall I answer this people, which hath said to me: Ease the yoke which my father laid upon us? 10 But they answered as youngmen, & brought up with him in delicateness, and said: Thus shalt thou speak to the people, that said to thee: Thy father aggravated our yoke, do thou ease it: and thus shalt thou answer them: My least finger is thicker than the loins of my father. 11 My father laid upon you an heavy yoke, and I will add a greater weight: my father beat you with scourges, but I will beat you with scorpions. 12 Jeroboam therefore came, and all the people to Roboam the third day, as he had commanded them. 13 And the king answered rough words, leaving the counsel of the Ancients: 14 And he spake according to the youngmen's will: My father laid upon you a heavy yoke, which I will make heavier: my father beat you with scourges, but I will beat you with scorpions. 15 And he condescended not to the people's requests: for it was the will of God, that his word should be accomplished, which he had spoken by the hand of Ahias the Silonite to Jeroboam the son of Nabat. 16 And all the people when the king spake rough words, said thus unto him: We have no part in David, nor inheritance in the son of Isai. Return into thy tabernacles o Israel, and do thou feed thy house David. And Israel went into their tabernacles. 17 But over the children of Israel, that dwelt in the cities of Juda Roboam reigned. 18 And king Roboam sent Aduram, who was over the tributes, and the children of Israel stoned him, and he died: moreover king Roboam made haste to get up into his chariot, and fled into Jerusalem. 19 And Israel revolted from the house of David until this day.

CHAPTER XI.

Roboam intending by force to reduce all Israel to his subjection, is warned by a Prophet to cease from that enterprise. 5. He maketh walls about diverse cities, 11. furnished them with victuals, and munition. 13. Priests, Levites, and many others repair to Jerusalem, because Jeroboam maketh a new religion, and new Priests. 18. Roboam taketh many wives, and concubines. 22. preferreth Abias above all his other sons.

And Roboam came into Jerusalem, and called together all the house of Juda and Benjamin, an hundred fourscore thousand chosen men and warriors, to fight against Israel, and to convert his Kingdom unto him. 2 And the word of our Lord came to Semeias the man of God, saying: 3 Speak to Roboam the son of Salomon the king of Juda, and to all Israel, that is in Juda and Benjamin: 4 Thus saith our Lord: You shall not go up, neither shall you fight against your brethren: let every man return into his house, because this thing is done by my will. Who when they had heard the word of our Lord, returned, neither went they forward against Jeroboam. 5 And Roboam dwelt in Jerusalem, and built walled cities in Juda. 6 And he built Bethlehem, and Etam, and Thecue, 7 Bethsur also, and Socho, and Odollam, 8 moreover also Geth, and Maresa, and Ziph, 9 yea and Aduram, and Lachis, and Azeca, 10 Saraa also, and Aialon, and Hebron, which were in Juda and Benjamin, most fenced cities. 11 And when he had inclosed them with walls, he put in them Princes, and store houses of victuals, that is, of oil and wine. 12 Yea and in every city he made armories of shields and spears, and he strengthened them with great diligence, and reigned over Juda and Benjamin. 13 And the Priests and Levites, that were in all Israel, came to him out of all their seats, 14 (a) leaving their suburbs, and their possessions, and passing to Juda, and Jerusalem, because Jeroboam had cast them off, and their posterity: that they should not execute the priesthood of our Lord.

(a) A worthy example to suffer temporal damage rather than to conform themselves to the practice of false religion.

15 Who made unto himself Priests of the excelses, and of devils, and of the calves which he had made. 16 Yea and of all the tribes of Israel, whosoever had given their heart to seek our Lord the God of Israel, came into Jerusalem to immolate their victims before our Lord the God of their fathers. 17 And they strengthened the Kingdom of Juda, and established Roboam the son of Salomon for three years: for they walked in the ways of David and Salomon, only three years. 18 And Roboam took to wife Mahalath, the daughter of Jerimoth the son of David: Abihail also the daughter of Eliab the son of Isai, 19 who bare him sons, Jehus, & Somorias, and Zoom. 20 After this woman also he took Maacha the daughter of Absalom, who bare him Abia, and Ethai, and Ziza, & Salomith. 21 And Roboam loved Maacha the daughter of Absalom above all his wives and concubines: for he had married eighteen wives, and threescore concubines: and he begat eight and twenty sons, and threescore daughters. 22 But he appointed for head Abias the son of Maacha duke over all his brethren: for he meant to make him king, 23 because he was wiser, and mightier above all his sons, and in all the coasts of Juda, and of Benjamin, and in all the walled cities: and he gave them much meat, and he desired many wives.

CHAPTER XII.

For the sins of Roboam and the people, many strong cities, also Jerusalem, are taken and spoiled by the king of Aegypt. 8. They repent, and the Aegyptians depart, 9 but carry away the treasures. 13. Roboam dieth, and his son Abias reigneth.

And when the kingdom of Roboam was strengthened and fortified, he forsook the law of our Lord, and all Israel with him. 2 And in the fifth year of the kingdom of Roboam came up Sesac the king of Aegypt into Jerusalem

(because they had sinned to our Lord) 3 with a thousand two hundred chariots, and threescore thousand horsemen: neither was any number of the common people, that came with him out of Aegypt, to wit, Libyans, and Troglodytes, and Aethiopians. 4 And he took the most fenced cities in Juda, and came over unto Jerusalem. 5 And Semeias the Prophet went to Roboam, and to the Princes of Juda, that were gathered together in Jerusalem, flying from Sesac, and he said to them: Thus saith our Lord: You have left me, and I have left you in the hand of Sesac. 6 And the Princes of Israel, and the king, being astonished, said: Our Lord is just. 7 And when our Lord had seen that they were humbled, the word of our Lord came to Semeias, saying: Because they are humbled, I will not destroy them, and I will give them a little aid, & my fury shall not drop upon Jerusalem by the hand of Sesac. 8 But yet they shall serve him, that they may know the distance of my service, and of the service of the Kingdom of the earth. 9 Therefore Sesac the king of Aegypt retired from Jerusalem, taking away the treasures of the house of our Lord, and of the king's house, & he took all things with him, and the golden shields that Salomon had made, 10 for the which the king made brazen ones, and delivered them to the Princes of the shield-bearers, which kept the entrance of the palace. 11 And when the king entered into the house of our Lord, the shield-bearers came, and took them, and brought them back again to their armoury. 12 But yet because they were humbled, the wrath of our Lord was turned away from them, neither were they utterly destroyed: for in Juda there were found good works. 13 King Roboam therefore was strengthened in Jerusalem, and reigned: one & forty years old was he when he began to reign, and he reigned seventeen years in Jerusalem, the city which our Lord chose, to confirm his name there, out of all the tribes of Israel: and the name of his mother was Naama an Ammonite. 14 And he did evil, and prepared not his heart to seek our Lord. 15 But the works of Roboam the first and the last are written in the Books of Semeias the Prophet, and of Addo the Seer, and diligently expounded: and Roboam and Jeroboam fought one against the other all their days. 16 And Roboam slept with his fathers, and was buried in the city of David. And Abias his son reigned for him.

CHAPTER XIII.

Abias maketh war against Jeroboam, 4. exhorteth the people of Israel for justice and religions sake to return to him. 13. In the mean time Jeroboam environeth him with forces, but by God's assistance Abias prevaileth, 21. and reigneth securely.

In the eighteenth year of king Jeroboam, reigned Abias over Juda.[1]

2 Three years reigned he in Jerusalem, and his mother's name was Michaia, the daughter of Uriel of Gabaa: there was war between Abias & Jeroboam. 3 And when Abias had begun battle, and had most warlike men, and of chosen ones four hundreth thousand: Jeroboam put his army in array on the contrary side, eight hundreth thousand men, who themselves also were chosen men, & most valiant to battles. 4 Abias therefore stood upon mount Semeron, which was in Ephraim, and said: Hear Jeroboam, & all Israel: 5 Are you ignorant that our Lord the God of Israel gave the kingdom to David over Israel for ever, to him & his children as a (a) covenant of salt?

(a) A firm & perpetual covenant. Num. 8. v. 19.

6 And there rose up Jeroboam the son of Nabat, the servant of Salomon the son of David: and rebelled against his Lord. 7 And there were gathered to him all the most vain men, and the children of Belial: and they prevailed against Roboam the son of Salomon: moreover Roboam was rude, and of a fearful heart, and could not resist them. 8 Now therefore you say that you are able to resist the Kingdom of our Lord, which he possesseth by the children of David, and you have a great multitude of people, and golden calves, which Jeroboam hath made you for gods. 9 And you have cast out the Priests of our Lord, the children of Aaron, & the Levites: and you have made you Priests, as all the peoples of the earth: who soever shall come and consecrate his hand in a bullock of oxen, and in seven rams, is made the Priest of them that are not gods. 10 But our Lord is God, whom we forsake not, and the Priests do minister to our Lord of the children of Aaron, and the Levites are in their order. 11 Holocausts also they do offer to our Lord, every day morning and evening, and incense made according to the precepts of the law, and the loaves are set forth on a most clean table, and there is with us the golden candlestick, and the lamps thereof, that they may be lighted always at evening: for we keep the precepts of the Lord our God, whom you have forsaken. 12 Therefore in our host^ God is the Prince, & his Priests, which sound with trumpets, and resound against you: children of Israel fight not against our Lord the God of your fathers, because it is not expedient for you. 13 He speaking these things, Jeroboam endeavoured to entrap him behind. And when he stood over against the enemies, he compassed Juda unwitting with his army. 14 And Judas looking back, saw the battle at hand before and behind, and cried to our Lord: and the Priests began to sound with trumpets. 15 And all the men of Juda made a shout: and behold they crying, God terrified Jeroboam, and all Israel that stood against Abias and Juda. 16 And the children of Israel fled from Juda, and our Lord delivered them into their hand. 17 Abias therefore and his people struck them with a great slaughter, and there fell wounded of Israel five hundreth thousand valiant men. 18 And the children of Israel were humbled at that time, and the children of Juda exceedingly encouraged, because they had trusted in our Lord the God of their fathers. 19 And Abias pursued Jeroboam flying, and he took his cities, Bethel and her daughters, & Jesana with her daughters, Ephron also and her daughters. 20 Neither was Jeroboam able to resist any more, in the days of Abias: whom our Lord struck, and he died. 21 Therefore Abias, his empire being strengthened, took fourteen wives: and he begat two and twenty sons, & sixteen daughters. 22 But the rest of the words of Abias, and of his ways and words, are written diligently in the Book of Addo the Prophet.

CHAPTER XIV.

Abias dieth, and his son Asa reigneth, destroyeth idolatry, 6. fortifieth his cities, 9. and overcometh, by God's special help, the Aethiopians' army of a million of men.

And Abias slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the City of David: & Asa his son reigned for him, in whose days the land was quiet ten years. 2 And Asa did that which was good and pleasing in the sight of his God, & he overthrew the altars of (a) strange service, and the excelses, 3 and brake the statues, and cut down the groves. 4 And he commanded Juda that they should seek our Lord the God of their fathers, and should do the law, and all the commandments. 5 And he took away out of all the cities of Juda the altars, & temples, and reigned in peace. 6 He built also fenced cities in Juda, because he was quiet, and there had no battles risen in his time, our Lord giving peace. 7 And he said to Juda: let us build these cities, and compass them with walls, and strengthen them with towers, and gates, & locks, whilst things are quiet from battles, because we have sought our Lord the God of our fathers, and he hath given us peace round about. They therefore did build, and there was no impediment in building. 8 And Asa had in his army of them that carried shields and spears, of Juda three hundred thousand: and of Benjamin shield-bearers and archers, two hundred eighty thousand, all these were most valiant men. 9 And Zara the Aethiopian with his army issued forth against them, ten hundred thousand, and with three hundred chariots: and he came as far as Maresa. 10 Moreover Asa went on to meet him, and set his army in array to battle in the vale Sephata, which is near Maresa. 11 And he invocated our Lord God, and said: Lord there is no difference with thee, whether thou help in few, or in many: help us o Lord our God: for having confidence in thee, & in thy name we are come against this multitude. Lord, thou art our God, let not man prevail against thee. 12 Our Lord therefore terrified the Aethiopians before Asa and Juda: & the Aethiopians fled. 13 And Asa pursued them, & the people that was with him, unto Gerara: & the Aethiopians fell to utter destruction because our Lord killing them, and his army fighting, they were destroyed. They took therefore many spoils, 14 and they struck all the cities round about Gerara: for great terror had invaded all men: and they spoiled the cities, and carried away much prey. 15 Yea and destroying the sheepcotes of sheep, they took an infinite multitude of cattle, and of camels: and returned into Jerusalem.

CHAPTER XV.

Azarias prophesieth that Israel shall lack the true God, Priests, and the law, a long time. 8. Which king Asa hearing most seriously destroyeth idolatry, 12. maketh covenant and oath to serve God. 16. And deposeth his mother for offering sacrifice to Priapus.

And Azarias the son of Oded, the Spirit of God coming upon him, 2 went out to meet Asa, and said to him: Hear ye me Asa, and all Juda and Benjamin: Our Lord is with you, (a) because you have been with him. If you will seek him, you shall find: but if you forsake him, he will forsake you.

(a) Cooperation with God's grace meriteth increase of grace.

3 And many days shall pass in Israel without the true God, and without Priest a teacher, and without the Law. 4 And when they shall return in their distress to our Lord the God of Israel, and shall seek him, they shall find him. 5 At that time there shall not be peace to him that goeth out and cometh in, but terrors on every side in the inhabiters of the earth. 6 For nation shall fight against nation, and city against city, because our Lord will trouble them with all distress. 7 You therefore take courage, and let not your hands be dissolved: for there shall be reward to your work. 8 Which when Asa had heard, to wit, the words, and the prophecy of Azarias the son of Oded the Prophet, he took courage, and took away the idols out of all the land of Juda, and out of Benjamin, and out of the cities, which he had taken, of mount Ephraim, and he dedicated the altar of our Lord, which was before the porch of our Lord. 9 And he gathered together all Juda and Benjamin, & the strangers with them of Ephraim, and of Manasses, and of Simeon: for many were fled to him of Israel, seeing that our Lord his God was with him. 10 And when they were come into Jerusalem the third month, in the fifteenth year of the reign of Asa, 11 they immolated to our Lord in that day of the spoils and the prey that they had brought, oxen seven hundred, and rams seven thousand. 12 And he went in after the manner to establish the covenant, that they should seek our Lord the God of their fathers in all their heart, and in all their soul. 13 And if any man, quoth he, shall not seek our Lord the God of Israel, let him die, from the least to the greatest, from man unto woman. 14 And they sware to our Lord with a loud voice in jubilation, and in noise of trumpet, and sound of shalms, 15 all that were in Juda, with execration: for in all their heart did they swear, & with all their will did they seek him, & found him, & our Lord gave them rest round about. 16 Yea & Maacha the mother of king Asa he deposed from the royal empire, because she had made in a grove the idol of Priapus: which he wholly destroyed, and breaking into pieces, burnt it in the Torrent cedron. 17 But the (b) Excelses were left in Israel: nevertheless the heart of Asa was perfect all his days.

(b) King Asa destroyed the places where Idols were served, c. 14. v. 2. but tolerated the places where some offered sacrifice to God beside the proper altar in Jerusalem, because this was dispensable and not the other.

18 And those things which his father had vowed, and himself, he brought into the house of our Lord, gold and silver, and of vessels diverse furniture. 19 And there was no war unto the five and thirtieth year of the reign of Asa.

CHAPTER XVI.

Against the king of Israel, king Asa procureth help of the Assyrians, 7. which a Prophet reproving is put in fetters. 11. Asa dieth, with disease of his feet, and is buried with pump.

And[1] in the six and thirtieth year of his reign, came up Baasa the king of Israel into Juda, and with a wall compassed Rama, that none could safely go out and come in of the Kingdom of Asa.

2 Asa therefore brought forth silver and gold, out of the treasures house of our Lord, and of the king's treasures, and he sent to Benadad the king of Syria, who dwelt in Damascus, saying: 3 There is league between me and thee, my father also & thy father had concord, wherefore I have sent thee silver and gold that breaking the league, which thou hast with Baasa the king of Israel, thou make him retire from me. 4 Which being known, Benadad sent the Princes of his hosts to the cities of Israel: who struck Ahion, and Dan, and Ablemaim, and all the walled cities of Nephthali. 5 Which when Baasa had heard, he ceased to build Rama, & intermitted his work. 6 Moreover Asa the king took all Juda, and carried away the stones out of Rama, and the timber that Baasa had prepared for the building: & he built of them Gabaa, & Maspha. 7 At that time came Hanani the Prophet to Asa the king of Juda, & said to him: Because thou hast had confidence in the king of Syria, and not in our Lord thy God, therefore hath the army of the king of Syria escaped out of thy hand. 8 Were not the Aethiopians, and Libyans, many more in chariots and horsemen, and a multitude exceeding great: whom, when thou didst believe in our Lord, he delivered into thy hand? 9 For the eyes of our Lord behold all the earth, and give strength to them, that with perfect heart believe in him. Thou therefore hast done foolishly, and for this cause from this present time shall battles arise against thee. 10 And Asa being angry against the Seer, commanded him to be cast into fetters: for he took indignation exceedingly upon this thing: & he slew of the people at that time very many. 11 But the works of Asa the first & the last are written in the Book of the kings of Juda and Israel. 12 Asa also fell sick in the nine and thirtieth year of his reign, of a most vehement pain of his (a) feet, and neither in his infirmity did he seek our Lord, but rather trusted in the art of Physicians.

(a) Just punishment with pain of his feet, for injuriously putting God's Prophet in fetters v. 10.
So God punished him temporally, for that and other passionate sins: & he died in good state, for his heart was perfect all his days (c. 15. v. 17.) that is, most part of his life, especially in his last days.

13 And he slept with his fathers: and he died the one and fortieth year of his reign. 14 And they buried him in his sepulchre, which he had digged for himself in the City of David: and they laid him upon his bed full of spices and odoriferous ointments, which were made by the art of apothecaries, and they burnt over him with exceeding ambition.

CHAPTER XVII.

Josaphat succeeding in the Kingdom prevaileth in battle against the King of Israel, 6. destroyeth Idolaters, and sendeth Priests and Levites to instruct the people 11. The Philistians and Arabians send presents to king Josaphat. 13. The leaders of the army and soldiers are numbered.

And Josaphat his son reigned for him, and grew strong against Israel. 2 And he appointed numbers of soldiers in all the cities of Juda, that were compassed with walls. And he placed garrisons in the land of Juda, & in the cities of Ephraim, which Asa his father had taken. 3 And our Lord was with Josaphat, because he walked in the first ways of David his father: and he trusted not in Baalim, 4 but in the God of his father, & went forward in his precepts, and not according to the sins of Israel. 5 And our Lord confirmed the Kingdom in his hand, and all Juda gave gifts to Josaphat: and there grew to him infinite riches, and much glory. 6 And when his heart had taken courage (a) for the ways of our Lord, he took away also the Excelses and groves out of Juda.

(a) Good works approved by new benefits from God, as a reward thereof, do give more hope & confidence to proceed from virtue to virtue. S. Tho. l. de regimine Regum.

7 And in the third year of his Kingdom, he sent of his Princes Benhail, and Abdias, and Zacharias, and Nathanael, and Micheas, that they should teach in the cities of Juda: 8 and with them Levites, Semeias, & Nathanias, and Zabadias, Asael also, and Semiramoth, and Jonathan, and Adonias, and Tobias, and Thobadonias Levites, and with them Elisama, and Joram Priests. 9 And they taught the people in Juda, having the book of the law of our Lord: and they went about all the cities of Juda, and instructed the people. 10 Therefore the dread of our Lord came upon all the Kingdoms of the lands, that were round about Juda, neither durst they make battle against Josaphat. 11 Yea and the Philistians brought gifts to Josaphat, and tribute of silver, the Arabians also brought cattle, of rams seven thousand seven hundred, and buck goats as many. 12 Josaphat therefore grew, & was magnified on high: and he built in Juda houses like to towers, and walled cities. 13 And he prepared many works in the cities of Juda: there were also men of war, and valiant in Jerusalem, 14 of whom this is the number by the houses and families of every one: In Juda Princes of the army, Ednas duke, and with him most valiant men three hundred thousand. 15 After him Johanan the Prince, and with him two hundred eighty thousand. 16 After him also Amasias the son of Zechri, consecrated to our Lord, and with him two hundred thousand of valiant men. 17 Him followed Eliada valiant to battles, and with him of them that held bow and shield two hundred thousand. 18 After this man also Jozabad, and with him an hundred eighty thousand ready soldiers. 19 All these were at the hand of the king, beside others, whom he had put in walled cities, in all Juda.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Josaphat joined in affinity with wicked Achab king of Israel, goeth with him against Ramoth Galaad, four hundred false Prophets promising victory. 14. Micheas prophesying the contrary, 28. is put in prison. 28. Achab (notwithstanding he changeth his attire, and leaveth Josaphat in danger) 33. is slain.

Josaphat therefore was rich and very glorious, & was joined in affinity to Achab. 2 And he went down to him after certain years into Samaria: at whose coming Achab killed muttons and oxen very many for him and the people that came with him: & he persuaded him to go up into Ramoth Galaad. 3 And Achab the king of Israel said to Josaphat the king of Juda: Come with me into Ramoth Galaad. To whom he answered: As I am^ thou also: as thy people, so my people also: and (a) we will be with thee in battle.

(a) For this, he was justly reprehended, but his simple intention diminished his fault, and so he was more easily pardoned, & for his good works otherwise done in God's service. ch. 19. 3.

4 Josaphat said to the king of Israel: Consult I beseech thee presently the word of our Lord. 5 Therefore the king of Israel gathered together of the Prophets four hundred men, & said to them: Shall we go into Ramoth Galaad to fight, or sit still? But they said: Go up, say they, & God will deliver it into thy hand. 6 And Josaphat said: Is there not here a Prophet of our Lord, that we may inquire also of him? 7 And the king of Israel said to Josaphat: There is one man, of whom we may ask the will of our Lord: but I hate him, because he doth not prophesy me good, but evil at all times: and it is Micheas the son of Jemla. And Josaphat said: Speak not in this manner, o king. 8 The king of Israel therefore called one of the Eunuchs, and said to him: Call quickly Micheas the son of Jemla. 9 Moreover the king of Israel, and Josaphat the king of Juda, both sat in their thrones, clothed with kingly attire, and they sat in the court beside the gate of Samaria, and all the Prophets prophesied before them. 10 But Sedecias the son of Chanaana made him horns of iron, and said: Thus saith our Lord: With these shalt thou strike Syria, till thou destroy it. 11 And all the Prophets in like manner prophesied, and said: Go up into Ramoth Galaad, and thou shalt prosper, and our Lord will deliver them into the king's hand. 12 And the messenger that went to call Micheas, said to him: Behold the words of all the Prophets with one mouth tell the king good things: I beseech thee therefore that thy word also dissent not from them, and that thou speak prosperous things. 13 To whom Micheas answered: Our Lord liveth, whatsoever my God shall say to me, that will I speak. 14 He therefore came to the king. To whom the king said: Micheas, shall we go into Ramoth Galaad to fight, or sit still? To whom he answered (b) Go ye up: for all things shall fall out prosperous, and the enemies shall be delivered into your hands.

(b) See Annotation 3. Reg. 22. v. 15.

15 And the king said: Again and again I adjure thee, that thou speak not to me, but that which is true in the name of our Lord. 16 But he said: I saw all Israel disperst in the mountains, as sheep without a shepherd: & our Lord said: These have no masters: let every man return into his house in peace. 17 And the king of Israel said to Josaphat: did I not tell thee that this man did not prophesy me any good, but those things that be evil? 18 But he said: Hear ye therefore the word of our Lord: I saw our Lord sitting in his throne, and all the host of heaven assisting him on the right hand and on the left. 19 And our Lord said: who shall deceive Achab the king of Israel, that he may go up and fall in Ramoth Galaad? And when one said in this manner, and another otherwise: 20 there came forth a spirit, and stood before our Lord, & said: I will deceive him. To whom our Lord said: wherein wilt thou deceive him. 21 But he answered: I will go forth, and will be a lying spirit in the mouth of all his Prophets. And our Lord said: Thou shalt deceive, and shalt prevail: go forth, and do so. 22 Now therefore, behold our Lord hath given the spirit of lying in the mouth of all thy Prophets, and our Lord hath spoken of thee evil things. 23 And Sedecias the son of Chanaana came, and struck the cheek of Micheas, and said: Which way passed the spirit of our Lord from me, that it should speak to thee. 24 And Micheas said: Thou thyself shalt see in that day, when thou shalt enter into chamber out of chamber, to be hid. 25 And the king of Israel commanded, saying: Take Micheas, and lead him to Amon the governor of the city, and to Joas the son of Amelech. 26 And you shall say: Thus saith the king: Cast this fellow into prison, and give him a little bread, and a little water, till I return in peace. 27 And Micheas said: If thou return in peace, our Lord hath not spoken in me, and he said: Hear all ye peoples. 28 Therefore the king of Israel, & Josaphat the king of Juda, went up into Ramoth Galaad. 29 And the king of Israel said to Josaphat: I will change my habit, and so I will go to the fight, but be thou clothed with thine own garments. And the king of Israel changing his habit came to the battle. 30 And the king of Syria had commanded the captains of his horsemen saying: Fight not against the least, or against the greatest, but against the king of Israel only.

31 Therefore when the Princes of the horsemen saw Josaphat, they said: This is the king of Israel. And they compassed him fighting: but he cried to our Lord, and he holp him, and turned them away from him. 32 For when the captains of the horsemen saw, that it was not the king of Israel, they left him. 33 And it chanced that one of the people shot an arrow at adventure, and struck the king of Israel between the neck & the shoulders, & he said to his coacher: Turn thy hand, & carry me out of the battle, because I am wounded.
34 And the fight was ended in that day: moreover the king of Israel stood in his chariot against the Syrians until evening, and died at the sun set.

CHAPTER XIX.

Josaphat being reproved by a Prophet for yielding help to Achab, 5. appointeth Judges in several cities, admonishing them to do justice: 8. exhorteth Priests and Levites to execute their functions carefully. 11. Amarias High Priest directing and ruling in things belonging to God, Zabedias general captain governeth the king's affairs.

And Josaphat the king of Juda returned into his house peaceably, into Jerusalem. 2 Whom Jehu the son of Hanani the Seer met, and said to him: (a) To the impious man thou givest aid, and to them that hate our Lord thou art joined in friendship, and therefore thou didst deserve indeed the wrath of our Lord:

(a) Precisian Donatists holding it unlawful to converse with sinners amongst other Scriptures alleged this reprehension of Iosaphat for his society with Achab. To whom S. Augustin answereth, that he was not blamed for other conversation with Achab, but for aiding him, and joining with him in the act of sin, when he contemning Micheas the true prophet of God, and believing false prophets went to battle wherein both kings offended, but with difference; so one was slain though he seemed to be secure, the other was saved in great danger, and repenting was pardoned. li. 2. c. 18. cont. epist. Parmen.

3 but good works are found in thee, for that thou hast taken away the groves out of the land of Juda, and hast prepared thy heart to seek our Lord the God of thy fathers. 4 Josaphat therefore dwelt in Jerusalem: and he went forth to the people again from Bersabee unto mount Ephraim, and recalled them to our Lord the God of their fathers. 5 And he appointed judges of the land in all the fenced cities of Juda, in every place,
6 and commanding the judges, he said: Take heed what you do: for you exercise not judgment of man, but of our Lord: and whatsoever you shall judge, it shall redound to you. 7 Let the fear of our Lord be with you, and with diligence do all things: for there is no iniquity with the Lord our God, nor acception of persons, nor desire of gifts. 8 In Jerusalem also Josaphat appointed Levites, and Priests, and Princes of families of Israel, that they should judge the judgement and cause of our Lord to the inhabitants thereof.
9 And he commanded them, saying: Thus shall you do in the fear of our Lord faithfully, & with a perfect heart. 10 Every cause, that shall come to you of your brethren, that dwell in their cities, between kindred and kindred, wheresoever there is question of the law, of the commandment, of ceremonies, of justifications: shew it them, that they sin not against our Lord, and lest there come wrath upon you and your brethren: so doing therefore you shall not sin. 11 And (b) Amarias the Priest and your Bishop shall be chief in these things, which pertain to God: moreover Zabadias the son of Ismahel, who is the Prince in the house of Juda, shall be over those works, which pertain to the king's office: and you have masters the Levites before you, take courage, and do diligently, and our Lord will be with the good.

(b) A most plain distinction of spiritual & temporal authority and offices, not instituted by Iosaphat, nor any other king, but by God himself. Deut. 17. Num. 27.

CHAPTER XX.

The Ammonites, Moabites, and Syrians, joining forces against Josaphat, 3. he seeketh God's help by public prayer and fasting. 14. A Prophet foretelleth that God will fight for them: 20. so they singing praises to God, the enemies kill each other. 24. Josaphat with his men gather very great spoils, 30. reigneth in peace, 35. but his navy perished, for his society with wicked Ochozias.

After these things were the children of Moab gathered together, and the children of Ammon, & with them of the Ammonites, to fight against Josaphat. 2 And there came messengers, and told Josaphat, saying: There cometh against thee a great multitude from those places, which are beyond the sea, & out of Syria, & behold they stay in Asasonthamar, which is Engaddi. 3 And Josaphat being frighted with fear, betook him wholly to beseech our Lord, and he (a) proclaimed a fast to all Juda.

(a) They fasted not only to subdue the flesh to the spirit, but also for other necessities.

4 And Judas was gathered together to pray to our Lord: yea and all (b) came out of their cities to beseech him.

(b) Example of pilgrimage to holy places, because it pleaseth God to hear the prayers of good people rather in one place than in another. c. 6. 7. &c.

5 And when Josaphat stood in the midst of the assembly of Juda, and Jerusalem in the house of our Lord before the new court, 6 he said: Lord God of our fathers, thou art God in heaven, and rulest over all the Kingdoms of Nations, in thy hand is strength and might, neither can any man resist thee. 7 Didst not thou our God kill all the inhabitants of this land before thy people Israel, and gavest it to the seed of Abraham thy friend for ever? 8 And they dwelt in it, and built in it a Sanctuary to thy name, saying: 9 If evils fall upon us, the sword of judgment, pestilence, and famine, we will stand before this house in thy sight, wherein thy name is invocated: and we will cry to thee in our tribulations, and thou shalt hear, and save us. 10 Now therefore behold the children of Ammon, and mount Seir, by whom thou didst not grant Israel to pass, when they came out of Aegypt, but they declined from them, and slew them not: 11 do the contrary, and endeavour to cast us out of the possession, which thou hast delivered to us. 12 Our God, wilt not thou therefore judge them? In us indeed there is not so great strength, that we can resist this multitude, which cometh violently upon us. But whereas we are ignorant what we ought to do, this only we have left, that we direct our eyes to thee. 13 And all Juda stood before our Lord with their little ones, and wives, and their children. 14 And there was Jahaziel the son of Zacharias, the son of Banaias, the son of Jehiel, the son of Mathanias, a Levite of the children of Asaph, upon whom the spirit of our Lord came in the midst of the multitude, 15 and he said: Attend ye all Juda, and you that dwell in Jerusalem, and thou king Josaphat: thus saith our Lord to you: Fear not, neither dread ye this multitude: for it is not your battle, but God's.

16 Tomorrow you shall go down against them: for they will come up by the steep named Sis, and you shall find them in the utmost part of the torrent, which is against the wilderness of Ieruel. 17 It shall not be you that shall fight, but only stand confidently, & you shall see the help of our Lord over you, O Juda, and Jerusalem: fear not, neither dread ye: tomorrow you shall go out against them, & our Lord will be with you. 18 Josaphat therefore, and Juda, & all the inhabitants of Jerusalem fell flat on the earth before our Lord & adored him. 19 Moreover the Levites of the children of Caath, & of the children of Core praised our Lord the God of Israel with a loud voice, on high. 20 And when they had risen early in the morning, they went forth by the desert of Thecua: and they being gone forth, Josaphat standing in the midst of them, said: Hear me ye men of Juda, & all the inhabiters of Jerusalem: (c) believe in the Lord your God, & you shall be secure: believe his Prophets, & all things shall fall our prosperous.

(c) Faith is the foundation of all good works. Heb. 11. but not sufficient to salvation without other virtues: and therefore they not only believed, but also fasted and prayed, and where need required fought with weapons, though at this time it pleased God to fight for them. See Iosue 23.

21 He gave counsel also to the people, & appointed the singing men of our Lord, that they should praise him in their companies, & should go before the host, & with agreeable voice should say: Confess to our Lord, because his mercy is for ever.[1]

[1] Psal. 135.

22 And when they began to sing praises, our Lord turned their embushments upon themselves, to wit, of the children of Ammon, & of Moab, & of mount Seir, who were gone forth to fight against Juda, & were strucken. 23 For the children of Ammon, & of Moab, rose together against the inhabitants of mount Seir, to kill & destroy them: & when they had in work achieved this, being turned also against themselves, they fell wounded one of another. 24 Moreover Juda when they were come to the watch place, that looketh to the desert, saw a far off all the country abroad full of dead bodies, and that none remained alive that could escape death. 25 Josaphat therefore came, & all the people with him to take away the spoils of the dead, & they found among the dead bodies, diverse stuff, garments also, & most precious vessels: & they spoiled it, so that they could not carry all things, nor in three days take away the spoils for the greatness of the prey. 26 And in the fourth day they were assembled in the Vale of blessing: for because there they had blessed our Lord, they called that place the Vale of blessing until this present day. 27 And every man of Juda returned, & the inhabitants of Jerusalem, & Josaphat before them into Jerusalem with great joy, because our Lord had given them joy of their enemies. 28 And they entered into Jerusalem with psalteries, and harps, and trumpets into the house of our Lord. 29 And the dread of our Lord fell upon all the Kingdoms of the lands when they heard that our Lord had fought against the enemies of Israel. 30 And the Kingdom of Josaphat was quiet, and God gave him peace round about.

31 Josaphat therefore reigned over Juda, and he was five and thirty years old when he began to reign: and he reigned five & twenty years in Jerusalem: & the name of his mother was Azuba the daughter of Selahi. 32 And he walked in the way of his father Asa, neither declined he from it, doing the things that were pleasing before our Lord. 33 But (d) yet the excelses he took not away, & as yet the people had not directed their heart to our Lord the God of their fathers.

(d) He destroyed the places where sacrifice was offered to idols, ch. 17. v. 6. but tolerated other places where the people offered to God our Lord without the temple, not being able to reduce all to perfection.

34 But the rest of the acts of Josaphat, the first & the last are written in the words of Jehu the son of Hanani which he disposed into the Books of the kings of Israel. 35 After these things Josaphat the king of Juda entered friendship with Ochozias the king of Israel, whose works were most impious. 36 And he was partaker to make ships, which should go into Tharsis: and they made a navy in Asiongaber. 37 And Eliezer the son of Dodau of Maresa prophesied to Josaphat, saying: Because thou hast had a league with Ochozias, our Lord hath strucken thy works, & the ships are broken, neither could they go into Tharsis.

CHAPTER XXI.

Josaphat dieth, and Joram succeeding killeth his own brethren, and some other chief men: 6. reigneth wickedly. 8. Edom, and Lobna revolt from him. 12. Elias by letters sore warneth him of plagues, 15. which falling upon him he dieth after two years of a languishing and horrible disease.

And[1] Josaphat slept with his fathers, & was buried with them in the City of David: and Joram his son reigned for him.

2 Who had brethren the sons of Josaphat, Azarias, and Jahiel, and Zacharias, & Azarias, & Michael, and Saphatias. All these were the sons of Josaphat the king of Juda. 3 And their father gave them many gifts of silver, and of gold, and pensions, with the most fenced cities in Juda: But the Kingdom he delivered to Joram, because he was the first begotten. 4 And Joram rose over the Kingdom of his father: and when he had established himself, he slew all his brethren with the sword, and certain of the Princes of Israel. 5 Two and thirty years old was Joram when he began to reign: and he reigned eight years in Jerusalem. 6 And he walked in the ways of the kings of Israel, as the house of Achab had done: for Achab's daughter was his wife, and he did evil in the sight of our Lord. 7 But our Lord would not destroy the house of David for the covenant which he had made with him: and because he had promised that he would give him a lamp, and to his sons for ever. 8 In those days Edom rebelled, from being subject to Juda, and made themselves a king 9 And when Joram had passed with his Princes, and all the horsemen, that were with him, he rose in the night, and struck Edom, which had compassed him, and all the captains of his horsemen. 10 But yet Edom rebelled, from being under the dominion of Juda until this day: at that time Lobna also revolted, from being under his hand. For he had forsaken our Lord the God of their fathers: 11 moreover he built also excelses in the cities of Juda, and he made the inhabitants of Jerusalem to fornicate, and Juda to transgress. 12 And there were letters brought him (a) from Elias the Prophet, in which was Written: Thus saith our Lord the God of David thy father: Because thou hast not walked in the ways of Josaphat thy father, and in the ways of Asa the king of Juda,

(a) Elias was assumpted from ordinary conversation with mortal men the eighteenth year of King Josaphat, 4. Reg. 2. 3. who reigned twenty years, 3. Reg. 22. v. 42. So he shewed this special care of Joram & his Kingdom, after his assumption seven years.

13 but hast gone by the ways of the kings of Israel, and hast made Juda to fornicate, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, having imitated the fornication of the house of Achab, moreover also hast killed thy brethren, the house of thy father, better men than thou: 14 behold our Lord will strike thee with a great plague with all thy people, and children, and thy wives, and all thy substance. 15 And thou shalt be sick of a very sore disease of thy belly, till thy vital parts come forth by little and little every day. 16 Our Lord therefore raised up against Joram the spirit of the Philisthians, and of the Arabians, which are borderers to the Aethiopians. 17 and they went up into the Land of Juda, and wasted it, and they spoiled all the substance, that was found in the king's house, moreover also his sons, and wives: neither was there a son left him but Joachaz, who was the youngest. 18 And beside all these things our Lord struck him with an incurable disease of the belly. 19 And when day succeeded day, and the spaces of times passed about, the circuit of two years was complete: and so being wasted with a long consumption, so that he voided even his very bowels, he was rid of the disease, and of his life together. And he died in an exceeding vile infirmity, and the people made him not exequies according to the manner of burning, as they had done to his ancestors. 20 He was two and thirty years old, when he began to reign, and he reigned eight years in Jerusalem. And he walked not rightly, and they buried him in the City of David: but yet not in the sepulchre of the kings.

CHAPTER XXII.

Ochozias reigning one year, 3. is slain together with Joram king of Israel, by King Jehu. 10. Athalia killeth the king's children (only Joas being saved by his aunt) and usurpeth the kingdom six years.

And[1] the inhabitants of Jerusalem made Ochozias his least son king for him: for all the elders, that had been before him, the rovers of the Arabians had slain, which invaded the camp: and Ochozias the son of Joram the king of Juda reigned.

[1] 4. Reg. 8. v. 25. c. 9.

2 Two & (a) forty years old was Ochozias when he began to reign, & he reigned one year in Jerusalem, and the name of his mother was Athalia the daughter of Amri.

(a) To wit when he began to reign alone: for he reigned together with his father at the age of 22. 4. Reg. 8. v. 26. And after his father's death but one year. See. 4. Reg. 8. V. 18.

3 But he also went by the ways of the house of Achab: for his mother forced him to do impiously. 4 He therefore did evil in the sight of our Lord, as the house of Achab: for they were his counsellers after the death of his father, to his destruction. 5 And he walked in their counsels. And he went forth with Joram the son of Achab king of Israel, into battle against Hazael king of Syria, into Ramoth Galaad: and the Syrians wounded Joram. 6 Who returned to be cured into Jezrael: for he had taken many wounds in the foresaid battle. Therefore Ochozias the son of Joram king of Juda, went down to visit Joram the son of Achab in Jezrael being sick. 7 For it was the will of God against Ochozias, that he should come to Joram: and when he was come he should go out also against Jehu the son of Namsi, whom our Lord anointed to destroy the house of Achab. 8 When Jehu therefore overthrew the house of Achab, he found the Princes of Juda, and the son of the brethren of Ochozias, which served him, and he slew them. 9 Searching also for Ochozias himself, he took him lying hid in Samaria: and being brought unto him, he killed him, and they buried him: because he was the son of Josaphat, who had sought our Lord in all his heart^ (b) neither was there any more hope that any should reign of the stock of Ochozias.

(b) Human hope failed, but God's providence used means to conserve some of David's issue to sit in his throne, yea to continue the succession till Christ. Mat. 1.

10 For Athalia his mother, seeing that her son was dead, arose, & slew all the king's stock of the house of Joram. 11 Saving that Josabeth the king's daughter took Joas the son of Ochozias, and stole him out of the midst of the king's sons, when they were slain, and she hid him with his nurse in the bed chamber: and Josabeth that hid him, was the daughter of king Joram, the wife of Joiada the high Priest, the sister of Ochozias, and therefore Athalia did not kill him. 12 He therefore was with them in the house of God six years, in the which Athalia reigned over the Land.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Joiada the High Priest anointeth and crowneth Joas king, 12. causeth Athalia to be slain, 16. idolatry to be destroyed, 18. and God's service advanced.

And [1] in the seventh year Joiada taking courage, took the centurions, to wit, Azarias the son of Jeroham, and Ismahel the son of Johanan, Azarias also the son of Obed, and Maasias the son of Adaias, and Elisaphat the son of Zechri: and made a covenant with them.

2 Who going about Juda, gathered together the Levites out of all the cities of Juda, and the princes of the families of Israel, and they came into Jerusalem. 3 Therefore all the multitude made a covenant with the king in the house of God: and Joiada said to them: Behold the king's son shall reign, as our Lord hath spoken, upon the sons of David. 4 This (a) therefore is the thing which you shall do.

(a) God's promise being absolute and certain, yet human means were nevertheless required.

5 The third part of you that come to the [1] Sabbath of the Priests, and of Levites, and of porters, shall be in the gates: and a third part at the king's house: and a third at the gate, which is called of the Foundation: but all the rest of the common people be in the courts of the house of our Lord.

[1] * the weekly watch.

6 Neither let any other enter into the house of our Lord, but the Priests, and they that minister of the Levites: let them only go in, because they are sanctified, and let all the rest of the multitude observe the watches of our Lord. 7 And let the Levites environ the king, having every one their weapons: (and if any other shall enter into the temple, let him be slain) and let them be with the king both coming in, and going out. 8 The Levites therefore, and all Juda did according to all things, which (b) Joiada the high Priest had commanded, and they took every one the men that were under them, and came by the order of the Sabbath, with them that had fulfilled the Sabbath, and were to go forth. For Joiada the high Priest permitted not the companies to depart, which were accustomed to succeed one another every week.

(b) In case of right and necessity we see here what the high Priest could do and did by his authority: who otherwise intermeddled not in the King's affairs. ch. 19. v. 11.

9 And Joiada the Priest gave to the centurions the spears, and the shields, and targets of king David, which he had consecrated in the house of our Lord. 10 And he appointed all the people of them that held weapons on the right side of the temple, unto the left side of the temple, before the altar, and the temple, round about the king. 11 And they brought forth the king's son, and put the crown upon him, and the testimony, and gave the law to be in his hand, and they made him king: Joiada also the high Priest, and his sons anointed him: and they wished him well, and said: God save the king. 12 Which thing when Athalia had heard, to wit, the voice of them that ran and praised the king, she went in unto the people, into the temple of our Lord. 13 And when she had seen the king standing upon the step in the entrance, and the Princes, and the companies about him, and all the people of the land rejoicing, and sounding with trumpets, and playing on instruments of diverse kind, & the voice of them that praised, she rent her garments, and said: Treason, treason. 14 And Joiada the high Priest going forth to the centurions, and captains of the army, said to them: Bring her forth without the precinct of the temple, and let her be killed with the sword without. And the Priest commanded that she should not be killed in the house of our Lord. 15 And they laid hands upon her neck: and when she was entered within the gate of the horses of the king's house, they killed her there. 16 And Joiada made a covenant between himself, and all the people, and the king, that they would be the people of our Lord. 17 All the people therefore entered into the house of Baal, and destroyed it: and they brake his altars and (c) his [1] images: Mathan also the Priest of Baal they slew before the altars.

(c) They are willfully blind that will not see difference between images of Baal & of Christ or of his Saints. [1] * simulacra.

18 And Joiada appointed overseers in the house of our Lord, under the hands of the Priests, and the Levites, which David distributed in the house of our Lord: that they should offer holocausts to our Lord, as it is written in the law of Moyses, in joy and songs, according to the disposition of David. 19 He appointed also porters in the gates of the house of our Lord, that the unclean in any thing should not enter in. 20 And he took the centurions, and the most valiant men and Princes of the people, and all the common people of the land, and they made the king to go down from the house of our Lord, and to enter by the midst of the upper gate into the king's house, and placed him in the royal throne. 21 And all the people of the land rejoiced, and the city was quiet: moreover Athalia was slain with the sword.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Joas reigning piously, so long as Joiada liveth, causeth the Temple to be repaired, 14. and new sacred vessels to be made. 15. Joiada an hundred thirty years old dieth. 17. Joas falleth to idolatry: 20. causeth Zacharias to be slain in the court of the Temple. 23. A few Syrians kill the chief men about the king, and carry away great preys. 25. Joas is slain by his own men, and his son Amasias reigneth.

Seven years old was Joas when he began to reign: and he reigned forty years in Jerusalem, the name of his mother was Sebia of Bersabee. 2 And he did that which is good before our Lord all the days of Joiada the Priest. 3 And Joiada took for him two wives, of whom he begat sons & daughters. 4 After which things it pleased Joas to repair the house of our Lord. 5 And he assembled the priests, & the Levites & said to them: Go ye forth to the cities of Juda, & gather of all Israel money for the reparation of the temple of your God, year by year, and do this in haste: moreover the Levites did negligently. 6 And the king called Joiada the Prince, and said to him: why hast thou had no care to constrain the Levites to bring in out of Juda and Jerusalem the money, that was (a) appointed of Moyses the servant of our Lord, that all the multitude of Israel should bring it in into the tabernacle of testimony?

(a) By the law every one payed yearly half a sicle, towards the repairing of the tabernacle, and so afterwards of the temple. Ex. 30.

7 For the most impious Athalia, & her children have destroyed the house of God, and of all things that had been sanctified in the temple of our Lord, they adorned the temple of Baalim. 8 The king therefore commanded and they made a chest: and set it by the gate of our Lord on the out side. 9 And it was proclaimed in Juda and Jerusalem, that every man should bring the price to our Lord, which Moyses the servant of God appointed over all Israel, in the desert. 10 And all the Princes rejoiced, and all the people: and going in they contributed into the chest of our Lord, and cast in so that it was filled. 11 And when it was time that they should bring the chest before the king by the hands of Levites (for they saw much money) the king's Scribe went in, and he whom the high Priest had appointed: & they poured out the money that was in the chest, and recarried it to his place: and so did they from day to day, and there was gathered infinite money. 12 Which the king and Joiada gave to them, that oversaw the works of the house of our Lord: but they hired with it hewers of stones, and artificers of all works, to repair the house of our Lord: smiths also of iron and brass, that that which began to fall might be upholden. 13 And they that wrought did industriously, and the breach of the walls was closed by their hands, and they raised the house of our Lord into the old state, and made it stand firmly. 14 And when they had accomplished all the works, they brought the rest of the money before the king and Joiada: of the which were made vessels of the temple to the ministry, and for holocausts, phials also, and other vessels of gold and silver, and holocausts were offered in the house of our Lord continually all the days of Joiada. 15 But Joiada became old being full of days, and died when he was an hundred and thirty years old. 16 And they buried him in the city of David with the kings, because he had done good with Israel, and with his house. 17 And after that Joiada was dead, the Princes of Juda went in, and adored the king, who being altered by their serviceableness, agreed to them. 18 And they forsook the temple of our Lord the God of their fathers, and served groves, and sculptiles, & there came wrath against Juda, and Jerusalem for this sin. 19 And he sent them Prophets, that they should return to our Lord, whom, protesting, they would not hear. 20 The spirit of God therefore invested Zacharias the son of Joiada the Priest, and he stood in the sight of the people, and said to them: Thus saith our Lord God: Why transgress you the precept of our Lord, which thing shall not profit you, and have forsaken our Lord, that he should forsake you? 21 Who being gathered against him, they threw stones according to the king's commandment, in the court of the house of our Lord.[1]

22 And Joas the king did not remember the mercy, that Joiada his father had done with him, but he killed his son. Who when he died, said: Our Lord see, and require it. 23 And when a year was come about, the army of Syria came up against him: and it came into Juda and Jerusalem, & slew all the Princes of the people, and all the prey they sent to the king into Damascus. 24 And whereas there was come a very small number of the Syrians, our Lord delivered into their hands an infinite multitude, for that they had forsaken our Lord the God of their fathers: on Joas also they exercised ignominious judgments. 25 And departing they left him in great diseases: and his servants rose against him, (b) for revenge of the blood of the son of Joiada the Priest, and they slew him in his bed, & he died: and they buried him in the City of David, but not in the king's sepulchres.

(b) He that killed his spiritual father was slain by his own servants.

26 And there conspired against him Zabad the son of Semmaath an Ammonitess, and Jozabad the son of Semarith a Moabitess. 27 Moreover his children, and the sum of money, which was gathered under him, and the repairing of the house of God are written more diligently in the Book of kings: and Amasias his son reigned for him.

CHAPTER XXV.

Amasias killeth those that slew his father. 5. Besides his own people, hireth soldiers of Israel, but by advise of a Prophet dismisseth them, 11. and with his own overthroweth the Idumeans, whose idols taken in battle (13. the dismissed soldiers in the mean time spoiling his country) he adoreth. 15. contemning admonition, 17. and provoking the king of Israel to war, 22. is taken in battle and spoiled. 27. Fearing treason in Jerusalem flyeth, and is slain in Lachis.

Five [1] and twenty years old was Amasias when he began to reign, and he reigned nine & twenty years in Jerusalem, the name of his mother was Ioadan of Jerusalem.

2 And he did good in the sight of our Lord: but yet not in a perfect heart. 3 And when he saw his Kingdom strengthened, he put to death the servants, that had slain the king his father, 4 but their children he slew not, as it is written in the Book of the law of Moyses, where our Lord commanded, saying: The fathers shall not be slain for the children, nor the children for their fathers, but every one shall die in his own sin. [1]

[1] Deu. 24.

5 Amasias therefore gathered together Juda, and appointed them by families, and tribunes, and centurions, in all Juda, & Benjamin, and he numbered from twenty years upward, & found three hundred thousand of young men that went forth to battle, and held spear and shield. 6 He hired also for wages of Israel an hundred thousand strong men, for an hundred talents of silver. 7 But a man of God came to him, and said: O king, let not the host of Israel go forth with thee, for our Lord is not with Israel, and all the children of Ephraim: 8 and if thou think that battles consist in the force of an army, God will make thee to be overcome of the enemies: for it pertaineth to God both to help, and to put to flight. 9 And Amasias said to the man of God: What shall become then of the hundred talents, which I have given the soldiers of Israel? And the man of God answered him: Our Lord hath whereby he is able to give thee much more than this. 10 Amasias therefore separated the host, that came to him out of Ephraim, that they should return into their place: but they being wrath exceedingly against Juda, returned into their country. 11 Moreover Amasias brought forth his people confidently, and went into the Vale of salt pits, and struck the children of Seir, ten thousand. 12 And other ten thousand men did the children of Juda take, and bring to the steep of a certain rock, and cast them down headlong from the top, who burst in sunder every one. 13 But that army which Amasias had sent back, from going with him to battle, was spread in the cities of Juda, from Samaria unto Bethhoron, and killing three thousand took away a great prey. 14 But Amasias after the slaughter of the Idumeans, set up the gods of the children of Seir, which he had brought thence, for his gods, & adored them, and burnt incense to them. 15 For which thing our Lord being angry against Amasias, sent a Prophet unto him, which should say to him: Why hast thou adored gods, that have not delivered their own people out of thy hand? 16 [1] And when he spake these things, he answered him: Art thou the king's counseller? Be quiet, lest I kill thee. And the Prophet departing, said: I know that God is minded to kill thee, because thou hast done this evil, & besides hast not agreed to my counsel.

[1] 4. Reg. 8.

17 Therefore Amasias the king of Juda taking very ill counsel, sent to Joas the son of Joachaz the son of Jehu, the king of Israel, saying: Come, let us see one another. 18 But he sent back the messengers, saying: A thistle that is in Libanus sent to a cedar of Libanus, saying: Give thy daughter to my son to wife: & behold the beasts that were in the wood of Libanus passed, and trod down the thistle. 19 Thou hast said: I have strucken Edom, and therefore thy heart is extolled into pride, sit in thy house, why dost thou provoke evil against thee, that both thou mayest fall, and Juda with thee. 20 Amasias would not hear, because it was our Lord's will, that he should be delivered into the hands of the enemies (a) for the gods of Edom.

(a) Obduration of heart for former sin.

21 Joas therefore the king of Israel went up, and they gave themselves one the sight of the other: and Amasias the king of Juda was in Bethsames of Juda: 22 and Juda fell before Israel, and fled into their tabernacles. 23 Moreover Joas the king of Israel in Bethsames took Amasias the king of Juda, the son of Joas, the son of Joachaz, and brought him into Jerusalem: and destroyed the wall thereof from the gate of Ephraim, to the gate of the corner, four hundred cubits. 24 All the gold also, and silver, and all the vessels, that he found in the house of God, and which Obededom in the treasures also of the king's house, moreover he brought back the sons of the hostages into Samaria. 25 And Amasias the son of Joas the king of Juda lived, after that Joas died the son of Joachaz the king of Israel fifteen years. 26 But the rest of the words of Amasias the first and the last are written in the Book of the kings of Juda and Israel. 27 Who after he revolted from our Lord, they lay in wait against him in Jerusalem. And when he had fled into Lachis, they sent, and slew him there. 28 And carrying him back upon horses, buried him with his fathers in the City of David.

CHAPTER XXVI.

Ozias serving God, 6. prevaileth in battle against the Philistians, Arabians, and Ammonites: 9. prospereth in honour and wealth. 16. Then waxing proud offereth incense on the altar, is strucken with leprosy, expelled out of the Temple, and city: 20. and his son Joathan ruleth the Kingdom.

And all the people of Juda made his son Ozias sixteen years old, king for Amasias his father. 2 He built Ailath, & restored it to the dominion of Juda, after that the king slept with his fathers. 3 Sixteen years old was Ozias when he began to reign, and he reigned two and fifty years in Jerusalem, the name of his mother was Jechelia of Jerusalem. 4 And he did that which was right in the eyes of our Lord, according to all things, which Amasias his father had done. 5 And he sought our Lord in the days of Zacharias that understood and saw God: and when he sought our Lord, (a) he directed him in all things.

(a) So long as this King observed the ordinance of God to be directed by the high Priest Nu. 27. v. 21. he prospered in his affairs.

6 Moreover he went forth, and fought against the Philisthiims, and destroyed the wall of Geth, and the wall of Iabinia, and the wall of Azotus: he built also towns in Azotus, and among the Philisthiims. 7 And God did help him against the Philisthiims, and against the Arabians, that dwelt in Gurbaal, & against the Ammonites. 8 And the Ammonites gave gifts to Ozias: and his name was renowned unto the entrance of Aegypt for his often victories. 9 And Ozias built towers in Jerusalem over the gate of the corner, and over the gate of the valley, and the rest, in the same side of the wall, and strengthened them. 10 He built towers also in the wilderness, and digged many cisterns, because he had much cattle as well in the champion, as in the vastity of the desert: he had also vineyards and dressers of vines in the mountains, and in Carmel: for he was a man given to husbandry.

11 And the host of his warriors, which went forth to battles, was under the hand of Jehiel the scribe, and Maasias the doctor, and under the hand of Hananias, who was of the king's dukes. 12 And all the number of the Princes by families of valiant men, was two thousand six hundred. 13 And under them all the host of three hundred and seven thousand five hundred: which were apt to battles, and fought for the king against the adversaries. 14 Ozias also prepared for them, that is to say, for all the army, shields, and spears, and helmets, and coats of mail, and bows, and slings to cast stones. 15 And he made in Jerusalem engines of diverse kind, which he placed in the towers, and in the corners of the walls, to shoot arrows, & great stones: and his name went forth far, for that our Lord did aid him, and had strengthened him. 16 But when he was strengthened, his heart was elevated to his destruction, and he neglected our Lord his God: and entering into the temple of our Lord, he would burn (b) incense upon the altar of incense.

(b) For usurping spiritual authority which pertained not to him, the high Priest with his assistants opposed themselves against the King: and God confirmed their sentence by striking the same King with leprosy. And so he was not only cast out of the temple, but also out of his Kingdom, and common conversation with other men, and forced to dwell in a separate house without the city according to the law. Levit. 13. v. 46.

17 And incontinent Azarias the Priest going in after him, and with him the Priests of our Lord eighty, most valiant men, 18 they resisted the king, and said: It is not thy office Ozias, to burn incense to our Lord, but of the Priests, that is, of the children of Aaron, which are consecrated to this kind of ministry: go out of the Sanctuary, contemn not: because this thing shall not be reputed to thee for glory of our Lord God. 19 And Ozias being angry, and holding in his hand the censer to burn incense, threatened the Priests. And forthwith there rose a leprosy in his forehead before the Priests, in the house of our Lord upon the altar of incense.
20 And when Azarias the high Priest had beheld him, and all the rest of the Priests, they saw the leprosy in his forehead, and in haste they thrust him out. Yea and himself being sore afraid, made haste to go out, because he felt by and by the plague of our Lord.
21 Ozias therefore the king was a leper until the day of his death, and he dwelt in a house apart full of the leprosy, for the which he had been cast out of the house of our Lord. Moreover Joathan his son governed the king's house, and judged the people of the land.
22 But the rest of the words of Ozias the first and the last wrote Isaias the son of Amos, the Prophet. 23 And Ozias slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the (c) kings' sepulchres' field, because he was a leper: and Joathan his son reigned for him.

(c) Neither could he be buried in the proper sepulchres of the Kings.

CHAPTER XXVII.

Joathan a godly king, 5. prevaileth in battle against the Ammonites: 7. dieth, and his son Achaz succeedeth.

Five [1] and twenty years old was Joathan when he began to reign, and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem: the name of his mother was Jerusa the daughter of Sadoc.

2 And he did that which was right before our Lord, according to all things, which Ozias his father had done, saving that he entered not in the temple of our Lord, and as yet the people did sin. 3 He built the high gate of the house of our Lord, and in the wall of Ophel he built many things. 4 Cities also he built in the mountains of Juda, and castles, and towers in the forests. 5 He fought against the king of the children of Ammon, and overcame them, and the children of Ammon gave him at that time an hundred talents of silver, and ten thousand cores of wheat, and as many cores of barley: the children of Ammon gave him these things in the second and third year. 6 And Joathan was strengthened, because he had directed his ways before our Lord his God. 7 But the rest of the words of Joathan, and all his battles, and works, are written in the Book of the kings of Israel and Juda. 8 He was five & twenty years old when he began to reign, and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem. 9 And Joathan slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the City of David: And Achaz his son reigned for him.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

For his great wickedness Achaz is taken in battle, his country spoiled, and many slain by the kings of Syria, and Israel: 9. yet God suffereth not the Kingdom to be subdued. 16. Then requiring help of the Assyrians, 17. is spoiled by the Idumeans, Philisthians, and Assyrians. 22. After all which plagues he committeth more idolatry. 26. dieth, and his son Ezechias reigneth.

Twenty[1] years old was Achaz when he began to reign, and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem: he did not right in the sight of our Lord as David his father,

2 but walked in the ways of the kings of Israel, moreover also he did cast statues to Baalim. 3 He it is that burnt incense to the Valebenennom, and he consecrated his sons in fire according to the rite of the nations, which our Lord slew in the coming of the children of Israel. 4 He sacrificed also, & burnt incense in the excelses, and on hills, and under every tree full of green leaves. 5 And our Lord his God delivered him into the hands of the king of Syria, who struck him, and took a great prey out of his Kingdom, and brought into Damascus: to the hands also of the king of Israel was he delivered, & stricken with a great plague. 6 And Phacee the son of Romelia slew of Juda an hundred twenty thousand in one day, all men of war: for that they had forsaken our Lord the God of their fathers. 7 At that time Zechri a mighty man of Ephraim, slew Maasias the king's son, and Ezricam the governor of his house, Elcana also second from the king. 8 And the children of Israel took of their brethren two hundred thousand of women, of boys, and of wenches, and an infinite prey: & they brought it into Samaria. 9 At that time there was a Prophet of our Lord, named Oded: who going forth to meet the army coming into Samaria, said to them: Behold our Lord the God of your fathers being angry against Juda, hath delivered them into your hands, and you have slain them cruelly, so that your cruelty did reach to heaven. 10 Moreover the children of Juda and Jerusalem you will subdue unto you for bondmen and bond women, which needeth not to be done: for you have sinned hereupon to our Lord your God. 11 But hear ye my counsel, and carry back the captives, that you have brought of your brethren, because the great fury of our Lord hangeth over you. 12 There stood therefore Princes of the children of Ephraim, Azarias the son of Johanan, Barachias the son of Mosollomoth, Ezechias the son of Sellum, and Amasa the son of Hadali, against them that came out of the battle, 13 and they said to them: You shall not bring in the captives hither, lest we sin to our Lord. Why will you add upon our sins, and heap up old offences? For it is a great sin, and the anger of the fury of our Lord hangeth over Israel. 14 And the men of war dismist the prey, and all the things that they had taken, before the Princes and all the multitude. 15 And the men, whom we mentioned above, stood, and taking the captives, and all that were naked they clothed and shod them with the spoils: and when they had clothed and refreshed them with meat and drink, & anointed them because of their labour, and had looked carefully to them: as many as could not walk, and were of a weak body, they set on beasts, and brought them to Jericho the City of palm trees to their brethren, and themselves returned into Samaria. 16 At that time king Achaz sent to the king of the Assyrians asking help. 17 And the Idumeans came and struck many of Juda, and took a great prey. 18 The Philisthiims also were spread abroad by the cities of the champion, and toward the South of Juda: and they took Bethsames, and Aialon, and Gaderoth, Socho also, and Thamnan, and Gamzo, with their villages, and dwelt in them. 19 For our Lord had humbled Juda because of Achaz the king of Juda, for that he had made it naked of help, and had contemned our Lord. 20 And he brought against him Theglathphalnasar the king of the Assyrians, who also afflicted him, and spoiled him no man resisting. 21 Therefore Achaz spoiling the house of our Lord, and the house of the kings, and of the Princes gave gifts to the king of the Assyrians, and yet it did nothing profit him. 22 Moreover also in the time of his distress he increased contempt against our Lord, king Achaz himself by himself, 23 immolated victims to the gods of Damascus that struck him, and said: The gods of the kings of Syria do help them, whom I will pacify with hosts, and they will aid me, whereas on the contrary part they were his ruin,[1] and all Israel's.

[1] Wicked policy availeth nothing, but hurteth much.

24 Achaz therefore having spoiled all the vessels of the house of God, and broken them, shut the gates of the temple of God, and made him altars in all the corners of Jerusalem. 25 In all the cities also of Juda he built altars to burn frankincense, and he provoked to wrath our Lord the God of his fathers. 26 But the rest of his words, & all his works the first and the last are written in the Book of the kings of Juda and Israel. 27 And Achaz slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the City of Jerusalem: for they received him not into the sepulchres of the kings of Israel. And Ezechias his son reigned for him.

CHAPTER XXIX.

Ezechias repaireth the Temple, and divine service. 5. Zealously exhorteth offenders to repentance: 12. the Temple is purified in sixteen days. 18. The king and nobles offer hosts, which the Priests immolate, 25. with solemn music (ordained by king David) and great joy of all the people.

Therefore[1] Ezechias began to reign, when he was five and twenty years old, & he reigned nine and twenty years in Jerusalem: the name of his mother was Abia, the daughter of Zacharias.

[1] 4. Reg. 18.

2 And he did that which was pleasing in the sight of our Lord, according to all things that David his father had done. 3 He in the first year & month of his reign opened the doors of the house of our Lord, and repaired them. 4 And he brought the Priests and the Levites, & assembled them in the East street. 5 And he said to them: Hear me ye Levites, and be sanctified, clean the house of our Lord the God of your fathers, and take away all uncleanness out of the Sanctuary. 6 Our fathers have sinned and done evil in the sight of our Lord God, forsaking him: they have turned away their faces from the tabernacle of our Lord, & given the back. 7 They have shut the doors, that were in the porch, and put out the lamps, and have not burnt incense, and have not offered holocausts in the Sanctuary of the God of Israel. 8 Therefore was the fury of our Lord stirred up upon Juda and Jerusalem, and he hath delivered them into commotion, and into destruction, and to be hissed at, as yourselves see with your eyes. 9 Behold, our fathers have fallen by the swords, our sons, and our daughters, and wives are led captive for this wickedness. 10 Now therefore it pleaseth me that we make a covenant with our Lord the God of Israel, and he will turn away the fury of his wrath from us. 11 My children be not negligent: our Lord hath chosen you to stand before him, and to minister to him, and to worship him, and to burn incense to him. 12 The Levites therefore arose: Mahath the son of Amasai, and Joel the son of Azarias, of the children of Caath: moreover the children of Merari, Cis the son of Abdi, and Azarias the son of Jalaleel. And of the children of Gerson, Joah the son of Zemma, and Eden the son of Joah. 13 But of the children of Elisaphan, Samri, and Jahiel. Also of the children of Asaph, Zacharias, and Mathanias.

14 Moreover also of the children of Heman, Jahiel and Semei: yea and of the children of Idithun, Semeias, and Oziel. 15 And they gathered together their brethren, and were sanctified, and went in according to the commandment of the king and the precept of our Lord, to purge the house of God. 16 The Priests also going into the Temple of our Lord to sanctify it, brought out all uncleanness, which they found within the entrance of the house of our Lord, which the Levites took, and carried to the Torrent cedron without. 17 And they began to cleanse it in the first day of the first month, and in the eighth day of the same month they entered into the porch of the temple of our Lord, and they purged the temple in eight days, and in the sixteenth day of the same month, they accomplished that which they began. 18 They entered in also to Ezechias the king, and said to him: We have sanctified all the house of our Lord, and the altar of holocaust, and the vessels thereof, moreover also the table of proposition with all the vessels thereof, 19 and all the furniture of the temple, which king Achaz in his reign had polluted, after that he transgressed; and behold all things are set forth before the altar of our Lord. 20 And Ezechias the king rising early, assembled all the Princes of the city, & went up into the house of our Lord: 21 and they offered together seven oxen, and seven rams, seven lambs, and seven buckgoats for sin, for the Kingdom, for the sanctuary, for Juda, and he said to the Priests the children of Aaron, that they should offer them upon the altar of our Lord. 22 They killed therefore the oxen, & the Priests took the blood, and poured it upon the altar, they killed also the rams, and their blood they poured also upon the altar, and they immolated the lambs, and poured the blood upon the altar. 23 They brought the buckgoats for sin before the king, & the whole multitude, & they put their hands upon them: 24 & the Priests immolated them, & sprinkled their blood on the altar for an expiation of all Israel: for the king had commanded for all Israel, that holocaust should be made, & for sin. 25 He appointed also the Levites in the house of our Lord with cymbals, and psalteries, and harps according to the disposition of David the king, and of Gad the Seer, and of Nathan the Prophet: for it was the precept of our Lord by the hand of his Prophets. 26 And the Levites stood, holding the instruments of David, and the Priests^ trumpets. 27 And Ezechias commanded that they should offer holocausts upon the altar: and when holocausts were offered, they began to sing praises to our Lord, and to sound with trumpets, and on diverse instruments, which David the king of Israel had prepared for to sound. 28 And all the multitude adoring, the singing men, and they that held the trumpets, were in their office, whiles the holocaust was accomplished. 29 And when the oblation was ended, the king bowed, and all that were with him, and adored. 30 And Ezechias, and the Princes commanded the Levites, that they should praise our Lord in the words of David, and Asaph the Seer: who praised him with great joy, and bowing the knee adored. 31 But Ezechias added these words also: You have filled your hands to our Lord, come, and offer victims, and praises in the house of our Lord. All the multitude therefore offered hosts, and praises, and holocausts with a devout mind. 32 Moreover the number of the holocausts, which the multitude offered, was this, oxen seventy, rams an hundred, lambs two hundred. 33 And they sanctified to our Lord oxen six hundred, and sheep three thousand. 34 But the Priests were few, neither could they suffice to draw off the skins of the holocausts: wherefore the Levites also their brethren holp them, till the work was accomplished, and the Priests were sanctified, for the Levites are sanctified with an easier rite than the Priests. 35 There were holocausts therefore very many, the fat of pacifics, and the libaments of the holocausts, and the service of the house of our Lord was accomplished. 36 And Ezechias rejoiced, and all the people, because the ministry of our Lord was accomplished. For it pleased them that the thing should be done of a sudden.

CHAPTER XXX.

Ezechias by messengers and letters exhorteth the people both of Juda & Israel, to make Pasch in Jerusalem: 11. which some of Israel, and all Juda perform, 18. the fourteenth day of the second month, though all could not be purified according to the law. 23. They make another feast of Azymes seven days more, the king and Princes giving hosts to the people.

Ezechias also sent to all Israel and Juda: and he wrote letters to Ephraim & Manasses, that they should come to the house of our Lord in Jerusalem, and should make a Phase to our Lord the God of Israel. 2 Counsel therefore being taken of the king and the Princes, and of all the assembly of Jerusalem, they decreed to make the Phase the second month. 3 For they could not make it in his time, because the Priests that might suffice, had not been sanctified, and the people had not as yet been gathered into Jerusalem. 4 And the word pleased the king, and all the multitude. 5 And they decreed to send messengers into all Israel from Bersabee unto Dan, that they should come, and make the Phase to our Lord the God of Israel in Jerusalem: for many had not made it as is prescribed by the law. 6 And the posts went forth with letters of commandment from the king and his Princes, into all Israel and Juda, according to the which the king had commanded, proclaiming: Children of Israel return ye to our Lord the God of Abraham, and Isaac, and Israel: and he will return to the remnant, that hath escaped the hand of the king of the Assyrians. 7 Become not as your fathers, and brethren, which have revolted from our Lord the God of their fathers, who hath delivered them into destruction, as yourselves see. 8 Harden not your necks, as your fathers: give hands to our Lord, and come to his Sanctuary, which he hath sanctified for ever: serve our Lord the God of your fathers, & the wrath of his fury shall be turned away from you. 9 For if you shall return to our Lord, your brethren, and children shall have mercy before their lords, that have led them captive, and they shall return into this land. For our Lord your God is merciful, and will not turn away his face from you, if you shall return to him.[1]

10 Therefore the posts went forward speedily from city to city, through the land of Ephraim, & of Manasses, as far as Zabulon, they mocking and scorning them. 11 Nevertheless certain men of Aser, and Manasses, and Zabulon, condescending to the counsel, came to Jerusalem. 12 But the hand of God was in Juda, to give them one heart to do the word of our Lord, according to the precept of the king and of the Princes 13 And much people was gathered into Jerusalem to make the solemnity of Azymes in the second month: 14 And rising they destroyed the altars that were in Jerusalem, and overthrowing all things wherein incense was burnt to idols, they threw it into the Torrent cedron. 15 And they immolated the Phase the fourteenth day of the second month. The Priests also and the Levites at length being sanctified offered holocausts in the house of our Lord. 16 And they stood in their order according to the disposition and Law of Moyses the man of God: but the Priests received the blood to be poured out of the hands of the Levites, 17 because a great multitude was not sanctified: and therefore the Levites immolated the Phase for them that came not in time to be sanctified to our Lord. 18 For a great part of the people of Ephraim, and Manasses, and Issachar, and Zabulon, that had not been sanctified, did eat the Phase, not according to that which is written: and Ezechias prayed for them, saying: Our good Lord will be merciful 19 to all them (a) that in all their heart seek our Lord the God of their fathers: & will not impute it to them that they are not sanctified.

(a) Being penitent in heart for their sins, God's dispensation might be supposed for legal purification in case of necessity, which otherwise was strictly commanded Levit. 4. et seq. Deut. 27. &c.

20 Whom our Lord heard, and was pacified to the people. 21 And the children of Israel, that were found in Jerusalem, made the solemnity of Azymes seven days in great joy, praying our Lord every day. The Levites also and the Priests by instruments, that agreed to their office. 22 And Ezechias spake to the heart of all the Levites, that had good understanding concerning our Lord: & they did eat during the seven days of the solemnity, immolating victims of pacifics, and praising our Lord the God of their fathers. 23 And it pleased the whole multitude to celebrate it (b) other seven days. Which also they did with great joy.

(b) Voluntary works of supererogation, more than was commanded.

24 For Ezechias the king of Juda had given the multitude a thousand oxen, and seven thousand sheep: but the Princes had given the people oxen a thousand, and sheep ten thousand: there was sanctified therefore a very great multitude of Priests. 25 And all the multitude of Juda was full of mirth, as well of the Priests and Levites, as of all the assembly, that came out of Israel, of the proselytes also of the land of Israel, and them that dwelt in Juda. 26 And there was made a great solemnity in Jerusalem, such as had not been in that city from the days of Salomon the son of David the king of Israel. 27 And the Priests and the Levites rose up blessing the people: and their voice was heard: and their prayer came into the holy habitation of heaven.

CHAPTER XXXI.

Idols being destroyed in all Juda and part of Israel, Priests and Levites freely execute their functions. 4. Tithes and first fruits are payed in such aboundance, 15. that they are put in store houses, and distributed by officers.

And when these things had been ritely celebrated, all Israel that was found in the cities of Juda, went forth, and they brake the idols, & cut down the groves, overthrew the excelses, and destroyed the altars, not only out of all Juda and Benjamin, but out of Ephraim also and Manasses, till they utterly destroyed them: and all the children of Israel returned into their possessions and cities. 2 And Ezechias appointed companies of Priests, and of Levites, by their divisions, every man in his own office, to wit, as well of the Priests, as of the Levites, for the holocausts, and pacifics, that they should minister, and (a) confess, and sing in the gates of the camp of our Lord.

(a) Besides confession of sins there is also confession of God's excellency and goodness.

3 And the king's part was, that of his proper substance^ holocaust should be offered, morning always and evening, in the Sabbaths also, and the Calends, and in other solemnities, as it is written in the law of Moyses. 4 He commanded also the people that dwelt in Jerusalem, to give portions to the Priests, and the Levites, that they might attend the law of our Lord. 5 Which when it was noised in the ears of the multitude, the children of Israel offered very many first fruits of corn, of wine, and of oil, of honey also: and of all things, which the ground bringeth forth, they offered tithes. 6 Yea and the children of Israel and Juda, that dwelt in the cities of Juda, offered tithes of oxen, and sheep, and tithes of sanctified things, which they had vowed to our Lord their God: and carrying them all, made many heaps. 7 The third month they began to lay the foundations of the heaps, and in the seventh month they finished them. 8 And when Ezechias and his Princes came in, they saw the heaps, and blessed our Lord, and the people of Israel. 9 And Ezechias asked the Priests and the Levites, why the heaps lay so: 10 Azarias the high Priest of the stock of Sadoc answered him, saying: Since first fruits began to be offered in the house of our Lord, we have eaten, and have been full, and very much hath remained, because our Lord hath blessed his people: and of the remains this is the aboundance, which thou seest. 11 Ezechias therefore commanded that storehouses should be prepared in the house of our Lord. Which when they had done, 12 they brought in as well the first fruits, as the tithes, and whatsoever they had vowed, faithfully. And the overseer of them was Chonenias a Levite, & Semei his brother the second, 13 after whom Jahiel, and Azarias, and

Nahath, and Asael, and Jerimoth, Josabad also, and Eliel, and Iesmachias, and Mahath, and Banaias, overseers under the hand of Chonenias, and Semei his brother, by the commandment of Ezechias the king, and Azarias the high Priest of the house of God, to whom all things appertained. 14 But Core the son of Jemna a Levite, and porter of the east gate, was overseer of those things, which were voluntarily offered to our Lord, and of the first fruits and the things consecrated for Sancta sanctorum. 15 And under his charge Eden, and Benjamin, Jesue, and Semeias, Amarias also, and Sechenias, in the cities of the Priests, that they should faithfully distribute to their brethren portions, to the lesser and greater: 16 saving the men children from three years and above, to all that entered into the temple of our Lord, and whatsoever day by day was profitable in the ministry, and the observances according to their divisions, 17 to the Priests by families, and to the Levites from the twentieth year and upward, by the orders and companies, 18 and to all the multitude, as well their wives, as their children of both sex, meats were given faithfully of these things, that had been sanctified. 19 Yea and of the children of Aaron by the fields and the suburbs of every city, there were men ordained, that should distribute portions, to all the male sex, of the Priests and the Levites. 20 Ezechias therefore did all things which we have said in all Juda: and wrought good and right, and truth before our Lord his God, 21 in all the service of the ministry of the house of our Lord, according to the law and the ceremonies, willing to seek his God in all his heart, and he did it and prospered.

CHAPTER XXXII.

Sennacherib king of Assyria invading Juda, king Ezechias encourageth the people, and provideth to defend the country. 9. The Assyrians threaten the people, and blaspheme God. 20. Ezechias and Isaias pray. 21. An Angel destroyeth the Assyrians' army, so their king retiring home, is slain in his idol's temple by his own sons. 22. Ezechias reigneth in peace, 24. falleth into deadly sickness, but miraculously recovereth, offendeth in pride, and repenteth: 27. is exceeding rich, which he imprudently sheweth to strangers: 32. dieth, and Manasses succeedeth.

After [1] which things, and this manner of truth, came Sennacherib the king of the Assyrians, and entering into Juda, besieged the fenced cities, desirous to take them.

[1] 2. Reg. 18. Isa. 36.

2 Which when Ezechias had seen, to wit, that Sennacherib was come, and the whole force of the battle to be turned against Jerusalem, 3 taking counsel with the Princes, and the most valiant men, to stop up the heads of the fountains, that were without the city: and the sentence of them all decreeing this, 4 he gathered a very great multitude, & they stopped up all the fountains, and the river that ran in the midst of the land, saying: Lest the kings of the Assyrians come, and find aboundance of waters. 5 He built also doing industriously every wall that had been destroyed, and built towers upon them, & another wall without: and he repaired Mello in the city of David, and made armour and shields of all sorts: 6 And he appointed Princes of warriors in the army: and he called them all together in the street of the gate of the city, and spake to their heart, saying: 7 Do manfully, & take courage: fear not, neither dread ye the king of the Assyrians, and all the multitude, that is with him: for there are many more with us, than with him. 8 For with him is an arm of flesh: with us the Lord our God, which is our helper, and fighteth for us. And the people was encouraged with these manner of words of Ezechias the king of Juda. 9 Which things after they were done, Sennacherib the king of the Assyrians sent his servants to Jerusalem (for himself with all his army besieged Lachis) to Ezechias the king of Juda, and to all the people, that was in the city, saying: 10 Thus saith Sennacherib the king of the Assyrians: In whom having affiance, do you sit besieged in Jerusalem? 11 Hath Ezechias deceived you, to deliver you to death in hunger and thirst, affirming that the Lord your God can deliver you from the hand of the king of the Assyrians? 12 Why, is not this Ezechias, that hath destroyed his excelses, and altars, and hath commanded Juda and Jerusalem, saying: Before one altar you shall adore, and on it you shall burn incense? 13 Are you ignorant what things I have done, and my fathers to all the peoples of the lands? Have the gods of nations, and of all lands been able to deliver their country out of my hand? 14 Who is there of all the gods of the nations, which my fathers wasted, that could deliver his people out of my hand, that your God also can deliver you out of this hand? 15 Let not therefore Ezechias deceive you, nor delude you with vain persuasion, neither believe ye him. For if no god of all nations & Kingdoms could deliver his people out of my hand, and out of the hand of my fathers, consequently neither shall your God be able to deliver you out of my hand. 16 Yea & many other things did his servants speak against our Lord God, and against Ezechias his servant. 17 Letters also he wrote full of blasphemy against our Lord the God of Israel, and he spake against him: as the gods of their nations could not deliver their people out of my hand, so the God also of Ezechias cannot deliver his people out of this hand. 18 Moreover also with a loud cry, in the Jews' tongue, he sounded against the people that sat on the walls of Jerusalem, that he might terrify them, and take the city. 19 And he spake against the God of Jerusalem, as against the gods of the peoples of the earth, the works of men's hands. 20 Ezechias therefore the king, and Isaias the Prophet the son of Amos, prayed against this blasphemy, and cried out even to heaven. 21 And our Lord sent an Angel, which struck every strong man, and warrior, and Prince of the army of the king of the Assyrians: and he returned with ignominy into his country. And when he was entered into the house of his god, his sons that were come forth of his womb, slew him with the sword. 22 And our Lord saved Ezechias and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, out of the hand of Sennacherib the king of the Assyrians, and out of the hand of all, and gave them rest round about. 23 Many also brought hosts, and sacrifices to our Lord into Jerusalem, and gifts to Ezechias the king of Juda: who was exalted after these things before all nations. 24 In those days Ezechias was sick even to death, and he prayed our Lord: and he heard him, and gave him a sign. 25 But not according to the benefits which he received, did he recompense, (a) because his heart was elevated: & wrath came against him, and against Juda and Jerusalem.

(a) More danger of pride in prosperity, than in adversity.

26 And he was humbled afterward, because his heart had been exalted, both he & the inhabitants of Jerusalem: and therefore the wrath of our Lord came not upon them in the days of Ezechias. 27 And Ezechias was rich & glorious exceedingly, & gathered to himself great treasures of silver and of gold, and of precious stone, of spices, & of armour of all kind, and of vessels of great price. 28 Storehouses also of corn, of wine, and of oil, and stalls of all beasts, and folds of cattle, 29 and six cities he built to himself: for he had flocks of sheep, & of herds innumerable, because our Lord had given him substance exceeding much. 30 The same is Ezechias, that stopped the upper fountain of the waters of Gihon, and turned them away underneath toward the West of the City of David: in all his works he did prosperously what he would. 31 But yet in the embassy of the Princes of Babylon, that were sent to him, to ask of the wonder, that had chanced upon the earth, God left him that he might be tempted, and all things might be made known, that were in his heart. 32 But the rest of the words of Ezechias, and of his mercies, are written in the vision of Isaias the son of Amos the Prophet, and in the book of the kings of Juda and Israel. 33 And Ezechias slept with his fathers, and they buried him in the chief sepulchres of the children of David: and all Juda celebrated his funerals, and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem: and Manasses his son reigned for him.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

Manasses for his manifold wickedness is led captive into Babylon: 12. repenteth in prison, is restored to his kingdom, and destroyeth idolatry: 18. dieth, 21. and Amon succeeding, 24. is slain by his servants, and Josias reigneth.

Twelve [1] years old was Manasses when he began to reign, & he reigned fifty five years in Jerusalem.

2 And he did evil before our Lord, according to all the abominations of the nations, which our Lord overthrew before the children of Israel: 3 and being turned, he re-edified the excelses which Ezechias his father had destroyed: and he built altars to Baalim, and made groves, and he adored all the host of heaven, & worshipped it. 4 He built also altars in the house of our Lord, whereof our Lord had said: In Jerusalem shall my name be for ever. 5 And he built them to all the host of heaven in the two courts of the house of our Lord: 6 And he made his sons to pass through fire, to the Valebenennom: he observed dreams, followed soothsayings, gave himself to magic arts, he had with him magicians, and enchanters: and he wrought many evils before our Lord, to provoke him. 7 Also a graven and a molten sign he put in the house of God, whereof our Lord spake to David, and to Salomon his son, saying: In this house, and in Jerusalem, which I have chosen of all the tribes of Israel, will I put my name for ever, 8 And I will not make the foot of Israel to move out of the land, which I have delivered to their fathers: yet so if they shall observe to do that I have commanded them, and all the law, and the ceremonies, and judgements by the hand of Moyses. 9 Manasses therefore seduced Juda, & the inhabitants of Jerusalem, that they did evil above all the nations, which our Lord had overthrown before the face of the children of Israel. 10 And our Lord spake to him, and to his people, and they would not attend. 11 Therefore he brought upon them the Princes of the host of the king of the Assyrians: and they took Manasses, and led him bound with chains, and fetters into Babylon. 12 Who after that he was in distress, prayed our Lord his God: and did penance exceedingly before the God of his fathers. 13 And he desired him, and besought him earnestly: (a) and he heard his prayer, and brought him again to Jerusalem into his Kingdom, and Manasses knew that our Lord he was God.

(a) A pregnant example of the effect of hearty repentance.

14 After these things he built a wall without the city of David, on the west of Gihon in the valley, from the entrance of the fish gate round about unto Ophel, and raised it exceedingly: and he appointed Princes of the host in all the fenced cities of Juda: 15 and he took away strange gods, and the idol out of the house of our Lord: the altars also which he had made in the mount of the house of our Lord, and in Jerusalem, and he threw all without the city. 16 Moreover he re-edified the altar of our Lord, and immolated upon it victims, and pacifics, and praise: and he commanded Juda to serve our Lord the God of Israel. 17 Nevertheless as yet the people immolated in the excelses to our Lord their God. 18 But the rest of the acts of Manasses: and his obsecration to his God: the words also of the Seers, that spake to him in the name of our Lord the God of Israel, are contained in the words of the kings of Israel. 19 His (b) prayer also, and his obtaining, and all his sins, and contempt, the places also wherein he built excelses, and made groves, and statues before he did penance, are written in the words of Hozai.

(b) This prayer is not extant in the Hebrew but in Greek and Latin, as yet neither received for canonical by the Church, nor refused.

20 Manasses therefore slept with his fathers, and they buried him in his house: and his son Amon reigned for him. 21 Amon was two & twenty years old when he began to reign, & he reigned two years in Jerusalem. 22 And he did evil in the sight of our Lord, as Manasses his father had done: & he immolated to all the idols, which Manasses his father had made, and served them. 23 And he did not reverence the face of our Lord, as Manasses his father did reverence it, and he committed far greater sins. 24 And when his servants had conspired against him, they slew him in his own house. 25 Moreover the rest of the multitude of the people, having slain them that struck Amon, made Josias his son king for him.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

Josias destroyeth idolatry, 8. repaireth the Temple. 14. The Book of the law found in the Temple is read before him. 19. Whereby understanding the sins of the people, 23. a Prophet foresheweth their punishment, 26. but not in his days. 29. He reneweth the covenant between God and the people.

Eight[1] years old was Josias when he began to reign and he reigned thirty and one years in Jerusalem.

2 And he did that which was right in the sight of our Lord, and walked in the ways of David his father: he declined not neither to the right hand, nor to the left. 3 And in the eighth year of his reign, when he was yet a child, he began to seek the God of his father David: & the twelfth year after he began to reign, he cleansed Juda and Jerusalem from excelses, and groves, and idols, and sculptiles. 4 And they destroyed before him the altars of Baalim, & the idols that had been set upon them, they destroyed: the groves also and sculptiles he cut down and brake in pieces: and over their tombs, that were accustomed to immolate unto them, he strawed the fragments. 5 [1]Moreover the bones of the Priests he burnt on the altars of the idols, and he cleansed Juda and Jerusalem.

[1] 3. Reg. 12.

6 Yea and in the cities of Manasses, and of Ephraim, and of Simeon, unto Nephthali he overthrew all. 7 And when he had destroyed the altars, and the groves, and had broken the idols into pieces, and had overthrown all profane temples out of all the land of Israel, he returned into Jerusalem. 8 Therefore in the eighteenth year of his reign, the land now cleansed, and the temple of our Lord, he sent Saphan the son of Eselias, and Maasias the governor of the city, and Joha the son of Joachaz Commenter, that they should repair the house of our Lord his God. 9 Who came to Helcias the high Priest: and taking of him the money, which had been brought into the house of our Lord, and which the Levites and porters had gathered together of Manasses, and Ephraim, and of all the remnant of Israel, of all Juda also, and Benjamin, and the inhabiters of Jerusalem, 10 they delivered in their hands, that oversaw the workmen in the house of our Lord, that they should repair the temple, and mend all weak parts. 11 But they gave it to the artificers, and to the masons, that they should buy stones out of the quarries, and timber for the jointures of the building, and for making the roof of the houses, which the kings of Juda had destroyed. 12 Who did all things faithfully. And the overseers of the workmen were Jahath and Abdias of the children of Merari, Zacharias and Mosollam of the children of Caath, which urged the work: all Levites skillful to sing on instruments. 13 But over them, that carried burdens to diverse uses, were scribes, & masters of the Levites, & porters. 14 And when they carried forth the money, that had been brought into the temple of our Lord, Helcias the Priest found the Book of the law of our Lord (a) by the hand of Moyses.

(a) Given by the hand of Moyses.

15 And he said to Saphan the Scribe: I have found the Book of the law in the house of our Lord: and delivered it to him. 16 But he brought in the volume to the king, and told him, saying: All things, which thou gavest into the hand of thy servants, lo are accomplished. 17 The silver that was found in the house of our Lord they have gathered into a mass: and it was given to the overseers of the artificers, and of them that make diverse works. 18 Moreover Helcias the priest delivered me this Book. Which when he had read in the king's presence, 19 and he had heard the words of the law, he rent his garments: 20 and he commanded Helcias, and Ahicam the son of Saphan, and Abdon the son of Micha, Saphan also the scribe, and Asaa the king's servant, saying: 21 Go, and pray our Lord for me, and for the remnant of Israel, and Juda, concerning all the words of this Book, which is found: for the great fury of our Lord hath distilled upon us, for that our fathers have not kept the words of our Lord, to do all things that are written in this volume. 22 Helcias therefore went, and they that were sent together by the king, to Olda a Prophetess, the wife of Sellum the son of Thecuath, the son of Hasra keeper of the garments: who dwelt in Jerusalem in the second part: and they spake to her the words, which we have above mentioned. 23 But she answered them: Thus saith our Lord the God of Israel: Tell the man, that sent you to me: 24 Thus saith our Lord: Behold I will bring evils upon this place, and upon the inhabitants thereof, and all the curses, that are written in this Book, which they read before the king of Juda. 25 Because they have forsaken me, and have sacrificed to strange gods, that they might provoke me to wrath in all the works of their hands, therefore shall my fury drop upon this place, and shall not be extinguished. 26 But to the king of Juda that sent you to beseech our Lord, thus speak ye: Thus saith our Lord the God of Israel: Because thou hast heard the words of this volume, 27 and thy heart is mollified, & thou art humbled in the sight of our Lord for these things, which are spoken against this place, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and reverencing my face hast rent thy garments, and wept before me: I also have heard thee, saith our Lord. 28 (b) For now will I gather thee to thy fathers, & thou shalt be brought into thy grave in peace: neither shall thine eyes see all the evil that I will bring in upon this place, and upon the inhabitants thereof. They therefore reported to the king all things that she had said.

(b) It is a benefit to be taken out of this world, before general misery come upon the people.

29 But he calling together all the ancients of Juda and Jerusalem, 30 went up into the house of our Lord, and all the men of Juda, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, Priests and Levites, and all the people from the least to the greatest. In whose hearing in the house of our Lord, the king read all the words of the volume. 31 And standing on his tribunal seat, he made a covenant before our Lord, that he would walk after him, and keep his precepts, and testimonies, and justifications in all his heart, and in all his soul, and would do the things that were written in that volume, which he had read. 32 He adjured also upon this^ all that were found in Jerusalem, and Benjamin: and the inhabitants of Jerusalem did according to the covenant of our Lord the God of their fathers. 33 Josias therefore took away all abominations of all the countries of the children of Israel: and made all, that were left in Israel, to serve our Lord their God. All his days they revolted not from our Lord the God of their fathers.

CHAPTER XXXV.

Josias celebrateth a most Solemn Pasch. 20. Is slain by the king of Aegypt, all Juda lamenting him, 25. most specially Jeremias.

And Josias made in Jerusalem (a) [1] a Phase to our Lord, which was immolated the fourteenth day of the first month.

(a) This Phase or Pasch made by Iosias is famous, partly for that this feast had been omitted some years, but specially for the great and extraordinary solemnity made at this time. [1] 4. Reg. 16.

2 And he appointed the Priests in their offices, & exhorted them that they would minister in the house of our Lord. 3 To the Levites also, at whose instruction all Israel was sanctified to our Lord, he spake: Put the Ark in the Sanctuary of the temple, which Salomon built^ the son of David the king of Israel, for you shall carry it no more: but now minister to our Lord your God, & to his people Israel. 4 And prepare yourselves by your houses & kindreds in the divisions of every one, as David the king of Israel commanded, & Salomon his son described. 5 And minister ye in the Sanctuary by families and Levitical companies, 6 and being sanctified immolate the Phase, prepare also your brethren, that they may do according to the words, which our Lord spake in the hand of Moyses. 7 Moreover Josias gave to all the people, that was found there in the solemnity of the Phase, lambs and kids of the flocks, and of the rest of the cattle thirty thousand, of oxen also three thousand, all these things of the king's substance. 8 His dukes also voluntarily offered that which they vowed, as well to the people, as to the Priests and the Levites. Moreover Helcias, and Zacharias, and Jahiel, Princes of the house of our Lord, gave to the Priests to make the Phase, cattle, one with another two thousand six hundred, and oxen three hundred. 9 And Chonenias, & Semeias, also Nathanael, his brethren, moreover Hasabias, & Jehiel, and Jozabad Princes of the Levites, gave to the rest of the Levites to celebrate the Phase five thousand sheep, and oxen five hundred. 10 And the ministry was prepared, and the Priests stood in their office: the Levites also in companies, according to the king's commandment. 11 And the Phase was immolated: and Priests sprinkled the blood with their hand, and the Levites drew of the skins of the holocausts: 12 and they separated them to give them by the houses and families of every one, and to be offered to our Lord, as it is written in the Book of Moyses, of oxen also they did in like manner. 13 And they roasted the Phase upon fire, according to that which is written in the law: but the pacific hosts they boiled in cauldrons, and kettles, and pots, & in haste they distributed it to all the people. 14 And for themselves and for the Priests they prepared afterward: for in oblation of holocausts and of fat the Priests were occupied until night: wherefore the Levites prepared for themselves, and for the Priests the children of Aaron last. 15 Moreover the singing men the children of Asaph stood in their order, according to the precept of David, and Asaph, and Heman, and Idithun the Prophets of the king: and the porters watched at every gate, so that they departed not a moment from the ministry. For the which cause also their brethren the Levites prepared meats for them. 16 Therefore all the service of our Lord was ritely accomplished that day, so that they made the Phase, and offered holocausts upon the altar of our Lord, according to the precept of king Josias. 17 And the children of Israel that were found there, made the Phase at that time, and the solemnity of Azymes seven days. 18 There was not a Phase like to this in Israel, from the days of Samuel the Prophet: neither did any of all the kings of Israel make a Phase as Josias, to the Priests, and the Levites, and to all Juda, and Israel, that was found, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem. 19 In the eighteenth year of the Kingdom of Josias was this Phase celebrated. 20 After that Josias had repaired the temple, came up Nechao the king of Aegypt to fight in Charcamis beside Euphrates: and Josias went forth to meet him. 21 But he sending messengers unto him, said: What have I to do with thee king of Juda? I come not against thee this day, but I fight against another house, to the which God hath commanded me to go in haste. Leave to do against God, who is with me, lest he kill thee. 22 (b) Josias would not return, but prepared battle against him, neither did he agree to the words of Nechao from the mouth of God, but went forward to fight in the field of Mageddo.

(b) Josias thought that the King of Aegypt intended to invade his Kingdom. And it was God's will he should be slain, and not see the evils that should happen to the people.

23 And there being wounded of the Archers, he said to his servants: Carry me out of the battle, because I am sore wounded. 24 Who removed him from one chariot into another chariot that followed him after the manner of kings, and they carried him away into Jerusalem, & he died, & was buried in the monument of his fathers, and all Juda & Jerusalem (c) mourned for him.

(c) Solemn exequies with lamentations and music.

25 Jeremy most of all: whose lamentations all the singing men and singing women repeat until this present day upon Josias, & it is grown as it were a law in Israel: Behold it is said to be written in the lamentations. 26 But the rest of the words of Josias and of his mercies: which are commanded by the law of our Lord: 27 his works also the first and the last, are written in the Book of the kings of Juda and Israel.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

Joachaz reigneth three months. 4. His brother Eliakim (named Joakim) eleven years, 9. his son Joachin three months, 11. his uncle Sedecias eleven years. 14. Most Priests and people contemning the admonitions of Prophets, 17. many are slain by the Chaldees, the temple and Jerusalem spoiled and burnt. 20. The said kings successively and people are carried captive into Babylon. 22. After seventy years Cyrus king of Persia, releaseth the captivity, and giveth leave to re-edify the Temple.

The people therefore of the land took Joachaz the son of Josias, and made him king for his father in Jerusalem. 2 Three and twenty years old was Joachaz, when he began to reign, and he reigned three months in Jerusalem. 3 And the king of Aegypt when he came into Jerusalem, deposed him, and condemned the land in an hundred talents of silver, and a talent of gold. 4 And he made Eliakim (a) his brother king for him, over Juda and Jerusalem: and he turned his name Joakim: but he took Joachaz himself with him, and carried him away into Aegypt.

(a) Hitherto from K. David's death the son had ever succeeded to his father.

5 Five and twenty years old was Joakim when he began to reign, and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem: and he did evil before our Lord his God. 6 Against him came up Nabuchodonosor the king of the Chaldees, and brought him bound in chains into Babylon. 7 Whither he transported also the vessels of our Lord, and put them in his temple. 8 But the rest of the words of Joakim, and of his abominations which he wrought, and the things that were found in him, are contained in the Book of the kings of Juda and Israel. And Joachin his son reigned for him. 9 Eight years old was Joachin when he began to reign, and he reigned three months and ten days in Jerusalem, and he did evil in the sight of our Lord. 10 And when the compass of a year was come about, Nabuchodonosor the king sent some, that brought him into Babylon, the most precious vessels of the house of our Lord being carried away withal: But he made Sedecias his uncle king over Juda and Jerusalem. 11 One and twenty years old was Sedecias when he began to reign: and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem. 12 And he did evil in the eyes of our Lord his God, neither did he reverence the face of Jeremy the Prophet speaking to him from the mouth of our Lord. 13 He revolted also from king Nabuchodonosor, who had adjured him by God: & he hardened his neck & his heart, that he would not return to our Lord the God of Israel. 14 Yea and all the chief of the Priests, and the people transgressed unlawfully according to all the abominations of the Gentiles: and they polluted the house of our Lord, which he had sanctified to him in Jerusalem. 15 And our Lord the God of their fathers sent to them by the hand of his messengers rising by night, and daily admonishing them: for that he spared his people and his habitation. 16 But they mocked the messengers of God, and little esteemed his words, and scorned the Prophets, until the fury of our Lord ascended upon his people, and there was no amendment. 17 For he brought upon them the king of the Chaldees, & slew their young men with the sword in the house of his sanctuary, he pitied not young man, and virgin, and old man, no neither him that stooped for age, but he delivered all into his hands. 18 And all the vessels of the house of our Lord, as well greater as lesser, and the treasures of the temple, and of the king, and the Princes, he transported into Babylon. 19 The enemies set fire on the house of God, & destroyed the wall of Jerusalem, all the towers they burnt, and whatsoever was precious, they destroyed. 20 If any man escaped the sword, being led into Babylon he served the king and his sons, till the king of the Persians reigned. 21 [1] That the word of our Lord by the mouth of Jeremy might be accomplished, and the land might celebrate their Sabbaths: for all the days of the desolation she kept a Sabbath, till the seventy years were expired.

22 But in (b) the first year of Cyrus king of the Persians, to fulfill the word of our Lord, which he had spoken by the mouth of Jeremy, our Lord raised up the spirit of Cyrus king of the Persians: who commanded to be proclaimed in all his Kingdom, yea by writing, saying:

(b) It is like that Esdras added this conclusion when he restored the holy Scriptures that were lost: for he beginneth his own book with the same words.

23 Thus saith Cyrus king of the Persians: All Kingdoms of the earth hath the Lord the God of heaven given me, and he hath commanded me that I should build him a house in Jerusalem, which is in Jewry: who of you is there in all his people? The Lord his God be with him, and let him go up.

The end of the fifth age.

THE CONTINUANCE OF THE CHURCH AND RELIGION, IN THE FIFTH AGE.

From the foundation of the Temple, to the captivity in Babylon. The space of 430. years.

◦The Church still visible, and the same faith as before.

ALBEIT there were greater Schisms, Heresies, and more revolts from God's law and service in this fifth age, than in the former: ◦Yet the true Church and Religion continued still, and were no less conspicuous than before. Which being clear and evident, touching many principal Articles, we will here only remit the reader to some special places, for confirmation thereof: neither will we be prolix in declaring other points denied, or called into controversy at this time, by the impugners of Catholic Religion.

[1] One God.
[2] Three Persons.
[3] Christ.
[4] Sacrifices.
[5] Sacraments to be changed by Christ.
[6] Fruits of penance.
[7] Abstinence.
[8] Fasts.
[9] Lent.

[1] Belief in one God appeareth plainly in building, adorning, and dedicating the Temple with so great solemnity of the Priests, Levites, and all the Tribes, and particularly by King Salomon's prayer, 3. Reg. 7. & 8. 2. Paral. 2. &c. Also Proverb. 8. Eccle. 12. Isaie 41. 44. 45. [2] The Mystery of the B. Trinity, Prover. 12. Isaie 6. 48. 49. Ose. 11. Ioel. 2. [3] Of Christ our Redeemer, Isaie. 7. 8. 9. 11. 28. 53. Ierem. 23. 30. 33. Ezech. 17. 34. 37. Dan. 7. 9. Osee. 6. 11. 14. Ioel. 2. Sophon. 2. Aggai 2. Zachar. 2. &c. [4] Sacrifices, Sacraments, & other Rites the same as before. But more frequent Prophecies, that they should be changed into better and perfecter by Christ [5]. Prov. 9. Isai. 12. 52. 55. 61. In the mean time for more signification of the singular virtue of Christ's Sacraments, the effect of penitential works is often recorded. For example, wicked Achab by hair-cloth, fasting, and other humiliation escaped part of his deserved punishment, [6] 3. Reg. 21. Manasses recovered God's favour, and his temporal Kingdom, 2. Par. 33. Who yet was punished in his posterity. 4. Reg. 23. And the Ninivites by such penance avoided destruction. Ionae 3. Yea nothing is more frequent in the Prophets than preaching of penance. Isa. 1. 2. 3. 30. Iere. 3. 18. &c. and others, all ascribing the cause of plagues, and afflictions to the want of repentance. And false Prophets condemned of error and false doctrine, for promising the people peace, and security in their sins. Ierem. 14. Lamen. 2. [7] Besides abstinence from diverse sorts of meats, counted unclean (Isaiae 66.) and ordinary fasts, [8] according to the law, other fasts were appointed sometimes, upon occasions requiring, not only to subdue, and mortify the flesh, but also to obtain mercy at God's hands in special distresses. 2. Par. 20. Ioel. 1. 2. Ionae 3. Elias fasting forty days, 3. Reg. 19. prefigured Christ's fast. Which the Church imitateth in Lent of forty days,[9] according to human hability, for the fasts of Christ, Elias, and Moyses were miraculous.

[1]To the Feasts instituted before, was added the Dedication of the Temple. 3. Reg. 7. 2. Par. 3. Which was built in Mount Moria, 2. Par. 3. [2]the place designed long before for this purpose, when Abraham was directed thither by God, and was there ready to sacrifice his son Isaac. Gen. 22. Where David also offered sacrifice. 2. Reg. 24, 1. Par. 21.

[2]Place of the Temple designed long before.

This being the only ordinary place for Sacrifice, there were for other uses of daily prayer, reading, preaching, and hearing the word of God other Synagogues built[1] (as it were Parish churches) in great number: in Jerusalem it-self four hundred and four score, and many more in the whole Kingdom, as the Hebrew Traditions testify. [2]Of all which places, especially of the Temple, there was venerable respect had. For which cause when Joiada the High Priest gave order to kill Athalia, he suffered it not to be done in the Temple, but commanded first to draw her forth. 4. Reg. 11. 2. Par. 23. And as peculiar places, [3]so special Psalms, and Hymns were appointed for diverse purposes and occasions. 2. Par. 20.

[1]Synagogues.
[2]Sanctuary.
[3]Set form of prayers.

◦The ministry of Angels was very usual in this time. One was sent to comfort and direct Elias the prophet in his afflictions. 3. Reg. 19. 4. Reg. 1. An Angel struck the Assyrians' whole camp, 4. Reg. 19. 2. Par. 32. Also the Intercession of Angels is so evident, Tobiae 12. Raphael offering Tobias' prayer to God*, that Protestants have no other refuge to avoid this point of faith, but by denying the Book to be Canonical Scripture*.

◦Ministry of Angels.

[1]Honour of other Saints, and their Intercession is proved a Maiori. For so much as honour was religiously exhibited to spiritual power and excellency, in men yet living in this world. So a Noble man adored Elias the Prophet, being far greater than he in civil and worldly respects. 3. Reg. 18. Eliseus also was adored by his disciples, not for any worldly authority or eminence, but for his spiritual power and superiority amongst them. 4. Reg. 2. Likewise all Prophets and Priests were religiously honoured for their holy and spiritual functions. 3. Reg. 13. Much more Saints are rightly honoured, being immortal and in eternal glory. It appeareth also that Elias seven years after that he was translated from human conversation (when Eliseus was chief Prophet, 4. Reg. 3. which was in or before the eighteenth year of Iosaphat, who reigned five and twenty, 3. Reg. 22.) had care of Joram, and his kingdom, admonishing him by letters of God's wrath, against him and his people for their sins. 2. Par. 21. And the Scripture saith often, that God spared and protected Jerusalem, and the Kingdom of Juda for David's sake. 3. Reg. 11. 15. 4. Reg. 8. 19. 20. 2. Par. 6. 21. Isa. 37. [2]We have also example of Saints' Relics in the cloak of Elias. 4. Reg. 2. in Eliseus' bones, 4. Reg. 13. and in another Prophet's body buried in Bethel. Which Iosias would not suffer to be touched. 4. Reg. 23. [3]Images were conserved in the Temple, 3. Reg. 7. as before in the Tabernacle: when idolatry was most destroyed. 3. Reg. 15. 4. Reg. 23. yea an abuse rising of the brazen serpent, for which Ezechias destroyed it, 4. Reg. 18. yet he touched not the Images of Cherubins in the Temple. Which none but Infidels sought to destroy. And Osee the Prophet (ch. 3.) bewaileth the want of Theraphim or Images, amongst other sacred things, Sacrifice, Altar, and Ephod. Whereby the ancient Rabbins prove very well, that Images of Angels (and the same of other Saints) are not contrary to the Decalogue, but the images of Idols. [4]Good works were rewarded, and bad punished, 3. Reg. 9. and the whole history of this age testifieth the same. Where by the way may be observed, that some just men fell from their justice, as Salomon 1. Par. 28. 3. Reg. 11. Joas, 4. Reg. 12. 2. Par. 24. Ozias, 2. Paral. 26. Others from wickedness returned to piety, as Manasses 4. Reg. 23. 2. Par. 33. the multitude of the people very often much following the disposition of their Kings. [5]Special State of life not commanded by the law, was voluntarily professed, and observed by some Prophets, and their disciples called the children of Prophets: Keeping particular Rules, and wearing distinct habit, 4. Reg. 1. 2. 4. The orders of Nazarites, and Rechabites instituted before, continued still, Amos. 2. Ierem. 35. [6] All which were very exemplar figures of Religious State, and Orders in the new Testament, and perpetual chastity of clergy men embraced by such as follow Evangelical counsels, proposed, and not commanded by our Saviour. [7] To which S. Paul likewise exhorteth, though there be no precept thereof to any, before they bind themselves.

[1] Solemn Exequies for the dead.

[2] Gen. 5.

[3] Resurrection.

[4] Judgement.

[5] Eternal glory or pain.

[1] Exequies for the dead were continually kept, as the sacred history witnesseth, recording where and with what solemnity the Kings were buried. Which would be overlong, and needless to recite: the like is also written of some Prophets. 3. Reg. 13. 4. Reg. 23. Holy Tobias by example and fatherly admonition exhorted his son to do works of mercy, not only to the living, but also to the dead. Put thy bread and thy wine upon the sepulture of the just. ch. 4. Isaias, ch. 57. as the Jews both understood and practised, prayed, that peace be given to the just, in his couch, or resting place after his death. Of the general Resurrection, [2] Elias' translation is a figure, who yet living sheweth, that God can and will restore all men to life again in their bodies, after death, as he conserveth him, an Enoch in their mortal bodies without corruption. [3] Ezechiel also prophesieth of the Resurrection of the dead, applying it mystically to spiritual resurrection, and restoration of Israel to former state. ch. 37. [4] Of the last Judgement, and eternal glory to the good, and everlasting pain to the wicked, [5] Salomon agreeably to the doctrine of other Prophets, discourseth in his book of Ecclesiastes, namely ch. 3. 11. and in the last concludeth thus: Let us altogether hear the end of speaking: Fear God, and observe his commandments: for this is every man (or, to this end man is created) and God will bring into Judgement all things, that are done, for every error (or obscure thing) whether it be good or evil.

[1] Church without interruption.

[2] Jeroboam's wicked policy.

[1] Neither were these and other points of Faith and Religion interrupted, but still believed and professed in the Church always visible and incontaminate, notwithstanding some boughs and branches became unfruitful, and rotten: others brake off and were separated from this vine. For when Salomon falling to luxury, multiplying many wives and concubines, was by them seduced and brought to spiritual fornication and idolatry, making altars, and offering sacrifices to Idols, the Priests, Prophets, and people generally persevered in God's law and service. 3. Reg. 11. [2] After whose death Jeroboam his servant, of the tribe of Ephraim, possessing Ten Tribes (called the Kingdom of Israel) to maintain his new state, fearing that if the people resorted to Jerusalem for religion's sake, they would depart from him, and return to the right heirs of David and Salomon, made an egregious Schism, setting up two golden calves in Bethel and Dan, 3. Reg. 12. made temples, altars, and Priests to serve them, all opposite to God's ordinance. But not only the other Two Tribes, called the Kingdom of Juda, but also the greatest part of Israel, especially Priests, Levites, and devoutest people, repaired still to Jerusalem, not yielding to that schism and idolatry. 2. Par. 11. Moreover God raised up and sent special Prophets to confirm the weak and recall the seduced.

[1] Prophets inspired by God to resist Schism and Heresy.

[3] The often change of Kings, and evil succeed in the Kingdom of Israel.

[1] For Jeroboam has no sooner set up his new altar in Bethel, and begun to offer incense upon it, but a Prophet came out of Juda in the word of our Lord, and cried against that altar, foretelling that whereas for that present they burnt frankincense upon it, the time should come, when the false Priests should be burned there, confirming by present miracles that which he averred in words, [2] the King's hand suddenly withering, and restored again by the Prophet's prayer, and the new altar cleaving in sunder, that the ashes fell out. 3. Reg. 13. [3] Further another Prophet called Ahias foreshewed the destruction and utter extirpation of Jeroboam's family, for his enormous wickedness, and namely (which is most often inculcate) for making Israel to sin, by devising and setting abroach a new religion. 3. Reg. 14. which ruin happened very shortly. [4] For himself reigning twenty two years (3. Reg. 14.) one of his sons died presently according to the Prophet's word. v. 18. Another called Nadab succeeding to his father, reigned only two year, and was slain together with their whole race and kindred, by Baasa of the tribe of Issachar. 3. Reg. 15. [5] Likewise Baasa following the bad steps of Jeroboam was forewarned by Jehu a Prophet, that his house should also be destroyed. And accordingly when he had reigned four and twenty years, his son Ela reigned but two years, was slain by his servant Zambri, and all his kindred destroyed. [6] Which Zambri reigned but seven days. For being forthwith besieged by Amri, of the tribe of Benjamin, he desperately burned himself together with the King's palace. [7] Neither did Amri then possess the Kingdom with peace. For he being chosen King by the army only, whereof he was General, another part of the people chose & followed Thebni. Whereof arose civil War between the Anti-Kings, continuing three years: till Thebni died, and so Amri reigned alone, but wickedly as his predecessors, twelve years in all. Then succeeded his son Achab most wicked. Who married Jezabel a Sidonian, & by her was persuaded to worship Baal. 3. Reg. 16. To him notwithstanding God sent many admonitions by sundry Prophets, and bestowed great benefits upon him, whereupon he did some notorious penitential works, but not persevering in any good thing, returned to his wickedness. 3. Reg. 20. And finally believing false Prophets, and persecuting Micheas for prophesying the truth, was slain in battle when he thought himself most secure. 3. Reg. 22. having reigned twenty two years. 3. Reg. 16. His son Ochozias reigning but two years fell through a window, and died of the hurt. 4. Reg. 1. His other son Joram, after twelve years was slain by Jehu of another family: [8] who then dispatched Jezabel, and leaving her in the street, the dogs did eat her carcass. He also caused seventy sons of Joram to be slain, and utterly destroyed all Achab's house. 4. Reg. 10. For which service he was established in the Kingdom, for four generations, v. 30. So himself reigning twenty eight years, 3. Reg. 10. after him reigned successively his son Joachaz seventeen years, his son Joas sixteen years, 4. Reg. 13. his son Jeroboam one and forty years. Lastly his son Zacharias, whom his servant Sellum, of another race, killed when he had reigned but six months, 4. Reg. 15. [9] And after one month Sellum was slain by Manahen of another progeny. [10] Who reigned ten years. Then his son Phaceia reigning two years, was slain by Phacee of another generation. [11] He reigning twenty years, many of his people were carried captive into Assyria, and himself was slain by Osee of another kindred. 4. Reg. 15. [12] Finally the Assyrians taking Samaria by three years siege, in the ninth year of Osee possessed the Kingdom of Israel, [13] and led all the principal persons captives into Assyria: about two hundred forty two years after that Jeroboam first reigned over the Ten Tribes. Thus there were in all nineteen Kings. Besides Thebni, who only reigned in part against another. Of which the first Jeroboam, and Jehu were advanced by God's ordinance, for punishment of others. Amri was chosen by the army, the rest of the people choosing Thebni. Six invaded by mere force, killing their predecessors. The rest succeeded, by such titles as their fathers had. And though some were better some worse than others, all were wicked, and at last overthrown.

[4] The first family reigned but 24. years.

[5] The second new family. 26.

[6] The third but 7. days.

[7] The fourth, 48.

[8] The fifth. 103.

[9] The sixth, one month.

[10] The seventh, 12. years.

[11] The eighth 20. years.

[12] The ninth nine years.

[13] Then overthrown, and the Kingdom never restored.

◦ Contrarywise in the Kingdom of Juda standing after the separation of ten tribes about four hundred years, though some Kings were wicked, yet some were good, and in them all God preserved David's seed, by the line of Salomon, in this direct succession: Roboam, Abias, Asa, Iosaphat, Joram, Ochozias, Joas (in whose infancy, his grandmother Athalia usurped the Kingdom six years) Amasias, Ozias, Joathan, Achaz, Ezechias, Manasses, Amon, Josias, Joachaz (hitherto the son ever succeeding his father) then Ioakim (brother of Joachaz) Ioachin otherwise called Jechonias, son of Joachaz. And finally his Uncle Sedecias, who was carried captive into Babylon. But Jechonias by God's special providence, was favoured & exalted by a new King of Babylon, whither he was led captive before. In whose line David's offspring continued though not with title of Kings, yet in eminent state, and estimation. As resteth to be noted in the sixth age of the world.

◦The progeny also of Aaron continued in their office and function of Priesthood, with succession of High Priests, as before from Aaron to Sadoc, partly in the line of Eleazar, partly of Ithamar, both Aaron's sons, so from Sadoc, by the like succession of both families. For of Eleazar is recorded this Genealogy 1. Paral. 6. Sadoc, Achimaas, Azarias, Johanan, Azarias, Amarias, Achitob, Sadoc, Sellum, Helcias, Azarias, Zaraias, and Josedech, who was High Priest in the captivity (v. 15.) being carried into Babylon in the first transmigration with King Jechonias, before the general captivity of all, as it seemeth 4. Reg. 24. his father Zaraias yet living, who was slain nine years after by Nabuchodonosor, 4. Reg. 25. And amongst these there were some High Priests of Ithamar's line. To wit, Joram, Joiada, (4. Reg. 11. 2. Par. 23.) Joathan, Urias, (4. Reg. 16.) and some others; or else some of the above mentioned, had other names, recited by Iosephus lib. 10. cap. 11. Antiq. and Nicephorus lib. 2. cap. 4. Hist. Eccles.

[1] Extraordinary mission of Prophets.

[2] Great effects of their preaching and miracles.

[3] Elias his miracles.

[4] Eliseus his miracles.

[1] Moreover besides this ordinary succession of Priests, there was an extraordinary mission of Prophets: to supply more fully the office of preaching the truth, and admonishing offenders. And these God inspired and sent, most especially when and where errors sprung, and sins most abounded: giving them extraordinary grace and most excellent virtues, to counterpoise the enormities of wicked men. Such were in the times of Achab and Jezabel, in the kingdom of Israel, besides many others, the two famous great Prophets Elias, & Eliseus. [2] Whose admirable lives and holy conversation were a mirror to the world, and great terror to the wicked, whose works and miracles marvelously confirmed the well disposed, encouraged the weak, converted many transgressors, confounded false Prophets, justified their own preaching, and much glorified God. [3] Elias 1. shut the heaven, that it rained not in three years. 2. was fed by ravens. 3. Multiplied a poor widow's meal and oil. 4. Raised her dead son to life (3. Reg. 17.) 5. Brought fire from heaven, to burn his sacrifice: thereby confounding four hundred and fifty false prophets of Baal. 6. by prayer procured rain. (3. Reg. 18.) 7. Fasted without eating or drinking forty days and nights together. (3. Reg. 19.) 8. Procured fire from heaven, which devoured two insolent captains, and their hundred men (4. Reg. 1.) 9. Divided the river of Jordan with his cloak, that himself and Eliseus pass over the dry channel. 10. Was assumpted in a fiery chariot into some place, where he yet liveth. And parting away obtained of God the like double spirit (of prophecy and miracles) to Eliseus. In like manner [4] Eliseus 1. divided Jordan again by Elias' cloak, and so returned to his disciples. 2. Amended the bitterness of certain waters, by casting in salt. 3. Boys being cursed by him, for deriding him, were forthwith torn by bears (4. Reg. 2.) 4. He procured water without rain for three Kings in the camp (4. Reg. 3.) 5. Multiplied a poor widow's oil. 6. By his prayers a barren woman became fruitful. 7. He raised her son from death. 8. Made the bitter broth of his disciples sweet. 9. Fed many with few loaves (4. Reg. 4.) 10. Cured Naaman of leprosy. 11. Struck Giezi with the same (4. Reg. 5.) 12. Made iron to swim. 13. Knew the secret counsels of the Syrian King. 14. Made one see horse-men, and fiery chariots, which to others were invisible. 15. Made the Syrians blind, that were sent to apprehend him, and so led them into Samaria. 16. Foreshewed unexpected plenty of corn the next day, with the death of a great man, that would not believe it (4. Reg. 7.) 17. And after his death another man's dead body touching his bones was revived. 4. Reg. 13.

◦Religion not wholly destroyed in the Kingdom of Israel.

Other Prophets wrought also miracles, but these for examples may suffice to shew, ◦that God preserved religion also in the Kingdom of Israel. Which himself further testified, even in most desolate times, when Elias lamented, that he was left alone (3. Reg. 19.) For God answered, that seven thousand (meaning thereby a great multitude) had not bowed their knees to Baal, not so much as in outward shew conformed themselves to infidelity, or idolatry. Jehu in his time, destroyed all the worshippers of Baal. (4. Reg. 10.) But none at any time could wholly destroy true Israelites: For God would not suffer it. 4. Reg. 14. v. 27.

[1] Yea notwithstanding diverse notorious heresies were preached, & followed in that Kingdom of the Ten tribes, yet all did not fall, nor embrace them. Jeroboam not only made and set up golden calves, but also taught that they were Gods, [2] saying: Behold thy Gods, O Israel, which brought thee out of the land of Aegypt. 3. Reg. 12. making temples, altars, and imaginary Priests, which were not of the children of Levi. Also a feast the fifteenth day of the month, after the similitude of the solemnity, that was celebrated in Juda. All which the holy Scripture saith: He forged of his own heart . That very property of Arch-heretics. [3] But the true Priests, Levites, & many others, that had given their heart to seek our Lord, went into Jerusalem, to immolate their victims before our Lord the God of their fathers. 2. Par. 11. Yea Naaman a stranger of Syria, and a Neophyte in religion, taught by his example, that none may yield conformity, nor otherwise communicate with Infidels, than God's Priests and Prophets approve for lawful. 4. Reg. 5.

[1] Heresies in the Kingdom of Israel.
[2] Jeroboamites.
[3] Many constant in true religion.

Unto this heresy of Jeroboam, Achab by Jezabel's persuasion added the worshipping of Baal as God, ◦ 3. Reg. 16. making both temple and altar to him in Samaria. Jeroboam's priests serving fitly this purpose. Though all the former heretics no more agreed to this new heresy, than Lutherans now admit of Calvinism. For Jehu a Jeroboamite destroyed all Jezabelites that he could by a stratagem get together. 4. Reg. 10. v. 28. 29. Much less did all Israel serve Baal.

◦ Jezabelites.

[1] Again, after that Salmanazar King of Assyria had taken Samaria, and placed there a new people, 4. Reg. 17. they learning the rites of the Israelites' religion, mixed their Paganism therewith, and made a new heresy, or rather many new heresies. For being diverse nations they had in several conventicles their particular gods, and so many diverse Sects. The Babylonians, Cutheites, Emathites, Heveites, and Sapharvaimites. 4. Reg. 17. But as the Priests, which taught them rites of true religion, allowed not of this mixture, so doubtless some people harkened to their admonitions, and kept religion simply and sincerely. And at this very time of the Ten tribes' captivity, [2] holy Tobias who was carried captive with the rest, neither before nor after the captivity, left the law of God. But went to Jerusalem (when others served Jeroboam's golden calves) to the Temple of our Lord, and there adored the Lord God of Israel. And in captivity bestowed himself in works of mercy towards the living and dead of his nation. Tob. 1.

[1] Samaritanites, divided into many Sects.
[2] Tobias never yielded to Schism.

[1] As for the Kingdom of Juda, it was more free from heresies. For very few or none of those Kings that fell to other gross enormities, yea to manifest idolatry, became heretics, as is probably collected by that Isaias the Prophet being sent to Achaz, admonished him, conversed and dealt with him, as with one that believed wholly and solidly true religion: assuring him that God would protect Jerusalem, bidding him not to fear the two smoking firebrands, in the wrath of Rasin King of Syria, and of Phacee King of Israel. Isa. 7. [2] Further bidding him ask a sign of God, he answered, though frowardly, yet not as an infidel: I will not ask: and I will not tempt our Lord. [3] Yea though Urias the High Priest by commandment of the same King (4. Reg. 16.) made a new altar in place of God's Altar, yet he erred not in faith, nor in doctrine, as teaching in Moyses chair, but in fact only, and of frailty for fear of the King, as the King offended in his external act, to flatter the King of Syria. And in this case God sent Isaias to admonish the King, which Urias neglected, or durst not do. [4] Likewise Joram (4. Reg. 8. 2. Par. 21.) Ochozias (2. Par. 22.) Joas in the later part of his life, 2. Par. 24. Manasses in the former part of his reign (4. Reg. 2. 2. Par. 33.) and some other Kings of Juda committing idolatry, and making others to fall with them, either were not wholly perverted, or at least drew not all with them. For not only Prophets, in whose hand (or ministry) God spake, and

[1] The Kingdom of Juda more free from heresy.
[2] King Achaz.
[3] Urias high Priest.
[4] King Joram and others committing idolatry in fact, many others still professed true Religion.

reproved these sins, but many others kept their Zeal of true religion, as appeared in their promptness to serve God, when by good Kings Asa, Josaphat, Ezechias, Iosias, and others, they were exhorted, or admitted so to do. 4. Reg. 18. 23. 2. Par. 15. 17. 29. 30. 31. 33. 34. &c.

[1] Authority depending upon divine ordinance, is not changed by facts or practice.

[2] Good Kings defended and promoted religion not as chief in spiritual causes, but by way of execution, dispensation, or commission. Priests by their negligence do sin but lose not their authority.

[3] Mat. 12.

[4] Deut. 17. v. 18.

[5] The Church of the old Testament conserved in truth. Much more the Church of Christ.

[6] in Psal. 30. conc. 2. li. 3. c. 32. doctrine Christ. 1. Tim. 3. 4. Reg. 19.

Finally, whereas diverse good Princes disposed, things belonging to Divine service in the temple, correcting faults, and punishing offenders in that behalf (3. Reg. 15. 4. Reg. 18. 23.) they did the same without prejudice of the High Priest's supremacy in spiritual causes, and their godly acts make nothing for the English Paradox of Layheadship. [1] For superior authority and ordinary power is not proved by facts good or evil, but rather by God's ordinance and institution. For as the facts of usurpers make no lawful prescription, so neither the facts of good men, do change God's general ordinance and law: But are done either by way of execution, or sometimes by dispensation. Often also by commission and special inspiration of God. [2][3] As King David by dispensation did eat the holy bread, which was ordained for Priests only. 1. Reg. 21. He disposed of Priests' and Levites' offices about the Ark of God. Par. 15. 19. by way of execution according to the law. And of the like offices in the Temple (when it should be built) 1. Par. 23. 24. 25. 26. by divine inspiration. And Salomon by commission from God deposed Abiathar the High Priest from his office, and put Sadoc in his place. 3. Reg. 2. Wherefore albeit good Kings did excellently well in calling together the Priests, and disposing them in their offices, for execution of God's service, yea in commanding what they should do 4. Reg. 18. 19. 22. and in punishing Priests (4. Reg. 23.) yet they did such things as God's Commissioners, not as ordinary Superiors in spiritual causes, and still the ordinary subordination made by the law, Deut. 17. Num. 27. stood firm and inviolable, the High Priest supreme Judge of all doubts in faith, causes, and quarrels in religion, when other subordinate inferior Judges varied in their judgements. Of which offices Malachias the Prophet: (c. 2.) admonisheth Priests in his time, that whereas they were negligent, not performing their duty, their sin was the greater, for that their authority still remained, and the perpetual Rule of the law, that the lips of the Priest shall keep knowledge, and they (other men generally) shall require the law of his mouth, because he is the Angel of the Lord of hosts. [4] And all Princes & others were to receive the law at the Priest's hand of the Levitical Tribe. This was the warrant of stability in truth of the Synagogue in the old Testament. [5] Much more the Church and Spouse of Christ, whose excellency and singular privileges Salomon describeth in his canticle of canticles, [6] hath such warrant. Of this spouse all the Prophets writ, & that more plainly than of Christ himself, foreseeing more adversaries bending their forces against her, as S. Augustine observeth, than against Christ her head. And the same holy father in many places teacheth, that she neither perisheth nor loseth her beauty for the mixture of evil members, in respect of whom she is black, but fair in respect of the good, Cantic. 1. Notwithstanding therefore sinners remaining within the Church, schismatics and heretics breaking from the Church, still she remaineth the pillar and firmament of truth, the virgin daughter of Sion.

THE ARGUMENT OF THE BOOKS OF ESDRAS.

[1][2] ESDRAS a holy Priest and Scribe, of the stock of Aaron, by the line of Eleazar, writeth the history of God's people, in, and presently after their captivity in Babylon: which Nehemias another godly Priest prosecuteth, whose Book is also called the second of Esdras, because in the Hebrew and Greek they are but one Book, relating the acts of them both. The other two books called the third and fourth of Esdras, touching the same matter, are not in the Hebrew, [3] nor received into the Canon of holy Scripture, though the Greek Church hold the third book as Canonical, and placeth it first, because it containeth things done before the other.

[1] The two Books of Esdras and Nehemias are but one in the Hebrew.

[2] 1. Esdr. 7.

[3] The third and fourth are not canonical.

[1] In the two here following, which are undoubtedly holy Scripture [2] S. Jerom saith, that Esdras and Nehemias (to wit the Helper, & Comforter from God) restored the Temple, and built the walls of the city; adding that all the troop of the people returning into their country, also the description of Priests, Levites, Israelites, Proselytes, and the works of walls and towers divided by several families, aliud in cortice praeferunt, aliud in medulla retinent, shew one thing in the bark, keep another thing in the marrow: signifying that this history hath both a literal, and a mystical sense. According to the letter, [3] this first Book sheweth the reduction of God's people from Babylon; In the first six chapters. In the other four, their instruction by Esdras after their return.

[1] This history hath also a spiritual sense.

THE FIRST BOOK OF ESDRAS.

CHAPTER I.

Cyrus king of Persia moved by divine inspiration, releaseth God's people from captivity, with license to return and build the Temple in Jerusalem: 7. restoring the holy vessels, which Nabuchodonosor had taken from thence.

In [1][2] the first year of Cyrus king of the Persians, that the word of our Lord by the mouth of Jeremy might be accomplished, our Lord raised up the spirit of Cyrus king of the Persians: & he made proclamation in all his Kingdom, yea by writing, saying:

The return of God's people from Babylon. [2] Isa. 44. 45. Jer. 25. 29.

2 Thus saith Cyrus king of the Persians: All the Kingdoms of the earth hath the Lord the God of heaven given me, and he hath commanded me that I should build him a house in Jerusalem, which is in Jewry. 3 Who is there among you of all his people? His God be with him. Let him go up into Jerusalem, which is in Jewry, and build the house of the Lord the God of Israel, he is the God that is in Jerusalem. 4 And let all the rest in all places wheresoever they dwell, let every man of his place help him, with silver and gold, and substance, and cattle, besides that which they offer voluntarily to the temple of God, which is in Jerusalem. 5 And there rose up the Princes of the fathers of Juda and Benjamin, and the Priests, and Levites, and every one, whose spirit God raised up, to go up to build the temple of our Lord, which was in Jerusalem. 6 And all that were round about, (a) did help their hands in vessels of silver & of gold, in substance, and beasts, in furniture, besides those things which they had offered voluntarily.

(a) Liberally gave such things into their hands.

7 King Cyrus also brought forth the vessels of the temple of our Lord, which Nabuchodonosor had taken out of Jerusalem, & had put them in the temple of his god. 8 But Cyrus the king of Persians brought them forth by the hand of Mithridates the son of Gazabar, & numbered them to Sassabasar the Prince of Juda. 9 And this is the number of them: Phials of gold thirty, Phials of silver a thousand, knives twenty nine, goblets of gold thirty, 10 goblets of silver of the second order, four hundred ten: other vessels a thousand. 11 All the vessels of gold & silver, five thousand four hundred: Sassabasar took all, with them that went up from the transmigration of Babylon into Jerusalem.

CHAPTER II.

The names and number of special men, which returned under the conduct of Zorobabel into Jerusalem: 66. their substance of cattle, 68. and their oblations for the re-edifying of the Temple.

And (a) these are the children of the province that went up from the captivity, which Nabuchodonosor the king of Babylon had transported into Babylon, and returned into Jerusalem and Juda, every man into his city.

(a) This enumeration of the Israelites, which ascended into Jerusalem, signifieth the Elect which ascend from the militant Church to the triumphant.

2 They that came with Zorobabel, Josue, Nehemia, Saraia, Rahelaia, Mardochai, Belsan, Mesphar, Beguai, Rehum, Baana: The number of the men of the people of Israel: 3 The children of Pharos two thousand an hundred seventy two. 4 The children of Sephatia, three hundred seventy two. 5 The children of Area, seven hundred seventy five. 6 The children of Phahath Moab, of the children of Josue: Joab, two thousand eight hundred twelve. 7 The children of Aelam a thousand two hundred fifty four. 8 The children of Zethua, nine hundred forty five. 9 The children of Zachai, seven hundred sixty. 10 The children of Bani^ six hundred forty two. 11 The children of Bebai, six hundred twenty three. 12 The children of Azgad, a thousand two hundred twenty two. 13 The children of Adonicam, six hundred sixty six. 14 The children of Beguai, two thousand fifty six. 15 The children of Adin, four hundred fifty four. 16 The children of Ather, which were of Ezechias, ninety eight. 17 The children of Besai, three hundred and twenty three. 18 The children of Iora, an hundred twelve. 19 The children of Hasum, two hundred twenty three. 20 The children of Gebbar, ninety five. 21 The children of Bethlehem, an hundred twenty three. 22 The men of Netupha, fifty six. 23 The men of Anathoth an hundred twenty eight. 24 The children of Azmaveth, forty two. 25 The children of Cariathiarim, Cephira, & Beroth, seven hundred forty three. 26 The children of Rama and Gabaa, six hundred twenty one. 27 The men of Machmas, an hundred twenty two. 28 The men of Bethel and Hai, two hundred twenty three. 29 The children of Nebo, fifty two. 30 The children of Megbis, an hundred fifty six. 31 The children of another Aelam, a thousand two hundred fifty four. 32 The children of Harim, three hundred twenty. 33 The children of Lod Hadid and Ono, seven hundred twenty five. 34 The children of Jericho, three hundred forty five. 35 The children of Senaa, three thousand six hundred thirty. 36 The Priests: The children of Iadaia in the house of Josue, nine hundred seventy three. 37 The children of Emmer, a thousand fifty two. 38 The children of Pheshur, a thousand two hundred forty seven. 39 The children of Harim, a thousand and seventeen. 40 The Levites: The children of Josue and Cedmiel, the children of Odovia, seventy four. 41 The singing men: The children of Asaph, an hundred twenty eight. 42 The children of the Porters: the children of Sellum, the children of Ater, the children of Telmon, the children of Accub, the children of Hatita, the children of Sobai: all an hundred thirty nine.

59 And these are they that came up from Thelmela, Thelharsa, Cherub, and Adon, and Emer. And they could not shew the house of their fathers and their seed, whether they were of Israel. 60 The children of Dalaia, the children of Tobia, the children of Necoda, six hundred fifty two. 61 And of the children of the Priests: The children of Hobia, the children of Accos, the children of Berzellai, who took a wife of the daughters of Berzellai the Galaadite, and was called by their name: 62 these sought the writing of their genealogy, and (b) found it not, and they were cast out of the Priesthood.

(b) Such as say they are Priests and cannot shew their vocation, must not exercise that function.

63 And Athersatha said to them, that they should not eat of the Holy of holies, till there rose a Priest learned and perfect. 64 All the multitude as it were one man, (c) forty two thousand three hundred sixty:

(c) All above numbered of the tribes of Juda, Benjamin, & Levi, do not amount to 30. thousand three hundred. So in this general number are contained above twelve thousand of other tribes, not recited among the rest, as Rabbi Salomon explicateth the difficulty.

65 beside their men servants, and women servants, which were seven thousand three hundred thirty seven: & among them singing men, & singing women two hundred. 66 Their horses seven hundred thirty six, their mules two hundred forty five, 67 their camels, four hundred thirty five, their asses six thousand seven hundred twenty. 68 And of the Princes of the fathers, when they entered into the temple of our Lord, which is in Jerusalem, they offered voluntarily unto the house of our Lord to build it in his place. 69 According to their abilities, they gave the expenses of the work, of gold sixty one thousand solids, of silver five thousand pounds, & garments for the Priests an hundred. 70 The Priests therefore and the Levites, and they of the people, and the singing men, and the porters, and the Nathinaites dwelt in their cities, and all Israel in their cities.

CHAPTER III.

An Altar is built for sacrifice: 4. The feast of Tabernacles solemnly celebrated. 8. And in the second year (after their return) the Temple is founded with great joy of the people, and mourning of some.

And now the seventh month was come, and the children of Israel were in their cities: the people therefore was gathered together as it were one man into Jerusalem. 2 And Josue the son of Josedec rose up, and his brethren the Priests, and Zorobabel the son of Salathiel, and his brethren, and they built the altar of the God of Israel, that they might offer on it holocausts, as it is written in the law of Moyses the man of God. 3 And they placed the altar of God upon his feet, the people of the lands round about putting them (a) in fear, and they offered upon it holocaust to our Lord morning and evening.

(a) Notwithstanding the terror of infidels, God's servants took courage to offer sacrifice.

(b) By the ordinance of David, 1. Par. 25.

11 And they sang together in hymns, and confession to our Lord: Because he is good, because his mercy is for ever upon Israel. All the people also made a shout with a loud cry in praising our Lord, because the temple of our Lord was founded. 12 Very many also of the Priests and the Levites, and the Princes of the fathers, and the ancients, that had seen the former temple, when they saw this temple founded, (c) they wept with a loud voice: and many shouting in joy, lifted up their voice.

(c) By their weeping they testified that the new temple was not so excellent as the former. And therefore Aggeus' prophecy (c. 2.) cannot be understood of this temple, but of the Church of Christ. S. Aug. li. 18. civit. c. 45.

13 Neither could any man discern the voice of the cry of them that rejoiced, and the voice of the weeping of the people: for one with another the people shouted with a loud cry, and the voice was heard far off.

CHAPTER IV.

The schismatical Samaritans, because they are not admitted to communicate with the Jews, endeavour to hinder the building of the Temple. 5. Which nevertheless proceedeth all the days of king Cyrus: 7. but is hindered by Artaxerxes, till the second year of Darius.

But the enemies of Juda and Benjamin heard that the children of the captivity built a temple to our Lord the God of Israel. 2 And coming to Zorobabel, & the Princes of the fathers, they said to them: Let us build with you, because (a) even as you, so do we seek your God: Behold we have immolated victims from the days of Asor Haddan the king of Assur, which brought us hither.

(a) Schismatics and Heretics may not be admitted to communicate in sacrifice with Catholics.

3 And Zorobabel said to them, and Josue, and the rest of the Princes of the fathers of Israel: It is not for you and us to build a house to our God, but we ourselves alone will build to the Lord our God, as Cyrus the king of the Persians hath commanded us. 4 It came to pass therefore that the people of the land hindered the hands of the people of Juda, & troubled them in building. 5 And they hired counsellers against them, to destroy their counsel all the days of Cyrus the king of the Persians, and until the reign of Darius the king of the Persians. 6 And in the reign of Assuerus, in the beginning of his reign, they wrote an accusation against the inhabitants of Juda and Jerusalem. 7 And in the days of Artaxerxes, Beselam, Mithridates, & Thabeel, and the rest that were in their counsel writ to Artaxerxes king of the Persians: and the epistle of the accusation was written in Syriac, and was read in the Syrian language. 8 Reum Beelteem, and Samsai scribe wrote one epistle from Jerusalem to Artaxerxes the king, of this tenure: 9 Reum Beelteem, and Samsai scribe, and the rest of their counsellers, the Dineites, and the Apharsathaceites, the Terphaleites, the Apharsaites, the Erchueites, the Babylonians, the Susanecheites, the Dievites, and the Aelamites, 10 and the rest of the Gentiles, which Asenaphar the great and glorious transported: and made them dwell in the cities of Samaria, and in the rest of the countries beyond the River in peace: 11 (this is the copy of the epistle, which they sent to him:) To Artaxerxes the king, thy servants, the men that are beyond the River, send greeting. 12 Be it known to the king, that the Jews, which came up from thee to us, are come into Jerusalem, a rebellious & naughty city, which they build, making the rampires thereof, & repairing the walls. 13 Now therefore be it known to the king, that if that city shall be built, & the walls thereof repaired, they will not give tribute, and toll, and yearly rents, and this damage will come even to the kings. 14 But we^ mindful of the salt that we have eaten in the palace, and because we count it heinous to see the king's harms, therefore we have sent and certified the king, 15 that thou recount in the Books of the histories of thy fathers, and thou shalt find written in the commentaries, and shalt know that that city is a rebellious city, and hurtful to the kings, and provinces, and battles are raised in it of old time: for the which cause also the city it-self was destroyed. 16 We certify the king, that if that city shall be built, and the walls thereof repaired, thou shalt have no possession beyond the River. 17 The king sent word to Reum Beelteem, and Samsai scribe, and to the rest that were in their counsel inhabitants of Samaria, and to the rest beyond the River, sending greeting and peace. 18 The accusation, which you have sent to us, was openly read before me. 19 and I gave commandment: and they recounted, and have found, that that city of old time rebelleth against the kings, & seditions and battles are raised in it. 20 For there have been also most valiant kings in Jerusalem, which also had dominion over all the country that is beyond the River. They took also tribute, & toll and rents. 21 Now therefore hear the sentence: Prohibit ye those men, that that city be not built, till it perhaps shall be commanded by me. 22 See that you do not negligently accomplish this thing, and by little there grow evil against the kings.

23 Therefore the copy of the edict of Artaxerxes the king was read before Reum Beelteem, and Samsai the scribe, and their counsellers: and they went in haste into Jerusalem to the Jews, and prohibited them with arm and strength. 24 Then was the work of the house of our Lord in Jerusalem intermitted, and was not done until the second year of the reign of Darius the king of the Persians.

CHAPTER V.

By the exhortation of Aggaeus, and Zacharias, the people proceed in building the Temple. 3. Which their enemies striving to hinder, for decision of the cause, both parties write to king Darius.

And there prophesied Aggaeus the Prophet, and Zacharias the son of Addo, prophesying to the Jews, that were in Jewry and Jerusalem, in the name of the God of Israel. 2 Then rose up Zorobabel the son of Salathiel, and Josue the son of Josedec, and began to build the temple of God in Jerusalem, and with them the Prophets of God helping them. 3 But at the same time there came to them Thathanai, who was Prince beyond the River, and Stharbuzanai, and their counsellers: and said thus to them: Who hath given you counsel to build this house, and to repair the walls? 4 Whereto we answered them, what the names were of the men that were authors of that building. 5 And (a) the eye of their God was set upon the ancients of the Jews, and they could not inhibit them. And it pleased them that the matter should be referred to Darius, and then they would satisfy against that accusation.

(a) God giving courage to his servants, struck their enemies with terror, & so made them cease from hindering his work as they before intended.

6 The copy of the epistle, which Thathanai Prince of the country beyond the River sent, and Stharbuzanai, and his counsellers the Arphasacheites, which were beyond the River, to Darius the king. 7 The word, which they sent him, was written thus: To Darius the king all peace. 8 Be it known to the king, that we went to Jury, the province, to the house of the great God, which is in building with stone unpolished, and timber is put in the walls: and that work is in building diligently, and groweth in their hands. 9 We therefore demanded of those ancients, and thus we said to them: Who hath given you authority to build this house, and to repair these walls? 10 Yea and their names we asked of them, that we might certify thee: and we writ the names of those men, that are the chief amongst them. 11 And they answered us these words, saying: We are the servants of the God of heaven and earth, and we do build a temple, that was built these many years before, and which a great king of Israel built and set up. 12 But after that our fathers provoked the God of heaven to wrath, he delivered them into the hands of Nabuchodonosor the king of Babylon the Chaldee: this house also he destroyed, and his people he transported into Babylon. 13 But in the first year of Cyrus the king of Babylon, Cyrus the king put forth an edict, that this house of God should be built. 14 For the vessels also of the temple of God, of gold and of silver, which Nabuchodonosor had taken out of the temple that was in Jerusalem, and had carried them into the temple of Babylon, Cyrus the king brought forth out of the temple of Babylon, and they were given to Sassabasar so called, whom also he appointed the chief, 15 and said to him: Take these vessels, and go, and put them in the temple, that is in Jerusalem, and let the house of God be built in his place. 16 Then therefore came this Sassabasar, and laid the foundations of the temple of God in Jerusalem, & from that time until now it is in building, & is not yet finished. 17 Now therefore if it seem good to the king, let him search in the king's library, which is in Babylon, whether it hath been commanded by Cyrus the king, that the house of God in Jerusalem should be built, and let him send the king's pleasure concerning this thing unto us.

CHAPTER VI.

Darius finding in the register, that Cyrus gave license to build the Temple, commandeth that none hinder it: 8. giveth also money towards the charges, and hosts for sacrifice.

Then Darius the king commanded, and they searched in the library of the Books, that were laid up in Babylon, 2 and there was found in Ecbatanis, which is a castle in the province Medena, one volume, & there was such a commentary written therein: 3 In the first year of Cyrus the king, Cyrus the king decreed, that the house of God should be built, which is in Jerusalem, in the place where they immolate hosts, & that they lay the foundations supporting the height of threescore cubits, & the breadth of threescore cubits, 4 three rews of stones unpolished, and so many rews of new timber: and the costs shall be given out of the king's house. 5 Yea and the vessels of the temple of God, of gold and of silver, which Nabuchodonosor had taken out of the Temple of Jerusalem, and had brought them into Babylon, let them be restored, and brought back into the temple of Jerusalem unto their place, which also were put in the temple of God. 6 Now therefore Thathanai Prince of the country, that is beyond the River, Stharbuzanai, and your counsellers the Apharsacheites, which are beyond the River, depart far from them, 7 and suffer that temple of God to be made of the Duke of the Jews, and of their ancients, that they may build that house of God in his place. 8 Also there is commandment given from me what must be done of those ancients of the Jews, that the house of God may be built, to wit, that of the king's coffer, that is, of the tributes that are given out of the country beyond the River, the charges be diligently given to those men, lest the work be hindered. 9 And if it shall be necessary, calves also, and lambs, and kids, for holocaust to the God of heaven, wheat, salt, wine, and oil, according to the rite of the Priests that are in Jerusalem, let there be given them day by day, that there be no complain in any thing. 10 And let them offer oblations to the God of heaven, and pray for the life of the king, and of his children. 11 By me therefore there is a decree made: That every man, which shall alter this commandment, there be a beam taken of his house, and set up, and he be fast hanged upon it, and his house be confiscate. 12 And the God, that hath made his name to dwell there, destroy all Kingdoms, and the people that shall extend their hand to resist, and to destroy the house of God, that is in Jerusalem. I^ Darius have made the decree, which I will to be diligently accomplished. 13 Therefore Thathanai the Prince of the country beyond the River, and Stharbuzanai, and his counsellers, according to that which Darius the king had commanded, so did execute it diligently. 14 And the ancients of the Jews built, and prospered according to the prophecy of Aggeus the Prophet, and of Zacharias the son of Addo: and they built & set up, the God of Israel commanding, and (a) Cyrus commanding, and Darius, and Artaxerxes the kings of the Persians.

(a) The heart of the King is in the hand of our Lord. Proverb. 21.

15 And they were finishing this house of God, until the third day of the month of Adar, which is the sixth year of Darius the king. 16 And the children of Israel, the Priests and the Levites, and the rest of the transmigration, made the dedication of the house of God in joy. 17 And they offered in the dedication of the house of God, calves an hundred, rams two hundred, lambs four hundred, buck-goats for the sin of all Israel twelve, according to the number of the tribes of Israel. 18 And they set the Priests in their orders, and the Levites in their courses over the works of God in Jerusalem, as it is written in the Book of Moyses. 19 And the children of Israel of the transmigration made the Phase, the fourteenth day of the first month. 20 For all the Priests and the Levites were purified as it were one man: all clean to immolate the Phase for all the children of the transmigration, and for their brethren the Priests, and themselves. 21 And the children of Israel that were returned from the transmigration, did eat, and all that had separated themselves from the coinquination of the Gentiles of the earth unto them, to seek our Lord the God of Israel. 22 And they made the solemnity of Azymes seven days in joy, because our Lord had made them joyful, and had turned the heart of the king of Assur to them, that he should help their hands in the work of the house of our Lord the God of Israel.

CHAPTER VII.

Esdras, with many other Priests and Levites, ascendeth to Jerusalem to teach, and assist the people: 11. bringing Artaxerxes' Edict, declareth it to the people, 27. and giveth thanks to God.

nd [1] after these things in the reign of Artaxerxes king of Persians, Esdras, the son of Saraias, the son of Azarias, the son of Helcias,

[1] The second part.
Esdras instructeth the people.

2 the son of Sellum, the son of Sadoc, the son of Achitob, 3 the son of Amarias, the son of Azarias, the son of Maraioth, 4 the son of Zarahias, the son of Ozi, the son of Bocci, 5 the son of Abisue, the son of Phinees, the son of Eleazar, the son of Aaron the Priest from the beginning: 6 The same Esdras (a) came up from Babylon, and he was a quick scribe in the law of Moyses, which our Lord God gave to Israel: and the king gave him according to the hand of our Lord his God upon him all his petition.

(a) Esdras came with the first from Babylon (2. Esd. 12.) but returned thither, and now ascended the second time to Jerusalem.

7 And there came up of the children of Israel, and of the children of the Priests, and of the children of the Levites, and of the singing men, and of the porters, and of the Nathineites into Jerusalem in the seventh year of Artaxerxes the king. 8 And they came into Jerusalem the fifth month, that is the seventh year of the king. 9 For in the first day of the first month he began to go up from Babylon, and in the first day of the fifth month he came into Jerusalem, according to the good hand of his God upon him. 10 For Esdras prepared his heart to search the law of our God, & to do and to teach in Israel precept & judgment, 11 And this is the copy of the epistle of the edict, which king Artaxerxes gave to Esdras the Priest, the learned scribe, in the words and precepts of our Lord, & his ceremonies in Israel. 12 Artaxerxes the king of kings to Esdras the Priest, the most learned scribe of the law of God of heaven, greeting. 13 It is decreed by me that whomsoever it shall please in my Kingdom, of the people of Israel, and of the Priests and Levites, to go into Jerusalem, let him go with thee. 14 For thou art sent from the face of the king, & of his seven counsellers, that thou mayst visit Jewry & Jerusalem in the law of thy God, which is in thy hand. 15 And that thou mayst carry the silver & gold, which the king & his counsellers have voluntarily offered to the God of Israel, whose tabernacle is in Jerusalem. 16 And all the silver & gold whatsoever thou shalt find in all the Province of Babylon, & the people will offer, & of the Priests that shall voluntarily offer to the house of their God which is in Jerusalem, 17 take freely, and buy diligently of this money calves, rams, lambs, and the sacrifices and libaments of them, and offer them upon the altar of the temple of your God, that is in Jerusalem. 18 Yea and if it shall please thee, and thy brethren to do any thing with the rest of the silver and gold, do ye according to the will of your God. 19 The vessels also, which are given thee for the ministry of the house of thy God, deliver thou in the sight of God in Jerusalem. 20 Yea and other things whereof need shall be for the house of thy God, how much soever is necessary for thee to spend, thou shalt give it out of the treasure and exchequer of the king, and from me. 21 I^ Artaxerxes the king have appointed and decreed to all the keepers of the Common coffer, that are beyond the River, that whatsoever Esdras the Priest, the scribe of the law of God of heaven, shall ask of you, you give it without delay, 22 unto an hundred talents of silver, and unto an hundred cores of wheat, and unto an hundred bates of wine, and unto an hundred bates of oil, but salt without measure. 23 All that pertaineth to the rite of the God of heaven let it be given diligently in the house of the God of heaven: lest perhaps he be angry against the kingdom of the king, and of his sons. 24 We do you also to understand concerning all the Priests, & Levites, and the singers, and the porters, the Nathineites, and ministers of the house of this God, that you have no authority to put toll and tribute and yearly rents upon them. 25 And thou Esdras according to the wisdom of thy God, which is in thy hand, appoint judges and presidents, that they may judge for all the people, that is beyond the River, that is for them which know the law of thy God, yea and the ignorant teach ye freely. 26 And every one that shall not do the law of thy God, and the law of thy king diligently, there shall be judgement of him, either unto death, or into banishment, or to the confiscation of his substance, or at the least into prison. 27 Blessed be our Lord the God of our fathers, which hath put this in the king's heart, that he would glorify the house of our Lord, which is in Jerusalem, 28 and hath inclined his mercy toward me before the king and his counsellers, and all the mighty princes of the king: and I taking courage by the hand of our Lord my God, which was on me, gathered together out of Israel princes that should go up with me.

CHAPTER VIII.

Esdras reciteth those that came with him from Babylon, 21. the fast which he appointed, 33. and how they brought the holy vessels into the Temple.

These therefore are the Princes of the families, and the genealogy of them, that came up with me in the reign of Artaxerxes the king (a) out of Babylon.

(a) This great number which by Esdras' persuasion came from Babylon, signified the great fruit of souls converted from sin by the exhortation of holy preachers. S. Beda li. 2. in Esdr. c. 10.

2 Of the children of Phinees, Gersom. Of the children of Ithamar, Daniel. Of the children of David, Hattus. 3 Of the children of Sechenias, the children of Pharos, Zacharias: and with him were numbered an hundred fifty men. 4 Of the children of Phahath Moab, Eleoenai the son of Zareha, and with him two hundred men. 5 Of the children of Sechenias, the son of Ezechiel, and with him three hundred men. 6 Of the children of Adan, Abed the son of Jonathan, and with him fifty men. 7 Of the children of Alam, Isaias the son of Athalia, and with him seventy men. 8 Of the children of Saphatia, Zebedia the son of Michael, and with him eighty men. 9 Of the children of Joab, Obedia the son of Jahiel, and with him two hundred and eighteen men. 10 Of the children of Selomith, the son of Josphia, and with him an hundred sixty men. 11 Of the children of Bebai, Zacharias the son of Bebai: and with him twenty eight men. 12 Of the children of Azgad, Ioanan the son of Eccetan, and with him an hundred and ten men. 13 Of the children of Adonicam, which were the last: and these are their names: Elipheleth, and Jehiel, and Samaias, and with them sixty men. 14 Of the children of Begui, Uthai and Zachur, and with them seventy men. 15 And I gathered them to the river, which runneth down to Ahava, and we tarried there three days: and I sought among the people and among the Priests for the children of Levi, and found none there. 16 Therefore I sent Eliezer, and Ariel, and Semeias, and Elnathan, & Jarib, and another Elnathan, and Nathan, and Zacharias, and Mosollam Princes: and Joiarib, and Elnathan, wise men. 17 And I sent them to Eddo, which is chief in the place of Chasphia, and I did put in their mouth the words that they should speak to Eddo, and his brethren the Nathineites in the place of Chasphia, that they should bring us ministers of the house of our God. 18 And they brought us by the good hand of our God upon us a most learned man of the children of Mocholi the son of Levi the son of Israel, and Sarabias and his sons, and his brethren eighteen, 19 and Hasabias, and with him Isaias of the children of Merari, and his brethren, and his sons twenty. 20 And all the Nathineites, which David gave, and the Princes for the ministries of the Levites, Nathineites two hundred twenty: all these were called by their names. 21 And I proclaimed there (b) a fast beside the River of Ahava, that we might be afflicted before the Lord our God, and might desire of him a right way for us and our children, and all our substance.

22 For I was ashamed to ask the king aid and horsemen, that might defend us from the enemy in the way: because we had said to the king: The hand of our God is upon all them, that seek him in goodness: and his empire and strength, and fury upon all them that forsake him. 23 And we fasted, and besought our God hereby: and it fell out prosperously unto us. 24 And I separated twelve of the chief Priests, Sarabias, and Hasabias, and with them ten of their brethren. 25 And I weighed unto them the silver and gold, and the consecrated vessels of the house of our God, which the king had offered and his counsellers, and his Princes, and all Israel of them that were found: 26 and I weighed in their hands of silver six hundred fifty talents, and vessels of silver an hundred, of gold an hundred talents: 27 and cups of gold twenty, which had a thousand solids, and two vessels of the best shining brass, fair as gold. 28 And I said to them: You are the holy of our Lord, and the vessels are holy, and the silver and gold, that is voluntarily offered to our Lord the God of our fathers: 29 Watch & keep it, until you deliver it by weight before the Princes of the Priests, and of the Levites, & the Princes of the families of Israel in Jerusalem, into the treasure of the house of our Lord. 30 And the Priests and the Levites received the weight of the silver and gold, and of the vessels, to carry it to Jerusalem into the house of our God. 31 We therefore did set forward from the river of Ahava the twelfth day of the first month to go on to Jerusalem: and the hand of our God was upon us, & delivered us from the hand of the enemy, and the lier in wait by the way. 32 And we came to Jerusalem, and we tarried there three days. 33 And in the fourth day the silver was weighed, and the gold, and the vessels in the house of our God by the hand of Meremoth the son of Urias the Priest, and with him Eleazar the son of Phinees, and with them Jozabed the son of Josue, and Noadaia the son of Bennoi^ Levites, 34 according to the number and weight of all: and all the weight was described at that time. 35 Yea & the children of the transmigration that were come from the captivity, offered holocausts to the God of Israel, calves twelve for all the people of Israel, rams ninety six, lambs seventy seven, buck-goats for sin twelve: all for holocaust to our Lord. 36 And they gave the king's edicts to the Princes, that were overseers for the king, and the dukes beyond the River, and they advanced the people and the house of God.

CHAPTER IX.

For marriages and other association which the Jews had with Gentiles, Esdras lamenteth, 5. and confessing the people's iniquity, prayeth God to conserve them from utter destruction.

And after these things were accomplished, the Princes came to me, saying: The people of Israel, and the Priests and Levites (a) are not separated from the people of the lands, and from the abominations of them, to wit, of the Chananeite, and Hetheite, and Pherezeite, and Jebuseite, and of the Ammonites, and Moabites, and the Aegyptians, and Amorrheites.

(a) Malachias the Prophet complaineth also of this fault, c. 2. v. 11. threatening God's punishment both to superiors and subjects for not correcting it. v. 12.

2 For they have taken of their daughters to them and to their sons, and have mingled the holy seed with the people of the lands. The hand also of the Princes and magistrates hath been first in this transgression.
3 And when I had heard this word, I rent my cloak and my coat, and plucked off the hairs of my head and beard, and sat mourning. 4 And there assembled to me all that feared the God of Israel, for the transgression of them that were come from the captivity, and I sat sorrowful, until the evening sacrifice. 5 And at the evening sacrifice I rose out of my affliction, and my cloak and coat being rent I fell upon my knees, and spread forth my hands to our Lord my God, 6 and said: My God I am confounded and ashamed to lift up my face to thee: because our iniquities are multiplied over our head, and our sins have grown even unto heaven. 7 from the days of our fathers: yea and we ourselves also have sinned grievously unto this day, and in our iniquities have we been delivered, ourselves, and our kings, and our Priests, into the hand of the kings of the lands, and into the sword, and into captivity, and into spoil, and into confusion of countenance, as also at this day. 8 And now as it were a little, and for a moment was our prayer made before the Lord our God, that a remnant might be left us, and (a) a nail might be given us in his holy place, and that our God would illuminate our eyes, and would give us a little life in our bondage.

(a) In respect of their great iniquities Esdras presumeth not to ask the conservation of the whole people, but some relics or smallest part, as it were a little post, or a nail of a whole house towards the re-edifying thereof.

9 Because we are bondmen, and in our bondage our God did not forsake us, but he inclined mercy upon us before the king of the Persians, to give us life, & to advance the house of our God, & to build the desolations thereof, & to give us a hedge in Juda & Jerusalem. 10 And now what shall we say, o our God, after these things? Because we have forsaken thy commandments, 11 which thou hast commanded in the hand of thy servants the Prophets, saying: The land, to the which you enter to possess it, is an unclean land, according to the uncleanness of peoples, and of other lands, by the abominations of them that have filled it from mouth unto mouth in their coinquination. 12 Now therefore give not your daughters to their sons, and their daughters take not for your sons, and do ye not seek their peace, and their prosperity for ever: that you may be strengthened, and may eat the goods that are of the land, and may have your children heirs for ever. 13 And after all things that come upon us in our most wicked works, and our most great sin, because thou our God hast delivered us from our iniquity, and hast given us health as it is at this day, 14 that we shall not turn away, & make frustrate thy commandments, neither should join matrimonies with the peoples of these abominations. Why art thou angry with us unto utter destruction, not to leave us a remnant unto salvation? 15 Lord God of Israel thou art just: because we are left, which should be saved as at this day. Behold we are before thee in our sin, for there can be no standing before thee upon this.

CHAPTER X.

Esdras calling the people together commandeth them to dismiss the strange women, which they have married: 14. appointing officers to see it executed. 18. and reciteth those which had married such women.

Esdras therefore thus praying, and beseeching, and weeping, and lying before the temple of God, there was gathered to him of Israel an exceeding great company of men and women and children, and the people wept with much lamentation. 2 And Sechenias the son of Jehiel of the children of Aelam answered, and said to Esdras: We have transgressed against our God, and have taken to wives strange women of the peoples of the land: and now if there be penance in Israel upon this, 3 let us make a covenant with the Lord our God, to put away all the wives, and them that are born of them, according to the will of our Lord, and of them that fear the precept of the Lord our God: be it done according to the law. 4 Arise, it is thy part to discern, and we will be with thee: take courage, and do it. 5 Esdras therefore rose up, and adjured the Princes of the Priests and of the Levites, & all Israel, that they should do according to this word, and they sware. 6 And Esdras rose up before the house of God, & went to the chamber of (a) Johanan the son of Eliasib, and entered into it: he did eat no bread, & drank no water: for he mourned for the transgression of them that were come out of the captivity.

(a) Esdras being extraordinarily sent by God to correct the people, repaireth to the high Priest's son, by his authority calleth the people together, and so proceedeth to make reformation. So S. Paul conferred with other Apostles. Gal. 2.

7 And there was a proclamation sent in Juda and Jerusalem to all the children of the transgression, that they should assemble together into Jerusalem. 8 And every one that shall not come within three days, according to the counsel of the Princes & ancients, all his substance shall be taken away and himself shall be cast out of the company of the transmigration. 9 There assembled therefore all the men of Juda, and Benjamin into Jerusalem within three days, that is the ninth month, the twentieth day of the month: and all the people sat in the street of the house of God, trembling for the sin, and (b) the rain.

(b) Their sin was punished by over-much rain. v. 13. And so affliction gave them more feeling of their faults.

10 And Esdras the Priest arose, and said to them: You have transgressed, and taken strange women to wife, to add upon the sin of Israel. 11 And now give confession to our Lord the God of your fathers, and do his pleasure, and be separated from the peoples of the land, and from your wives the strangers. 12 And all the multitude answered, and said with a loud voice: According to thy word unto us, so be it done.
13 Nevertheless because there is much people, and a time of rain, and we cannot abide to stand without, and it is not a work of one day or two (for we have exceedingly sinned in this thing), 14 let there be Princes appointed in all the multitude: & let all in our cities that have taken strangers to wife, come at set times, and with them the ancients by city and city, and the judges thereof, until the wrath of our God be turned away from us for this sin. 15 Therefore Jonathan the son of Azahel, and Iaazia the son of Thecua were appointed over this, and Mosollam and Sebethai Levites did help them: 16 and the children of the transmigration did so. And Esdras the Priest, and the men, Princes of the families, went into the houses of their fathers, & all by their names, and they sat in the first day of the tenth month to search out the matter. 17 And all the men were fully counted that had taken strangers to wife, unto the first day of the first month. 18 And there were found of the sons of the Priests that had taken strangers to wife. Of the children of Josue the son of Josedec, and his brethren, Maasia, and Eliezer, and Jarib, and Godolia. 19 And they gave their hands to put away their wives, & to offer for their offence a ram of the flock. 20 And of the children of Emmer, Hanani, and Zebedia. 21 And of the children of Harim, Maasia, and Elia, and Semeia, and Jehiel, and Ozias. 22 And of the children of Pheshur, Elionai, Maasia, Ismael, Nathanael, Jozabed, and Elasa. 23 And of the children of the Levites, Jozabed, and Semei, and Celaia, the same is Calita, Phataia, Juda, & Eliezer. 24 And of the singing men Eliasib: and of the porters, Sellum, and Thelem, and Uri. 25 And of Israel, of the children of Pharos, Remeia, and Iezia, and Melchia, and Miamin, and Eliezer, and Melchia, and Banea. 26 And of the children of Aelam, Mathania, Zacharias, and Jehiel, and Abdi, and Jerimoth, and Elia. 27 And of the children of Zethua, Elioenai, Eliasib, Mathania, Jerimuth, and Zabad, and Aziza. 28 And of the children of Bebai, Johanan, Hanania, Zabbai, Athalai. 29 And of the children of Bani, Mosollam, and Melluch, and Adaia, Jasub, and Saal, and Ramoth. 30 And of the children of Phahath Moab, Edna & Chalal, Bananias, and Maasias, Mathanias, Beseleel, Bennui, and Manasse. 31 And of the children of Herem, Eliezer, Josue, Melchias, Semeias, Simeon, 32 Benjamin, Maloch, Samarias. 33 And of the children of Hasom, Mathanai, Mathatha, Zabad, Eliphelet, Iermai, Manasse, Semei. 34 Of the children of Bani, Maaddi, Amram, and Vel, 35 Baneas, and Badaias, Cheliau, 36 Vania, Marimuth, and Eliasib, 37 Mathanias, and Mathanai, and Iasi, 38 and Bani, and Bennui, Semei, 39 and Salmias, and Nathan, & Adaias, 40 and Mechnedebai, Sisai, Sarai. 41 Ezrel, and Selemiau, Semeria, 42 Sellum, Amaria, Joseph. 43 Of the children of Nebo, Jehiel, Mathathias, Zabad, Zabina, Ieddu, and Joel, and Banaia. 44 All these had taken strangers to wife, and there were of them that had born (c) children.

(c) Amongst other inconveniences of unlawful marriages one is that children are born illegitimate.

THE ARGUMENT OF THE BOOK OF NEHEMIAS.

[1] THIS Book beareth Title both of the author Nehemias, who writ it, and the second Book of Esdras, who in the former writ the history of the Israelites after their relaxation from captivity, to the building again of the Temple, with other things done the same time. [2] Whereunto Nehemias joineth things succeeding, especially the new erection of walls and towers about the city of Jerusalem. [3] [4] And it may be divided into three parts. In the two first chapters, he sheweth his compassion of his country's misery: and his coming to assist them. In the ten following, he reciteth the good effects in repairing, and strengthening the city with walls and people. In the last chapter, the correction of errors and evil manners, which he found amongst them.

CHAPTER I.

Nehemias hearing the miserable state of his country-men in Jury, 4. lamenteth, fasteth, and prayeth God for their relief.

The [1] words of (a) Nehemias the son of Helchias. And it came to pass in the month of Casleu, the twentieth year, and I was in Susis the castle.

[1] The first part.
Nehemias his commiseration of his country. (a) Nehemias by his legacy, being sent from a King; by his name which signifieth comforter from our Lord; and by his building again the walls of Jerusalem; prefigured our Saviour, who was sent from God the Father, himself being the comforter of mankind, & the sender of another comforter the Holy Ghost, to remain with his Church. S. Beda prolog. in Nehemiam.

2 And Hanani one of my brethren came, himself and men of Juda, and I asked them of the Jews, that remained, and were left alive of the captivity, and of Jerusalem. 3 And they said to me: They that remained, and are left of the captivity there in the province, are in great affliction, and in reproach: and the wall of Jerusalem is broken down, and the gates thereof are burnt with fire. 4 And when I had heard these manner of words, I sat, and wept, and mourned many days: and fasted, and prayed before the face of the God of heaven. 5 And I said: I beseech thee Lord God of heaven, strong, great, and terrible, which keepest covenant and mercy with them that love thee, and keep thy commandments: 6 let thine ears be harkening, and thine eyes open, to hear the prayer of thy servant, which I pray before thee this day, night and day for the children of Israel thy servants: and I confess for the sins of the children of Israel, in which they have sinned to thee: I and my father's house have sinned, 7 we have been seduced with vanity, & have not kept the commandments & ceremonies & judgment, which thou hast commanded to Moyses thy servant. 8 Remember the word, that thou didst command unto Moyses thy servant, saying: When you shall transgress, I will disperse you into peoples:

9 and if you return to me, and keep my precepts, and do them, although you shall be led away to the uttermost parts of heaven, thence will I gather you, and bring you back into the place, which I have chosen that my name should dwell there. 10 And they are thy servants, and thy people: whom thou hast redeemed in thy great strength, and in thy mighty hand. 11 I beseech thee Lord, let thine ear be attent to the prayer of thy servant, and to the prayer of thy servants, which will fear thy name: and direct thy servant this day, and give him mercy before this man. For I was the king's cup-bearer.

CHAPTER II.

Nehemias obtaining commission from king Artaxerxes cometh to Jerusalem: 11. secretly vieweth the broken walls and ruins of the city, 17. and exhorteth all the Jews to the re-edifying thereof.

And it came to pass in the month of Nisan, the twentieth year of Artaxerxes the king: and there was wine before him, and I lifted up the wine, and gave to the king: and I was as it were languishing before his face. 2 And the king said to me: Why is thy countenance sad, whereas I do not see thee sick? This is not without cause, but some evil I know not what, is in thy heart. And I was very much & exceedingly afraid: 3 and I said to the king: O king for ever mayst thou live: why should not my countenance be heavy, because the city of the house of the sepulchres of my fathers is desolate, & the gates thereof are burnt with fire? 4 And the king said to me: For what thing makest thou request? And I prayed the God of heaven, 5 and I said to the king: If it seem good to the king, and if thy servant do please before thy face, that thou send me into Jewry to the city of the sepulchre of my father, & I will build it. 6 And the king said to me, & the queen that sat by him: Unto what time will thy journey be, and when wilt thou return? And it pleased before the king, and he sent me: and I appointed him a time. 7 And I said to the king: If it seem good to the king, let him give me letters to the governors of the country beyond the River, that they conduct me, till I come into Jewry: 8 and a letter to Asaph the keeper of the king's forest, to give me timber that I may cover the gates of the tower of the house, and the walls of the city, and the house that I shall enter into. And the king gave according to the good hand of my God with me. 9 And I came to the dukes of the country beyond the River, and gave them the king's letters. And the king had sent with me captains of soldiers, and horsemen. 10 And Sanaballat an Horonite, and Tobias a servant an Ammanite heard it, and (a) were grieved with great affliction, that a man was come, which sought the prosperity of the children of Israel.

(a) Infidels and Heretics are grieved, that others endeavour to repair the ruins of the Church in any country.

11 And I came to Jerusalem and was there three days. 12 And I arose in the night, I and a few men with me, and I told not any man what God had put in my heart to do in Jerusalem, and there was no beast with me, but the beast whereon I sat. 13 And I went out by the gate of the valley by night, and before the fountain of the dragon, and to the gate of the dung, and I viewed the wall of Jerusalem broken down, and the gates thereof consumed with fire. 14 And I passed to the gate of the fountain, and to the king's conduit, and there was no place for the beast where on I sat, to pass. 15 And I went up by the torrent in the night, and viewed the wall, and going back I came to the gate of the valley, and returned. 16 But the magistrates knew not whither I went, or what I did: yea and to the Jews, and the Priests, and the nobles, and the magistrates, and the rest that did the work, until then I had shewed nothing. 17 And I said to them: You know the affliction wherein we are, because Jerusalem is made desolate, and the gates thereof are consumed with fire: Come, and let us build the walls of Jerusalem, and let us be no longer a reproach. 18 And I shewed them (b) the hand of my God, that it was good with me, and the king's words, which he had spoken to me, and I said:

Let us rise, and let us build. And their hands were encouraged in good.

(b) God's hand was clearly shewed in the effect of obtaining the King's favorable letters.

19 But Sanaballat the Horonite, and Tobias the servant an Ammanite, and Gosem an Arabian heard of it, and they scorned us, and despised us, and said: What is this thing that you do? Why do you rebel against the king? 20 And I answered them, and said to them: The God of heaven he helpeth us, and we are his servants: let us rise and build: but you have no part, nor justice, nor memory in Jerusalem.

CHAPTER III.

The High Priest and others begin to repair Jerusalem strengthening it with an uttermost, 19. middle, 28. and innermost wall, with towers and gates.

And[1] Eliasib the high Priest arose, and his brethren the Priests: and they built the gate of the flock: they sanctified it, and set the doors thereof, and unto the tower of an hundred cubits they (a) sanctified it, unto the tower of Hananeel.

[1] The second part.
How the city was repaired with walls and people. (a) Finishing the gate they dedicated it to God's service, being for defence of his holy city: & so sanctified it.

2 And besides him did the men of Jericho build, and besides him built Zachur the son of Amri. 3 But the fish-gate the children of Asnaa did build: they covered it, and set up the doors thereof, and the locks, and bars. And besides them built Marimuth the son of Urias the son of Accas. 4 And besides him built Mosollam the son of Bazachias, the son of Mesezebel, & besides them built Sadoc the son of Baana. 5 And beside them builded the Thecuenes: but their great men did not put under their necks in the work of their Lord. 6 And Joiada the son of Phasea, and Mosollam the son of Besodia built the old-gate, covered it, & set up the doors thereof, and the locks, and bars. 7 And beside them built Meltias a Gabaonite, & Iadon a Meronathite, men of Gabaon, & Maspha, for the duke that was in the country beyond the River. 8 And beside him built Eziel the son of Araia a goldsmith: and beside him built Ananias the son of a Pigmentary: and they left Jerusalem unto the wall of the broader street. 9 And beside him built Raphaia the son of Hur, Prince of the street of Jerusalem. 10 And beside them Jedaia the son of Haromaph against his house: and beside him built Hattus the son of Hasebomia. 11 The half part of the street built Melchias the son of Herem, and Hasub the son of Phahath Moab, and the tower of the furnaces. 12 And beside him built Sellum the son of Alohes Prince of the half part of the street of Jerusalem, he and his daughters. 13 And the gate of the valley built Hanun, and the inhabitants of Zanoe: they built it, and set up the doors thereof, and the locks, and bars, and a thousand cubits in the wall unto the gate of the dunghill. 14 And the gate of the dunghill built Melchias the son of Rechab, the Prince of the street of Bethacaram: he built it, & set up the doors thereof, and the locks, and bars. 15 And the gate of the fountain Sellum builded the son of Colhoza, Prince of the village of Maspha: he built it, and covered it, and set up the doors thereof, and the locks, and bars, and the walls of the pool of Siloe unto the king's garden, and unto the steps that go down from the city of David. 16 After him built Nehemias the son of Azboc Prince of the half part of the street of Bethsur, as far as over against the sepulchre of David, and unto the pool, that is built with great work, and unto the house of the valiants. 17 After him the Levites builded, Rehum the son of Benni. After him built Hasebias Prince of the half part of the street of Ceila in his street. 18 After him built their brethren, Bavai the son of Enadad, Prince of the half part of Ceila. 19 And beside him built Azer the son of Josue, the Prince of Maspha the second measure, against the visiting of the most sure corner. 20 After him in the mount built Baruch the son of Zachai the second measure, from the corner unto the gate of the house of Eliasib the high Priest. 21 After him built Merimuth the son of Urias the son of Haccus, the second measure, from the gate of the house of Eliasib, as far as the house of Eliasib extended. 22 And after him built the Priests, men of the champion of Jordan. 23 After him built Benjamin and Hasub against their house: and after him built Azarias the son of Maasias the son of Ananias against his house. 24 After him built Bennui the son of Hanadad the second measure, from the house of Azarias unto the bending, and unto the corner. 25 Phalel the son of Ozi against the bending and the tower, which appeareth from out of the king's high house, that is, in the court of the prison: after him Phadaia the son of Pharos. 26 And the Nathineites dwelt in Ophel, as far as over against the gate of waters toward the East, and the tower that stood out. 27 After him the Thecuenes builded the second measure over against, from the great and eminent tower unto the wall of the temple. 28 And upward to the gate of horses the Priests built, every man against his house. 29 After them built Sadoc the son of Emmer against his house. And after him built Semaia the son of Sechenias, keeper of the East gate. 30 After him built Hanania the son of Selemia, and Hanun the son of Seleph the sixth, the second measure: after him built Mosollam the son of Barachias, against his treasury. After him Melchias a gold-smith son unto the house of the Nathineites, and of them that sold old stuff against the judgment gate, and unto the upper chamber of the corner. 31 And within the upper chamber of the corner in the gate of the flock, the goldsmiths and merchants builded.

CHAPTER IV.

Notwithstanding the enemies' rage and oppose against the building of the walls, 4. the Jews build with one hand, & hold their swords in the other. Nehemias encourageth them, and the work proceedeth.

And it came to pass, when Sanaballat had heard that we builded the wall, he was very angry: and being moved exceedingly he scorned the Jews, 2 and said before his brethren, and the multitude of the Samaritans: What do (a) the silly Jews? Will the gentiles let them alone? Shall they sacrifice and accomplish in one day? Why, are they able to build up the stones out of the heaps of dust, that are burnt?

(a) It was God's providence that the enemies mocking at the reparation of Jerusalem did not so furiously resist, till the work was performed: so sometimes heretics scoff at the endeavours of poor Priests labouring to restore Catholic religion: but whether they scoff or rage, God's holy work proceedeth and prospereth.

3 Yea Tobias also the Ammanite his neighbour said: Let them build: if a fox come up, he shall leap over their stone wall. 4 Hear our God, because we are had in despise: turn the reproach upon their head, and give them into despise in a Land of captivity. 5 Cover not their iniquity, and let not their sin be put out before thy face, because they have mocked thy builders. 6 Therefore we built the wall, and joined together the whole unto the half part: and the heart of the people was provoked to work. 7 And it came to pass when Sanaballat had heard, and Tobias, and the Arabians, and the Ammanites, and the Azotians, that the breach of the wall of Jerusalem was closed up, and the gates began to be stopped, they were wrath exceedingly. 8 And they were all assembled together to come, and to fight against Jerusalem, and to prepare ambushments. 9 And we prayed our God, and set watchmen upon the wall day and night against them. 10 And Judas said: The strength of him that carrieth is weakened, and the mortar is very much, and we shall not be able to build the wall. 11 And our enemies said: Let them not know, and let them be ignorant, till we come into the midst of them, and kill them, and make their work to cease. 12 And it came to pass, the Jews that dwelt beside them, coming and telling us ten times, out of all places from whence they came to us, 13 I set the people in a place behind the wall round about in order, with their swords, and spears, and bows. 14 And I looked and rose up: and I said to the Princes and magistrates, and to the rest of the common people: Be not afraid at their face: Remember our Lord great and terrible, and fight for your brethren, your sons, and your daughters, and your wives, and your houses. 15 And it came to pass, when our enemies had heard that it was told us, God defeated their counsel. And we returned all to the walls, every man to his work. 16 And it came to pass from that day, the half part of their young men did the work, and half was ready to battle, and spears, and shields, and bows, and coats of mail, and the Princes behind them in all the house of Juda 17 of them that built in the wall, and that carried burdens, and that laded them: with one of his hands he did the work, and with the other he held a sword: 18 for every one of the builders was girded with a sword about his reins. And they builded, and sounded with the trumpet near me. 19 And I said to the Princes, & to the magistrates, & to the rest of the common people: The work is great and broad, and we are separated in the wall one far from another: 20 in what place soever you shall hear the sound of the trumpet, thither run together unto us: our God will fight for us. 21 And let us ourselves do the work: and let the half part of us hold spears from the rising of the morning, till the stars appear. 22 At that time also I said to the people: Let every man with his servant tarry in the midst of Jerusalem, and let there be courses among us by day and night to work. 23 And I and my brethren, & my servants, and the watchmen that were behind me, did not put off our cloths: every man was made bare only to washing.

CHAPTER V.

Nehemias blameth covetous richmen, for oppressing the poor: 14. himself giveth largely of his own to the needy.

And there was (a) a great cry of the people, and of their wives against their brethren the Jews.

(a) S. Beda in his time lamented that some spiritual Superiors neglected to feed their flock, either spiritually or temporally, and yet exacted temporal revenues, and oppressed the poor people. li. 3. c. 21. in Esd. How much more may we with him, wish another Nehemias, that is a comforter from our Lord to correct this fault, & to relieve poor Catholics distressed?

2 And there were that said: Our sons and daughters are very many: let us take corn for the price of them, and let us eat, & live. 3 And there were that said: Let us pledge our fields, & vineyards, and our houses, and let us take corn in famine. 4 And others said: Let us borrow money for the king's tributes, and let us give our fields and vineyards, 5 and now as the flesh of our brethren, so is our flesh: and as their children so also our children. Behold we subdue our sons, and our daughters into bondage, and our daughters there are bond women, neither have we wherewith they may be redeemed, and our fields and our vineyards other men do possess. 6 And I was exceeding angry, when I had heard their cry according to these words. 7 And my heart thought with myself: and I rebuked the Princes and magistrates, and said to them: Do you every one exact usuries of your brethren? And I gathered against them a great assembly. 8 and I said to them: We as you know, have redeemed our brethren the Jews, that were sold to the gentiles, according to our ability: & will you therefore sell your brethren, and shall we redeem them? And they held their peace, neither did they find what to answer. 9 And I said to them: The thing is not good, which you do: why walk (b) you not in the fear of our God, lest we be upbraided with all the gentiles our enemies?

(b) A right property of a true pastor, to do that good which he preacheth to others. S. Beda ibidem.

speakest. And I called the Priests, and adjured them to do according to that which I had said. 13 Moreover I shook my bosom, and said: God so shake every man, that shall not accomplish this word, out of his house, and out of his labours, so be he shaken out, and made empty. And all the multitude said: Amen. And they praised God. And the people did as it was said. 14 And from that day, wherein the king commanded me to the Duke in the land of Juda, from the twentieth year till the two and thirtieth year of Artaxerxes the king, for twelve years, I and my brethren did not eat the yearly allowance, that was due to the Dukes. 15 But the former Dukes, that had been before me, burdened the people, & took of them in bread, & wine, and money, every day forty sicles: yea & their officers oppressed the people. But I did not so for the fear of God. 16 Yea I builded rather in the work of the wall, and field I bought not, and all my servants were gathered together to the work. 17 The Jews also & the magistrates an hundred fifty men, and they that came to us out of the nations, that were round about us, were at the table. 18 And there was prepared for me day by day one oxe, six chosen rams, beside fowls, and within ten days diverse wines, and many other things did I give. Moreover also the yearly allowance of my dukedom I sought not, for the people was very much impoverished. 19 (c) Remember me my God to good, according to all things which I have done to this people.

(c) A good conscience hath great confidence in God, and justly hopeth for reward.

CHAPTER VI.

The enemies guilefully offer to make league with the Jews. 3. But Nehemias proceedeth in building the walls: 16. and all bordering nations fear them.

And it came to pass, when Sanaballat had heard, and Tobias, and Gossem the Arabian, and the rest of our enemies, that I did build the wall, and there was no breach remaining in it (howbeit at that time I had not put the doors in the gates) 2 Sanaballat and Gossem sent to me, saying: Come, and (a) let us make a league together in the villages, in the field of Ono: But they thought to do me evil.

(a) When heretics & other adversaries of the Church find themselves not able to suppress Catholics, they offer conditions of peace, and liberty to all: So when Protestants began, and where they are weak, they would have none persecuted for any opinions in religion; but where they are strong they hardly grant toleration to Catholics.

3 I sent therefore messengers to them, saying: I am doing a great work, and I cannot go down, lest perhaps it be neglected when I shall come and descend to you. 4 But they sent to me according to this word, four times: and I answered them according to the former word. 5 And Sanaballat sent his servant to me the fifth time according to the former word, and he had a letter in his hand written in this manner: 6 Among the Gentiles it is heard, and Gossem hath said, that thou and the Jews mean to rebel, and therefore thou buildest the wall, and will advance thyself king over them: for which cause, 7 thou hast set up Prophets also, which should preach of thee in Jerusalem, saying: There is a king in Jury: The king will hear of these things: therefore come now, that we may take counsel together. 8 And I sent to them, saying: It is not done according to these words, which thou speakest: for thou framest these things of thine own heart. 9 For all these terrified us, thinking that our hands would cease from the work, and we would leave off. For which cause I did the more strengthen my hands: 10 and I entered into the house of Samaia the son of Dalaia the son of Metabeel secretly, who said: Let us consult with ourselves in the house of God in the midst of the temple: and Let us shut the doors of the temple, because they will come to kill thee, and in the night they will come to slay thee. 11 And I said. Doth any man that is like unto me fly? And who being as I am, will go into the temple, and live? I will not go in.

12 And I understood that God had not sent him, but as it were prophesying he had spoken to me, and Tobias, and Sanaballat had hired him. 13 For he had taken a price, that I being terrified should do it, and sin, and they might have some evil to upbraid me withal. 14 Remember me Lord for Tobias and Sanaballat, according to such their works. Yea and Noadias the Prophet, and the rest of the Prophets that terrified me. 15 But the wall was finished the five and twentieth day of the month of Elul, in two and fifty days. 16 It came to pass therefore when all our enemies had heard it, that all nations which were round about us, feared, and were dismayed within themselves, and knew that this work was done of God. 17 But in those days also many letters of the principal Jews were sent to Tobias, and from Tobias there came to them. 18 For there were many in Jury sworn unto him, because he was the son in law of Sechenias the son of Area, and Johanan his son had taken the daughter of Mosollam the son of Barachias. 19 Yea and they praised him before me, and they reported my words unto him: and Tobias sent letters to terrify me.

CHAPTER VII.

Nehemias appointeth watchmen in Jerusalem, 5. and calling the people together reciteth the number of those, which came first from Babylon. 68. Likewise of their cattle, 70. and the gifts of certain chief men towards the reparations.

And after the wall was built, and I had put on the doors, and numbered the porters, and singing men, and Levites: 2 I commanded Hanani my brother, and Hananias Prince of the house of Jerusalem (for he seemed as it were a true man, & one that feared God above the rest) 3 and I said to them: Let not the gates of Jerusalem be opened until the heat of the sun. And when they yet stood by, the gates were shut, and barred: and I set (a) watchmen of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, every one by their courses, and every man against his house.

(a) Three special defences of a city, are the strength of walls, shutting and opening the gates in due time, & diligent watchmen: so to the custody of faithful souls three things are necessary; the grace of God, due regard of the outward senses, and continual watch against our invisible enemies.

4 And the city was exceeding large and great, and the people few in the midst thereof, and there were no houses built. 5 But God gave me in my heart, and I assembled the Princes and magistrates, and common people, that I might number them: and I found a Book of the number of them that came up first, and there was found written in it: 6 These are the children of the province, which came up from the captivity of them that were transported, whom Nabuchodonosor the king of Babylon had transported, and returned into Jury, every one into his own city. 7 They that came with Zorobabel, Josue, Nehemias, Azarias, Rahamias, Nahamani, Mardochaeus, Belsam, Mespharath, Begoai, Nahum, Baana. The number of the men of the people of Israel. 8 The children of Pharos, two thousand an hundred seventy two. 9 The children of Saphatia, three hundred seventy two. 10 The children of Area, six hundred fifty two. 11 The children of Phahathmoab of the children of Josue and Joab, two thousand eight hundred eighteen. 12 The children of Aelam, a thousand two hundred fifty four. 13 The children of Zethua, eight hundred forty five. 14 The children of Zachai, seven hundred sixty. 15 The children of Bannui, six hundred forty eight. 16 The children of Bebai, six hundred twenty eight. 17 The children of Azgad, two thousand three hundred twenty two. 18 The children of Adonicam, six hundred sixty seven. 19 The children of Beguai, two thousand sixty seven. 20 The children of Adin, six hundred fifty five. 21 The children of Ater, children of Hezecias, ninety eight. 22 The children of Hasem, three hundred twenty eight. 23 The children of Besai, three hundred twenty four. 24 The children of Hareph, an hundred twelve. 25 The children of Gabaon, ninety five. 26 The children of Bethlehem, and Netupha, an hundred eighty eight. 27 The men of Anathoth, an hundred twenty eight. 28 The men of Bethazmoth, forty two. 29 The men of Cariathiarim, Cephira, and Beroth, seven hundred forty three. 30 The men of Rama and Geba, six hundred twenty one. 31 The men of Machmas, an hundred twenty two. 32 The men of Bethel and Hai, an hundred twenty three. 33 The men of another Nebo, fifty two. 34 The men of another Aelam, a thousand two hundred fifty four. 35 The children of Harem, three hundred twenty. 36 The children of Jericho, three hundred forty five. 37 The children of Lod Hadid and Ono, seven hundred twenty one. 38 The children of Senaa, three thousand nine hundred thirty. 39 The Priests: The children of Idaia in the house of Josue, nine hundred seventy three. 40 The children of Emmer, a thousand fifty two. 41 The children of Phashur, a thousand two hundred forty seven. 42 The children of Arem, a thousand seventeen. The Levites: 43 The children of Josue and Cedmihel, the children 44 of Oduia, seventy four: The singing men: 45 the children of Asaph, an hundred forty eight. 46 The porters: The children of Sellum, the children of Ater, the children of Telmon, the children of Accub, the children of Hatita, the children of Sobai: an hundred thirty eight. 47 The Nathineites: The children of Soha, the children of Hasupha, the children of Tebbaath, 48 the children of Ceros, the children of Siaa, the children of Phadon, the children of Lebana, the children of Hagaba, the children of Selmai, 49 the children of Hanan, the children of Geddel, the children of Gaher, 50 the children of Raaia, the children of Rasin, the children of Necoda, 51 the children of Gesem, the children of Aza, the children of Phasea, 52 the children of Besai, the children of Munim, the children of Nephussim, 53 the children of Bacbuc, the children of Hacupha, the children of Harhur, 54 the children of Besloth, the children of Mahida, the children of Harsa, 55 the children of Bercos, the children of Sisara, the children of Thema, 56 the children of Nasia, the children of Hatipha, 57 the children of the servants of Salomon, the children of Sotai, the children of Sophereth, the children of Pharida, 58 the children of Iahala, the children of Darcon, the children of Ieddel, 59 the children of Saphatia, the children of Hatil, the children of Phochereth, who was born unto Sabaim, the son of Amon. 60 All Nathineites, and the children of the servants of Salomon, three hundred ninety two. 61 But these be they which came up from Thelmela, Thelharsa, Cherub, Addon, and Emmer: and could not shew the house of their fathers, and their seed, whether they were of Israel. 62 The children of Dalaia, the children of Tobia, the children of Necoda, six hundred forty two. 63 And of the Priests, the children of Habia, the children of Accos, the children of Berzellai, who took a wife of the daughters of Berzellai a Galaadite, and he was called by their name. 64 These sought their writing in the register, & found it not: & they were cast out of the Priesthood. 65 And Athersatha said to them, that they should not eat of the Holies of holies, until there stood up a Priest learned and cunning. 66 All the multitude as it were one man^ forty two thousand three hundred sixty, 67 beside their men-servants and women-servants, which were seven thousand three hundred thirty seven: and among them singing men, and singing women, two hundred forty five. 68 Their horses, seven hundred thirty six, their mules two hundred forty five, 69 their camels, four hundred thirty five, asses six thousand seven hundred twenty.

Hitherto is reported what was written in the Register. From this place forward goeth on in order the history of Nehemias. [1]

[1] S. Jerome here noteth whence he received each part of this book, which is all Canonical Scripture, being all alike so declared by the Church.

70 And certain of the Princes of families gave unto the work. Athersatha gave into the treasure of gold a thousand drachmas, phials fifty, tunics for Priests five hundred thirty. 71 And of the Princes of families there gave into the treasure of the work of gold, twenty thousand drachmas, and of silver two thousand two hundred pound. 72 And that which the rest of the people gave, of gold twenty thousand drachmas, and of silver two thousand pound, and tunics for Priests sixty seven. 73 And the Priests, and Levites, and porters, and singing men, and the rest of the common people, and the Nathineites, and all Israel dwelt in their cities. And the seventh month was come: and the children of Israel were in their cities.

CHAPTER VIII.

Esdras readeth the law before the people. 9. Nehemias comforteth them. 13. They celebrate the feast of tabernacles seven days: 13. and of collection the eighth day.

And all the people was gathered together as it were one man to the street, which is before the water, & they said to Esdras the scribe, that he should bring the book of the law of Moyses, which our Lord had commanded Israel. 2 Esdras therefore the Priest (a) brought the law before the multitude of men and women, and all that could understand, in the first day of the seventh month.

(a) The people requested Esdras to bring the book of the law, and he brought it, neither is there any mention that he writ the whole law out of his memory or by miracle: which maketh it probable that all copies were not burned or lost, but some reserved by Jeremias, Ezechiel, Daniel, Aggeus, Zacharias, or by himself or others, out of which he collected one entire volume, correcting faults committed by scribes, & adding some things for explication sake & supplement of the histories: and that either by tradition or revelation.

3 And he read it plainly in the street that was before the water gate, from morning until midday, in the presence of the men, and women, & of those that understood: & the ears of all the people were attent to the book. 4 And Esdras the scribe stood upon a step of wood, which he made to speak upon: & there stood by him Mathathias, & Semeia, & Ania, and Uria, & Helcia, and Maasia, on his right hand: and on the left: Phadaia, Misael, and Melchia, and Hasum, and Hasbadana, Zacharia, and Mosollam. 5 And Esdras opened the Book before all the people: for he appeared above all the people: and when he had opened it, all the people stood. 6 And Esdras blessed our Lord the great God: and all the people answered: Amen, amen: lifting up their hands, and they bowed, and adored God flat on the earth. 7 Moreover Josue, and Bani, and Serebia, Jamin, Accub, Septhai, Odia, Maasia, Celita, Azarias, Jozabed, Hanan, Phalaia: Levites, made silence in the people to hear the law: and the people stood in their degree. 8 And they read in the Book of the law of God distinctly and plainly, for to understand: and they understood when it was read. 9 And Nehemias said (the same is (b) Athersatha) and Esdras the Priest and scribe, and the Levites interpreting to all the people: It is a day sanctified to the Lord our God, mourn ye not, and weep not. For all the people wept, when they heard the words of the law.[1]

10 And he said to them: Go, eat fat things, and drink the sweet wine, and send portions to them, that have not prepared for themselves, because it is the holy day of our Lord, and be not sad: for the joy of our Lord is our strength. 11 And the Levites made silence in all the people, saying: Hold your peace, because the day is holy, & be not sorrowful. 12 Therefore all the people went to eat and drink, and to send portions, and to make great joy: because they understood the words, that he had taught them. 13 And in the second day were gathered the Princes of the families of all the people, the Priests and Levites to Esdras the scribe, that he should interpret unto them the words of the law. 14 And they found written in the law, that our Lord commanded in the hand of Moyses, that the children of Israel should dwell in tabernacles, on the solemn day, the seventh month: 15 and that they should proclaim and publish a voice in all their cities, and in Jerusalem, saying: Go ye forth into the mount, and fetch branches of the olive tree, and branches of the most fair tree, branches of the myrtle tree, & boughs of the palm trees, and branches of the thick leaved tree, that tabernacles may be made, as it is written. 16 And the people went forth, and brought. And they made themselves tabernacles every man in his house top, and in his courts, and in the courts of the house of God, and in the street of the water gate, and in the street of the gate of Ephraim. 17 Therefore all the Church of them, that were returned from the captivity, made tabernacles, and dwelt in tabernacles. For from the days of Josue the son of Nun the children of Israel had not done it in such sort, until that day: and there was exceeding great joy. 18 And he read in the book of the law of God day by day, from the first day till the last, and they made the solemnity seven days, & in the eighth day a collect according to the rite.

CHAPTER IX.

The people repenting in fasting and sackcloth, put away their wives of strange nations. 5. Esdras confesseth God's benefits, and the people's ingratitude. 32. Prayeth for them, and maketh league with God.

And in the four and twentieth day of the month the children of Israel came together in fasting and sackcloths, and earth upon them. 2 And the seed of the children of Israel was (a) separated from every strange child: and they stood, and confessed their sins, and the iniquities of their fathers.

(a) True repentance requireth works of penance, & especially the removing of occasions of sin: a separation from evil company, abandoning of evil cogitations, and of much worldly pleasure.

3 And they rose up to stand: and they read in the volume of the law of our Lord their God four times in a day, and four times they confessed, and adored our Lord their God. 4 And there arose upon the step of the Levites Josue, and Bani, Cedmihel, Sabania, Bonni, Sarebias, Bani, and Chanani: and they cried with a loud voice to our Lord their God. 5 And the Levites Josue and Cedmihel, Bonni, Hasebnia, Serebia, Odaia, Sebnia, and Phathahia, said: Arise, Bless our Lord your God from eternity to eternity: and let them bless the high name of thy glory in all blessing and praise. 6 Thou the same, o Lord, alone thou hast made heaven, and all the host thereof: the earth and all things that are in it: the seas and all things that are therein: and thou dost give life to all these things, and the host of heaven adoreth thee. 7 Thou the same o Lord God, which didst choose Abram, and broughtest him out of the fire of the Chaldees, and gavest him the (b) name Abraham.

(b) Changing of names importeth some beneficial mystery. Gen. 17.

8 And thou didst find his heart faithful before thee: and thou madest a covenant with him, that thou wouldest give him the land of the Chananeite, of the Hetheite, and of the Amorrheite, and of the Pherezeite, and of the Jebuseite, and of the Gergeseite, to give unto his seed: and thou hast fulfilled thy words, because thou art just. 9 And thou sawest the affliction of our fathers in Aegypt: and their cry thou didst hear upon the Red sea. 10 And thou gavest signs and wonders in Pharao, and in all his servants, and in all the people of his land: for thou didst know that they had done proudly against them: and thou madest thyself a name, as also at this day. 11 And thou didst divide the sea before them, and they passed through the midst of the sea in dry land: but their persecutors thou threwest into the depth, as a stone into the rough waters. 12 And in a pillar of a cloud thou wast their leader by day, and in a pillar of fire by night, that the way might appear to them, by the which they went. 13 To mount Sinai also thou didst descend, and spakest with them from heaven, and thou gavest them right judgments, and the law of truth, ceremonies, and good precepts. 14 Thy sanctified Sabbath thou didst shew them, and the commandments, and ceremonies, and the law thou didst command them in the hand of Moyses thy servant. 15 Bread also from heaven thou gavest them in their hunger, and water out of the rock thou didst bring forth to them thirsting, and thou saidst to them that they should enter in and possess the land, upon which thou didst lift up thy hand to deliver it them. 16 But they and our fathers did proudly, and hardened their necks, and heard not thy commandments. 17 And they (c) would not hear, and they remembered not thy marvelous works which thou hast done to them. And they hardened their necks, and gave the head to return to their servitude, as it were by contention. But thou a propitious God, & gracious, and merciful, long suffering and of much compassion, didst not forsake them.

(c) Free will in sinners.

18 Yea and when they had made to themselves a molten calf, and had said: This is thy God, which brought thee out of Aegypt: and they did great blasphemies. 19 But thou in thy many mercies didst not leave them in the desert: the pillar of the cloud departed not from them by day to lead them into the way, and the pillar of fire by night to shew them the way by which they should go. 20 And thou gavest them thy good spirit, which should teach them, and thy Manna thou didst not withhold from their mouth, and thou gavest them water in thirst. 21 Forty years didst thou feed them in the desert, and nothing was wanting to them, their garments waxed not old, & their feet were not worn. 22 And thou gavest them Kingdoms, & peoples, and didst part lots unto them: and they possessed the land of Sehon, and the land of the king Hesebon, and the land of Og the king of Basan. 23 And thou didst multiply their children as the stars of heaven, and brought them to the land whereof thou hadst said to their fathers, that they should enter and possess it. 24 And the children came, and possessed the land, and thou didst humble before them the inhabiters of the land, the Chananeites, and gavest them into their hand, & their kings, & the peoples of the land, that they might do to them as it pleased them. 25 They therefore took the fenced cities, and fat ground, and possessed houses full of all goods; cisterns made by others, vineyards, and olivets, and many trees that bare fruit: and they did eat, and were filled, and became fat, and abounded with delicious things in thy great goodness, 26 But they provoked thee to wrath, and departed from thee, and threw the law behind their backs: and they killed thy Prophets, which admonished them earnestly to return to thee: and they did great blasphemies. 27 And thou gavest them into the hands of their enemies, and they afflicted them. And in the time of their tribulation they cried to thee, and thou from heaven didst hear, and according to thy many compassions gavest them saviours, that should save them from the hand of their enemies. 28 And when they had rested, they returned to do evil in thy sight: and thou didst leave them in the hand of their enemies, and they possessed them. And they returned, and cried to thee: and thou heardest from heaven, and deliveredst them in thy mercies many times. 29 And thou didst admonish them that they should return to thy law. But they did proudly, and heard not thy commandments, and sinned in thy judgments, which a man should do, and shall live in them, and they gave the revolting shoulder, & hardened their neck, neither did they hear. 30 And thou didst prolong many years over them, and didst testify to charge them in thy spirit by the hand of thy Prophets: and they heard not, & thou didst deliver them into the hand of the peoples of the nations. 31 But in thy very many mercies thou madest them not into consumption, neither didst thou forsake them: because a God of compassions and gracious art thou. 32 Now therefore o our God, great, strong, and terrible, keeping covenant and mercy, turn not away from thy face all the labour which hath found us, our kings, & our Princes, and our Priests, and our Prophets, and our fathers, and all the people from the days of the king of Assur, until this day. 33 And thou art just in all things, that have come upon us: because thou hast done truth, but we have done wickedly. 34 Our kings, our Princes, our Priests, and our fathers have not done thy law, and have not attended thy commandments, and thy testimonies which thou hast testified among them. 35 And they in their reigns, and in thy manifold goodness, which thou gavest them, and in the land most large and fat, which thou didst deliver in their sight, served not thee, nor returned from their most wicked devices. 36 Behold we ourselves this day are bondmen: and the land, which thou gavest our fathers, that they should eat the bread thereof, and the good things that are thereof, and ourselves are servants in it. 37 And the fruits thereof are multiplied to the kings, whom thou hast set over us for our sins, and they have dominion over our bodies, and over our beasts, according to their will, and we are in great tribulation. 38 Therefore upon all these things we ourselves make a covenant, and write, and our Princes, our Levites, and our Priests sign it.

CHAPTER X.

Many, in name of all, subscribe to the covenant made with God. 30. Namely not to marry with strangers, 31. to keep the Sabbath day, and the seventh year. 32. To pay oblations, 37. First fruits, 38. and Tithes.

And the subscribers were Nehemias, Athersatha the son of Hachelai, and Sedecias, 2 Saraias, Azarias, Jeremias, 3 Pheshur, Amarias, Melchias, 4 Hattus, Sebenia, Melluch, 5 Harem, Merimuth, Obdias, 6 Daniel, Genthon, Baruch, 7 Mosollam, Abia, Miamin, 8 Maazia, Belgai, Semeia: these were Priests. 9 Moreover Levites, Josue the son of Azanias, Bennui of the children of Henadad, Cedmihel, 10 And their brethren, Sebenia, Odaia, Celita, Phalaia, Hanan, 11 Micha, Rohob, Hasebia, 12 Zachur, Serebia, Sabania, 13 Odaia, Bani, Baninu. 14 The heads of the people, Pharos, Phahathmoab, Aelam, Zethu, Bani, 15 Bonni, Azgad, Bebai, 16 Adonia, Begoai, Adin, 17 Ater, Hezecia, Azur, 18 Odaia, Hasum, Besai, 19 Hareph, Anathoth, Nebai, 20 Megphias, Mosollam, Hazir, 21 Mesizabel, Sadoc, Iedua. 22 Pheltia, Hanan, Anai, 23 Osee, Hanania, Hasub, 24 Alohes, Phalea, Sobec, 25 Rehum, Hasebna, Maasia, 26 Echaia, Hanan, Anan, 27 Melluch, Haran, Baana: 28 And the rest of the people, Priests, Levites, Porters, and singing men, Nathineites, and all that separated themselves from the peoples of the lands to the law of God, their wives, their sons, and their daughters. 29 All that could understand, promising for their brethren, their Princes, and they that came to promise, and swear that they would walk in the law of God, which he gave in the hand of Moyses the servant of God, that they would do and keep all the commandments of the Lord our God, and his judgments and his ceremonies. 30 And that we would not give (a) our daughters to the people of the land, and their daughters we would not take to our sons.

(a) In all leagues & covenants of peace those articles are specially mentioned wherein breach hath been made in former times.

31 The peoples of the land, which bring in things to sell, & all things to be used, to sell them on the Sabbath day, we will not take it of them in the Sabbath, & in the sanctified day. And we will let pass the seventh year, & the exaction of every hand. 32 And we will ordain precepts upon ourselves, to give the third part of a sicle every year to the work of the house of our God. 33 to the loaves of proposition, and to the continual sacrifice, & for a continual holocaust in the Sabbaths, in the Calends, in the Solemnities, and in the sanctified, and for sin: that propitiation may be made for Israel, and unto all use of the house of our God. 34 We therefore did cast lots concerning the oblation of wood between the Priests, and the Levites, and the people, that it should be brought into the house of our God by the houses of our fathers at set times, from year to year: that it might burn upon the altar of the Lord our God as it is written in the law of Moyses: 35 And that we would bring the first born of our land, and the first fruits of all the fruit of every tree, from year to year, in the house of our Lord. 36 and the first fruits of our sons, and of our cattle, as it is written in the law, and the first fruits of our oxen, and of our sheep, that they might be offered in the house of our God, to the Priests which minister in the house of our God. 37 And the first fruits of our meats, and of our libaments, & the fruits of every tree, of vintage also and of oil we will bring to the Priests, unto the treasury of our God, and the tenth part of our land to the Levites. The Levites themselves shall receive the tithes out of all the cities^ of our works. 38 And the Priest the son of Aaron shall be with the Levites in the tithes of the Levites, and the Levites shall offer the tenth part of their tithe in the house of our God, to the treasury in the treasure-house. 39 For the children of Israel and the children of Levi shall carry to the treasury the first fruits of corn, of wine, and of oil: and the sanctified vessels shall be there, and the Priests, and singing men, and porters, and ministers, and we will not leave the house of our God.

CHAPTER XI.

New inhabitants of Jerusalem are recited. 20. Likewise who dwelt in other cities of Juda.

And the Princes of the people dwelt in Jerusalem: but the rest of the people cast lots, to take (a) one part of ten that should dwell in Jerusalem the holy city, and nine parts in the cities.

(a) Because Jerusalem was most impugned by enemies few were willing to dwell there,

2 And the people blessed all the men that had (b) voluntarily offered themselves to dwell in Jerusalem.

(b) yet many valiant men of the tribes of Juda, Benjamin, and Levi, offered themselves: of other tribes the tenth part were chosen by lots. Whereby is gathered that many of the ten tribes returned also into Chanaan, though the holy Scripture doth not so expressly record what became of them as of the other tree tribes, because Jerusalem pertained to the lot of Benjamin, Juda was the Kingly tribe, and Levi the Priestly.
S. Beda. lib. 3. cap. 31. in Esdr.

3 These therefore are the Princes of the Province, which dwelt in Jerusalem, and in the cities of Juda. And every one dwelt in his possession, in their cities, Israel, the Priests, the Levites, the Nathineites, and the children of the servants of Salomon. 4 And in Jerusalem there dwelt of the children of Juda, and of the children of Benjamin: of the children of Juda, Athaias the son of Aziam, the son of Zacharias, the son of Amarias, the son of Saphatias, the son of Malaleel: of the children of Phares, 5 Maasia the son of Baruch, the son of Cholhoza, the son of Hazia, the son of Adaia, the son of Joiarib, the son of Zacharias, the son of a Silonite. 6 All these the children of Phares, which dwelt in Jerusalem, four hundred sixty eight, valiant men. 7 And these are the children of Benjamin: Sellum the son of Mosollam, the son of Ioed, the son of Phadaia, the son of Colaia, the son of Masia, the son of Etheel, the son of Isaia, 8 and after him Gebbai, Sellai, nine hundred twenty eight. 9 and Joel the son of Zechri the overseer of them, and Judas the son of Senua second over the city. 10 And of the Priests, Idaia the son of Joarib, Jachin, 11 Saraia the son of Helcias, the son of Mosollam, the son of Sadoc, the son of Meraioth, the son of Achitob the Prince of the house of God, 12 and their brethren that do the works of the temple: eight hundred twenty two. And Adaia the son of Jeroham, the son of Phelelia, the son of Amsi, the son of Zacharias, the son of Pheshur, the son of Melchias, 13 and his brethren the Princes of the fathers: two hundred forty two. And Amassai the son of Azreel, the son of Ahazi, the son of Mosolamoth, the son of Emmer, 14 and their brethren exceeding mighty: an hundred twenty eight, and their overseer Zabdiel son of the mighty ones. 15 And of the Levites Semeia the son of Hasub, the son of Azaricam, the son of Hasabia, the son of Boni, 16 and Sabathai and Jozabed, over all the works, that were without the house of God, of the Princes of the Levites. 17 And Mathania the son of Micha, the son of Zebedei, the son of Asaph Prince to praise, and to confess in prayer, and Becbecia second of his brethren, and Abda the son of Samua, the son of Galal, the son of Idithun. 18 All the Levites in the holy city two hundred eighty four. 19 And the porters, Accub, Telmon, and their brethren, which kept the doors: an hundred seventy two. 20 And the rest of Israel the Priests and the Levites in all the cities of Juda, every man in his possession. 21 And the Nathineites, that dwelt in Ophel, and Siaha, and Gaspha of the Nathineites. 22 And the overseer of the Levites in Jerusalem, Azzi the son of Bani, the son of Hasabia, the son of Mathania, the son of Micha. Of the children of Asaph, the singing men in the ministry of the house of God. 23 For the king's commandment was upon them, and an order among the singing men day by day. 24 And Phathahia the son of Mesezebel of the children of Zara the son of Juda in the hand of the king, according to every word of the people, 25 and in the houses through all their countries. Of the children of Juda there dwelt in Cariatharbe, and in her daughters: and in Dibon, and in her daughters, and in Cabseel, and in the villages thereof, 26 and in Jesue, and in Molada, and in Bethphaleth, 27 and in Hasersual, and in Bersabee, and in her daughters, 28 and in Siceleg, and in Mochona, and in her daughters, 29 and in Remmon, and in Saraa, and in Jerimuth, 30 Zanoa, Odollam, and in their towns, Lachis and in her countries, Azeca, and in her daughters. And they abode in Bersabee unto the vale of Ennom. 31 And the children of Benjamin, of Geba, Mecmas, and Hai, and Bethel, and her daughters, 32 in Anathoth, Nob, Anania, 33 Asor, Rama, Gethaim, 34 Hadid, Seboim, and Neballat, Lod, 35 and Ono the valley of artificers. 36 And of the Levites were portions of Juda, and Benjamin.

CHAPTER XII.

The names and offices of Priests, and Levites, which came with Zorobabel and Josue to Jerusalem 27. with great solemnity of thanks-giving. 31. Watchmen are appointed on the new walls, 45. and Keepers of the holy treasure.

And these are the Priests and Levites, that came up with Zorobabel the son of Salathiel, and Josue: Saraia, Jeremias, (a) Esdras,

(a) Esdras went again to Babylon, and obtaining a favourable commission of the King brought many with him into Jerusalem. 1. Esdr. 7.

2 Amaria, Melluch, Hattus. 3 Sebenias, Rheum, Merimuth, 4 Addo, Genthon, Abia, 5 Miamin, Madia, Belga, 6 Semeia, and Joiarib, Idaia, Sellum, Amoc, Helcias, 7 Idaia. These are the Princes of the Priests, & their brethren in the days of Josue. 8 Moreover the Levites, Jesua, Bennui, Cedmihel, Sarebia, Juda, Mathanias, over the hymns^ they & their brethren: 9 And Becbecia, and Hannia and their brethren every one in his office. 10 And (b) Josue begat Ioacim, and Ioacim begat Eliasib, and Eliasib begat Joiada, (b) The genealogy of high Priests from Iosue to Ieddoa, otherwise called Iaddus.

11 and Joiada begat Jonathan, and Jonathan begat Ieddoa. 12 And in the days of Ioacim the Priests and Princes of the families were: Of Saraia, Maraia: Of Jeremias, Hanania: 13 Of Esdras, Mosollam: Of Amaria, Johanan: 14 Of Milicho, Jonathan: Of Sebenia, Joseph: 15 Of Haram, Edna: Of Maraioth, Helci: 16 Of Adaia, Zacharia: Of Genthon, Mosollam: 17 Of Abia, Zechri: Of Miamin and Moadia, Phelti: 18 Of Belga, Sammua: Of Semaia, Jonathan: 19 Of Joiarib, Mathanai: Of Iodaia, Azzi: 20 Of Sellai, Celai: Of Amoc, Heber: 21 Of Helcias, Hasebia: Of Idaia, Nathanael. 22 The Levites in the days of Eliasib, and Joiada, and Johanan, and Ieddoa, written Princes of the families, and the Priests in the reign of Darius the Persian. 23 The children of Levi, Princes of the families, written in the book of Chronicles of days, and unto the days of Jonathan the son of Eliasib. 24 And the Princes of the Levites, Hasebia, Serebia, and Josue the son of Cedmihel: and their brethren by their courses, to praise and confess according to the precept of David the man of God, and to wait equally in order. 25 Mathania, and Becbecia, Obedia, and Mosollam, Telmon, Accub, keepers of the gates and of the entrances before the gates. 26 These were in the days of Ioacim the son of Josue, the son Josedec, and in the days of Nehemias the duke, and of Esdras the Priest, and Scribe. 27 And in the dedication of the wall of Jerusalem they sought Levites out of all other places, to bring them into Jerusalem, and to make the dedication and joy in giving of thanks, and song, and in cymbals, psalteries and harps. 28 And the children of the singing men were gathered together out of the champion about Jerusalem, and out of the towns Nethuphati, 29 and from the house of Galgal, and from the countries of Geba and Azmaveth: because the singing men did build themselves villages round about Jerusalem. 30 And the Priests and Levites were cleansed, and they cleansed the people, and the gates, & the wall. 31 And I made the Princes of Juda go up upon the wall, and I set two great choirs of them that should praise. And they went on the right hand upon the wall to the gate of the dunghill. 32 And after them went Osaias, & the half part of the Princes of Juda, 33 and Azarias, Esdras, & Mosollam, Judas, & Benjamin, & Semeia, & Jeremias. 34 And of the children of the Priests with trumpets, Zacharias the son of Jonathan, the son of Semeia, the son of Mathania, the son of Michaia, the son Zechur, the son Asaph, 35 and his brethren Semeia, and Azareel, Malalai, Galalai, Maai, Nathanael, and Judas, and Hanani, with the instruments of the song of David the man of God: and Esdras the scribe before them in the gate of the fountain. 36 And against them there went up in the stairs of the city of David, in the rising of the wall above the house of David, and unto the gate of waters toward the East. 37 And the second choir of thanks-givers went on the contrary side, and I after it, & the half part of the people upon the wall, & above the tower of the furnaces, and unto the broadest wall, 38 and above the gate of Ephraim, and above the old gate, and above the gate of fishes and the tower of Hananeel, and the tower of Emath, and unto the gate of the flock: and they stood in the gate of the watch, 39 and there stood two choirs of them that praised in the house of God, and I, and the half part of the magistrates with me. 40 And the Priests, Eliachim, Maasia, Miamin, Michea, Elioenai, Zacharia, Hanania with trumpets, 41 and Maasia, & Semeia, & Eleazar, & Azzi, & Johanan, and Melchia, and Aelam, and Ezer. And the singing men sang aloud, and Iezraia the overseer: 42 and they immolated in that day great victims, and rejoiced: for God had made them joyful with great joy: yea their wives also & children rejoiced, & the joy of Jerusalem was heard far off. 43 They numbered also in that day men over the storehouses of the treasure, for the libaments, and for the first fruits, & for the tithes, that the Princes of the city might bring in by them in the honour of thanks-giving, Priests and Levites: because Juda was made joyful in the Priests and Levites standing by. 44 And they kept the watch of their God, and the observance of expiation, and the singing men, and the porters, according to the precept of David, and of Salomon his son, 45 because in the days of David and Asaph from the beginning there were Princes appointed of the singing men in song praising, and confessing to God. 46 And all Israel, in the days of Zorobabel, and in the days of Nehemias gave portions to the singing men, and to the porters day by day, and they (b) sanctified the Levites, and the Levites sanctified the children of Aaron.

(b) As others gave tithes to the Levites: so they gave to Priests. Num. 18. v. 21. 28.

CHAPTER XIII.

The law is read, 3. strange women are dismissed. 5. Faults in distribution of the treasure are amended, 10. and due portions given to the Levites. 15. Breakers of the Sabbath are corrected, 23. and those which married women of strange nations.

And [1] in that day there was read in the volume of Moyses the people hearing it: and there was found written in it, that the Ammonites and the Moabites should not enter into the Church of God for ever:

[1] The third part.
Correction of faults.

2 [1] for that they met not the children of Israel with bread and water: and they hired against them Balaam to curse them: and our God turned the cursing into blessing.

[1] Deut. 23.
Num. 22.

3 And it came to pass, when they had heard the law, they separated every stranger from Israel. 4 And over this thing was Eliasib the Priest, who had been made overseer in the treasury of the house of our God, and near a-kin to (a) Tobias.

(a) This Tobias was an Ammonite & a persecuter, c. 14. to whom Eliasib being a-kin (by reason of unlawful marriages) joined fellowship with him for wicked lucre: which therefore Nehemias corrected, prefiguring therein our Saviour's zeal, who threw buyers and sellers out of the temple Mat. 21. And these persecuters prefigured heretics in their words and acts, as Venerable Bede expoundeth. li. 3. in Esd. c. 19.

5 He therefore made to himself a great treasury, and they were there before him laying up gifts, and frankincense, and vessels, and the tithe of corn, of wine, and of oil, the portions of the Levites, and of the singing men, and of the porters, and the first fruits of the Priests. 6 But in all these things I was not in Jerusalem, because in the two and thirtieth year of Artaxerxes the king of Babylon I came to the king, and in the end of certain days I desired the king. 7 And I came to Jerusalem, and I understood the evil that Eliasib had done to Tobias, to make him a treasure in the entrances of the house of God. 8 And it seemed to me exceeding evil. And I threw forth the vessels of the house of Tobias out of the treasury: 9 and I commanded and they cleansed the treasury: and I brought thither again the vessels of the house of God, the sacrifice, and the frankincense. 10 And I knew that the portions of the Levites had not been given: and that every man was fled into his country of the Levites, and the singing men, and of them that ministered: 11 and I pleaded the matter against the magistrates, and said: Why have we forsaken the house of God? And I assembled them, and I made them to stand in their standings. 12 And all Juda carried the tithe of the corn, wine, and oil into the store-houses: 13 And we appointed over the store-houses Selemias Priest, and Sadoc scribe, and Phadaia of the Levites, and next to them Hanan the son of Zachur, the son of Mathania: because they were approved faithful, and to them were committed the portions of the brethren. 14 Remember me my God for this thing, and wipe not out my mercies, which I have done in the house of my God, and in his ceremonies. 15 In those days I saw them in Juda treading the presses on the Sabbath, carrying heaps, and loading upon asses wine, and grapes, and figs, and all manner of burden, and bringing it into Jerusalem on the Sabbath day. And I charged them, that they should sell on a day that it was lawful to sell in. 16 And the Tyrians dwelt in it, bringing fishes, and all things to sell: and they sold on the Sabbaths to the children of Juda in Jerusalem. 17 And I rebuked the Princes of Juda, and said to them: What is this evil thing, that you do, and profane the day of the Sabbath? 18 Why, did not our fathers these things, and our God brought upon us all this evil, and upon this city? And you add wrath upon Israel in violating the Sabbath. 19 And it came to pass, when the gates of Jerusalem had rested on the Sabbath day, I spake: and they shut the gates, and I commanded them that they should not open them till after the Sabbath: and of my servants I appointed over the gates, that none should bring in burdens in the Sabbath day. 20 And the merchants, and they that sold all merchandise, tarried without Jerusalem once and again. 21 And I charged them, and I said to them: Why tarry you over-against the wall? If you shall do so the second time, I will lay my hand upon you. Therefore from that time they came not on the Sabbath. 22 I spake also to the Levites that they should be cleansed, and should come to keep the gates, and to sanctify the day of the Sabbath: therefore for this also remember me my God, and spare me according to the multitude of thy mercies. 23 But in those days also I saw the Jews marrying wives women of Azotus, and of Ammon, and of Moab. 24 And their children spake, the half part the Azotian tongue, and they could not speak the Jews' language, and they spake according to the language of the people and people. 25 And I rebuked them, and cursed them. And I beat of them some men, & shaved them bald, & adjured them by God, that they should not give their daughters to their sons, nor take their daughters for their sons, and for themselves, saying: 26 Did not Salomon the king of Israel sin in this kind of thing? And surely in many nations, there was not a king like to him, and he was beloved of his God, and God set him king over all Israel: him therefore also foreign women brought to sin. 27 And shall we also being disobedient persons do all this great evil, to transgress against our God, and to marry foreign women? 28 And Sanaballat the Horonite was son in law to one of the sons of Joiada, the son of Eliasib the high Priest, whom I drave from me. 29 Remember o Lord my God against them, that pollute the Priesthood, and the right of Priests and Levites. 30 Therefore I separated from them all strangers, & I appointed the courses of the Priests and Levites, every man in his ministry: 31 and in the oblation of wood at times appointed, and in the first fruits: (a) Remember me my God unto good. Amen.

(a) A just man that hath merited by good works may pray with great confidence for reward.

The third and fourth Books of Esdras, with the prayer of Manasses, follow after the Machabees.

ANNOTATIONS.

Concerning the Book of TOBIAS, JUDITH, WISDOM, ECCLESIASTICUS, and MACHABEES.

[1] Heretics deny some scriptures because they convince their errors.

[2] Lib. de Praedest. Sanct. c. 14.

[3] The Church's canon of more authority than the Jews.

[4] A Canon is an infallible rule of direction.

[5] The Gospel is known by the Church.

PROTESTANTS and other Sectaries of this time deny these Books to be divine Scripture, because they are not in the Jews' Canon, nor were accepted for canonical in the primitive Church. [1] But indeed the chief cause is, for that some things in these Books are so manifest against their opinions, that they have no other answer, but to reject their authority: An old shift noted and refuted by S. Augustin, [2] touching the Book of Wisdom, which some refused, pretending that it was not canonical, but indeed because it convinced their errors. For otherwise who seeth not, that the Canon of the Church of Christ is of more authority with all true Christians, [3] than the Canon of the Jews? And that the Church of Christ numbereth these Books amongst others of divine and infallible authority, is evident by the testimony and definition, not only of later general Councels; of Trent, Sess. 4. and Florence Instructione Armenorum, of Pope Innocentius, Epist. ad Exuperium, and Gelasius, Decreto de libris sacris; but also the Councel of Carthage An. Dom. 419. S. Augustin lib. 2. Doct. Christ. cap. 8. Isidorus lib. 6. Etymol. cap. 1. Cassiodorus lib. 1. Divinarum Lectionum, Rabunus, lib. 2. de Institutione Clericorum, and others testify the same, as we shall further note severally of every book in their particular places. And for so much as our adversaries acknowledge these Books to be Holy, and worthy to be read in the Church, but not sufficient to prove and confirm points of faith: the studious reader may consider that the Councel of Carthage calleth them Canonical, and Divine, which sheweth that they are of infallible authority. [4] For a Canon is an assured rule and warrant of direction, whereby (saith S. Augustin lib. 11. contra Faustum cap. 5. & lib. 2. contra Cresconium cap. 32.) the infirmity of our defect in knowledge is guided, and by which rule other books are likewise known to be God's word. His reason is, because we have no other assurance that the books of Moyses, the four Gospels, and other books are the true word of God, but by the Canon of the Church. [5] Whereupon the same great Doctor uttered that famous saying: that he would not believe the Gospel, except the authority of the Catholic Church moved him thereunto. contra. Epist. Fundamenti. ca. 5.

[1] Books doubted of before the Church's decision are not doubted after.

True it is that some Catholic Doctors doubted whether these Books were Canonical or no, because the Church had not then declared that they were; but since the Church's declaration no Catholic doubteth. [1] So S. Jerom testifieth, [2] that the Book of Judith (among the rest) seemed to him not canonical, till the Councel of Nice declared it to be. Likewise the Epistle to the Hebrews, the Epistle of S. James, the second of S. Peter, the second and third of S. John, S. Jude's Epistle, and the Apocalypse were sometimes doubted of, yet were afterwards declared to be Canonical. And most Protestants, namely English, admit them all, as the assured word of God though they were not always so reputed by all, [3] but as S. Jerome affirmeth of S. James' Epistle, Paulatim tempore procedente meruit authoritatem: By little and little in process of time merited authority.

Dominica alleging this book (cap. 12.) saith: Divine Scripture instructeth us, that prayer is good with fasting and alms. S. Ambrose (li. de Tobia. c. 1.) calleth this Book by the common name of Scripture, saying he will briefly gather the virtues of Tobie, which the Scripture in historical manner layeth forth at large. Where he also calleth this history Prophetical, and Tobie a Prophet. And lib. 3. Offic. cap. 14. allegeth this Book as he doth other holy Scriptures, to prove that the virtues of God's servants far excel the Moral Philosophers. [2] S. Chrysostom ho. 15. ad Heb. allegeth Tobias as Scripture, denouncing curse to contemners. S. Augustin made a special sermon of Tobias, as he did of Job, which is the 226. sermon de tempore. S. Gregory parte 3. pastor. curae admon. 21. allegeth it as holy Scripture. And Venerable Beda expoundeth this whole Book Mystically, as he doth other holy Scripture. [3] S. Jerom translated it out of the Chaldee language, [4] wherein it was written, judging it more meet to displease the Pharisaical Jews, who reject it, than not to satisfy the will of holy Bishops, urging to have it. The author is uncertain: but S. Athanasius (in Synopsi) reporteth the contents at large. And S. Augustin (li. quest. ex utroque testamento, 9. 119.) delivereth both the contents, and cause of writing it, briefly thus: [1] The servant of God holy Tobias, is given to us after the law for an example, that we might know how to practise the things, which we read. And if tentations come upon us, not to depart from the fear of God, nor expect help from any other than from him. It may be divided into three parts. [2] The first four chapters shew the holy and sincere manner of life of old Tobias. The eight following relate the journey and affairs of young Tobias, accompanied and directed by the Angel Raphael. In the two last chapters they praise God. And old Tobias prophesieth better state of the commonwealth.

THE BOOK OF TOBIAS.

CHAPTER I.

Tobias of the tribe of Nephthali, never communicateth in Jeroboam's schism. 9. Teacheth his son to fear God, and fly sin. 11. Being in captivity eateth not forbidden meats, as others do. 13. Amongst other works of mercy, he lendeth ten talents of silver to Gabelus. 21. Is persecuted and spoiled. 24. Shortly the king being slain, he recovereth liberty and his goods. [1]

[1] This book is read at Matins the third week of September.

Tobias [1] of the tribe and city of Nephthali (which is in the upper parts of Galilee above Naasson, beyond the way that leadeth to the west, having on the right hand the city Sephet)

[1] The first part.
Tobias his holy manner of life.

2 when he was captive in the days of Salmanasar the king of the Assyrians, yet being in captivity, he forsook not the way of truth, 3 so that he imparted all things that he could make daily to his brethren captives with him, which were of his kindred.
4 And whereas he was younger than all the tribe of Nephthali, yet did he no childish thing in his work.
5 Finally, when (a) all went to the golden calves, which Jeroboam the king of Israel had made, he alone fled the companies of all,

(a) Not absolutely all, but very many: for some of the same tribe and kindred did also fear God. c. 2. v. 2.

6 and went into Jerusalem to the temple of our Lord, and there adored our Lord God of Israel, offering faithfully all his first fruits, and his tithes, 7 so that in the third year he ministered all the tithing to the proselytes and strangers. 8 These things and the like to these did he observe being a child according to the law of God. 9 But when he was a man, he took to wife Anna of his own tribe, and he begat a son of her, giving him his own name. 10 Whom from his infancy he taught to fear God, and to abstain from all sin. 11 Therefore when by the captivity he was come with his wife and son into the city of Ninive, with all his tribe, 12 (When all did eat of the meats of the Gentiles) he kept his soul, and never was contaminated in their meats. 13 And because he was mindful of our Lord in all his heart, God gave him grace in the sight of Salmanasar the king, 14 and he gave him leave to go whithersoever he would, having liberty to do what things soever he would. 15 He therefore went to all that were in the captivity, and gave them wholesome admonitions. 16 And when he was come into Rages a city of the Medes, and had ten talents of silver of these wherewith he had been honoured of the king: 17 and when in a great multitude of his kindred, he saw Gabelus stand in need, who was of his tribe, under a bill of his hand he gave him the said weight of silver. 18 But after much time, Salmanasar the king being dead, when Sennacherib his son reigned for him, & esteemed the children of Israel odious in his sight: 19 Tobias daily went through all his kindred, and comforted them, and divided to every one, as he was able, of his goods: 20 the hungry he nourished, and to the naked he gave cloths, and the dead, and them that were slain, he buried carefully. 21 Finally when king Sennacherib was returned flying from Jewry the slaughter, that God had made about him for his blasphemy, & being angry slew many of the children of Israel, Tobias buried their bodies. 22 But when it was told the king, he commanded him to be slain, and took all his substance. 23 But Tobias flying with his son and with his wife, nakedly lay hid, because many loved him. 24 But after forty five days the king was slain of his own sons, 25 and Tobias returned into his house, and all his substance was restored to him.

CHAPTER II.

Tobias to bury an Israelite that is slain in the street, leaveth his dinner and guests. 10. Is made blind by God's permission, for manifestation of his patience. 19. His wife getteth her living by work, 22. and for a scrupulous word, reproacheth his sincerity.

But after these things, when there was a festival day of our Lord, and a good dinner was made in Tobias' house, 2 he said to his son: Go, and bring some of our tribe (a) that fear God, to make merry with us.

(a) All the people of the ten tribes did not serve Jeroboam's golden calves, but some feared God & consequently refrained from evil. Prov. 3. at least from idolatry.

3 And when he had gone, returning he told him, that one of the children of Israel lay slain in the street. And he forthwith leaping up from his place at the table, leaving his dinner, came fasting to the body: 4 and taking it up carried it to his house secretly, that when the sun should be down, he might warily bury him. 5 And when he had hid the body, he eat bread with mourning & trembling. 6 remembering that word which our Lord said by Amos the Prophet: Your festival days shall be turned into lamentation & mourning.[1]

7 But when the sun was down, he went and buried him. 8 And all his neighbours rebuked him, saying: Even now thou wast commanded to be slain because of this matter, and thou didst scarce escape the commandment of death, and (b) doest thou bury the dead again?

(b) True zeal is not hindered from works of mercy by fear of death: because perfect charity casteth out fear. 1. Ioan. 4.

9 But Tobias more fearing God than the king, in haste took the bodies of them that were slain, and hid them in his house, & at midnight buried them. 10 And it happened that on a certain day, being wearied with burying, coming into his house he had cast himself down by the wall, and slept, 11 and as he was sleeping, hot dung out of the swallows' nest fell upon his eyes, and he was made blind. 12 And this tentation therefore our Lord permitted to chance unto him, that an example might be given to posterity of his patience, as also of holy Job. 13 For whereas he feared God always from his infancy, and kept his commandments, he grudged not against God for that the plague of blindness had chanced to him, 14 but continued immovable in the fear of God, giving thanks to God all the days of his life. 15 For as the kings insulted against blessed Job, so his (c) parents and cousins derided his life, saying:

(c) Both elder and younger sort of his kindred derided him, not his proper parents, for he was deprived of father and mother when he was a child, as it seemeth c. 1. v. 4.

16 Where is thy hope, for the which thou didest bestow alms & burials? 17 But Tobias rebuked them, saying: Speak not so: 18 because we are the children of holy ones, and look for that life, which God will give to them, that never change their faith from him. 19 But Anna his wife went daily to weaving work, and she brought the gains of her handy labour, which she could get. 20 Whereby it came to pass, that she receiving a kid of goats had brought it home: 21 the voice whereof bleating^ when her husband had heard, he said: Take heed, lest perhaps it be stolen, restore ye it to his owners, because it is not lawful for us either to eat any thing of theft or to touch it. 22 To these words his wife being angry answered: Thy hope is become vain manifestly, and thine alms now have appeared. 23 And with these, and other such like words she upbraided him.

CHAPTER III.

The prayer of Tobias, 7. and Sara, in their several afflictions, 24. are heard by God, and the Angel Raphael is sent to relieve them.

Then Tobias lamented, and began to pray with tears, 2 saying: Thou art just o Lord, and all thy judgments are just, & all thy ways mercy, & truth & judgment. 3 And now Lord be mindful of me, and take not revenge of my sins, neither remember the sins of me, or of my parents'. 4 Because we have not obeyed thy commandments, therefore we are delivered in spoil, and captivity, and death, and into a fable, and into reproach to all nations, in which thou hast dispersed us. 5 And now Lord great are thy judgments, because we have not done according to thy precepts, & have not walked sincerely before thee: 6 and now Lord according to thy will^ do with me, and command my spirit to be received in peace: for it is expedient for me to die, rather than to live. 7 The very same day therefore it chanced that Sara the daughter of Raguel in (a) Rages a city of the Medes, she also heard reproach of one of her father's hand-maids,

(a) In a province of the Medes, whereof Rages was the head city: for when they came where Raguel dwelt, Tobias stayed there, and the Angel went to the city of Rages where Gabelus dwelt. c. 9. As one may say: such a one dwelleth in Rome, that dwelleth in any part of Romania: in York, Lincolne, or Munmoth, that dwelleth in one of those shires.

8 because she had been delivered to seven husbands, and the devil named (b) Asmodeus had killed them forthwith as they were entered in unto her.

(b) Asmodeos, signifying Destroyer is a captain or King of those devils which specially destroy souls by the sins of the flesh, & afterward tormenteth both souls and bodies for the same sins.

9 Therefore when she rebuked the wench for her fault, she answered her, saying: Let us no more see son of thee, or daughter upon the earth, thou murderer of thy husbands. 10 What, wilt thou kill me also, as thou hast now killed seven husbands? At this voice she went into an higher chamber of her house: and three days and three nights did not eat, nor drink: 11 but continuing in prayer with tears besought God, that he would deliver her from this reproach. 12 And it came to pass the third day, whiles she accomplished her prayer, blessing our Lord, 13 she said: Blessed is thy name o God of our fathers: who when thou hast been angry, wilt do mercy, and in the time of tribulation forgivest them their sins, that invocate thee. 14 To thee o Lord I turn my face, to thee I direct mine eyes. 15 I desire Lord that thou loose me from the bond of this reproach, or else take me away from the earth. 16 Thou knowest Lord that I never coveted a husband, & have kept my soul clean from all concupiscence. 17 Never have I companied myself with sporters: neither have I made myself partaker with them that walk in lightness. 18 But a husband I consented to take, with thy fear, not with my lust. 19 And either I was unworthy of them, or they perhaps were not worthy for me: because perhaps thou hast kept me for another man. 20 For thy counsel is not in man's power. 21 But this hath every one for certain, that worshippeth thee, that his life, if it be in probation, shall be crowned: and if it be in tribulation, it shall be delivered: and if it be in correction, it shall be lawful to come to thy mercy. 22 For thou art not delighted in our perditions: because after a tempest thou makest a calm, and after tears and weeping thou pourest in joyfulness. 23 Be thy name God of Israel blessed for ever. 24 At that time the prayers of both were heard in the sight of the glory of the high God: 25 and the holy Angel of our Lord Raphael was sent to cure them both, whose prayers at one time were (c) recited in the sight of our Lord.

(c) Act. 10. An Angel shewed Cornelius that his prayers were heard. Apoc. 5. prayers of the faithful are offered to God by Angels, & other Saints.

CHAPTER IV.

Tobias thinking he shall die, giveth his son godly admonitions: 7. especially exhorteth him to give alms diligently, 13. to fly all fornication, pride, and fraud. 21. And telleth him of money lent to a friend.

Therefore when Tobias thought his prayer to be heard that he might have died, he called to him Tobias his son, 2 and said to him: (a) Hear my son the words of my mouth, and lay them as a foundation in thy heart.

(a) As Moyses to the people Deut. 33. and David to Salomon. 3. Reg. 2. so Tobias gave holy admonitions to his son: in all fourteen, noted in the inner margin.

3 When God shall take my soul, [1] bury my body: & thou shalt do [2] honour to thy mother all the days of her life:

[1] 1. [2] 2.

[1] 3.

7 [1] Of thy substance (b) give alms, & turn not away thy face from any poor person: for so it shall come to pass that neither the face of our Lord shall be turned from thee.

[1] 4. (b) The same doctrine of good works, and reward, is taught Daniel 4. v. 24.

8 As thou shalt be able, so be merciful. 9 If thou have much, give abundantly: if thou have little, study to impart also a little willingly. 10 For thou doest treasure up to thyself a good reward in the day of necessity. 11 Because alms delivereth from all sin, and from death, and will not suffer the soul to go into darkness. 12 Great confidence before God most high shall alms be to all them that do it. 13 [1] Take heed to thyself my son of all fornication, and beside thy wife never abide to know crime,

[1]5.

14 [1]Never permit pride to rule in thy word: for in it all perdition took his beginning.

[1]6.

15 [1]Whosoever hath wrought any thing for thee, pay him his hire immediately, and let not the hire of thy hired servant remain with thee at all.

[1]7.

16 [1]That (c) which thou hatest to be done to thee by another, see thou do it not to another at any time.

[1]8. (c) A notable rule, agreeable to the law of nature.

17 Eat thy bread with the hungry & needy, and of thy garments cover the naked. 18 [1]Set thy bread, and thy wine upon (d) the burial of a just man, [2]and do not eat and drink thereof with sinners.

[1]9. (d) Works of mercy extend also to the dead. [2]10.

19 [1]Seek counsel always of a wise man.

[1]11.

20 [1]At all time bless God: and desire of him, that he direct thy ways, and that all thy counsels remain in him.

[1]12.

21 [1]I tell thee also my son (e) that I gave ten talents of silver, whiles thou wast yet a child, to Gabelus, in Rages a city of the Medes, & I have a bill of his hand with me:

[1]13. (e) It pertaineth to good men among other things, to give notice and to dispose of their temporal goods by their last will.

CHAPTER V.

Young Tobias seeking a guide for his journey, Raphael the Angel in shape of a man presenteth himself, and undertaketh this office. 23. The mother lamenteth the absence and danger of her son.

Then [1] Tobias answered his father, and said: I will do all things, father, whatsoever thou hast commanded me.

[1]The second part.
The journey & affairs of young Tobias assisted by the Angel Raphael.

2 But how I shall require this money, I cannot tell, he knoweth not me, and I know not him: what token shall I give him? Yea neither the way which leadeth thither did I ever know. 3 Then his father answered him, & said: I have the bill of his hand with me, which when thou shalt shew him he will forthwith restore it. 4 But go now, and seek thee out some faithful man, that may go with thee, being sure of his hire: that thou mayst receive it, whilst I yet live. 5 Then Tobias going forth, found a (a) goodly young man, standing girded, and as it were ready to walk.

(a) The Angel Raphael appearing in form of a man prefigured our Saviour, who indeed became a very man. S. Beda.

6 And not knowing that it was an Angel of God, he saluted him, and said: From whence have we thee, good young man? 7 But he answered: Of the children of Israel. And Tobias said to him: Knowest thou the way, that leadeth unto the country of the Medes? 8 To whom he answered: I know it: and all the ways thereof I have often walked, and I have tarried with Gabelus our brother, who abideth in Rages a city of the Medes, which is situate in the Mount Ecbatanis. 9 To whom Tobias said: Stay for me I beseech thee, till I tell these same things to my father. 10 Then Tobias going in told all these things to his father. Where upon his father marveling, requested that he would come in unto him. 11 Going in therefore he saluted him, and said: Joy be to thee always. 12 And Tobias said: What manner of joy shall be to me, which sit in darkness, and see not the light of heaven? 13 To whom the young man said: Be of good cheer, it is very near that thou mayst be cured of God. 14 Tobias therefore said to him: Canst thou bring my son to Gabelus into Rages a city of the Medes? And when thou shalt return, I will pay thee thy hire. 15 And the Angel said to him: I will conduct him, and bring him to thee again. 16 To whom Tobias answered: I pray thee tell me, of what house, or what tribe art thou? 17 To whom (b) Raphael the Angel said: Seekest thou the kindred of an hired servant, or an hired servant himself, that may go with thy son?

(b) Raphael signifying medicine of God. (S. Gre. ho. 34.) calleth himself Azarias, whose shape & visage he took upon him, which name also signifieth the help of God.

18 But lest perhaps I make thee careful, I am Azarias the son of Ananias the great. 19 And Tobias answered: Thou art of a great kindred. But I pray thee be not angry that I would know thy kindred. 20 And the Angel said to him: I will lead thy son safe, and bring him to thee again safe. 21 And Tobias answering, said: Well may you walk, & God be in your journey, and his Angel accompany you. 22 Then all things being ready that were to be carried in the way, Tobias bid his father and his mother fare well, & they walked both together. 23 And when they were departed, his mother began to weep, and to say: Thou hast taken the staff of our old age, and sent him away from us. 24 I would the money had never been, for the which thou hast sent him. 25 For our poverty sufficed us, that we might account this thing riches, that we saw our son. 26 And Tobias said to her: Weep not, our son shall come thither save, and shall return safe to us, and thine eyes shall see him. 27 For I believe that (c) the good Angel of God doth accompany him, & doth well dispose all things that are done about him, so that he shall return to us with joy.

(c) Angel Guardian.

28 At this voice his mother left weeping, and held her peace.

CHAPTER VI.

By the Angel's advise young Tobias apprehendeth a fish, that assaulteth him: 5. reserveth the heart, gall, and liver for medicines. 10. They lodge at the house of Raguel, whose daughter Sara Tobias is to marry. 14. A devil hath heretofore slain her seven husbands, 16. but shall not hurt him.

And Tobias went forward, and a dog followed him, and he made his first abode by the river of Tigris. 2 And he went out to wash his feet, and behold an huge fish came forth to devour him. 3 Of whom Tobias being afraid, cried out with a loud voice, saying: Sir, he invadeth me. 4 And the Angel said to him: Take him by the gill, and draw him to thee. Which when he had done, he drew him on the dry land, and he began to struggle before his feet. 5 Then said the Angel to him: Take out the entrails of this fish, and his heart, and gall, and liver, keep to thee: for these are necessary & profitable for medicines. 6 Which when he had done, he roasted the (c) flesh thereof, and they took it with them in the way: the rest they salted which might suffice them, till they came to Rages the city of Medes.

(c) S. Paul also calleth flesh of fish 1. Cor. 15. and Plinie lib. 9. c. 19.

7 Then Tobias asked the Angel, & said to him: I beseech thee brother Azarias, tell me what remedies shall these things have, which thou hast bid me keep of the fish? 8 And the Angel answering, said to him: If thou put a little piece of his [1] heart upon coals, the (d) smoke thereof driveth out all kind of devils, either from man or from woman, so that it cometh no more unto them.

[1] * and liver. v. 19. (d) Devils who exalted themselves as equal with God, are justly made subject to corporal creatures. God concurring with natural causes, whose good pleasure is sometimes to use instruments naturally unapt, as when Christ gave sight to the blind by putting clay on his eyes. Ioan. 9. sometimes more apt, as when he fed many with few loaves. Ioan. 6. So the Angel by God's appointment used this means to expel the devil.

9 And the gall is available to anoint the eyes, in which there shall be white blemish and they shall be healed. 10 And Tobias said to him: Where wilt thou that we tarry? 11 And the Angel answering, said: Here is one named Raguel, a near kinsman of thy tribe, and he hath a daughter named Sara, and he hath neither man child, nor any woman child beside her. 12 All his substance is due to thee, and thou mayst take her to wife. 13 Ask her therefore of her father, and he will give her thee to wife. 14 Then Tobias answered, and said: I hear that she hath been delivered to seven husbands, and they are dead: yea and I have heard, that a devil killed them. 15 I am afraid therefore, lest these things may happen to me also: & whereas I am the only child of my parents, I may bring down their old age with sorrow unto (e) hell.

(e) Into the place where good souls rested, none then having access into heaven. See Annot. Gen. 37.

16 Then the Angel Raphael said to him: Hear me, and I will shew thee who they are, on whom the devil can prevail. 17 For they that so receive matrimony, that they exclude God from themselves, & from their mind, & so give themselves to their lust, as horse and mule, which have not understanding, over them the devil hath power. 18 But thou when thou shalt take her, entering into the chamber, for three days be continent from her, and thou shalt give thyself to nothing else but to prayers with her. 19 And the same night, the [1] liver of the fish set on the fire, the devil shall be driven away.

20 But the (f) second night thou shalt be admitted in the copulation of the holy Patriarchs.

(f) The second night he asked and obtained this grace; for he knew not his wife until the fourth night. v. 22.

21 And the third night thou shalt obtain a blessing that sound children may be procreated of you. 22 And when the third night is past, thou shalt take the virgin, with the fear of our Lord, moved rather for love of children than for lust, that in the seed of Abraham thou mayst obtain blessing in children.

CHAPTER VII.

They are kindly entertained by Raguel. 10. Tobias demandeth Sara to wife, which Raguel, encouraged by the Angel, granteth: 15. and the marriage is made.

And they went to Raguel, and Raguel received them with joy. 2 And Raguel beholding Tobias, said to Anna his wife: How like is this young man to my sister's son! 3 And when he had spoken these words, he said: Whence are ye young men our brethren? 4 But they said: We are the tribe of Nephthali, of the captivity of Ninive. 5 And Raguel said to them: Know you Tobias my brother? Who said: We know him. 6 And when he spake much good of him, the Angel said to Raguel: Tobias, of whom thou askest is this man's father. 7 And Raguel put forth himself, and with tears kissed him, and weeping upon his neck, said: Blessing have thou my son, because thou art the son of a good and most virtuous man. 8 And Anna his wife, and Sara their daughter wept. 9 And after they had talked, Raguel commanded a wether to be killed, and a banquet to be prepared, And when he desired them to sit down to dinner, 10 Tobias said: I will not eat nor drink here this day, unless thou first assure my petition, and promise to give me Sara thy daughter. 11 Which word Raguel hearing, was sore afraid, knowing what had chanced to those seven husbands, which went in unto her: and he began to fear lest perhaps, it might chance to him also in like manner: and when he doubted, and (a) gave no answer to him demanding,

(a) A just man (saith S. Ambrose lib. 3. Off. c. 14.) feared other men's harms, and would rather his daughter should not be married than others should be in danger, preferring honesty before profit.

12 the Angel said to him: Fear not to give her to this man, for to him fearing God is thy daughter due to be his wife: therefore another could not have her.

13 Then said Raguel: I doubt not but God hath admitted my prayers and tears in his sight. 14 And I believe that therefore he hath made you come to me, that this maid might be joined to her kindred, according to the law of Moyses: and now have no doubt but I will deliver her to thee. 15 And taking his daughter by the right hand, gave it into the right hand of Tobias, saying: The God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob be with you, and he join you together, and fulfill his blessing in you. 16 And taking paper they made a writing of the marriage.
17 And after these things they made merry, blessing God. 18 And Raguel called to him Anna his wife, and commanded her to prepare another chamber. 19 And she brought Sara her daughter in thither, and she wept. 20 And she said to her: Be of good cheer my daughter, our Lord of heaven give thee joy for the tediousness which thou has suffered.

CHAPTER VIII.

Tobias broiling part of the fish's liver, Raphael bindeth the devil. 4. Tobias and Sara pray. 11. Raguel fearing that Tobias is dead, maketh a grave for him, but understanding that he is well, filleth it up again, 21. prepareth a feast, giveth the half of his goods presently for Sara's dowry, the other half after her parent's death.

And after they had supped, they brought in the young man to her. 2 Tobias therefore remembering the Angel's word, brought forth out of his bag part of (a) the liver, & laid it upon live coals.

(a) See c. 6. v. 8. Mystically it signified Christ's passion whereby the devil was expelled out of men's hearts. S. Aug. ser. 28. de Sanctis Prosper l. de promiss. p. 2. c. 39.

3 Then Raphael the Angel took the devil, & bound him in the desert of higher Aegypt. 4 Then Tobias exhorted the virgin, & said to her: Sara arise, & let us pray to God today, and tomorrow, and the next morrow: because these three nights we are joined to God: & when the third night is past, we will be in our wedlock. 5 For we are the children of holy men, and we may not be joined together as gentiles, that know not God. 6 And they rising together, prayed both together that health might be given them. 7 And Tobias said: Lord God of our fathers, the heavens, and the earth, and the sea, and fountains, and rivers, and all thy creatures that are in them, bless thee. 8 Thou madest Adam of the slime of the earth, and gavest him Eve an helper. 9 And now Lord thou knowest, that not for fleshly lust do I take my sister to wife, but only for the love of posterity, in the which thy name may be blessed for ever & ever. 10 Sara also said. Have mercy on us Lord, have mercy upon us, and let us grow old both together in health. 11 And it came to pass about the cocks' crowing, Raguel bade his servants to be called for, and they went with him together to dig a grave. 12 For he said: Lest perhaps it may chance to him, as also to the other seven husbands that went in unto her. 13 And when they had prepared the pit, Raguel returning to his wife, said to her: 14 Send one of thy handmaids, & let her see if he be dead, that I may bury him before it be day. 15 But she sent one of her handmaids, who going into the chamber, found them safe & sound, sleeping both together. 16 And returning she brought good tidings: and they blessed our Lord, to wit, Raguel & Anna his wife, 17 & said: We bless thee Lord God of Israel, because it hath not chanced as we thought. 18 For thou hast done thy mercy with us, & hast excluded from us the enemy, that persecuted us. 19 And thou hast taken pity upon two^ the (b) only children. Make them Lord bless thee more fully, & to offer up to thee a sacrifice of thy praise, and of their health, that all nations may know, that thou art God only in all the earth.

(b) In the one family there were no more children but one son, in the other one only daughter.

20 And forthwith Raguel commanded his servants, that they should fill up the pit which they had made, before it were day. 21 And he bade his wife make ready a feast, and prepare all things, that for victuals were necessary to them that go a journey. 22 He caused also two fat kine, and four wethers to be killed, and great cheer to be prepared for all his neighbours and all his friends. 23 And Raguel adjured Tobias that he should abide with him two weeks. 24 And of all things which Raguel possessed, he gave the half part to Tobias, and made this writing, that the half part, which was remaining after their decease, should come to the dominion of Tobias.

CHAPTER IX.

The Angel Raphael goeth to Gabelus, receiveth the money, and bringeth him to the marriage. 8. They salute each other, and Gabelus wisheth all prosperity to young Tobias and his spouse.

Then Tobias called the Angel to him, whom he thought to be a man, and he said to him: Brother Azarias, I pray thee harken to my words: 2 If I should deliver myself to be thy servant I shall not deserve thy providence. 3 Howbeit I beseech thee, that thou take unto thee beasts and servants, and go to Gabelus into (a) Rages the city of Medes: and render him his hand writing, and receive of him the money, and desire him to come to my marriage.

(a) The Angel went to the city it-self called Rages, Tobias remaining in the territory or province thereof with Raguel, which place is also called Rages. c. 3. v. 7.

4 For thyself knowest that my father numbereth the days: and if I slack one day more, his soul is made sorrowful. 5 And surely thou seest how Raguel hath adjured me, whose adjuring I cannot despise. 6 Then Raphael taking four of Raguel's servants, and two camels, went into Rages the city of Medes: & finding Gabelus gave him his hand writing, and received of him all the money. 7 And he told him of Tobias the son of Tobias, all things that were done: & made him come with him to the marriage. 8 And when he was entered into Raguel's house, he found Tobias sitting at the table: and he leaping up, they kissed each other: and Gabelus wept, and blessed God, 9 and said: The God of Israel bless thee, because thou art the son of a very good man, and just, and that feareth God, and doth alms deeds: 10 and blessing be given upon thy wife, and upon your parents: 11 and that you may see your children, and your children's children, unto the third and fourth generation: and your seed be blessed of the God of Israel, who reigneth for ever and ever. 12 And when all had said, Amen, they went to the feast: but with the fear of our Lord also did they celebrate the feast of the marriage.

CHAPTER X.

The parents lament the long absence of their son Tobias. 8. Whom when Raguel cannot persuade to stay longer, 11. he wisheth much good unto him and his wife, admonishing her to be dutiful in all things.

But when Tobias tarried long because of the marriage, Tobias his father was careful, saying: Why thinkest thou doth my son tarry, or why is he held there? 2 Is Gabelus dead thinkest thou, and no man will restore him the money? 3 And he began to be sorrowful exceedingly himself, and Anna his wife with him: & (a) they began both to weep together: because their son did not return to them the day appointed.

(a) Such of the Jews as believe in Christ, heartily lament that he tarrieth so long from their nation: Some more assuredly with old Tobias, others more doubtfully with his wife, expect his return. S. Beda in Tobiam. Even so the remnant of Catholics in countries fallen to heresy have great sadness and continual sorrow in their heart (Rom. 9.) wishing (with what temporal loss soever) the salvation of their brethren, kinsmen, and countrymen: some hoping more confidently & comforting others that Christ will again illuminate our whole nation, as sight was restored to old Tobias.

4 His mother therefore wept with discomfortable tears, & said: Woe, woe is me, my son, why sent we thee to go to a strange country, the light of our eyes, the staff of our old age, the comfort of our life, the hope of our posterity? 5 We having all things together in thee only, ought not to have let thee go from us. 6 To whom Tobias said: Hold thy peace, and be not troubled, our son is safe, that man with whom we sent him is faithful enough. 7 Howbeit she could by no means be comforted, but daily running out looked about, and went about all ways by which there seemed hope he would return, that she might see him a far off, if it were possible, coming. 8 But Raguel said to his son in law: Tarry here, and I will send a messenger to Tobias thy father, that thou art in health. 9 To whom Tobias said: I know that my father and my mother do now count the days, and their spirit is tormented in them. 10 And when Raguel desired Tobias in many words, and he by no means would hear him, he delivered Sara unto him, & the half part of all his substance in men servants, & women servants, in cattle, in camels, and in kine, and in much money and dismist him safe and joyful from him, 11 saying: The holy Angel of our Lord be in your journey, and bring you through safe, and that you may find all things well about your parents, and mine eyes may see your children before I die. 12 And the parents taking their daughter, kissed her, and let her go: 13 admonishing her to honour her father and mother in law, to love her husband, to rule the household, to govern the house, and to shew herself irreprehensible.

1. Tarried long because of the Marriage.] [1] Out of this example of a holy Marriage between young Tobias and Sara, described in the five precedent Chapters, some special good lessons may be briefly gathered, for the instruction and consolation of such as are to marry, or be already married. Not that either all, or only the same observations pertain now to christian Marriage, but that all Christians may see, how orderly godly persons proceeded in making, and performing this holy contract in the old Testament, [2] and thereby learn, that more perfection is required in Christian Matrimony, being now (as then it was not) a holy Sacrament, [3] signifying the Union between Christ and his Church: [4] and giving peculiar Grace to the parties (if themselves hinder it not) to bear more easily the incident burdens, [5] and rightly to fulfill the proper duties of man and wife, according to the godly instruction of the Roman Catechism. [6] All that we shall here note, may be reduced to two heads, or principal parts. For in this Marriage there were certain necessary, and as it were essential points, [7] without which it had not been a lawful nor right contract: Other accessory ceremonies, and Rites were also very convenient, for the more solemnity and better performance thereof. As the like of both sorts are now, but more perfect in Christian Marriages. In the former kind, [8] first of all, the end of Marriage was proposed by the Angel, and desired by the parties. chap. 6. v. 22. c. 8. v. 9. not for pleasure but for children, and posterity, by which God might be blessed and served: Secondly, Marriage must be between lawful persons: For the servants of God could not lawfully match, neither with Infidels, nor with over near kindred, but in convenient degrees, and that ordinarily in the same Tribe. ch. 6. v. 11. ch. 7. v. 14. as the law of Moyses prescribed. Thirdly, the parties must give and express their mutual consent. And the good will of parents was also requisite. ch. 7. v. 10. 15. 20. [9] These principal points premised; for the due solemnization other Rites were also adjoined. [10] [11] First, Raguel the maid's father gave his daughter taking her by the right hand, and so delivered her into the right hand of Tobias. ch. 7. v. 15. as with us the father, or near friend of the woman, giveth her to be married to such a man. [12] Secondly, her father prayed that it might well succeed, ibidem and so do all friends now, especially the Priest by the public prayers of the Church. [13] The third rite, the covenants of Marriage were made, with assignment of dowry, also written ch. 7. v. 16. & sealed, as the [14] Hebrew and Greek text witness. [15] The fourth, invitation of friends to the Marriage. ch. 8. v. 2. ch. 9. v. 3. [16] The fifth, They made a feast which commonly dured seven days, but here fourteen ch. 8. v. 23. for the double joy of the marriage, & expulsion of the devil. [17] The sixth rite, the bringing of the bride to her chamber, chap. 7. v. 19. the Catholic Church hath a particular form of blessing the bridal chamber. [18] The seventh, Tobias & Sara observed three days continency after the Marriage ch. 6. v. 18. ch. 8. v. 4. which now is commended by way of counsel, not of precept. CHAPTER XI.

Leaving Sara with the rest of the company, and the flock to follow, the Angel Raphael and Tobias go before, 5. are joyfully received, 8. Tobias anointeth his father's eyes with the fish's gall, and he seeth. 18. Sara arriveth seven days after with her family and cattle.

And when they returned they came to Charan, which is in the mid-way against Ninive, the eleventh day. 2 And the Angel said: Brother Tobias thou knowest how thou didst leave thy father. 3 If it please thee therefore, let us go before, and let the families follow softly after us, together with thy wife, and with the beasts. 4 And when this pleased him that they should go, Raphael said to Tobias: Take with thee of the gall of the fish: for it shall be necessary. Tobias therefore took of that gall and they departed. 5 But Anna sat beside the way daily, in the top of a hill, from whence she might see a far off. 6 And whilst she watched his coming out of that place, she saw a far off, and by and by perceived her son coming: and running she told her husband saying: Behold thy son cometh. 7 And Raphael said to Tobias: But when thou art entered into thy house forthwith adore our Lord thy God: and giving thanks to him go to thy father, and kiss him. 8 And immediately anoint upon his eyes of this gall of the fish, which thou carriest with thee. For know thou that forthwith his eyes shall be opened, and thy father shall see the light of heaven, and shall rejoice in the sight of thee. 9 Then ran (a) the dog before, which had been with them in the way, and coming as it were a messenger with the fawning of his tail rejoiced.

(a) It nothing disgraceth the sacred history that a small matter being also true is recorded with the rest, As not one letter nor one title of the law may be omitted, Mat. 5. S. Beda also expoundeth it mystically of God's Preachers. S. Jerome doth the like, in: Isaie. 56. and S. Augustin li. 22. c. 56.cont. Faustum. Manich.

10 And his father that was blind rising up began to run stumbling with his feet: and giving a servant his hand, went to meet his son. 11 And receiving him kissed him, with his wife, and they began both to weep for joy. 12 And when they had adored God, and given thanks, they sat down together. 13 Then Tobias taking of the gall of the fish, anointed his father's eyes. 14 And he stayed as it were almost half an hour: and the white blemish began to come out of his eyes, as it were the skin of an egg. 15 Which Tobias taking drew from his eyes, and immediately (b) he received sight.

(b) God used this gall of a fish in curing Tobias' eyes, in like sort as the liver in driving away the devil. c. 6. v. 8.

16 And they glorified God, to wit, himself and his wife, and all that knew him. 17 And Tobias said: I bless thee Lord God of Israel, because thou hast chastised me, and thou hast saved me: and behold I see Tobias my son. 18 After seven days also came in Sara his son's wife, & all the family safe, & cattle, & the camels, and much money of his wife's: and that money also, which he had received of Gabelus: 19 and he told his parents all the benefits of God, which he had done to him by the man that conducted him. 20 And Achior and Nabath^ Tobias' sister's sons came, rejoicing at Tobias, and congratulating him for all good things that God had shewed towards him. 21 And for seven days making good cheer, they rejoiced all with great joy.

CHAPTER XII.

Old Tobias and his son offer the half of all the goods which they had newly received, to Raphael, for his wages. 6. Who then declareth to them that he was sent from God to help them, 15. and that he is an Angel. 20. He parteth away, and they render thanks to God.

Then Tobias called to him his son, and said to him: What may we give to this holy man, that is come with thee? 2 Tobias answering, said to his father: Father what reward shall we give him? Or what can be worthy of his benefits? 3 He hath [1] led me & brought me again safe, he [2] received the money of Gabelus, he [3] caused me to have my wife, and the [4] evil spirit he chased from her, he [5] made joy unto her parents, myself he [6] delivered from being devoured of the fish, [7] thee also he hath made to see the light of heaven, and we are replenished with (a) all good things by him. What can we give him worthy for these things?

[1] 1. [2] 2. [3] 3. [4] 4. [5] 5. [6] 6. [7] 7. (a) Grateful Tobias recounteth seven benefits received by the companion of his journey, and that they have received (not many but) all good things by him.

4 But I beseech thee my father, that thou desire him, if perhaps he will vouchsafe to take unto him the one half of all things which are brought. 5 And they calling him, to wit the father and the son, took him aside: and began to desire him that he would vouchsafe to accept the half part of all things, that they had brought. 6 Then he said to them secretly: Bless ye the God of heaven, and before all that live confess to him, because he hath done mercy with you. 7 For to hide the secret of a king is good: but to reveal and confess the works of God is an honourable thing. 8 (b) Prayer is good with fasting and alms, rather than to lay up treasures of gold:

(b) Fasting and alms are as two wings with which prayer flyeth into heaven.

9 because alms delivereth from death, and that is it which purgeth sins, and maketh to find mercy and life everlasting. 10 But they that commit sin and iniquity, are enemies to their own soul. 11 I open therefore unto you the truth, and I will not hide from you the secret word. 12 When thou didst pray with tears, and didst bury the dead, and left thy dinner, and didest hide the dead by day in thy house, and by night didst bury them, I (c) offered thy prayer to our Lord.

(c) O how sweet (or excellent) a thing is it (saith S. Aug. serm. 3. de Nativit.) when Angels guardians of our life offer our vows (or resolution to fly vices and embrace virtues) before the sight of God's Majesty!

13 And because thou wast acceptable to God, it was necessary that tentation should prove thee. 14 And now our Lord sent me to cure thee, and to deliver Sara thy son's wife from the devil. 15 For I am Raphael an Angel, one of the seven, which assist before our Lord. 16 And when they had heard these things, they were troubled, and trembling fell upon the ground on their face. 17 And the Angel said to them: Peace be to you, fear not. 18 For when I was with you, by the will of God I was so: bless ye him, and sing to him. 19 I seemed indeed to eat with you, and to drink: but I use an invisible meat and drink, which cannot be seen of men. 20 It is time therefore that I return to him, that sent me: but bless ye God, and tell all his marvelous works. 21 And when he had said these things, he was taken from their sight, and they could see him no more. 22 Then prostrate for three hours upon their face, they blessed God: and rising up they told all his marvelous works.

ANNOTATIONS.
CHAP. XII.

12. I offered thy prayer to our Lord.] Here the Angel Raphael reporteth certain good offices, [1] which he had done for Tobias. He did other like for his son, and for Raguel, and his daughter, which are likewise recorded in this Book. And the whole world, especially God's servants, receive continual great benefits by holy Angels, as partly may be gathered in this holy history, and more else-where. For first the office of Angels is, to assist, or be always ready, [2] as most diligent servitors of God, expecting what his divine goodness will appoint them, whither to go, and what to do for the benefit of men: as holy Raphael was sent, when young Tobias wanted a guide. Secondly, Angels offer the prayers of the faithful, or as the Greek text readeth, v. 15. Angels present the prayers of Saints, that is, of godly men and women to God: so Raphael testifieth here himself, [3] that he offered Tobias' prayers to our Lord. Thirdly, [4] Angels aid and assist those that love purity of life, sincere service of God, hate vice, embrace virtue, and do works of mercy; so Raphael assisted Tobias, when he travailed to bury the dead, flying from the King's fury, and hiding himself, ch. 1. v. 21. 23. Fourthly, [5] Angels exhort to good works, as in this 12. chapter, v. 6. 8. 9. 10. 18. Fifthly, [6] they suggest and instruct what to do, ch. 6. v. 4. 5. Raphael taught young Tobias to take the fish, unbowel him, reserve parts thereof, v. 11. 12. 13. advised him to lodge at Raguel's house, to demand Sara to wife, and v. 6. 17. instructed him, against whom devils have power. Sixthly, [7] they expel devils from persons, and places, ch. 8. v. 3. Raphael took and bound the devil Asmodeus in the desert of higher Aegypt. Seventhly, [8] they deliver men from dangers & evils, c. 6. v. 3. as when the great fish assaulted Tobias, & Sara from molestation and slander, and old Tobias from blindness. chap. 3. v. 10. ch. 11. v. 8. ch. 12. v. 14. Eighthly, when it redoundeth to the honour and more service of God, and good of the soul, [9] Angels procure riches, and worldly commodities, ch. 12. v. 3. Young Tobias gratefully confessed the great benefits received by his guide, concluding generally, by him we are replenished (saith he) with all good things. Ninthly, Good Angels also prove men, for their mere merit, so the Angel witnesseth ch. 12. v. 13. Because thou wast acceptable to God, it was necessary, that tentation should prove thee. Tenthly, and finally (for we remit the reader to larger documents of others) [10] after proof of patience, fortitude, and other virtues, holy Angels comfort good men; so Raphael encouraged old Tobias, saying, ch. 5. v. 13. his blindness should shortly be cured. ch. 12. v. 12. shewed him how grateful his prayers with tears and works of mercy were in God's sight. [11] He comforted Raguel and his family by bringing young Tobias to their house, ch. 7. v. 5. Much more, ch. 8. v. 16. both them and all Tobias his family, by driving away the devil; and lastly by revealing himself unto them. So holy Angels, [12] especially the proper guardian patrons of every one, are always ready to help men; guard them, exhort them to good, do instruct them, do expel evil spirits, and deliver men from many evils & dangers, do procure them temporal commodities, prove their virtues, offer their prayers and good works, assist them all their lives, and at their deaths, then also bring their souls to the Judgement seat, and (if they die in good state) to eternal joy and glory, whereof the ancient fathers'

CHAPTER XIII.

Tobias the father praiseth God, exhorting all Israel to do the same: 11. prophesieth the restoration and better state of Jerusalem.

And [1] Tobias the elder opening his mouth, blessed our Lord, and said: Thou art great Lord for ever, and thy Kingdom world without end:

[1] The third part.
Old Tobias praiseth God, prophesieth better state of God's people.

2 because thou scourgest, and savest: leadest down to hell, and bringest back again: and there is none that may escape thy hand. 3 Confess to our Lord ye children of Israel, and in the sight of the Gentiles praise him: 4 because he hath therefore dispersed you among the gentiles, which know not him, that you may declare his marvelous works, and (a) make them know, that there is no other God omnipotent besides him.

(a) Temporal affliction for the spiritual good of others.

5 He hath chastised us for our iniquities: and he will save us for his mercy. 6 Behold therefore what he hath done with us, and with fear & trembling confess ye to him: and extol the King of the worlds in your works. 7 And I (b) in the land of my captivity will confess to him: because he hath shewed his majesty toward a sinful nation.

(b) His body being in captivity, yet his spirit was free to praise and thank God. S. Cypr. li. de mortalitate.

8 Convert therefore ye sinners, and do justice before God, believing that he will do his mercy with you. 9 And I and my soul will rejoice in him. 10 Bless ye our Lord all his elect, celebrate days of gladness, and confess to him. 11 Jerusalem the city of God, our Lord hath chastised thee in the works of thy hands.

12 Confess to our Lord in thy good things, and bless the God of the worlds, that he may (c) re-edify his tabernacle in thee, and may call back all the captives to thee, and thou mayst rejoice for ever and ever.

(c) He prophesieth the re-edifying of the temple and city of Jerusalem.

13 Thou shalt shine with a glorious light: and all the coasts of the earth shall adore thee. 14 Nations from far shall come to thee: and bringing gifts, they shall adore our Lord in thee, and shall esteem thy land for sanctification. 15 For they shall invocate the great name in thee. 16 Cursed shall they be that shall contemn thee: and damned shall they be that shall blaspheme thee: and blessed shall they be that shall build thee. 17 And thou shalt rejoice in thy children, because they shall all be blessed, and shall be gathered together to our Lord. 18 Blessed are all that love thee, and that rejoice upon thy peace. 19 My soul, bless thou our Lord, because he hath delivered Jerusalem his city (d) from all her tribulations, the Lord our God.

(d) Only celestial Jerusalem shall be free from all tribulations.

20 Blessed shall I be if there shall remain of my seed, to see the glory of Jerusalem 21 The gates of Jerusalem shall be built of Sapphire and the Emerald: and all the compass of the walls thereof of precious stone.

22 With white and clean stone shall all the streets thereof be paved: and in the streets thereof (e) Alleluia shall be sung.

(e) No Christian is ignorant (saith S. Augustin Epist. 86.) that Alleluia is a voice of praise. In English it is. Praise ye the Lord with joy.

23 Blessed be our Lord, which hath exalted it, and his Kingdom be for ever and ever over it. Amen.

CHAPTER XIV.

Old Tobias dieth at the age of an hundred and two years, 5. exhorteth his son and nephews to piety, foreshewing that Ninive shall be destroyed, and Jerusalem re-edified. 14. Younger Tobias returneth with his family to Raguel, and dieth happily as he had lived.

And the words of Tobias were ended. And after that Tobias was restored to his sight, he lived two and forty years, and saw the children of his nephews. 2 Therefore an hundred and two years being accomplished, he was buried honourably in Ninive. 3 For being six and fifty years old he lost the sight of his eyes, and being threescore he received it again. 4 And the rest of his life was in joy, and with great increase of the fear of God he went forward in peace. 5 And at the hour of his death he called unto him Tobias his son, and his seven young sons, his nephews, and said to them. 6 The destruction of Ninive is near: for the word of our Lord faileth not: and our brethren, which are dispersed from the land of Israel, shall return to it. 7 And all the desert land thereof shall be replenished, & the house of God which is burnt in it, shall again be re-edified: and thither shall all return that fear God, 8 and the Gentiles shall forsake their idols, and shall come into Jerusalem; and shall inhabit in it, 9 and (a) all the kings of the earth shall rejoice in it, adoring the king of Israel.

(a) This cannot be understood of the city of Jerusalem but the Church of Christ.

10 Hear ye therefore my children your father: serve our Lord in truth, and (b) seek to do the things that please him:

(b) God's servants must not only expect what shall be commanded, but also seek to know what they ought to do.

11 and command your children that they do justices and alms deeds, that they be mindful of God, and bless him at all time in truth, and in all their power. 12 Now therefore children hear me, and do not tarry here: but what day soever you shall bury your mother by me in one sepulchre, from thenceforth direct your steps to depart hence: 13 for I see that the iniquity thereof will give it an end. 14 And it came to pass after the death of his mother, Tobias departed out of Ninive with his wife, and children, and children's children, and returned to his father and mother in law. 15 And he found them in health in good old age: and he took care of them, and he closed their eyes: and all the inheritance of Raguel's house he received: and he saw the fifth generation, his children's children. 16 And ninety nine years being accomplished in the fear of our Lord, with joy they buried him. 17 And (c) all his kindred, and all his generation continued in good life, and in holy conversation, so that they were acceptable both to God, and to men, and to all the inhabitants in the land.

(c) A notable commendation of Tobias' family & posterity. And a plain testimony that true Religion never failed wholly in the ten tribes, much less in the Kingdom of Juda, least of all in the Church of Christ, & new Testament.

THE ARGUMENT OF THE BOOK OF JUDITH.

[1] S. Jerome for the authority of the Councel of Nice, held this Book to be canonical, which before he did not.

[2] Epist. 111. 115. Prefa. in Iudith.

[3] Other Doctors both before and after the councel of Nice accounted this Book canonical.

[4] When this history happened.

[5] 2. Para. 33.

[6] And by whom it was written.

[7] The contents.

[8] Divided into four parts.

[1][2] SAINT Jerom sometime supposed this book not to be canonical, but afterward finding that the Councel of Nice accounted it in the number of holy Scriptures, he so esteemed it, and thereupon not only translated it into Latin, out of the Chaldee tongue, wherein it was first written, but also as occasion required alleged the same as divine Scripture, and sufficient to convince matters of faith in controversy. For otherwise his opposing the authority of the Nicene Councel, should prove nothing at all against the Jews, seeing also they acknowledge this book amongst Agiographa (or holy writs) but less fit (say they) to strengthen those things which come into contention. Whereby is clear that S. Jerom thenceforth held it for divine Scripture. As further appeareth in his commentaries in Isai 14. more expressly Epist. ad Principiam, he counted it in rank with other Scriptures, whereof none doubteth, saying: Ruth, Esther, Judith were of so great renown, that they gave the names to sacred volumes. And in this Preface doubted not to say: that the rewarder of Judith's chastity (God himself) gave her for imitation not only to women, but also to men: gave her such virtue that she overthrew him, whom none could overcome, and conquered the invincible. [3] Also Before the Councel, Origen in c. 14. Iudith, Tertullian de Monogamia. c. ult. And diverse whom S. Hilary citeth, and dissenteth not from them, Prologo in Psalmos, held this book for Canonical. Many more writers likewise about the time of the same Councel, and after so account it. Prudentius in Psychomachia pudicitiae & libidinis: Chromatius in c. 6. Mat. Paulinus in Natali. 10. S. Chrysostom hom. 10. in Math. S. Ambrose li. 3. Offic. c. 13. Epist. 82. & li. de viduis. S. Augustin (or some other good author) writ two sermons of Judith, 228. 229. Cassiodorus divini lect. c. 6. Fulgentius Epist. 2. de statu viduarum. Ferrandus Carthaginensis ad Regium de re militari. Iunilius Africanus li. 1. de partibus divinae legis. Sulpitius in historia. S. Beda de sex aetatibus. Alredus writing the life of S. Edward our King. More are not necessary to reasonable men. Concerning the time, [4] and author, it seemeth most probable that these things happened when Manasses King of Juda was either in prison in Babylon, [5] or newly restored to his Kingdom, who as it seemeth permitted the government to the high Priest Eliachim (Ch. 4.) otherwise called Ioachim (ch. 15.) who also writ this Book, [6] as Philo's Chronology, li. 2. reporteth. From which time they had no wars till the reign of Joachaz, about 80. years, conformable to the long peace mentioned chap. 16. v. 30. [7] In sum we have here, not a poetical Comedy (as Martin Luther shameth not to call it, in Simposiacis, c. 29. and in his German Preface of Judith) but a sacred History (as all aforementioned esteemed it, & the Jews confess) of a most valiant Matron's fact, delivering the people of God from persecution of a cruel Tyrant. [8] The first three chapters shew the occasion of this danger: the next four describe the difficulties & distresses thereof: other seven with part of the 15. how Judith delivered them from it. In the rest Judith is much praised, and she with the whole people praise God.

THE BOOK OF JUDITH.

CHAPTER I.

Nabuchodonosor king of the Assyrians overcometh Arphaxad king of the Medes: 7. summoneth many other nations to submit themselves to his Empire: 11. which they refusing he threateneth revenge.[1]

[1] This book is read at Matins the fourth week of September.

Arphaxad[1] (a) therefore king of the Medes had subdued many nations to his empire, and he built a most mighty city, which he called Ecbatanis,

[1] The first part.
The occasion of the Jews' persecution at this time. (a) The author being resolved to write this history, joineth his narration to his internal purpose saying: Arphaxad therefore &c. S. Greg. ho. 2. in Ezech.

2 of stones squared and hewed: he made walls thereof in height seventy cubits, and in breadth thirty cubits, and the towers thereof he made in height an hundred cubits. 3 But each side of them was in four square twenty foot long, and he made the gates thereof according to the height of the towers: 4 and he (b) gloried as mighty in the force of his army, and in the glory of his chariots.

(b) Thou fool this night they shall take thy life from thee, & these things whose shall they be? Luc. 12. v. 20.

5 In the twelfth year of his reign: Nabuchodonosor the king of the Assyrians, who reigned in Ninive the great city, fought against Arphaxad, and overcame him 6 in the great field, which is called Ragau, about Euphrates, and Tigris, and Iadason in the field of Erioch the king of the Elicians. 7 Then was the Kingdom of Nabuchodonosor exalted, and his heart was elevated: and he sent to all that dwelt in Cilicia and Damascus, and Libanus, 8 and to the nations, that are in Carmelus, and Cedar, and the inhabitants of Galilee in the great field of Esdrelon, 9 and to all that were in Samaria, and beyond the river Jordan even to Jerusalem, and all the land of Jesse till you come to the borders of Aethiopia. 10 To all these Nabuchodonosor king of the Assyrians sent messengers: 11 Who all with one mind said nay, and sent them back empty, and rejected them without honour. 12 Then Nabuchodonosor the king taking indignation against all that land, swore by his throne and kingdom that he would [1] revenge himself of all those countries.

[1] * defenderet se.

CHAPTER II.

Nabuchodonosor sendeth Holofernes his General to waste all countries of the west, 7. with a great army, and aboundant munition. 11. They subdue many places, and others are strucken with great fear.

In the thirteenth year of king Nabuchodonosor, the two and twentieth day of the first month, the word was given out in the house of Nabuchodonosor the king of the Assyrians, that he would revenge himself. 2 And he called all the ancients, & all the captains, and his men of war, and communicated with them the secret of his counsel: 3 & he said that his cogitation was upon that, to subdue all the earth to his empire. 4 Which saying when it had pleased them all, Nabuchodonosor the king called Holofernes the General of his wars, 5 and said to him: Go forth against every Kingdom of the west, and against them especially, that contemned my commandment. 6 (a) Thine eye shall spare no Kingdom, and every fenced city thou shalt subdue to me.

(a) This cruel commandment was as cruelly put in execution by Holofernes, ch. 3. v. 11.

7 Then Holofernes called the captains and magistrates of the power of the Assyrians: and he mustered men for the expedition, as the king commanded him, an hundred twenty thousand fighting men on foot, and twelve thousand archers horsemen. 8 And he made all his expedition to go before in a multitude of innumerable camels, with those things that might suffice the armies aboundantly, herds of oxen also, & flocks of sheep, which had no number. 9 He appointed corn to be prepared out of all Syria in his passage. 10 But gold & silver he took out of the king's house exceeding much. 11 And he went forth and all the army, with the chariots, & horsemen, & the archers, which covered the face of the earth as locusts. 12 And when he had passed through the coasts of the Assyrians, he came to the great mountains of Ange, which are on the left hand of Cilicia: and he went up into all their castles, and won every fortress. 13 And he brake down the renowned city of Melothus, and spoiled all the children of Tharsis, and the children of Ismael, which were against the face of the desert, and on the south of the land of Cellon. 14 And he passed over Euphrates, & came into Mesopotamia: & he brake all the high cities, that were there, from the torrent of Mambre, till ye come to the sea: 15 and he took the borders thereof, from Cilicia unto the coasts of Japheth, which are toward the south. 16 And he carried away all the children of Madian, & spoiled all their riches, and all that resisted him he slew in the edge of the sword. 17 And after these things he went down into the fields of Damascus in the days of harvest, and he set all the corn on fire, & he made all the trees and vineyards to be cut down; 18 and the fear of him fell upon all the inhabitants of the land.

CHAPTER III.

Many kings and other Princes submit themselves to Holofernes. 8. He receiveth them, and taketh of their chief men to reinforce his army, 11. nevertheless destroyeth their cities, and their gods, that Nabuchodonosor only might be called God.

Then the kings and Princes of all cities and Provinces, namely of Syria and Mesopotamia, and Syria Sobal, and Libya, and Cilicia sent their ambassadors, which coming to Holofernes, said: 2 Let thy indignation toward us cease: For it is better that living we fear Nabuchodonosor the great king, and be subject to thee, than dying, we should with our destruction suffer the damages of our servitude. 3 Every city of ours, and all our possession, all mountains, and hills, and fields, and herds of oxen, and flocks of sheep, and goats, and of horses, and camels, and all our goods, and families are in thy sight: 4 Let all our things be under thy law. 5 We also, and our children are thy servants. 6 Come to us a peaceable lord, and use our service, as it shall please thee. 7 Then went he down from the mountains with horsemen in a great power, and took every city, and every inhabiter of the land. 8 And of all the cities he took to help him valiant men, and chosen for battle. 9 And so great fear lay upon all those Provinces, that the inhabitants of all cities, Princes, and honourable persons, together with the people went out to meet him coming, 10 receiving him with garlands, and torches, dancing with timbrels, and shalms. 11 Neither doing these things, could they for all that^ mitigate the fierceness of his stomach: 12 for he did both destroy their cities, and cut down their groves. 13 For Nabuchodonosor the king had commanded him, that he should destroy all the gods of the earth, that (a) he only might be called God of those nations, which could be subdued with the might of Holofernes.

(a) An express figure of Antichrist 2. Thes. 2. for whom all heretics make way as precursers, for the singular man of sin will confess no God but himself.

14 And passing through all Syria Sobal, and all Apamea, and all Mesopotamia, he came to the Idumeians into the land of Gabaa, 15 and took their cities, and sat there for thirty days, in which days he commanded all the army of his power to be united.

CHAPTER IV.

The children of Israel exceedingly fearing Holofernes' forces. 3. provide to resist him, by the exhortation of the High Priest, using both human 8. and divine means.

Then [1] the children of Israel, which dwelt in the Land of Juda, hearing these things, were sore afraid of his presence.

[1] The second part.
God's people are in great fear and distress.

2 Trembling also, & horror invaded their senses, lest he would do that to Jerusalem and to the temple of our Lord, which he had done to other cities, & their temples. 3 And they sent into all Samaria round about, as far as Jericho, and preoccupated all the tops of mountains: 4 and they compassed their towns with walls, and gathered together corn for provision of battle. 5 Eliachim (a) the Priest wrote to all, that were against Esdrelon, which is against the face of the great field beside Dothain, and to all, by whom there might be passage of way,

(a) The high Priest managed also the temporal affairs of the common wealth, at this time, by consent & commission of King Manasses, as is most probable these things happening shortly after his repentance. 2. Paral. 33.

[1] Exod. 17.

14 so shall all the enemies of Israel be, if you persevere in this work, which you have begun. 15 They therefore at this exhortation of his, beseeching our Lord, continued in the sight of our Lord, 16 so that they also which offered the holocausts to our Lord, did offer the sacrifices to our Lord girded with hair-cloths, and there were ashes upon their head. 17 And they all prayed God with all their heart, that he would visit his people Israel.

CHAPTER V.

Holofernes hearing that the Israelites prepare to resist him, in great rage demandeth diverse particulars concerning that people. 5. Achior an Ammonite telleth the marvelous works of God towards them, 22. adviseth him not to fight against them. 26. The chief captains are offended, and threaten Achior.

And it was told Holofernes the General of the wars of the Assyrians, that the children of Israel prepared themselves to resist, and had shut up the ways of the mountains, 2 and with exceeding fury he chased in great anger, & called all the Princes of Moab and dukes of Ammon, 3 and he said to them: Tell me (a) what is this people which besetteth the mountains: or what, and of what sort, and how great their cities are: also what their power is, or what is their multitude: or who is the king of their warfare:

(a) Holofernes could not be altogether ignorant of so famous a people as the Jews, but in his rage marveling at their attempt demandeth more particularly of their hability to resist him. See. v. 27.

4 and why above all that dwell in the East, have these contemned us, & have not come forth to meet us, that they might receive us with peace? 5 Then Achior captain of all the children of Ammon answering, said: If thou vouchsafe my Lord to hear, I will tell the truth in thy sight, of this people, which dwelleth in the mountains, & there shall not a false word come forth of my mouth. 6 This people is of the progeny of the Chaldees. 7 The same dwelt first in Mesopotamia, because they would not follow the gods of their fathers, which were in the land of the Chaldees. [1]

8 Forsaking therefore the ceremonies of their fathers, which were in multitude of gods, 9 they worshipped one God of heaven, who also commanded them that they should depart from thence, and should dwell in Charan. And when there was famine over all the land, [1] they went down into Aegypt, and there for four hundred years were so multiplied, that the host of them could not be numbered.

[1] Gen. 12.

10 [1] And when the king of Aegypt oppressed them, and in the buildings of his cities had subdued them in brick and clay, they cried to their Lord, and he struck the whole Land of Aegypt with diverse plagues. [2]

[1] Exod. 1. [2] Exod. 7. &c.

11 And when the Aegyptians had cast them out from them, and the plague had ceased from them, and they would take them again, and call them back to their service, 12 these flying away, the God of heaven opened the sea, so that the waters were [1] consolidated as a wall, on either side, and they walking through the bottom of the sea passed dry-foot.

[1] * made solid or firm. Exo. 14.

13 In which place whilst an innumerable army of the Aegyptians pursued them, they were so overwhelmed with the waters, that there was not one remaining, to tell the fact to posterity. 14 Also being past the red sea, they possessed the deserts of Mount Sinai, in which never man could dwell, or son of man rested. 15 [1] There bitter fountains were made sweet for them to drink, and for forty years they received meat from heaven.

[1] Exod. 15. 16. 17.

16 Wheresoever they entered without bow and arrow, and without shield and sword, their God fought for them, and overcame. 17 [1] And there was not that did insult against this people, but when they departed from the worship of the Lord their God.

[1] Iudic. 2. 3. 4. &c.

18 But as often as beside their own God they worshipped another, they were given to prey, and into the sword, and to reproach. 19 And as often as they were penitent for that they revolted from the worship of their God, the God of heaven gave them power to resist. [1]

[1] Nu. 21.

20 Finally the king of the Chananeites, and of the Jebuseites, and of the Pherezeites, and of the Hetheites, and of the Heveites, and of the Amorrheites, and all the mighty in Hesebon they overthrew, and they possessed their lands, and their cities: [1]

[1] Ios. 21.

21 and as long as they sinned not in the sight of their God, it was well with them, for their God hateth iniquity. 22 [1] For (b) these years also past when they had revolted from the way, which God had given them, that they should walk in it, they were destroyed in battles by many nations, and very many of them were led captive into a strange land.

[1] 4. Reg. 21. (b) He seemeth to speak of the captivity of King Manasses. 2. Paral. 33. See the argument of this Book.

23 But of late returning to the Lord their God, from the dispersion wherein they were dispersed, they are united and are come up into all these mountains, and possess Jerusalem again where their Holies are.

24 Now therefore my Lord, search if there be any iniquity of theirs in the sight of their God: and let us go up to them, because their God delivering will deliver them to thee, and they shall be subdued under the yoke of thy power: 25 but if there be no offence of this people before their God, we cannot resist them, because their God will defend them: and we shall be a reproach to the whole earth. 26 And it came to pass, when Achior had ceased to speak these words, all the great men of Holofernes were angry, and they thought to kill him, saying to each other: 27 (c) who is this, that saith the children of Israel can resist king Nabuchodonosor, and his armies, men unarmed, and without force, and without skill of the feats of war?

(c) As Holofernes v. 3. demanded that which he in great part knew, so his men (knowing Achior well enough) in rage demand, who he is that dare say such things?

28 That Achior therefore may know that he deceiveth us, let us go up into the mountains: and when their mighty ones shall be taken, then shall he with them be strucken through with the sword: 29 that every nation may know that Nabuchodonosor is God of the earth, and besides him there is none other.

CHAPTER VI.

Holofernes in great rage sendeth Achior to Bethulia, that he may there be slain with the Israelites. 8. He is left bound to a tree. 10. from whence the Israelites taking him, he telleth them the cause. 14. They entertain him courteously, and earnestly pray to God for help.

And it came to pass when they had ceased to speak, Holofernes being sore offended, said to Achior: 2 Because thou hast prophesied unto us saying, that the nation of Israel is defended of their God, that I may shew thee (a) that there is no God but Nabuchodonosor,

(a) Nabuchodonosor's vassals would have no other God but him. And God Almighty is also jealous and will have no God but himself.

3 when we shall have struck them all as one man, then thyself with them shalt die by the sword of the Assyrians, & all Israel with thee shall perish by destruction: 4 and thou shalt prove that Nabuchodonosor is Lord of the whole earth: and then the sword of my warfare shall pass through thy sides, & pierced^ thou shalt fall among the wounded of Israel, & thou shalt no more fetch breath, till thou be destroyed with them. 5 But if thou think thy prophecy true, let not thy countenance quail, and the paleness that is in thy face, let it depart from thee, if thou think these my words cannot be accomplished. 6 And that thou mayst know that thou shalt prove these things together with them, behold from this hour thou shalt be associate to their people, that whiles they shall receive worthy punishment of my sword, thou withal may be subject to the vengeance. 7 Then Holofernes commanded his servants that they should take Achior, and lead him into Bethulia, & should deliver him into the hands of the children of Israel. 8 And the servants of Holofernes taking him, went through the champion: but when they came near the mountains, the slingers came forth against them. 9 And they returning out of the way by the side of the mountain, tied Achior to a tree^ hand and foot, and so left him bound with withes, and returned to their lord. 10 Moreover the children of Israel descending from Bethulia, came to him. Whom loosing they brought to Bethulia, and setting him in the midst of the people, demanded what was the matter, that the Assyrians had left him bound. 11 In those days the Princes there, were Ozias the son of Micha of the tribe of Simeon, and Charmi, who also is Gothoniel. 12 In the midst therefore of the ancients, and in the sight of all, Achior told all things that he had spoken being asked of Holofernes: and how the people of Holofernes would have killed him for this word, 13 and how Holofernes himself being angry commanded him to be delivered for this cause to the Israelites: that when he should overcome the children of Israel, then he might command Achior also himself to die by diverse torments, for this that he had said: The God of heaven is their defender. 14 And when Achior had declared all these things, all the people fell on their face, adoring our Lord, and with common lamentation and weeping they poured out their prayers with one accord to our Lord, 15 saying: Lord God of heaven and earth, behold (b) their pride, and have regard to (c) our humility, and attend (d) the face of thy saints, and shew that (e) thou forsakest not them that presume of thee, and that thou humblest them that presume of themselves, and glory of their power.

(b) God regardeth the pride of sinners; (c) the humiliation of penitents, (d) the sanctity of his Church in general, as well holy persons, as holy things (e) and true confidence in him, without presuming of men's power.

16 Their weeping therefore being ended, and the people's prayer by the whole day being finished, they comforted Achior, 17 saying: The God of our fathers, whose power thou hast set forth, he will give thee this recompense, that thou rather shalt see their destruction. 18 And when the Lord our God shall give this liberty to his servants, be God with thee also in the midst of us: that as it shall please thee, so thou with all thine mayst converse with us. 19 Then Ozias, the counsel being ended, received him into his house, and made him a great supper. 20 And all the ancients being called, they refreshed themselves together after the fasting was ended. 21 But afterward all the people was called together, & all the night long within the Church, they prayed desiring help of the God of Israel.

CHAPTER VII.

Holofernes besiegeth Bethulia, 6. cutteth their conduit of water, 9. keepeth their fountains. 12. The people murmur and mutiny, 18. yet they pray to God, 23. and the high Priest determineth, if aid come not within five days, to deliver the city to the Assyrians.

But Holofernes the next day commanded his armies, that they should go up against Bethulia. 2 And there were of war foot-men an hundred twenty thousand, and horse-men two and twenty thousand, besides the preparations of those men, whom the captivity had taken, and had been led away out of the Provinces & cities, of all youth. 3 All prepared themselves together to the fight against the children of Israel, and they came by the hill side unto the top, which looketh toward Dothaim, from the place which is called Belma unto Chelmon, which is against Esdrelon. 4 But (a) the children of Israel, as they saw the multitude of them, laid themselves prostrate upon the earth, casting ashes upon their heads, praying with one accord, that the God of Israel would shew his mercy upon his people.

(a) God's servants first of all before they fight, do works of penance, commend their cause to God, then take weapons in hand, & expect opportunity to encounter with the enemies.

5 And taking their weapons of war, they sat at the places, which by a narrow path-way lead directly between the mountains, and they were keeping them all day and night. 6 Moreover Holofernes, whilst he compasseth round about, found that the fountain which ran in, went directly to their conduit on the south side without the city: and he commanded their conduit to be cut asunder. 7 Nevertheless there were fountains not far from the walls, out of which secretly they seemed to draw water to refresh themselves, rather than to drink. 8 But the children of Ammon and Moab came to Holofernes, saying: The children of Israel trust not in spear, nor in arrow, but the mountains defend them, and the hills standing marvelous steep guard them. 9 Therefore that thou mayst overcome them without joining battle, set keepers of the fountains, that they may not draw water of them, and without sword thou shalt kill them, or at the least being wearied they will yield their city, which they think being set in the mountains, cannot be overcome. 10 And these words pleased Holofernes and his soldiers, and he placed round about an hundred men at every fountain. 11 And when that watch had been fully kept for twenty days, the cisterns failed, and the collections of waters to all the inhabitants of Bethulia, so that there was not within the city whereof they might be satisfied, no not for one day, because water was daily given to the people by measure. 12 Then all the men, and women, young men, and children, being gathered together to (b)

Ozias, all together with one voice,

(b) A common frailty of people in distress to impute error to their Superiors: though indeed Ozias erred rather in yielding at last to their suggestion, v. 25. than in withstanding thus long.

13 said: God judge between us and thee, because thou hast done evil against us, in that thou wouldest not speak peaceably with the Assyrians, and for this cause God hath sold us into their hands. 14 And there is none to help, whereas we lie prostrate before their eyes in thirst, and great destruction. 15 And now assemble ye all, that are in the city, that we may of our own accord yield us all to the people of Holofernes. 16 For it is better, that captives we bless our Lord living, than we should die, and be a reproach to all flesh, when we shall see our wives and our infants die before our eyes. 17 We call to witness this day heaven and earth, and the God of our fathers, which taketh vengeance of us according to our sins, that now you deliver the city into the hand of Holofernes' army, that our end may be short in the edge of the sword, which is made longer in the drought of thirst. 18 And when they had said these things, there was made great weeping and howling of all in the assembly, and for many hours with one voice they cried to God, saying: 19 We have sinned with our fathers, we have done unjustly, we have committed iniquity. 20 Thou because thou art gracious, have mercy upon us, or in thy scourge revenge our iniquities, and deliver not them that trust in thee to a people, that knoweth not thee, 21 that they say not among the Gentiles: Where is their God? 22 And when they^ wearied with these cries, and tired with these weepings, had held their peace, 23 Ozias rising up imbrued with tears, said: Be of good cheer brethren, and these five days let us expect mercy of our Lord. 24 For peradventure he will cut off his indignation, and will give glory to his name. 25 But if after five days be past there come no aid, we will do these words, which you have spoken.

CHAPTER VIII.

Judith a most virtuous, rich, fair, and renowned widow, 9. rebuketh the high Priest and ancients, for their determination to deliver the city, if aid come not in five days: 14. exhorteth all to penance. 28. They all agree to her godly advise, 30. praying for good success of her intention, which they yet know not.[1]

[1] The third part.

Judith delivereth her whole nation from persecution.

And it came to pass, when Judith a widow had heard these words, which was the daughter of Merari, the son of Idox, the son of Joseph, the son of Ozias, the son of Elai, the son of Iamnor, the son of Gedeon, the son of Raphaim, the son of Achitob, the son of Melchias, the son of Enan, the son of Nathanias, the son of Salathiel, the son of Simeon, the son of Israel: 2 and her husband was Manasses, who died in the days of barley harvest: 3 for he was occupied with them that bound sheaves in the field, and the heat came upon his head, and he died in Bethulia his city, and was buried there with his father. 4 And Judith was left his widow now three years & six months. 5 And in the higher parts of her house she made herself (a) a secret chamber, in which she abode shut up with her maids.

(a) In three special observances this holy widow led a most religious life: In much private prayer;

6 and having (b) cloth of hair upon her loins, she (c) fasted all the days of her life, but Sabbaths, and [1] new moons, and the feasts of the house of Israel.

(b) in wearing hair-cloth; (c) and in much fasting: as it were a perpetual lent, all days but Sabbaths & feasts excepted.[1] * the first day of the month.

7 And she was of an exceeding beautiful countenance, to whom her husband had left much riches, & a great family, and possessions full of herds of oxen, and flocks of sheep. 8 And she was among all most famous, because she feared our Lord very much, neither was there that spake an ill word of her. 9 When she therefore had heard that Ozias had promised, that after the fifth day were past he would yield the city, she sent to the ancients Chabri & Charmi. 10 And they came to her, and she said to them: What is this word, wherein Ozias hath consented, to yield the city to the Assyrians, if within five days there come no aid to us? 11 And what are you, that tempt our Lord? 12 This is no word that may provoke mercy, but rather that may raise up wrath, and inflame fury. 13 You (d) have set a time for the mercy of our Lord, and according to your pleasure, you have appointed him a day.

(d) In this especially they offended, that they prefixed a time, meaning then to yield the city, for they should rather have fought against the enemies, than deliver God's people to a Tyrant, holy things into profane hands, and by their example put Jerusalem and the temple in like danger. Rabanus.

14 But because our Lord is patient, let us be penitent for this same thing, and shedding tears let us desire his pardon: 15 for not as man, so will God threaten, neither as the son of man will he be inflamed to anger. 16 And therefore let us humble our souls to him, & being settled in an humble spirit, serving him: 17 let us say weeping to our Lord, that according to his will so he do his mercy with us: that as our heart is troubled in their pride, so also we may glory in our humility: 18 because we have not followed the sins of our fathers, which forsook their God, and adored strange gods, 19 for which abomination they were given into the sword, & into confusion to their enemies: but we know no other God but him. 20 Let us humbly expect his consolation, and he will require our blood of the afflictions of our enemies, and he will humble all Nations, what soever shall rise up against us, and the Lord our God will make them without honour. 21 And now brethren, because you are ancients in the people of God, and their souls depend of you: by your speech comfort their hearts, that they be mindful, that our fathers were tempted to be proved, whether they did worship their God truly.

22 They must be mindful how our father Abraham was tempted, and by many tribulations proved, was made the friend of God. 23 So Isaac, so Jacob, so Moyses, and all that have pleased God, through many tribulations have passed faithful. 24 But they that did not receive the tentations with the fear of our Lord, and uttered their impatience and reproach of their murmuring against our Lord, 25 were destroyed of (e) the destroyer, and perished by serpents.

(e) S. Paul 1. Cor. 10. v. 10. alleging that happened to the people of Israel in the desert, addeth this word destroyer, which is only in this place, and not Num. 11. nor 14. nor else in the old Testament: which is another argument that this book is Canonical.

26 And we therefore let us not revenge ourselves for these things, which we suffer, 27 but reputing these very punishments to be the scourges of our Lord less than our sins, wherewith as servants we are chastised, let us think them to have chanced to our amendment, and not to our destruction. 28 And Ozias and the ancients said to her: All things which thou hast spoken be true, and there is no reprehension in thy words. 29 Now therefore pray for us, because thou art a holy woman, and fearing God. 30 And Judith said to them: As you know, that which I could speak to be of God, 31 so that which I have disposed to do, prove if it be of God, and pray that God establish my counsel. 32 You shall stand at the gate this night, and I will go out with mine (f) Abra: and pray ye, that as you have said, in five days our Lord respect his people Israel.

(f) Some think Abra was a proper name, but whether it was or no, it signifieth an handmaid of more honour, as we speak: A maid of honour.

33 But I will not that you search my doing, and till I bring you word, let nothing else be done, but pray for me to our Lord God. 34 And Ozias the Prince of Juda said to her: Go in peace, and our Lord be with thee to the revenge of our enemies. And returning they departed.

CHAPTER IX.

Judith in hair-cloth & ashes prayeth for the delivery of the people, remembering like benefits of God: 12. craveth power to overthrow Holofernes.

Who going away, Judith (a) went into her oratory: and clothing herself with hair-cloth, put ashes upon her head: and falling prostrate to our Lord, she cried to our Lord, saying:

(a) Of such private oratories as this our Saviour seemeth to speak Mat. 6. saying: Enter into thy chamber &c. Of like oratories among Christians read Car. Baronius An. D. 293. S. Cyp. ep. 56.

2 Lord God of my father Simeon, who gavest him a sword for defence against strangers, which were ravishers in their coinquination, & discovered the virgin unto confusion: 3 and gavest their women into prey, and their daughters into captivity: and all the prey to be divided to thy servants, which were zealous in (b) thy zeal: help I beseech thee, o Lord God, me a widow.

(b) The zeal of Simeon and Levi was commendable, but for diverse evil circumstances the fact was reproved by Iacob. Gen. 34. & 49.

4 For thou hast done the things heretofore, and hast purposed one thing after another: and that hath been done which thou wouldest. 5 For all thy ways are ready, and thy judgments thou hast put in thy providence. 6 Look upon the camp of the Assyrians now, as thou didst vouchsafe to see the camp of the Aegyptians, when they ran armed after thy servants, trusting in chariots, and in their horsemen, and in a multitude of men of war. 7 But thou didst look over their camp, and darkness wearied them. 8 The depth held their feet, and the waters overwhelmed them. 9 So let these also be made o Lord, which trust in their multitude, and in their chariots, and in pikes, and in shields, and in their arrows, and glory in their spears, 10 and know not thyself art our God, which destroyest wars from the beginning, and Lord is thy name. 11 Lift up thine arm as from the beginning, & dash their power in thy power: let their power fall in thy wrath, which promise that they will violate thy holy things, and pollute the tabernacle of thy holy name, & with their sword throw down the horn of thine altar. 12 Bring to pass Lord, that his pride be cut off with his own sword, 13 (c) let him be caught with the snares of his eyes in me, & thou shalt strike him from the lips of my charity.

(c) She prayed, that Holofernes should be moved with her beauty & sweet speech: which he might be and not sin, but he by his free will sinning God turned his sin to the good of others. See Annot. Exod. 7. pag. 173. S. Aug. ser. 228.

14 Give me constancy in mind, that I may contemn him: and power that I may overthrow him. 15 For this shall be a memorial of thy name, when the hand of a woman shall overthrow him. 16 For not in multitude is thy power o Lord, neither in strength of horses is thy will, neither have the proud pleased thee from the beginning: but the prayer of the humble and meek hath always pleased thee. 17 God of the heavens, creator of the waters, & Lord of every creature, hear me wretch, praying and presuming of thy mercy. 18 Remember Lord thy testament, and give a word in my mouth, and strengthen counsel in my heart, that thy house may continue in thy sanctification: 19 and all Nations may acknowledge that thou art God, and there is no other besides thee.

CHAPTER X.

Judith excellently adorned, and very beautiful goeth with her handmaid towards the camp, 11. is taken by the watch, 16. and brought to Holofernes.

And it came to pass, when she had ceased to cry to our Lord, she rose from the place, wherein she lay prostrate to our Lord. 2 And she called her (a) Abra, and going down into her house she took from her the hair-cloth, & put off the garments of her widowhood,

(a) See ch. 8. v. 32.

3 and washed her body, and anointed herself with ointment, and plaited the hair of her head, and put a crown upon her head, and clothed herself with the garments of her joyfulness, and put [1]pantofles on her feet, & took bracelets, and Lilies, and earlets, and rings, and with all her ornaments she adorned herself.

[1] Sandalia.

4 To whom also (b) our Lord gave beauty: because all this trimming did not depend of sensuality, but of virtue: and therefore our Lord amplified this beauty on her, that she might appear to all men's eyes of incomparable comeliness.

(b) God by this testified her holy intention in adorning herself.

5 She therefore laid upon her Abra (c) a bottle of wine, and a vessel of oil, and [1]polent, and dry figs, and bread, and cheese, and went forward.

(c) Not only certain meats were forbid by the law Levit. 11. but in a manner all the meats of the Gentiles were unlawful being offered to idols, for which cause Daniel and the three children would not eat of the King's meats in Babylon. [1] Polentam.

6 And when they were come to the gate of the city, they found Ozias expecting, and the ancients of the city. 7 Who when they saw her, being astonished marveled at her beauty exceedingly. 8 Yet asking her no question, they let her pass, saying: The God of our fathers give thee grace, and strengthen all the counsel of thy heart, with his power, that Jerusalem may glory upon thee, and thy name may be in the number of the holy and just. 9 And they that were there said all with one voice: So be it, so be it. 10 But Judith praying our Lord, passed through the gates^ she & her Abra.

11 And it came to pass, when she went down the hill, about break of day the watchmen of the Assyrians met her, & held her, saying: whence comest thou? Or wither goest thou? 12 Who answered, I am a daughter of the Hebrews, therefore am I fled from their face (d) because I knew it should come to pass, that they should be given you unto spoil, because that contemning you, they would not of their own accord yield themselves, that they might find mercy in your sight.

(d) She told many things evidently true, other things conditionally, as it was like to come to pass if God sent not better means.

13 For this cause I thought with myself, saying: I will go to the presence of the Prince Holofernes, that I may tell him their secrets, and shew him by what entrance he may win them, so that there shall not fall one man of his army, 14 And when those men had heard her words, they considered her face, and she was a wonder in their eyes, for they marveled at her beauty exceedingly. 15 And they said to her: Thou hast saved thy life, in that thou hast found such counsel, that thou wouldest come down to our Lord. 16 And this know thou, that when thou shalt stand in his sight, he will deal well with thee, and thou shalt be most gracious in his heart. And they brought her to the tabernacle of Holofernes, telling him of her. 17 And when she was entered before his face, forthwith Holofernes was caught in his eyes. 18 And his guard said to him: Who can contemn the people of the Hebrews, which have (e) so beautiful women, that we should not worthily fight against them for these?

(e) S. Fulgentius probably judgeth that Iudith was now about forty years old. Epist. 2. cap. 6.

19 Judith therefore seeing Holofernes sitting in a canopy, which was woven of purple, and gold, and emerald, and precious stones: 20 and when she had looked in his face, she adored him, falling prostrate upon the ground. And the servants of Holofernes lifted her up, their lord commanding it.

CHAPTER XI.

Holofernes demanding Judith the cause of her coming: 4. she deceiveth him with a probable narration.

Then Holofernes said to her: Be of good cheer, and fear not in thy heart: because I have never hurt man, that would serve Nabuchodonosor the king. 2 And thy people, if they had not contemned me, I would never have lifted up my spear over them. 3 But now tell me, for what cause hast thou departed from them, and it hath pleased thee to come to us? 4 And Judith said to him: (a) Take the words of thy handmaid, for if thou wilt follow the words of thy handmaid, our Lord will do with thee a perfect thing.

(a) All that Iudith saith is true in her sense as she meant it, but not in the understanding of Holofernes and his soldiers, yet was no less lawful than that Iosue did in deceiving the citizens of Hai. Iosue 8. S. Aug. q. 10. in Iosue.

5 For Nabuchodonosor the king of the earth liveth, and his power liveth which is in thee to the chastising of all straying souls: that not only men serve him by thee, but also the beasts of the field obey him. 6 For the industry of thy mind is reported to all nations, and it is declared to all the world, that thou only art good, and mighty in all his Kingdom, and thy discipline is bruited to all provinces. 7 Neither is that unknown which Achior spake, neither are we ignorant of that^ thou hast commanded to come upon him. 8 For it is certain that our God is so offended with sins, that he hath sent word by his Prophets to the people, that he will deliver them for their sins. 9 And because the children of Israel know they offended their God, thy dread is upon them. 10 Moreover also famine hath invaded them, and for drought of water they are now esteemed among the dead. 11 Finally, they ordain this, to kill their cattle, and to drink the blood of them, 12 and the holy things of our Lord their God, which God commanded not to be touched, in corn, wine, and oil, these have they purposed to bestow, and they will consume the things which they ought not to touch with their hands: therefore because they do these things, it is sure that they shall be given in to perdition. 13 Which I thy handmaid knowing, am fled from them, & our Lord hath sent me to tell thee these very things. 14 For I thy handmaid worship God, even now being with thee, and thy handmaid will go forth, and I will pray God, 15 and he will tell me when he will repay them their sins, and I coming will tell thee, so that I may bring thee through the midst of Jerusalem, and thou shalt have all the people of Israel, as sheep that have no pastor, & there shall not so much as one dog bark against thee: 16 because these things are told me by the providence of God. 17 And because God is angry with them, I am sent to tell these very things to thee. 18 And all these words pleased Holofernes, and his servants, and they marveled at her wisdom, and one said to another: 19 There is not such a woman upon the earth in look, in beauty, and in sense of words. 20 And Holofernes said to her: God hath done well, which sent thee before the people, that thou mightest give them into our hands: 21 and because thy promise is good, if thy God shall do this for me, he shall also be my God, and thou shalt be great in the house of Nabuchodonosor, and thy name shall be renowned in all the earth.

CHAPTER XII.

Judith is brought into Holofernes' treasure-house, 2. hath leave to abstain from the Gentiles' meats, 5. and to go forth in the night to pray. 10. The fourth day she cometh to Holofernes banquet; 16. he is taken with concupiscence, and drinketh very much wine.

Then he bade her go in where his treasures were laid up, and bade her tarry there, and he appointed what should be given her of his own banquet. 2 To whom Judith answered, and said: Now (a) I cannot eat of these things, which thou commandest to be given me, lest there come displeasure upon me: but I will eat of these things, which I have brought.

(a) See chap. 10. v. 5.

3 To whom Holofernes said: If these things which thou hast brought with thee shall fail thee, what shall we do to thee? 4 And Judith said: Thy soul liveth my lord, that thy handmaid shall not spend all these things, till God do by my hand these things, which I have purposed. And his servants brought her into the tabernacle, which he had commanded. 5 And whilst she went in, she desired that she might have licence to go forth in the night and before day to prayer, & to beseech our Lord. 6 And he commanded his chamberlains, that as it pleased her, she should go out & come in to adore her God for three days. 7 And she went forth in the nights into the vale of Bethulia, & washed herself in a fountain of water. 8 And as she came up, she prayed our Lord the God of Israel, that he would direct her way to the delivery of his people. 9 And going in, she remained (b) pure in the tabernacle, until she took her own meat in the evening.

(b) This purity consisted in abstaining from meats forbid by the Law, or offered to Idols.

10 And it came to pass in the fourth day, Holofernes made a supper to his servants, and said to Vagao his eunuch: Go, and persuade that Hebrew woman, that she consent to her own accord to dwell with me. 11 For it is a foul thing with the Assyrians, if a woman mock a man in doing, that she pass free from him. 12 Then Vagao went in to Judith, & said: Let not the good [1] young maid fear to go in to my lord, that she may be honoured before his face, that she may eat with him & drink wine in joyfulness.

13 To whom Judith answered: Whom am I, that I should gainsay my lord? 14 All that shall be good & best before his eyes, will I do. And whatsoever shall please him, that shall be best to me all the days of my life. 15 And she arose, and decked herself with her garments, and going in she stood before his face. 16 And the heart of Holofernes was strucken: for he burnt in the concupiscence of her. 17 And Holofernes said to her: Drink now, & sit down in joyfulness, because thou hast found grace before me. 18 And Judith said: I will drink my lord, because my soul is magnified this day above all my days. 19 And she took, and did eat, & drank before him those things, which her handmaid had prepared her. 20 And Holofernes was made pleasant toward her, & drank wine exceeding much, so much as he had never drunk in his life?

CHAPTER XIII.

Holofernes lying in a drunken sleep, Judith cutteth off his head, 12. so returneth with her maid through the guard, as it were to pray, cometh to Bethulia 16. exhorteth all to thank God, and sheweth them the head. 22. She is blessed of all. 27. Achior also praiseth God and Judith.

And when it was waxen late, his servants made haste to their lodgings, and Vagao shut the chamber doors, and went his way. 2 And they were all overladen with wine. 3 And Judith was alone in the chamber. 4 Moreover Holofernes lay in his bed, fast asleep with very much (a) drunkenness.

(a) The fasting of one woman overthrew an innumerable host of drunkards. S. Amb. li. de ieiunio & Elia. c. 9.

5 And Judith said to her maid that she should stand without^ before the chamber, & watch. 6 And Judith stood before the bed, praying with tears, & with moving of her lips in silence, 7 saying: Confirm me o Lord God of Israel and in this hour have respect to the works of my hands, that as thou hast promised, thou mayst advance (b) Jerusalem thy city: and I may bring to pass that which I believing that it may be done by thee, have purposed.

(b) If Bethulia had been taken, Jerusalem also had been in extreme danger: for safety whereof God had made more special promise to David and others. Isaiae 37. 38. &c.

8 And when she had said these things, she went to the pillar, that was at his bed's head, and his sword that hung tied on it, she loosed. 9 And when she had drawn it out, she took him by the hair of his head, and said: Confirm me, o Lord God, in this hour, 10 and she struck twice upon his neck, and cut off his head, and took his canopy from the pillars, and rolled aside his body a trunk. 11 And after a while she went out, and delivered the head of Holofernes to her maid, and bade her put it into her wallet. 12 And they two went forth, according to their custom, as it were to prayer, and they passed the camp, and compassing the valley, they came to the gate of the city. 13 And Judith a far off said to the keepers of the walls: Open the gates, because God is with us, which hath wrought power in Israel. 14 And it came to pass, when the men had heard her voice, they called the ancients of the city. 15 And they ran all to meet her, from the least to the greatest: because they hoped not that now she would come. 16 And they lighting lights gathered round about her every one: and she going up into a higher place, commanded silence to be made. And when all had held their peace, 17 Judith said: Praise ye the Lord our God, who hath not forsaken them that hope in him: 18 and in me his handmaid he hath fulfilled his mercy, which he promised to the house of Israel: and he hath killed by my hand the enemy of his people this night. 19 And bringing forth the head of Holofernes out of the wallet, she shewed it them, saying: Lo the head of Holofernes the General of the army of the Assyrians, & behold his canopy, wherein he lay in is drunkenness, where the Lord our God struck him by the hand of a woman. 20 But the same our Lord liveth, that his (c) Angel hath kept me, both going hence, and abiding there, and from thence returning hither: and our Lord hath not suffered me his handmaid to be defiled, but without pollution of sin he hath called me back to you, rejoicing in this victory, in my escape, and in your delivery.

(c) Iudith's proper Angel so defended her, as Iacob's Angel delivered him from all evils. Gen. 48.

21 Confess ye all to him, because he is good, because his mercy is for ever. 22 And they all adoring our Lord, said to her: Our Lord hath blessed thee in his power, because by thee he hath brought our enemies to nothing. 23 Moreover Ozias the Prince of the people of Israel, said to her: Blessed art thou daughter of our Lord the high God, above all women upon the earth. 24 Blessed be our Lord, which made heaven & earth, which hath directed thee unto the wounds of the head of the Prince of our enemies. 25 Because this day he hath so magnified thy name, that thy praise shall not depart out of the mouth of men, which shall be mindful of the power of our Lord for ever, for that thou hast not spared thy life for the distresses and tribulation of thy kindred, but hast holpen the ruin before the presence of our God. 26 And all the people said: So be it, so be it. 27 Moreover Achior being called^ came, and Judith said to him: The God of Israel, to whom thou gavest testimony, that he revengeth himself of his enemies, he hath cut off the head of all the unfaithful this night by my hand. 28 And that thou mayst prove that it is so, lo the head of Holofernes, who in the contempt of his pride contemned the God of Israel: and threatened thee death, saying: When the people of Israel shall be taken, I will command thy sides to be pierced with a sword. 29 But Achior seeing the head of Holofernes, being in anguish for fear, fell on his face upon the earth, and his soul was sore troubled. 30 But after taking spirit again he was refreshed, and fell down at her feet, and adored her, and said: 31 Blessed art thou of thy God in every tabernacle of Jacob, because in every nation, which shall hear thy name, the God of Israel shall be magnified in thee.

CHAPTER XIV.

Holofernes' head is hanged on the wall. 6. Achior is circumcised. 7. The Israelites assault the Assyrians, 8. who going to awake their General, find him slain, 17. and are all confounded with fear.

And Judith said to all the people: Hear me brethren, hang ye this head upon our walls: 2 and it shall be, when the sun shall rise, let every man take his armour, & issue ye forth with violence, not that you go down beneath, but as it were invading violently. 3 Then the watchmen must of necessity run to raise up their Prince to battle. 4 And when the captains of them shall run to the tabernacle of Holofernes, and shall find him headless rolled in blood, fear will fall upon them. 5 And when you shall know that they fly, go after them securely, because our Lord will destroy them under your feet. 6 Then (a) Achior seeing the power, that God of Israel wrought, forsaking the rite of gentility, believed God, and circumcised the flesh of his prepuce, and was joined to the people of Israel, and all the succession of his kindred until this present day.

(a) Achior an Ammonite (ch. 5. v. 5.) being truly converted and believing in God, was admitted into the Church, not withstanding that Ammonites and Moabites were excluded by name, Deut. 23. v. 3. which is therefore meant only of those that persist impenitent and obstinate.

7 And immediately as day brake, they hung the head of Holofernes upon the walls, & every man took his armour, & they went forth with great noise & shouting. 8 Which the watchmen seeing, ran to the tabernacle of Holofernes. 9 Moreover they that were in the tabernacle coming, and before the door of the tabernacle making a noise to raise him, they endeavoured by art to disquiet him, that Holofernes might awake not by them raising him, but by them making a noise. 10 For no man durst by knocking, or entering, to open the chamber of the chief of the Assyrians. 11 But when his Dukes and tribunes were come, and all the chief of the army of the king of the Assyrians, they said to the chamberlains: 12 Go in, and awake him, because the mice issuing out of their holes, have presumed to provoke us to battle. 13 Then Vagao entering into his chamber, stood before the curtain, & made a clapping with his hands: for he thought that he slept with Judith. 14 But when with the sense of his ears he perceived no motion of person lying, he came near to the curtain, and lifting it up, and seeing the body without the head of Holofernes weltered in his blood lie upon the ground, cried out in a loud voice with weeping, and rent his garments. 15 And going into the tabernacle of Judith, he found her not, and he lept forth to the people, 16 and said: One Hebrew woman hath made confusion in the house of king Nabuchodonosor: for behold Holofernes lieth upon the ground and his head is not upon him. 17 Which when the Princes of the power of the Assyrians had heard, they all rent their garments, & intolerable fear and dread fell upon them, and their minds were troubled exceedingly. 18 And there was made an incomparable cry in the midst of their camp.

CHAPTER XV.

The Assyrians fly for fear, 3. the Hebrews pursue them, 7. and are enriched by the spoils. 9. The high Priest with others come from Jerusalem and praise Judith. 14. The goods of Holofernes are given to her.

And when all the army heard that Holofernes was beheaded, courage and counsel fell from them, and being shaken with trembling only and fear, they help themselves by flight, 2 so that none spake with his neighbour, but hanging the head, all things left behind, they made haste to escape the Hebrews, whom they heard to come armed upon them, flying by the ways of the fields, and the paths of the hills. 3 The children of Israel therefore seeing them flying, followed them. And they went down sounding with trumpets, and shouting after them. 4 And because the Assyrians were not united together, they went headlong into flight: but the children of Israel pursuing in one company, discomfited all that they could find. 5 Ozias therefore sent messengers through all the cities and countries of Israel. 6 Every country therefore, and every city sent chosen youth armed after them, and they pursued them in the edge of the sword, until they came to the extremity of their borders. 7 And the rest that were in Bethulia, entered into the camp of the Assyrians, and took away the prey, which the Assyrians flying had left, and were loaden exceedingly. 8 But they that were returned conquerors to Bethulia, took away with them all things that were theirs, so that there was no number in cattle, and beasts, and all their moveables, that from the least unto the greatest all were made rich of their preys. 9 [1] And Ioachim the high Priest came from Jerusalem into Bethulia with all his ancients to see Judith.

[1] The fourth part.
The praises of Iudith, who with all the people praise God.

10 Who when she was come out to him, they all blessed her with one voice, saying: (a) Thou art the glory of Jerusalem, thou the joy of Israel, thou the honour of our people:

(a) Iudith was a special figure of the B. Virgin Mary, to whom these praises pertain in more eminent sort, than to any other creature. S. Fulbertus Carnotensis.

11 because thou hast done manfully, and thy heart was strengthened, for that thou had loved chastity, and after thy husband not known any other: therefore also the hand of our Lord hath strengthened thee, and therefore shall thou be blessed for ever. 12 And all the people said: So be it, so be it. 13 And for thirty days, scarce were the spoils of the Assyrians gathered of the people of Israel. 14 Moreover all things, that were proved to be the peculiar goods of Holofernes, they gave to Judith, in gold, and silver, and garments, and precious stones, and all stuff, and all the things were delivered her of the people. 15 And all the people rejoiced with women, and virgins, and youngmen, on instruments and harps.

CHAPTER XVI.

Judith singeth a canticle of thanks-giving to our Lord. 22. The people go to Jerusalem and offer sacrifices. 25. She in great honour liveth a widow till her death in good old age. 30. The people have long peace, and a festival day is instituted in perpetual memory of her fact.

Then sang Judith this song to our Lord, saying: 2 Begin ye to our Lord in timbrels, sing ye to our Lord in cymbals, tune to him a new Psalm, rejoice, and invocate his name. 3 (a) Our Lord confoundeth battles, Lord is his name.

(a) S. Ephrem ser. de 2. Adventu, citeth this place as holy scripture, so testifying this Book to be canonical.

4 Who hath set his camp in the midst of his people, that he might deliver us from the hand of all our enemies. 5 Assur came out of the mountains from the North in the multitude of his strength: whose multitude stopped up the torrents, and their horses covered the valleys. 6 He said that he would set my borders on fire, and kill my young men with the sword, to give my infants into prey, and virgins into captivity. 7 But our Lord omnipotent hath hurt him, and hath delivered him into the hands of a woman, and hath pierced him. 8 For, not by young men is their mighty one fallen, neither have the sons of (b) Titan strucken him, neither did the high (c) giants set themselves upon him, but Judith the daughter of Merari in the beauty of her face dissolved him.

(b) Such giants as were before Noe's flood, Gen. 6. (c) Not such as were after, Num. 13. Deut. 3.

9 For she put from her the garments of widowhood, and put on her the garments of joy, in the rejoicing of the children of Israel. 10 She anointed her face with ointment, and tied together her locks with a crown, she took a new stole to deceive him. 11 Her sandals ravished his eyes, her beauty made his soul captive, she with a sword cut off his head. 12 The Persians did quake at her constancy, and the Medes at her boldness. 13 Then did the camp of the Assyrians howl, when my humble ones appeared, withering in thirst. 14 The sons of young women have pierced them, and they have killed them as boys flying away: they have perished in battle before the face of the Lord my God. 15 Let us sing an hymn to our Lord, let us sing a new hymn to our God. 16 Adonai o Lord, great art thou, and noble in thy power, and whom no man can overcome. 17 Let every creature of thine serve thee: because thou saidst, and they were made: thou didst send thy spirit, and they were created, and there is none that can resist thy voice. 18 The mountains with the waters shall be moved with the foundations: the rocks shall melt as wax before thy face. 19 But they that fear thee, shall be great with thee in all things. 20 Woe be to the nation, that riseth up upon my kindred: for our Lord omnipotent will be revenged on them, in the day of judgment he will visit them. 21 For he will give (d) fire, and worms into their flesh, that they may be burnt, and may feel for ever.

(d) Everlasting torments of fire & worms pertain to the damned bodies. S. Aug. li. 21. c. 4. &c. civit. and greater pains to the damned souls, especially the loss of God's vision.

22 And it came to pass after these things, all the people after the victory came into Jerusalem to adore our Lord: and forthwith as they were purified, they all offered holocausts, and vows, and their promises. 23 Moreover Judith offered for an anathema of oblivion all the instruments of war of Holofernes, which the people gave her, and the canopy that herself had taken away out of his chamber. 24 And the people was pleasant according to the face of saints, and for three months the joy of this victory was celebrated with Judith. 25 And after those days every man returned into his house, and Judith was made great in Bethulia, and she was more glorious to all the land of Israel. 26 There was also chastity joined to her virtue, (e) so that she knew not man all the days of her life, after that Manasses her husband was dead.

27 And on festival days she came forth with great glory. 28 And she abode in her husband's house (f) an hundred five years, and dismist her Abra free, & she died and was buried with her husband in Bethulia.

(f) Living in all 105. years, she was widow about sixty nine: for when she slew Holofernes she was about forty years old. c. 10. v. 18. & her husband was then dead three years & a half before. ch. 8 v. 4.

29 And all the people mourned for her seven days. 30 And in all the space of her life there was not that troubled Israel, and after her death many years. 31 But the day of the festivity of this victory is received of the Hebrews in the number of holy days, and is worshipped of the Jews from that time until this present day.

ANNOTATIONS.
CHAP. XVI.

[1] Judith an example of holy widowhood.

[2] Many incitements concurring to the contrary made her widowhood more excellent.

[3] Deut. 25. v. 5. Ruth. 3. v. 12.

[4] widowhood an Evangelical counsel.

26. After that her husband was dead.] As young Tobias and Sara were notable patterns to married persons: [1] so Judith is a like good example to devout widows, excelling most part in many respects. [2] For first, she professed this holy state of life in the old Testament, when it was most rare, the law providing that the brother, or next kinsman, should marry the widow of him that died without children, [3] as it seemeth she had none, the Greek text affirming that she gave all her goods before her death to other kindred. ch. 16. v. 24. Secondly, she was only once married, ch. 15. v. 13. ch. 16. v. 26. whereas it is also commendable after twice or oftener marriage at last to abstain. Thirdly, she was young, about 36. years: for three years and a half after that her husband was dead, she was called a young maid, ch. 12. v. 12. Fourthly, she was of excellent beauty, ch. 8. v. 7. Fifthly, exceeding rich. Ibidem. Sixthly, very noble, especially after the delivery of the people from such distress. ch. 15. v. 10. Seventhly, for this renowned fact, and for her other great virtue (ch. 8. v. 8.) many principal men desired to marry her, ch. 16. v. 22. Eighthly, all the people wished much issue of so noble a stock. ch. 16. v. 25. Ninthly, she lived long in the state of widowhood, about threescore and nine years, from 36. to 105, ch. 16. v. 28. Tenthly, there was great and long peace in all Israel, after that she had relieved Bethulia. ch. 16. v. 30. All which might easily have invited another to have married: but her great devotion, and fervent desire to serve God in a retired austere life, fasting & praying, ch. 8. v. 6. cut off all incitements to marriage, [4] and made her before the Gospel to embrace Evangelical counsel, not commanded, but for better attaining to perfection counseled by our Saviour and S. Paul. Mat. 19. 1. Cor. 7.

THE ARGUMENT OF THE BOOK OF ESTHER.

[1][2] OF the authority of this book only two or three ancient writers doubted, before the Councels of Laodicea and Carthage declared it to be Canonical. All the rest did ever esteem it as divine Scripture. For albeit S. Jerome in his time found not certain parts thereof in the Hebrew, and therefore transposed the same to the end of the book, as now we have them: yet in the Greek he found all these sixteen chapters contained in ten. And it is not unprobable, that these parcels were sometimes in the Hebrew, as were diverse whole books which are now lost. But whether they were at any time in the Hebrew or no, the Church of Christ accounteth the whole Book of infallible authority, reading as well these parts, as the rest in her public office. And the Councel of Trent (sess. 4.) for more express declaration defineth that all the books recited in the same Decree (amongst which is Esther) with all the parts thereof, as they are accustomed to be read in the Catholic Church, and be contained in the old vulgar Latin Edition, are sacred and Canonical Scripture.

[1] This whole book is canonical.

[1] It containeth a particular great danger of the people of Israel, happening (as is probable) shortly after their general relaxation, and return of some from the captivity of Babylon; and their delivery from it, through the godly zeal and other virtues of Queen Esther, directed herein by Mardocheus, who being also in imminent danger was delivered and advanced: [2] and finally writ the history, which may be divided into four parts, [3] not by order of the chapters as they are here transposed, but in order of time. First the author reporteth some things going before the people's danger, in the 11. 1. 2. 12. chapters, and part of the 3. Secondly, their danger and distress, in the rest of the 3. and part of 13. chapters. Thirdly, their delivery: from the 4. chapter to the midst of the 9. and rest of the 13. and in the 14. 15. and 16. Fourthly, the things that ensued hereupon, in the other half of the ninth chapter, the 10. chapter, and first verse of the eleventh.

Whosoever will please to read this history, in order of the time as the things happened, adjoining the latter chapters, which are in the Greek, and not in Hebrew, may follow the letters of the Alphabet, as here we have placed them in the margent, beginning at the second verse of the 11. chapter, where he findeth the letter A. and when he cometh to B. return where the same letter is noted. ch. 1. And so in the rest follow the same direction.

THE BOOK OF ESTHER

CHAPTER I.

King Assuerus celebrateth a great banquet to shew his glory, 10. calleth queen Vasthi thereto. Who refusing to come, is by advise of his Counsel deposed. [1]

[1] This book is read at matins the last week of September.

In [1] the days of Assuerus, who reigned from India unto Aethiopia over an hundred twenty seven provinces:

[1] The first part beginneth in the 11. ch.

2 when he sat in the throne of his Kingdom, the city Susan was in the beginning of his Kingdom. [1]

[1] A. B.

3 In the third year therefore of his empire he made a great feast to all the Princes, and to his servants, to the most valiant of the Persians, and the nobles of the Medes, and the rulers of the Provinces in his sight, 4 that he might shew the riches of the glory of his Kingdom, and the greatness, and vaunting of his might, a great time, to wit, an hundred an fourscore days. 5 And when the days of the feast were accomplished, he invited all people, that was found in Susan, from the greatest to the least: and commanded seven days a feast to be prepared in the entrance of the garden, & of the wood, which was planted with royal garnishing and with hand. 6 And there hung on every side hangings of sky-colour, and green, and hyacinthine colour, held up with cords of silk, & of purple, which were put into rings of ivory, and were held up with marble pillars. Beds also of gold and silver were placed in order upon the floor paved with the emerald, and the touch-stone: which painting adorned with marvelous variety. 7 And they that were invited, drank in golden cups, & the meats were brought in change of vessels. Wine also plenteous and the best was set down, as was worthy of a king's magnificence. 8 (a) Neither was there that compelled them to drink that would not, but as the king had appointed, making each of his Princes overseer of every table, that every man might take what he would.

(a) Modesty & temperance amongst heathen people condemneth Christians that urge men to drink immoderately, & so cause them to be drunk. S. Aug. Ser. 231. 232. de tempore.

9 Vasthi also the queen made a feast for the women in the palace, where king Assuerus had accustomed to remain. 10 Therefore the seventh day, when the king was merrier, and after very much drinking was well warmed with wine, he commanded Maumam, & Bazatha, & Harbona, & Bagatha, & Abgatha, & Zethar, & Charchas, the seven eunuchs, that ministered in his sight, 11 that they should bring in queen Vasthi before the king, the crown set upon her head, that he might shew her beauty to all the peoples and Princes: for she was exceeding beautiful. 12 Who refused, and contemned to come at the king's commandment, which he had commanded by the eunuchs. Whereupon the king being wrath, & chaffed with (b) exceeding fury,

(b) The end of immoderate feasting is commonly brawling. Here the King became furious, & the Queen was divorced from him.

13 asked the wisemen, which after the manner of a king were always present with him, & he did all things by their counsel, which knew the laws, and rights of the elders: 14 (and the chief & nearest him were, Charsena, & Sethar, and Admatha, & Tharsis, and Mares, and Marsana, and Mamuchan, seven dukes of the Persians, and of the Medes, which saw the face of the king, & were wont to sit first after him) 15 to what sentence Vasthi the queen should be subject, that would not do Assuerus' the king's commandment, which he had commanded by the eunuchs.

16 And Mamuchan answered, the king hearing, and the Princes: (c) queen Vasthi hath not only hurt the king, but also all peoples, & Princes, that are in all the provinces of king Assuerus.

(c) Brentius approveth the sentence of this parasite, but Iosephus l. 11. c. 6. Macrobius li. 7. c. 1. Saturn. S. Ierome and Rustic. & S. Ambrose l. 1. de Elia c. 14. judge the Queen's refusal lawful, & agreeable to the Persians' laws, which prohibited married women to come in sight of other men in great assemblies: neither had the King just cause to break the law, for pleasing his fancy in his drunken humour. v. 10. Luther also wresteth this example in favour of adultery, par. 2. de divortio. folio 177. Editionis Wittenber. An. 1553.

17 For the word of the queen will go forth to all women, that they will contemn their husbands, and will say: King Assuerus commanded that the queen Vasthi should come in to him, and she would not.

18 And by this example all the wives of the Princes of the Persians and the Medes, will little esteem the commandments of their husbands: wherefore the king's indignation is just. 19 If it please thee, let an edict go forth from thy face, and let it be written according to the law of the Persians and of Medes, which is not lawful to be transgressed, that Vasthi come in no more to the king, but another that is better than she, take her Kingdom. 20 And let this be published into all the empire of thy Provinces (which is most large) and let all the wives, as well of the greater as of the lesser give honour to their husbands. 21 His counsel pleased the king, and the Princes: and the king did according to the counsel of Mamuchan, 22 and he sent letters to all the Provinces of his Kingdom, as every nation could hear and read, in diverse languages and characters, that the husbands should be Princes and masters in their houses: and that this should be published through all peoples.

CHAPTER II.

Inquiry being made of the best and fairest virgins, 5. Esther the unknown niece of Mardocheus a Jew, is preferred, 18. and made queen in place of Vasthi; a marriage feast made, and presents given. 21. Mardocheus detecteth traitors, and his service is recorded in the register.

These things so done, after the indignation of king Assuerus was assuaged, he remembered Vasthi, & what she had done, or what she had suffered: 2 and the king's servants and his ministers said: Let there be maidens sought for the king, virgins and beautiful, 3 and let there be sent that may view through all Provinces beautiful maidens & virgins: and let them bring them to the city of Susan, and deliver them into the house of women under the hand of Egeus the eunuch, who is overseer of the king's women: and let them receive women's ornaments, and other things necessary to be used. 4 And which so ever among all shall please the king's eyes, let her reign for Vasthi. The word pleased the king: and so as they had suggested, he commanded to be done. 5 There was a man in the city of Susan a Jew, named Mardocheus, the son of Jair, the son of Semei, the son of Cis, of the stock of Jemini, 6 who had been transported from Jerusalem the same time that Nabuchodonosor the king of Babylon transported Jechonias the king of Juda, [1]

7 who was the foster-father of his brother's daughter Edissa, which by another name was called Esther: & she had lost both her parents: exceeding beautiful, and of comely face. And her father and mother being dead, Mardocheus adopted her for his daughter. 8 And when the king's commandment was bruited abroad, and according to his commandment many fair virgins were brought to Susan, and were delivered to Egeus the eunuch: (a) Esther also among the rest of the maidens was delivered to him, that she might be kept in the number of the women.

(a) Deut. 7. v. 3. Israelites are forbid to marry with Gentiles, yet when there was no danger to be perverted, and great hope of good, Esther by Mardocheus' counsel consented to marry King Assuerus, though otherwise she detested the bed of the incircumcised, and of every stranger. ch. 14. v. 15.
K. David also married the King's daughter of Gessur. 2. Reg. 3. v. 3.

9 Who pleased him, and found grace in his sight. And he commanded the eunuch, that he should hasten the women's ornaments, and should deliver her her parts, and seven the most beautiful maidens of the king's house, and should adorn and deck both her and her waiting maids. 10 Who would not tell him her people & country. For Mardocheus had commanded her, that of this thing she should altogether keep silence: 11 who walked daily before the entrance of the house, wherein the chosen virgins were kept, taking care of Esther's welfare, and desirous to know what should chance unto her. 12 And when the time of every virgin in order was come, that they should go in to the king, all things accomplished that pertained to women's ornaments, it was the twelfth month: yet so, that for six months they were anointed with oil of myrtle, and other six months they used certain paintings & sweet spices. 13 And going in to the king, what soever they asked that pertained to adorning, they received: and being trimmed, as it pleased them, they passed from the chamber of the women to the king's chamber. 14 And she that went in at evening, came out in the morning, and from thence she was brought to the second house, that was under the hand of Susagazus the eunuch, who was chief over the king's concubines: neither had she power to return any more to the king, unless the king had willed, and had commanded her to come by name. 15 And the time by order coming about, the day was at hand that Esther the daughter of Abihail the brother of Mardocheus, whom he had adopted for his daughter, should go in to the king. Who sought not women's ornaments, but whatsoever Egeus the eunuch the keeper of the virgins would, those things he gave her to her adorning. For she was exceeding fair, and of incredible beauty, she seemed to all men's eyes gracious and amiable. 16 She therefore was brought to the chamber of king Assuerus the tenth month, which is called Tebeth, in the seventh year of his reign. 17 And the king loved her more than all the women, and she had grace and mercy before him above all the women, and he put the crown of the Kingdom on her head, and made her reign in stead of Vasthi. 18 And he commanded a very magnifical feast to be prepared to all the Princes, and to his servants, for the conjunction and marriage of Esther. And gave rest to all the Provinces, and bestowed gifts according to princely magnificence. 19 And when virgins were sought the second time and gathered together, Mardocheus tarried at the king's gate: 20 neither had Esther as yet uttered her country, & people, according to his commandment. For whatsoever he commanded, Esther observed: & she did all things so as she was wont at that time, when he nourished her a little one. 21 At that time therefore, when Mardocheus abode at the king's gate, Bagathan & Thares were angry, two of the king's eunuchs, that were porters, & were chief in the first entry of the palace: and they would make insurrection against the king, and kill him. 22 Whereof Mardocheus (b) got notice, & immediately he told it to queen Esther: & she to the king in the name of Mardocheus, who had reported the thing unto her.

(b) Mardocheus hearing suspicious words & observing their actions, saw that they intended evil, & informed the King; whereby their treason was discovered. Rab. Calom. & Iosep.

23 It was examined and found: and they were both hanged on a gibbet. And it was put in the histories, and registered in the chronicles before the king.[1]

[1]C ch. 12. v. 1.

CHAPTER III.

Aman advanced by the king, is much offended that Mardocheus doth not adore him, 6. and therefore procureth the king's decree, to destroy the whole nation of the Jews.

After[1] these things king Assuerus advance Aman the son of Amadathi, which was of the stock of Agag: and he put his throne above all the Princes which he had.

[1]D

2 And all the king's servants, that were in the doors of his palace, bowed their knees, and adored Aman: for so the Emperor had commanded them: (a) only Mardocheus did not bow his knee, nor adore him.

(a) Aman exacted such honour as heathen people gave to their less gods, which was also idolatry: for Mardocheus was willing to give him civil honour, even to kiss the steps of his feet, but feared (and refused*) to give Godly honour to him. ch. 13. v. 13. 14. S. Tho. 2. 2. q. 84. a. 1.*

3 To whom the king's servants, that were chief at the doors of the palace, said: Why doest thou above the rest not observe the king's commandment? 4 And when they said this often, and he would not hear, they told Aman, desirous to know whether he would persevere in his sentence: for he had told them that he was a Jew. 5 Which Aman had heard, & had proved by experience that Mardocheus bowed not his knee unto him, nor adored him, he was angry exceedingly. 6 And he counted it a matter of nothing to lay his hands upon Mardocheus alone: for he had heard that he was of the nation of the Jews, and he would rather destroy all the nation of the Jews, that were in the Kingdom of Assuerus. 7 The first month (which is called Nisan) in the twelfth year of the reign of Assuerus, the lot was cast into a pot which in Hebrew is called Phur, before Aman, (b) in what day and what month the nation of the Jews should be slain: and there came forth the twelfth month, which is called Adar.

(b) Such is the preposterous fury of rancour, to appoint the day of executing his malice, before he had got the King's decree.

8 And Aman said to king Assuerus: There is a people dispersed through all the Provinces of thy kingdom, and separated one from another, using new laws and ceremonies, moreover also contemning the king's ordinances: And thou knowest very well that it is not expedient for thy kingdom that they wax insolent by liberty. 9 If it please thee, decree that they may perish, & I will pay ten thousand talents to the cofferers of the treasure. 10 The king therefore took the ring that he used, from his hand, and gave it to Aman the son of Amadathi of the progeny of Agag, the enemy of the Jews, 11 and he said to him: The silver which thou doest promise, be it thine: but concerning the people do that which pleaseth thee. 12 [1] And the king's scribes were called in the first month, Nisan, the thirteenth day of the same month: and it was written, as Aman had commanded, to all the king's lieutenants, and judges of the Provinces, and of diverse nations, as every nation could read, and hear according to the variety of languages, in the name of king Assuerus: and the letters signed with his ring,

13 were sent by the king's posts to all provinces, that they should kill and destroy all the Jews, from boy unto old man, children, and women, in one day, that is, in the thirteenth of the twelfth month, which is called Adar, and should spoil them of their goods. [1]

14 [1] And (c) the content of the letters was this, that all Provinces might know, and prepare themselves against the day aforesaid.

[1] F (c) The letter at large is in the seven first verses of the 13. ch. of which this is the sum.

15 The posts that were sent, made haste to fulfill the king's commandment. And immediately the edict hung in Susan, the king and Aman feasting, and all the Jews that were in the city weeping.

CHAPTER IV.

All the Jews lament their imminent danger. 5. Mardocheus willeth Esther to entreat the king for their safety. 11. She fearing to go to the king contrary to his law uncalled, 15. yet they all fasting and praying for her, she doth it.

Which [1] things when Mardocheus had heard, he rent his garments, and was clothed with sackcloth, sprinkling ashes on his head: and in the street of the midst of the city he cried with a loud voice, shewing the anguish of his mind,

[1] The third part.

2 and with this wailing going even to the doors of the palace: for it was not lawful for one clothed with sack-cloth to enter the king's court. 3 In all Provinces also, towns, and places, to which the king's cruel decree was come, there was (a) great mourning with the Jews, fasting, howling, and weeping, many using sack-cloth and ashes for their couch.

(a) The first & best remedy in distress is to do works of penance for sins committed. 1. Cor. 11. v. 31.

4 And Esther's maids and the eunuchs went in, & told her. Which she hearing was astonished: & she sent a garment, that the sack-cloth being taken away, they should put it on him: which he would not take. 5 And calling for Athach the eunuch, whom the king had given her for a servant to Mardocheus, commanded him to go and to learn of him, why he did this. 6 And Athach going forth went to Mardocheus standing in the street of the city before the palace door: 7 who told him all things that had chanced, how Aman had promised, that he would bring silver into the king's treasures for the slaughter of the Jews. 8 He gave him also a copy of the edict which hung in Susan, that he should shew it to the queen, and should admonish her to enter in to the king, and to entreat him for her people. 9 Athach returning told Esther all things, that Mardocheus had said. 10 Who answered him, and bade that he should say to Mardocheus: 11 All the king's servants, and all the Provinces that are under his dominion, know, that whether man, or woman, not called, shall enter in to the king's inner court, he must immediately be slain without all delay: unless perhaps the king stretch forth a golden rod unto him, for a sign of clemency, and so he may live. I therefore^ how can I enter in to the king, which now these thirty days have not been called unto him? 12 Which when Mardocheus had heard, 13 he sent word to Esther again, saying: Think not that thou mayst deliver thy own life only, because thou art in the king's house, above all the Jews: 14 for if thou wilt now hold thy peace, (b) the Jews shall be delivered by another occasion: and thou, and thy father's house shall perish. And who knoweth whether thou camest to the Kingdom therefore, that in such a time thou mightest be ready?

(b) Great confidence in God's help when man's help faileth: & indeed this means by moving the King's heart to grant Esther's petition was God's special work.

15 And again Esther sent to Mardocheus in these words: 16 Go, and gather together all the Jews, whom thou shalt find in Susan, and pray ye for me. Eat ye not, and drink not in three days, and three nights: and I with my handmaids in like manner will fast, and then will I go in to the king, doing against the law, not called, and delivering myself to death and to peril. 17 Mardocheus therefore went, and did all things that Esther had commanded him. CHAPTER V.

Esther standing in the king's sight he calleth her, 4. she requesteth that he and Aman will dine with her. 7. Again she inviteth them. 9. Aman is more incensed against Mardocheus, prepareth high gallows to hang him on.

And [1] the third day Esther put on royal garments, and stood in the court of the king's house, which was the inner against the king's hall: but he sat upon his throne in the consistory of the palace, against the door of the house. [2]

[1]H [2]I ch. 15. v. 4.

2 And when he had seen Esther the queen standing, she pleased his eyes, and he put forth toward her the golden rod, which he held in his hand: who going near, kissed the top of his rod. [1]

[1]K

3 And the king said to her: What wilt thou queen Esther? What is thy request? Yea if thou wilt ask the half part of the kingdom, it shall be given thee. 4 But she answered: If it please the king, I beseech thee that thou come to me this day, and Aman with thee to a banquet, which I have prepared. 5 And the king forthwith, Call ye Aman, quoth he, quickly, that he may obey Esther's will. The king therefore and Aman came to the banquet, which the queen had prepared for them. 6 And the king said to her, after that he had drunk wine aboundantly. What doest thou desire to be given thee? And for what thing askest thou? Although thou ask the half part of my Kingdom, thou shalt obtain. 7 To whom Esther answered: (a) My petition & requests are these:

(a) This prudence in delaying to propose her petition, increased the King's desire to know it, moved him to promise more assuredly, & so bound him the more to accomplish it.

8 If I have found grace in the king's sight, and if it please the king to give that which I ask, and to fulfill my petition: let the king and Aman come to the banquet which I have prepared them, and tomorrow I will open my will to the king. 9 Aman therefore went forth that day joyful and merry. And when he had seen Mardocheus sitting before the doors of the palace, and not only not to have risen up to him, but not so much as to have moved from the place where he sat, he was wrath exceedingly: 10 and dissembling his anger, and returning into his house, he called together unto him his friends, and Zares his wife: 11 and he declared to them the greatness of his riches, and the multitude of his children, and with how great glory the king had advanced him above all his princes and servants. 12 And after these things he said: Queen Esther also hath called none other to the banquet with the king, but me: with whom tomorrow also I shall dine with the king. 13 And whereas I have all these things, I think I have nothing, so long as I shall see Mardocheus the Jew sitting before the king's doors. 14 And Zares his wife, and the rest of his friends answered him: Command a great beam to be prepared, having fifty cubits in height, and speak in the morning to the king, that Mardocheus may be hanged upon it, and so thou shalt go joyful with the king to the banquet. The counsel pleased him, and he commanded an high gallows to be prepared.

CHAPTER VI.

The king hearing the good service of Mardocheus in detecting traitors, read in the chronicle (for which he had yet no reward) 4. commandeth Aman to honour him next to the king, 11. which he performeth.

That night the king (a) passed without sleep, and he commanded the histories and chronicles of former times to be brought him. Which when they were read in his presence,

(a) God's eye which never sleepeth, saw what Aman intended: and for execution of his own divine justice, used this means, by subtracting sleep that time from the King, & inspiring his mind to hear the histories read, and to reward good service, done. Ioseph.

2 they came to that place where it was written, how Mardocheus had uttered the treason of Bagathan and Thares the eunuchs, coveting to kill king Assuerus. 3 Which when the king had heard, he said: What honour and reward hath Mardocheus received for this fidelity? His servants & ministers said to him: He hath received no reward at all. 4 And the king by and by, Who is, quoth he, in the court? For Aman had entered the inner court of the king's house, that he might suggest to the king, and he might command Mardocheus to be hanged fast on the gibbet, which was prepared for him. 5 The servants answered: Aman standeth in the court. And the king said: Let him come in. 6 And when he was come in, he said to him: What ought to be done to the man, whom the king is desirous to honour? But Aman (b) thinking in his heart, and supposing that the king would honour no other but himself,

(b) Ambitious men are most blind in conceit of their own deserts, and fortunes.

7 answered: The man, whom the king desireth to honour, 8 ought to be clothed with the king's garments, and to be set upon the horse that is for the king's saddle, and to take the king's crown upon his head, 9 and let the chief of the king's Princes and nobles hold his horse and going through the street of the city, cry and say: So shall he be honoured, whomsoever the king will honour. 10 And the king said to him: Make haste, and taking a robe and a horse, do that thou hast spoken, to Mardocheus the Jew, which sitteth before the doors of the palace: Beware thou pretermit nothing of those things, which thou hast spoken. 11 Aman therefore took a robe and a horse, and putting it on Mardocheus, & setting him on the horse, in the street of the city went before him, and cried: This honour is he worthy of, whomsoever the king is willing to honour. 12 And Mardocheus returned to the palace gate: & Aman made haste to go into his house, mourning and his head covered: 13 and he told Zares his wife and his friends all things that had chanced him. To whom the wise men whom he had in counsel, and his wife answered: (c) If Mardocheus be of the Jews' seed, before whom thou hast begun to fall, thou canst not resist him, but thou shalt fall in his sight.

(c) Either they had read God's promise to the Jews Gen. 13. 15. &c. or conjectured this by human Prudence.

14 As they were yet speaking, the king's eunuchs came, and compelled him to go quickly to the banquet which the queen had prepared.

CHAPTER VII.

Esther entertaining the king and Aman again at a feast, is promised to obtain whatsoever she will ask. 3. She demandeth safety for herself, and all the people, against Aman's cruelty, 6. and Aman is hanged on the gallows, which he had prepared for Mardocheus.

The king therefore and Aman went in, to drink with the queen. 2 And the king said to her also the second day, after he was warm with wine: What is thy petition Esther, that it may be given thee? And what wilt thou^ have done? Although thou shalt ask the half part of my Kingdom, thou shalt obtain. 3 To whom she answered: (a) If I have found grace in thine eyes o king, and if it please thee, give me my life for the which I make request, and my people for the which I beseech.

(a) After three days fast of all the Jews with prayers and other works of penance, Esther asked & obtained the safety of the whole people, more precious to her than half of the Kingdom.

4 For we are delivered I and my people, to be destroyed, murdered, and to perish. And would to God we were sold for bondmen & bond-women: it were a tolerable evil, and mourning I would hold my peace: but now it is our enemy, whose cruelty redoundeth upon the king. 5 And king Assuerus answering, said: Who is this, and of what might, that he dare do these things? 6 And Esther said: It is this Aman our adversary and most wicked enemy. Which he hearing (b) forthwith was astonished, not enduring to bear the countenance of the king and of the queen.

(b) Horror of a guilty conscience is commonly the first torment of a sinner.
S. Chrissocons. 4. de Lagaro.

7 But the king being wrath rose up, and from the place of the banquet went into the garden set with trees. Aman also rose up, to entreat Esther the queen for his life, for he understood that there was evil prepared him of the king. 8 Who when he was returned out of the garden set with trees, and had entered into the place of the banquet, he found Aman to have fallen upon the bed, wherein Esther lay, and he said: The queen also he will force in my presence, in my house. Neither was the word yet passed from the king's mouth, and immediately they covered his face. 9 And Harbona, (c) one of the eunuchs which stood waiting of the king, said: Behold the gibbet, which he had prepared for Mardocheus, that spake for the king, standeth in Aman's house, having in height fifty cubits.

(c) What little trust in false friendship, when bad men once fall into disgrace.

10 To whom the king said: Hang him upon it. Aman therefore was hanged on the gibbet, which he had prepared for Mardocheus: and the king's wrath ceased.

CHAPTER VIII.

Esther informeth the king that Mardocheus is her uncle, he is advanced in authority, 3. and contrary letters are sent that the Jews be saved, 11. and their enemies slain,

15. Mardocheus is in high honour, and his whole nation is esteemed and feared by other people.

That day king Assuerus gave unto Esther the queen the house of Aman the Jews' adversary, and Mardocheus went in before the king's presence. For Esther confessed to him that he was her uncle. 2 And the king took the ring, which he had commanded to be taken again from Aman, and delivered it to Mardocheus. And Esther appointed Mardocheus also over her house. 3 Neither content with these things, she (a) fell down at the king's feet, and she wept and speaking to him prayed him, that he would command that the malice of Aman the Agagite, and his most wicked devices, which he had invented against the Jews, should be of none effect.

(a) Such honour is due to Kings, yea though they be Infidels, because they have terrestrial majesty and authority from God. And the contrary opinion and behaviour of heretics, which despise Dominion and blaspheme Majesty, is condemned by S. Jude, in his Epistle. v. 8.

CHAPTER IX.

The Jews kill their enemies which would have killed them, 6. namely the ten sons of Aman are hanged on gallows, 13. more slain the next day. 17. The day following is made holy, and so to be kept every year.

Therefore[1] in the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, which we have said now before to be called Adar, when slaughter was prepared for all the Jews, and their enemies gaped after their blood, the case being changed to the contrary, the Jews began to be superiors, and (a) to revenge themselves of their adversaries.

[1]M(a) Where no more danger remaineth, remission of injuries is more commendable than revenge, but where malice continueth, & new danger may probably ensue, justice is necessary, and afterwards peace may be made more securely. S. Bern. ser. 2. de verb. Apost.

2 And they were gathered together in every city, and town, & place, to extend their hand against their enemies and their persecutors. And none durst resist, because the fear of their greatness did penetrate all peoples. 3 For both the judges of the Provinces, and captains, and lieutenants, and every dignity that was chief over every place and work, extolled the Jews for fear of Mardocheus: 4 Whom they knew to be Prince of the palace, and to be able to do very much: the fame also of his name increased daily, and flew abroad through all men's mouths. 5 Therefore the Jews struck their enemies with a great slaughter, and slew them, repaying them that which they had prepared to do to them: 6 in so much that in Susan also they killed five hundred men, besides the ten sons of Aman the Agagite the enemy of the Jews: whose names be these: 7 Pharsandatha, and Delphon, and Esphatha, 8 and Phoratha, and Adalia, & Aridatha, 9 and Phermesta, and Arisai, and Aridai, and Iezatha. 10 Whom when they had slain, they would not take preys of their goods. 11 And by and by the number of them that were killed in Susan, was brought to the king. 12 Who said to the queen: In the city of Susan the Jews have killed five hundred men, besides the (b) ten sons of Aman: how great a slaughter thinkest thou do they make in all the Provinces? What askest thou more, and what wilt thou that I command to be done?

(b) In the first slaughter Aman's ten sons were slain, & afterwards also hanged. v. 14.

13 To whom she answered: If it please the king, let there authority be given to the Jews, that as they have done today in Susan, so also they may do tomorrow, and that the ten sons of Aman be hanged on gibbets. 14 And the king commanded that it should be so done. And forthwith the edict hung in Susan, and the ten sons of Aman were hanged. 15 The fourteenth day of the month Adar, the Jews being gathered together, there were killed in Susan three hundred men: neither was their substance spoiled by them. 16 Yea and through all Provinces, which were subject to the king's dominion, the Jews stood for their lives, their enemies and persecutors being slain: in so much that there was fully seventy five thousand of them that were killed, and no man took any of their goods. 17 And the thirteenth day of the month Adar was the first day with them all^ of the slaughter, & the fourteenth day they ceased to kill. Which they ordained to be solemn, so that in it at all times afterward they gave themselves to good cheer, mirth and banquets.[1]

[1]The fourth part.
Other things following their delivery from danger.

18 But they that made the slaughter in the city of Susan, were occupied in the slaughter the thirteenth and fourteenth day of the same month: and in the fifteenth day they ceased to kill. And therefore they ordained the same a solemn day of good cheer and joyfulness. 19 But those Jews, that abode in towns not walled and villages, ordained the fourteenth day of the month Adar for banquets and joy, so that they rejoice in it, and send one another portions of banquets and meats. 20 Mardocheus therefore wrote all these things, and being comprised in letters sent them to the Jews, that abode in all the king's Provinces, as well those that lay near, as far off, 21 that they should take (c) the fourteenth and fifteenth day of the month Adar for feasts, and the year always returning should celebrate them with solemn honour:

(c) The Jews in Susan kept the fifteenth day holy v. 18. those that dwelt in other places kept the fourteenth day.

22 because in the same days the Jews revenged themselves of their enemies, and mourning and sorrow were turned into mirth and joy, and that these should be days of good cheer and gladness, and they should send one to another portions of meats, and should give gifts to the poor. 23 And the Jews received into a solemn rite all things, which they had begun to do at that time, and which Mardocheus by letters had commanded to be done. 24 For Aman, the son of Amadathi of the stock of Agag, the enemy & adversary of the Jews, purposed evil against them, to kill them and destroy them: & he cast Phur, which in our language is turned, a lot. 25 And afterward Esther went in to the king, beseeching that his endeavours might by the king's letters be made void: & the evil that he had intended against the Jews, might return upon his own head. Finally, they hung both him and his sons upon the gallows, 26 and since that time these days are called Phurim, that is, of Lots: because Phur, that is, a lot, was cast into the pot. And all things that were done, are contained in the volume of this epistle, that is, of this Book: 27 and the things that they sustained, and that were afterward changed, the Jews (d) took upon themselves and their seed, & upon all that would be joined to their religion, that it should be lawful for none to pass without solemnity these days: which the writing testifieth, and certain times require; as years continually succeed one another.

(d) A feast instituted by Mardocheus was accepted & observed by all the Jews, as a constitution agreeable and not contrary to the law Deut. 4. v. 2. & 12. v. 32.

28 These are days, which no oblivion shall ever put out: and all Provinces in all the world shall celebrate throughout all generations: neither is there any city, wherein the days of Phurim, that is, of lots, must not be observed of the Jews, and of their progeny, which is bound to these ceremonies. 29 And Esther the queen the daughter of Abihail, & Mardocheus the Jew wrote also the second epistle, that with all diligence this day should be established solemn for the time to come. 30 and they sent to all the Jews, that were in the hundred and seven and twenty Provinces of king Assuerus, that they should have peace, and receive truth, 31 observing the Days of lots, and in their time should celebrate them with joy: as Mardocheus and Esther had appointed, and they took upon them to be observed of themselves, and of their seed, fasts, and cries, and the days of lots, 32 and all things, which are contained in the history of this Book, which is called Esther.

ANNOTATIONS.
CHAP. IX.

1. The case being changed.] In this whole history (as in many other passages of holy Scripture) [1] [2] we see the marvelous change of the right hand of the Highest. First, in the very instant of extreme danger, the King's face with burning eyes shewing the fury of his breast, ch. 15. v. 10. was turned into mildness towards Esther, v. 11. Secondly, proud Aman being advanced in honour & office, above all Princes of the King's court, ch. 3. v. 1. was suddenly forced publicly to lead Mardocheus his horse, whom he most hated, ch. 6. v. 10. Thirdly, he was constrained with loud voice to proclaim his honour, whom he most despised and threatened. Fourthly, the same Aman, before called the father (as it were the only governor) of the king, ch. 13. v. 6. ch. 16. v. 11. was forthwith condemned for a traitor. ch. 7. v. 8. ch. 16. v. 18. Fifthly, He that could not abide to see Mardocheus, ch. 5. v. 13. afterward durst not look upon the king, nor could endure his countenance. ch. 7. v. 6. Sixthly, He was hanged on the same gallows, which he had prepared for Mardocheus, ch. 7. v. 9. Seventhly, Whereas he was not content with the death of Mardocheus alone, but procured the king's decree to destroy the whole nation. ch. 3. v. 6. and so feasted with the king, when the Jews mourned, v. 15. shortly after the king sent new letters for the Jews' safety, giving them leave to kill whomsoever they would of their enemies. ch. 8. v. 8. 11. Eighthly, the same day which was designed for destruction, was made the day of joy and exultation to the children of God, ch. 9. v. 1. 17. ch. 16. v. 21. &c. By which literal sense God's marvelous providence is manifestly shewed, never suffering his Church to perish. It hath moreover two special mystical senses. First, as safety of temporal life was procured to one nation by Esther's intercession to King Assuerus, so general salvation is procured to all mankind by mediation of the Blessed Virgin Mary, [3][4] crushing the serpent's head; and the sentence of death is changed by new letters, granting everlasting life, and glory to all God's true servants. Esther also, as likewise Judith, [5] in figure of the Church (saith S. Jerom, Prologo in Sophon.) killed the adversaries, and delivered Israel from danger of perishing.

CHAPTER XI.

An Appendix and conclusion of this history. 2. The dream of Mardocheus.

In [1] the fourth year when Ptolomee and Cleopatra reigned, Dositheus, which named himself a Priest, and of the Levitical kindred, and Ptolomee his son brought this epistle of Phurim, which they said Lysimachus the son of Ptolomee did interpret in Jerusalem.

[1] The first part.
The presage, & occasion of Esther's advancement and Aman's persecuting the Jews.

This beginning was in the common edition, which is neither extant in Hebrew, nor with any of [2] the interpreters.

[2] Except the 72.

2 [1] In the second year, when Artaxerxes the greatest reigned, in the first day of the month Nisan, Mardocheus the son of Jairi, the son of Semei, the son of Cis, of the tribe of Benjamin,

[1] A

3 a Jew which dwelt in the city of Susan, a great man and among the first of the king's court, (a) saw a dream.

(a) Mardocheus had this dream before Aman's advancement, of his own and the people's danger.

4 [1] And he was of that number of captives, whom Nabuchodonosor the king of Babylon had transported from Jerusalem with Jechonias the king of Juda:

[1] 4. Reg. 24.

5 and this was his dream: There appeared voices, and tumults, and thunders, and earth-quakes, and perturbation upon the earth. 6 and behold (b) two great dragons, prepared one against another into battle.

(b) Mardocheus was a good dragon, and Aman a bad one.

7 At whose cry all nations were raised up to fight against the nation of the just. 8 And that was a day of darkness and danger, of tribulation and distress, and great fear upon the earth. 9 And the nation of the just fearing their evils, was troubled, and prepared to death. 10 And they cried to God: and they crying, (c) a little fountain grew into a very great river, and abounded into very many waters.

(c) Esther by her fountain of tears and humble supplication, quenched a great flame of Gentiles against the Jews. ch. 10.

11 Light and the sun arose, & the humble were exalted, & they devoured the glorious. 12 Which when Mardocheus had seen, and risen out of his bed, he mused what God would do: and he had it fixed in his mind, desirous to know what the dream should signify. [1]

CHAPTER XII.

The conspiracy of two eunuchs detected by Mardocheus, is repeated, 6. and Aman's malice against him for the same.

And [1] he abode that time in the king's court with Bagatha and Thara the king's eunuchs, which were porters of the palace.

[1] C

2 And when he understood their cogitations, and had throughly seen their cares, he learned that they went about to lay hands on king Artaxerxes, and he told the king thereof. 3 Who having them both in examination, when they had confessed he commanded them to be led to death. 4 But the king wrote that which was done, in the commentaries: and Mardocheus also committed the memory of the thing to writing. 5 And the king commanded him, that he should abide in the court of the palace, giving him gifts for the delation. 6 But Aman the son of Amadathi the Bugeite was most glorious before the king, and would hurt Mardocheus, and his people, (a) for the two eunuchs of the king, which were put to death. [1]

(a) Here it appeareth that Aman was a favourer of traitors or perhaps of the same conspiracy. [1] D ch. 3. v. 1.

Hitherto the proem. That which followeth was set in that place, where it is written in the volume: [2] And should spoil their goods. Which we found in the common edition only.

2 Whereas I reigned over many nations, and had subdued all the world to my dominion, I would not abuse the greatness of my might, but with clemency & lenity govern my subjects, that passing their life quietly without any terror, they might enjoy peace wished of all men. 3 But when I demanded of my counsellers how this might be accomplished, (a) one that excelled the rest in wisdom & fidelity, & was second after the king, Aman by name,

(a) Great hurt to a King, that is ruled much by one counseller. Salomon teacheth, that Where are many counsellers, cogitations are confirmed. Prov. 15. v. 22.

4 told me that there was a people dispersed through the whole world, which used new laws, and doing against the customs of all Nations, contemned the commandments of kings, and brake the concord of all nations by their dissension. 5 Which when we had learned, seeing one nation rebellious against all kind of men to use perverse laws, & to go against our commandments, and to disturb the peace and concord of the Provinces subject to us, 6 we have commanded that whomsoever Aman shall shew, who is chief over all the Provinces, and second after the king, and whom we honour in stead of a father, they with their wives and children be destroyed of their enemies, and that none have pity on them the fourteenth day of the twelfth month Adar of this present year: 7 that the wicked men going down to hell in one day, may restore the peace to our empire, which they had disturbed. 9 [1] and said: Lord Lord King omnipotent, for in thy dominion are all things set, and there is none that can resist thy will, if thou determine to save Israel.

[1] The Epistle on Wednesday in the 2. week of Lent. And in a votive Mass against Pagans.

10 Thou madest heaven and earth, and whatsoever is contained in the compass of heaven. 11 Thou art Lord of all, neither is there that can resist thy majesty. 12 Thou understandest all things, and knowest that I have not done this for pride and contumely, and any desire of glory, that I adored not the proud Aman, 13 (for gladly would I be ready for the salvation of Israel to kiss even the steps of his feet,) 14 but I feared lest I should transfer the honour of my God to a man, and lest I should adore any except my God. 15 And now o Lord King, the God of Abraham have mercy upon thy people, because our enemies will destroy us, and extinguish thine inheritance. 16 Despise not thy portion, which thou hast redeemed to thyself out of Aegypt. 17 Hear my prayer, and be propitious to thy lot and cord, and turn our mourning into joy, that living we may praise thy name o Lord, and do not shut the mouths of them that sing to thee. 18 All Israel also with like mind and supplication cried to our Lord, because certain death did hang over them.

CHAPTER XIV.

Esther prayeth in humility of spirit, that God will deliver the people from the cruelty of Aman.

Esther also the queen fled to our Lord, fearing the peril that was at hand. 2 And when she had laid off her royal garments, she took cloths meet for weeping and mourning, & for diverse ointments, filled her head with ashes & dung, & her body she humbled with fasts: and all the places, in which before she was accustomed to rejoice, she filled with tearing of her hairs. 3 And she besought our Lord the God of Israel, saying: My Lord, which only art our King, help me solitary woman, and which have no other helper beside thee. 4 My peril is in my hands. 5 I have heard of my father that thou Lord didst take Israel out from all Gentiles, and our fathers out of all their predecessors before, that thou mightest possess an everlasting inheritance, and thou hast done to them as thou hast spoken. 6 We have sinned in thy sight, and therefore thou hast delivered us into the hands of our enemies: 7 for we have worshipped their gods. Thou art just o Lord. 8 And now it sufficeth them not, that they oppress us with most hard servitude, but imputing the force of their hands to the might of their idols, 9 they will change thy promises, and destroy thine inheritance, and shut the mouths of them that praise thee, and extinguish the glory of thy temple and altar, 10 that they may open the mouths of Gentiles, and praise the strength of idols, and magnify a carnal king for ever. 11 [1]Deliver not o Lord thy sceptre to them (a)that are not, lest they laugh at our ruin: but turn their counsel upon them, & destroy him, that hath begun to do cruelly against us.

[1]The Church useth this prayer in the offertory the 22. Sunday after Pentecost: as a parcel of holy Scripture. (a) Idols are nothing in the world. 1. Cor. 8. but bare imaginations of men.

12 Remember o Lord: and shew thyself to us in the time of our tribulation, and give me confidence Lord King of gods, and of all power: 13 give me speech well framed in my mouth, in the presence of the lion, and turn his heart into the hatred of our enemy, that both himself may perish, and the rest that consent unto him. 14 But deliver us in thy hand, and help me, having no other help but thee o Lord, which hast the knowledge of all things, 15 and knowest that I hate the glory of the wicked, and (b)detest the bed of the uncircumcised, and of every stranger.

(b) Of herself, nor for worldly glory she desired not to marry a heathen king but for the common good she married him, God dispensing with the law in this behalf. See ch. 2.

16 Thou knowest my necessity, that I abhor the sign of my pride & glory, which is upon my head in the days of my ostentation, and detest it as the cloth of a woman in her monthly flowers, and wear it not in the days of my silence, 17 and that I have not eaten at Aman's table, neither the king's banquet hath pleased me, and that I have not drunk the wine of libaments: 18 & that thy handmaid did never rejoice, since I was transported hither unto this day, but in thee o Lord the God of Abraham. 19 O God strong above all, hear the voice of them, that have no other hope, and deliver us from the hand of the wicked, and deliver me from my fear.

CHAPTER XV.

Mardocheus causeth Esther to go to the king and entreat for the people. 10. She is terrified by his countenance, but God turneth his heart, and he calleth her courteously to him.

And [1] he commanded her (no doubt but Mardocheus commanded Esther) that she should go unto the king, & make petition for her people and for her country.

This also I found added in the common edition.

[1] G

2 Remember (quoth he,) the days of thy humility, how thou wast brought up in my hand, because Aman the second after the king hath spoken against us unto death: 3 & do thou invocate our Lord, and speak to the king for us, and deliver us from death. [1]

[1]* H ch. 13. v. 8.

Moreover this also which followeth I found in the common Greek.

4 [1] And in the third day she laid away (a) the garments which she wore, and was clothed in her glory.

[1] I (a) Vestimenta oratus, not ornatus, her praying weed.

5 And when she glistered in royal apparel, and had invocated God the ruler and saviour of all, she took two waiting maids, 6 and upon the one indeed she leaned, as it were for delicateness & very much tenderness not able to bear up her body: 7 but the other of the maids followed her lady, bearing up her garments trailing on the ground. 8 But herself in all her countenance of colour like the rose, also with gracious and shining eyes (b) hid her mind full of sorrow, & exceeding fear.

(b) A notable example for Noble women; how to keep their state, and remain nevertheless humble in heart.

9 She therefore entering through all the doors in order, stood before the king, where he sat upon the throne of his kingdom, clothed with royal garments, & glittering in gold, and precious stones, and he was terrible to behold. 10 And when he had lifted up his face, and with burning eyes had shewed the fury of his breast, the queen fell down, & her colour being changed into paleness, she rested her weary head upon her handmaid. 11 And God turned the king's spirit into mildness, & in haste & fearing he lept out of the throne, & holding her up in his arms, till she came to herself, spake her fair with these words: 12 What aileth thee Esther? I am thy brother, fear not. 13 Thou shalt not die: for this law is not made for thee, but for the common sort. 14 Come near therefore, and touch the sceptre. 15 And when she held her peace, he took the golden rod, & put it upon her neck, & kissed her, & said: Why speakest thou not to me? 16 Who answered: I saw thee, my lord, (c) as an angel of God, and my heart was troubled for the fear of thy glory.

(c) By this comparison of Angels she meant that the King excelled all or most part of men.

17 For thou, my lord, art exceeding marvelous, and thy face is full of graces. 18 And when she spake, she fell down again, and was almost in a swoon. 19 But the king was troubled, and all his servants did comfort her. [1]

CHAPTER XVI.

A copy of king Artaxerxes' letters, which he sent for the safety of the Jews, 10. declaring the insolency of Aman, and dutiful service of Mardocheus and Esther, 20. commanding all his Princes to assist the Jews, and with them to celebrate the day which is changed from sorrow to joy.

The [1] great king Artaxerxes, from India to Aethiopia, to the dukes and Princes of an hundred twenty seven Provinces, which obey our commandment, sendeth greeting.

The copy of King Artaxerxes' letter, which he sent for the Jews to all the provinces of his kingdom: the which also is not found in the Hebrew volume.

[1] L

2 Many have abused unto pride the goodness of Princes, and the honour, that hath been bestowed upon them: 3 and they do not only endeavour to oppress the king's subjects, but not bearing the glory that is given them, they work treason against them that gave it. 4 Neither are they content not to give thanks for the benefits, and to violate in themselves the laws of humanity, but they think they can escape the sentence of God also who seeth all things. 5 And they have burst forth into so great madness, that such as observe diligently the offices committed unto them, and do all things so that they are worthy of all men's praise, them they endeavour to overthrow by subtile means of lies, 6 whilst with crafty fraud they deceive the simple ears of Princes, and esteeming others by their own nature. 7 Which thing is proved both out of old histories, and by these things, which are done daily, how (a) the enterprises of kings are depraved by the evil suggestions of certain men.

8 Wherefore we must provide for the peace of all Provinces. 9 Neither must you think, if we command diverse things, that it cometh of the lightness of our mind, but that we give sentence according to the quality and necessity of times, as the profit of the common wealth requireth. 10 And that you may more plainly understand, that which we say, Aman the son of Amadathi, both in mind & country a Macedonian, & an alien from the Persians' blood, and with his cruelty staining our piety, was received of us a stranger:

12 who was puft up with so great swelling of arrogancy, that he went about to deprive us of Kingdom and life. 13 For by certain new devices and not heard of before he hath sought to kill Mardocheus, by whose fidelity and benefits we live, and Esther the fellow of our Kingdom with all their nation:
14 thinking this that they being slain, he might work treason to our solitariness, and might transfer the Kingdom of the Persians to the Macedonians. 15 But we have found the Jews, which were by that most wicked of men appointed to be slain, in no fault at all, but contrary wise using just laws, 16 and the children of the highest and the greatest, and always loving God, by whose benefit the Kingdom was given both to our fathers and to us, and is kept unto this day.
17 Wherefore know ye those letters, which he directed in our name, to be of none effect. 18 For the which heinous fact, before the gates of this city, that is of Susan, both himself that devised it, and all his kindred hang on gibbets: not we, but God repaying him that which he hath deserved. 19 But this edict, which we now send, let it be set forth in all cities, that it be lawful for the Jews to use their own laws.
20 Whom you must help, that those which had prepared themselves to their slaughter, they may kill, the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, which is called Adar. 21 For God omnipotent hath turned this day of sadness and mourning into joy to them.
22 Wherefore (c) count you also this day among other festival days, and celebrate it with all joy, that hereafter also it may be known,

(c) As Mardocheus suggested, the King confirmed the observation of a feast in memory of God's benefit, and so both Jews & Gentiles kept it.

23 that all, which faithfully obey the Persians, receive worthy reward for their fidelity: and they that lie in wait against their Kingdom, perish for their wicked fact. 24 And every Province and city, that will not be partaker of this solemnity, let it perish by sword and fire, and let it so be destroyed, that not only men, but also beasts have no access thereto for ever, for an example of contempt, and disobedience. [2] Job of the race of Esau.

[3] Why God suffered him to be so afflicted.

The contents according to the history.

Holy Job, otherwise called Iobab (Gen. 36.) as [1] S. Augustin, S. Chrysostom, S. Ambrose, S. Gregory, and other fathers teach, the son of Zara, the son of Rahuel, the son of Esau,[2] was King (or absolute Prince) of the land of Hus. Who being perfect in religion, sincere in life, rich in wealth, and blessed with children, for an admirable example of patience,[3] and to shew that a mortal man through God's grace, may resist all the devil's tentations, by God's permission, suddenly lost all his goods and children, was striken with horrible sores in all his body, reviled by his wife, and instead of comfort which his special friends pretended towards him, was injuriously charged by them, with impatience, arrogance, blasphemy, and other crimes, for which they falsely supposed he was so afflicted, affirming, and by diverse sophistical arguments, grounded as they pretended upon God's justice, wisdom, power, mercy, and goodness, would prove that God suffereth none but wicked men to be so afflicted. But Job constantly defendeth his own just innocency, and that worldly calamities, and prosperity happen indifferently to good and bad in this life, and that the true reward of the just, & punishment of the wicked, is to be expected in the other world. At last God, with due reprehension of Job for some imperfections, sharply rebuketh the errors and insolency of his adverse friends, giveth sentence on Job's side, pardoneth them at his intercession, and restoreth all things to him double to that he had before.

[3] Moral documents in this book.

[4] True logic & Philosophy.

[5] Hard and easy things to be understood are both profitable.

Besides the literal sense, Job in all his actions, sufferings, and whole life, was a special figure of Christ,[1] shewing (saith S. Gregory)[2] by those things which he did and sustained, what our Redeemer should do and suffer yea more particularly than most part of the Patriarchs, which S. Jerome (epist. ad Paulin.) also admireth and testifieth, saying: what mysteries of Christ doth not this book comprehend? Every word is full of sense. Moreover this history is replenished with moral documents,[3] how to embrace virtue, and eschew vice: proposing the life of a right godly man, neither insolent in prosperity, not despairing in adversity, always resolute in God's service, as well in his prosperous kingdom as in the miserable dunghill. Here also we have the true manner of arguing, according to the rules of Logic,[4] with detection of sophistry, Job proving and disproving assertions by proposition, assumption, and conclusion, as S. Jerome observeth, with profound knowledge of natural things and causes, and appeareth in very many place. All which variety and abundance of matter, comprised in small room, make many things hard and obscure,[5] yet are the same so tempered with other things plain and easy, that here is verified S. Augustin's observation (li. 2. c. 6. doct. Christ) certain places of holy Scriptures serve as delectable meat to them that hunger and thirst divine knowledge, and the obscure take away tediousness from them, that loathe usual plain doctrine.

◦Written by Job himself most part in verse.

It is most probable that Job himself,◦ inspired by the Holy Ghost, by whose grace he excelled all in right simplicity (c. 1.) writ his own history; the most part in verse, only the two first chapters and the last in prose, in the Arabian tongue; which Moyses translated into Hebrew, for the consolation of Israelites afflicted in Aegypt.

◦Divided into three parts.

And it may be divided into three general parts.◦ First the change of Job's state from prosperity into affliction, with his lamentation for the same, are recorded in the three first chapters. In four and thirty chapters following are sundry disputations, conflicts, and discourses between him and his friends, touching the cause of his so vehement affliction. In the five last chapters God discusseth the quarrel, giveth sentence for Job against his adversaries, pardoneth them, and rewardeth him.

THE BOOK OF JOB.

CHAPTER I.

Holy Job offereth sacrifice for every one of his children, 6. whose good estate Satan envying, by God's permission spoileth him of all his goods, and children, 20. for which he being pensive offendeth not, but thanketh God for all. [1]

[1] This book is read the two first weeks of September.

There [1] was a man in the Land of Hus, named Job, and that man was simple, and right, and fearing God, and departing from evil.

[1] The first part.
The change of Job's prosperous state into affliction.

2 And there were born to him seven sons and three daughters. 3 And his possession was seven thousand sheep, & three thousand camels, also five hundred yoke of oxen, and five hundred she-asses, and a family exceeding great: and that man was great among all them of the East. 4 And his sons went, and made a feast by houses, every one in his day. And sending they called their three sisters to eat & drink with them. 5 And when the days of feasting had passed about in course, Job sent to them, and sanctified them: and rising up early offered holocausts for every one. For he said: Lest perhaps my sons have sinned, and have blessed God in their hearts. So did Job all the days. 6 But on a certain day when the sons of God were come to assist before our Lord, (a) Satan also was present among them.

(a) Devils appear not in God's sight, but sometime in presence of Angels which represent God. S. Athan. q. 8. ad Antiochum.

7 To whom our Lord said: From whence comest thou? Who answering, said: I have gone round about the earth, & walked through it. 8 And our Lord said to him: Hast thou considered my servant Job, that there is not the like to him in the earth, a man simple, and right, and fearing God, and departing from evil? 9 To whom Satan answering, said: Why, doth Job fear God in vain? 10 hast not thou fenced him, and his house, and all his substance round about, blessed the works of his hands, and his possession hath increased on the earth? 11 But stretch forth thy hand a little, and touch all things that he possesseth, unless he bless thee in the face. 12 Our Lord therefore said to Satan: (b) behold, all things that he hath, are in thy hand, only upon him extend not thy hand. And Satan went forth from the face of our Lord.

(b) God doth not directly send evils, but permitteth them to happen to his servants.

13 And when upon a certain day his sons and daughters did eat, and drink wine in the house of their eldest brother, 14 there came a messenger to Job, which said: The oxen ploughed, and the she-asses fed beside them, 15 and the Sabeians came in violently, and have taken all things, and have strucken the servants with the sword, and I only have escaped to tell thee. 16 And when he yet spake, another came, and said: The fire of God fell from heaven, and striking the sheep and the servants hath consumed them, and I only have escaped to tell thee. 17 But whilst he also was yet speaking, there came another and said: The Chaldees made three troops, and have invaded the camels, and taken them, moreover the servants also they have strucken with the sword, and I alone am fled to tell thee. 18 He yet spake, and behold another came in, and said: Thy sons and daughters eating and drinking wine in the house of their eldest brother, 19 suddenly a vehement wind came violently from the country of the desert, and shook the four corners of the house, which falling oppressed thy children and they are dead, and I alone have escaped to tell thee. 20 Then Job rose up, and rent his garments, & with polled head falling on the ground, adored, 21 and said: (c) Naked came I out of my mother's womb, and naked shall I return thither: Our Lord gave, and our Lord hath taken away: as it hath pleased our Lord, so is it done: the name of our Lord be blessed.

(c) By this holy example ancient fathers condemn the senseless Stoics, who are never moved. S. Aug. li. 1. c. 9. civit. S. Paul also reproveth men without affection. Rom. 1. v. 31.

22 In all these things Job sinned not with his lips, neither spake he any foolish thing against God.

ANNOTATIONS.
CHAP. I.

[1] As well Job as other Prophets writ their own acts and praises.

[2] Praefat. in Iob.

[3] Good works are both God's works & men's works.

[4] Job's patience invincible in all sorts of affliction.

[5] English Catholics loose their goods & children, & are afflicted in body.

[6] Great commendation to be good amongst the bad.

[7] Phil. 2. Apoc. 2. Cantic.

1. Simple, right, and fearing God.] Moyses, Samuel, Esdras, and other Prophets writ there own acts among others, [1] also their own prayers, speaking of themselves in the third person, and so did holy Job, humbly, truly, and simply, without vain glory, or arrogancy, as S. Gregory noteth, [2] saying: Blessed Job, inspired with the Holy Ghost, might well write his own acts, which were the gifts of supernal inspiration. [3] God being the principal cause efficient of all good men's works, and men the secondary cause of the same. Moreover Job's singular patience and other virtues are likewise commended in other Scriptures and by ancient Doctors. Tobiae 2. God permitted tentation to happen unto Tobias, that example might be given to his followers of his patience, as of holy Job. S. James (c. 5.) exhorting to patience, saith: You have heard the suffering of Job, and you have seen the end of our Lord. [4] Tertullian (li. de patientia) admiring Job's patience exclaimeth thus: O most happy man! Whom neither the driving away of his flocks of cattle, nor consuming of the rest with fire, nor the loss of his children, nor torments of his body, could drive from patience: but he stood immovable in the service of God, for example to us, that we fall not for any worldly damage, loss of dearest friends, or corporal afflictions. And blessed be God, by whose blessing we may now say: O happy English Catholics, [5] that patiently suffer the very same kinds of tribulation (though not in so great a degree) in our time! S. Cyprian (li. de bono patientiae) Job examined and proved by the virtue of patience, was advanced to the very height of praise, a rich lord in possession, and a more rich father in children, suddenly was neither lord, nor father: was also most grievously afflicted in his flesh: and that no tentation might be wanting, the devil armed his wife against him, yet was he not moved, but by victorious patience thanked God for all. In like sort other holy fathers, for encouragement and consolation of the afflicted, write much of holy Job's invincible patience. [6] Above all S. Gregory, our Apostle, dilateth most excellently in thirty and five whole books, describing and proposing his so great virtues to be imitated by all Christians, first of all (li. 1. c. 5.) observing how great a praise it is to be good in such a place, in the middes of a crooked and perverse nation, shining as a light in the world, dwelling in the gentiles, where was the seat of Satan, a lily amongst thorns. [7]

◦Sacrifice being of infinite virtue, yet the value in application is limited.

5. Offered holocausts for every one.] Albeit the virtue of Sacrifice as well of Holocaust in the old Testament, as especially of Christ's Sacrifice in the New, ◦ is of infinite value in it-self, yet the application thereof to particular persons and purposes is limited, and therefore holy Job offered not only once for all his children, but many times, severally for every one. Whereof see Cardinal Allan li. 2. de Eucharist. Sacrific. c. 35.

CHAPTER II.

Satan by God's permission, 7. striketh Job with sores from the sole of his foot to the top of his head. 9. His wife also insulteth against him, but he sinneth not. 11. Three friends coming to visit and comfort him, sit silent by him seven days.

And it came to pass when on a certain day the sons of God were come, and stood before our Lord, and Satan came among them, and stood in his sight, 2 that our Lord said to Satan: From whence comest thou? Who answering said: I have gone round about the earth, and walked through it. 3 And our Lord said to Satan: Hast thou considered my servant Job, that there is not the like to him in the earth, a man (a) simple, and right, and fearing God, and departing from evil, and yet retaining innocency? But thou hast moved me against him, that I should afflict him in vain.

(a) A man of plain & true dealing mixed with meekness without all guile is called a simple right man. S. Greg. li. 1. Moral. c. 2. & 10.

4 To whom Satan answering, said: Skin for skin, and all things that a man hath, he will give for his life: 5 otherwise put thy hand, and touch his bone and flesh, and then shalt thou see that he will bless thee in the face. 6 Our Lord therefore said to Satan: Behold he is in thy hand, but yet save his life. 7 Satan therefore going out from the face of our Lord, struck Job with a very sore boil, from the sole of the foot even to the top of his head: 8 who with a shell scraped the corruption, sitting on a dunghill. 9 And (b) his wife said to him: Doest thou yet continue in thy simplicity? Bless God and die.

(b) His wife persuading him to desperation & blasphemy, signified carnal cogitations, which corrupt the soul inwardly, as afflictions do assault the flesh outwardly. S. Greg. li. 3. c. 24.

10 Who said to her: Thou hast spoken like one of the foolish women: if we have received good things of the hand of God, evil things why should we not receive? In all these things Job sinned not with his lips.

11 Therefore Job's three friends hearing all the evil, that had chanced to him, came every one out of their place, Eliphaz a Themanite, and Baldad a Suhite, and Sophar a Naamathite. For they had appointed, that coming together they would visit him, and comfort him. 12 And when they had lifted up their eyes a far off, they knew him not, and crying out they wept, and renting their cloths sprinkled dust over their head toward heaven. 13 And they sat with him on the ground (c) seven days and seven nights, and no man spake to him a word: for they saw the pain to be vehement.

(c) Seven days together every day & night some good part.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. II.

11. Job's three friends.] For better intelligence of these conflicts between holy Job and his friends, it may here be observed, that they were indeed his friends, [1] as the text simply calleth them: that they believed rightly in God Almighty, and were not idolaters: that they came of friendly good affection to comfort him, though they fell into words of reproving him [2] (as S. Gregory teacheth:) they alleged also many excellent divine sentences very truly, which therefore Job reproved not. But they erred in their illations against Job: [3] and that of ignorance rather than of set malice, concluding that Job was guilty of some enormous sins, because they saw him so grievously punished, and heard him complain thereof; his own conscience known to him and hid to them (whereof they rashly judged) testifying that he was innocent, in respect of so great crimes. And in this their particular error, though they were not heretics, being not obstinate after that the truth was sufficiently revealed unto them, yet they prefigured heretics, [4] endeavouring by one truth

[2] li. 3. 6. 24.

[3] They erred in Job's particular case.

[4] And prefigured Heretics.

[5] Li. 5. 18.

to destroy another, and by arrogating knowledge which they had not: promising also new things and unheard of, rather to draw others to admire them, than to edification. [5]

CHAPTER III.

Job lamenteth, describing his own, and the general calamities of man, 13. and shewing how they escape many miseries, which either are never born, or die presently after their birth.

After these things Job opened his mouth, and (a) cursed his day,

(a) After so long silence at last Job expresseth his grief before his friends to be so great, that in respect thereof, he justly curseth all evil things as not made by God but adjoined to man's life, being the effects of sin, even from his conception and birth: wishing that whatsoever concurred to his longer afflictions in this life, and hindered his more speedy delivery from dangers and calamities had not been, for so he had been sooner at rest, as God's goodness should dispose of him.
All which was a lawful desire & no sin at all. See I. Pineda in c. 2. Iob.

2 and spake. 3 Perish may the day wherein I was born, & the night wherein it was said: A man is conceived. 4 Be that day turned into darkness, God require it not from above, and let it not be lightened with light. 5 Let darkness, and the shadow of death obscure it, let a mist possess it, and be it wrapped in bitterness. 6 A darksome hurl wind possess that night, be it not counted in the days of the year, nor numbered in the months. 7 Be that night solitary, nor praise-worthy. 8 Let them curse it which curse the day, which are ready to raise up Leviathan. 9 Let the stars be darkened with the mist thereof: let it expect light and let it not see, neither the rising of the appearing morning. 10 Because it shut not up the doors of the womb that bare me, nor took away evils from mine eyes. 11 Why died I not in the matrice, perished not forthwith being come forth of the womb? 12 Why received upon the knees: why nursed with the breasts? 13 For now sleeping I should be quiet, and should rest in my sleep: 14 With kings and consuls of the earth, which build themselves solitary places: 15 Or with Princes, that posses gold, and replenish their houses with silver: 16 Or as a thing untimely born that is hid I should not be, or as they that being conceived have not seen the light. 17 There the impious have ceased from tumult, & there the wearied with strength have rested. 18 And they sometime bound together without grief, have not heard the voice of the exactor. 19 Little and great are there, and the servant free from his master. 20 Why is there light given to a miserable man, and life to them, that are in bitterness of soul, 21 that expect death, and it cometh not, as they that dig up treasure, 22 and they rejoice exceedingly when they have found the grave? 23 To a man whose life is hid, and God hath compassed him with darkness? 24 Before I eat I sigh: and as it were overflowing waters, so my roaring: 25 Because the fear which I feared, hath chanced to me: and that which I was afraid of, hath happened. 26 Have I not dissembled? Have I not kept silence? Have I not been at ease? And indignation is come upon me.

CHAPTER IV.

Eliphaz blameth Job as guilty of impatience, arguing thereupon that he was not so perfect in virtue as he seemed, 7. and therefore is now punished by God, who (as Eliphaz falsely supposeth) `afflicteth not innocent men`: 12. alleging for proof an imaginary vision. [1]

[1] The second part.
Diverse discourses & disputes about the cause of Job's afflictions.

But [1] Eliphaz the Themanite answering, said:

[1] The first conflict, between Eliphaz & Job.

2 If we shall begin to speak to thee, perhaps thou wilt take it grievously, but the word conceived who can hold? 3 Behold thou hast taught many, and weary hands thou hast strengthened. 4 Them that wavered thy words have confirmed, and trembling knees thou hast strengthened: 5 But now a plague is come upon thee, & thou hast fainted: hath touched thee, and thou art troubled. 6 Where is thy fear, thy strength, thy patience, and the perfection of thy ways? 7 Remember I beseech thee, who ever being innocent hath (a) perished? Or when have the just been destroyed?

(a) No innocent ever perished eternally: but innocent Abel was slain temporally, & innumerable others suffer calamities for their greater merit.

8 Yea rather I have seen them that work iniquity, and sow sorrows, and reap them, 9 to have perished by the blast of God, and with the spirit of his wrath to have been consumed. 10 The roaring of the lion, and the voice of the lioness, and the teeth of the whelps of lions are bruised: 11 The tiger hath perished, because he had no prey, and the lions' whelps are destroyed. 12 Moreover (b) to me there was spoken a secret word, and as it were by stealth hath mine ear received the veins of the whispering thereof.

(b) Heretics pretend such obscure visions more to get credit than to edify others. S. Greg. l. 5. c. 18.

13 In the horror of a vision by night, when deep sleep is wont to hold men, 14 fear held me, and trembling, and all my bones were made sore afraid: 15 And when the spirit passed in my presence, the hairs of my flesh stood upright. 16 There stood one, whose countenance I knew not, an image before mine eyes, and I heard the voice as it were of a gentle wind: 17 What, (c) shall man be justified in comparison of God, or shall a man be more pure than his maker?

(c) Job easily granteth that man may not compare nor contend with God. ch. 9. v. 1. Yet men may be innocent & free from grievous sins.

18 Behold they that serve him are not stable, and in his Angels he found wickedness: 19 How much more they that inhabit houses of clay, which have an earthly foundation, shall be consumed as it were of the moth? 20 From morning until evening they shall be cut down: and because none understandeth, they shall perish for ever. 21 And they that shall be left, shall be taken away from them: they shall die, and not in wisdom.

CHAPTER V.

Eliphaz prosecuteth his discourse to convince Job of great sins, because he is so vehemently afflicted: 17. exhorteth him therefore to acknowledge his sins, so all things shall succeed prosperously.

Call therefore (a) if there be that will answer thee, and turn to some of the Saints.

(a) This disputer having pretended an imaginary vision from God against Job, now he supposeth that neither God nor other holy person will patronage his cause, nor judge of his cause as he doth, but that all will condemn him of impatience, folly, envy, & other sins.

2 Anger indeed killeth the foolish, and envy slayeth the little one. 3 I have seen a fool with firm root, and I cursed his beauty by and by. 4 His children shall be made far from salvation, and shall be destroyed in the gate, and there shall be none to deliver. 5 Whose harvest the hungry shall eat, and the armed shall take him by violence, and the thirsty shall drink his riches. 6 Nothing in the earth is done without a cause, and out of the ground sorrow shall not rise. 7 (b) Man is born to labour, and the bird to flight.

(b) This Proverb importeth that a man must not think to pass his life without travail but must get his bread with sweat of his brows, or suffer other calamities.

8 For the which thing I will beseech our Lord, and toward God I will set my speech: 9 Who doeth great and unsearchable and marvelous things without number: 10 Who giveth rain upon the face of the earth, and watereth all things with waters: 11 Who setteth the humble on high, and them that are in heaviness he comforteth with health: 12 Who dissipateth the cogitations of the malignant, that their hands cannot accomplish that which they began: 13 Who apprehendeth the wise in their subtilty, and dissipateth the counsel of the wicked: 14 By day they shall incur darkness, and as it were in the night, so shall they grope at noon days. 15 Moreover he shall save the needy from the sword of their mouth, and the poor from the hand of the violent. 16 And to the needy there shall be hope, but iniquity shall draw together her mouth. 17 Blessed is the man that is corrected of God: refuse not therefore the chastising of our Lord: 18 Because he woundeth, and cureth: striketh, & his hands shall heal. 19 In (c) six tribulations he shall deliver thee, and in the (d) seventh evil shall not touch thee.

(c) God's goodness delivereth his servants the space of this laborious life: (d) And most especially in the hour of death. S. Greg. li. 6. c. 18.

20 In famine he shall deliver thee from death, and in battle, from the hand of the sword. 21 From the scourge of the tongue thou shalt be hid; and thou shalt not fear calamity when it cometh. 22 In waste and famine thou shalt laugh, & the beasts of the earth thou shalt not fear. 23 But with the stones of the lands thy covenant, and the beasts of the earth shall be peaceable to thee. 24 And thou shalt know that thy tabernacle hath peace, and visiting thy beauty, thou shalt not sin. 25 Thou shalt know also that thy seed shall be manifold, and thy progeny as the grass of the earth. 26 Thou shalt enter into the grave in aboundance, as a heap of wheat is carried in his time. 27 Behold, this is even so, as we have searched out: which thou having heard revolve in thy mind.

CHAP. V.

[1] Invocation of Saints, escpecially Angels in Job's time.

[2] li. 5. c. 30.

1. Turn to some of the Saints.] Eliphaz provoking Job to produce some of his opinion, or to seek the help and patronage of some Saint in his cause, [1] plainly sheweth the common faith and practice of invocating Saints in that time. Else it had been a frivolous speech, which is not to be imputed to a sensible wise man as he was. For it appeareth by the drift of his reasoning, that he supposed some of God's special servants would maintain a good cause, but that Job's cause was such as neither God, nor holy Angel, nor good man would defend, and therefore boldly provoked him to this trial, presuming that he should find no such patron. Neither did he will Job in these words to call upon God only, for he could not err so grossly, as to call God some of the Saints: but must mean some other holy person. And it is clear by the Septuaginta Interpreters, that Eliphaz willed Job to invocate the Angels, saying: Invocate if any will answer thee, or if thou canst behold any of the holy Angels. [2] S. Gregory expoundeth it to the same sense, that Saints were to be invocated in a good cause, but that Eliphaz here despising and deriding holy Job, said to him: Thou canst not find Saints thy helpers in affliction, whom thou wouldest not have thy fellows in prosperity.

CHAPTER VI.

Job answereth the objections of Eliphaz, shewing that indeed the calamity which he suffereth is much greater than his sins deserve; and therefore his lamentation is excusable: 8. wisheth (if it so please God) that he may die: 13. complaineth that his friends are become his adversaries: 16. gravely expostulateth that they reprehend him, 12. and help him not.

But Job answering, said: 2 (a) would God my sins were weighed, whereby I have deserved wrath, and the calamity, which I suffer, in a balance.

(a) A man of sincere conscience confesseth the sins whereof he is guilty, yet acknowledgeth not all wherewith others may unjustly charge him.

3 As the sand of the sea this would appear heavier, wherefore my words also are full of sorrow: 4 Because the arrows of our Lord be in me, the indignation whereof drinketh up my spirit, & the terrors of our Lord war against me. 5 Will the wild ass roar when he hath grass? Or the oxe loweth when he shall stand before the full manger? 6 Or can an unsavoury thing be eaten, that is not seasoned with salt? Or can a man taste that which being tasted bringeth death? 7 The things which before my soul would not touch, now for anguish are my meats. 8 Who will grant that my petition may come: and that God would give me that which I expect? 9 And he that hath begun, the same would loose his hand, and cut me off? 10 And this might be my comfort, that afflicting me with sorrow, he spare not, nor I gainsay the words of the Holy one. 11 For what is my strength, that I can sustain it? Or what is mine end, that I should do patiently? 12 Neither is my strength the strength of stones, neither is my flesh of brass. 13 Behold there is no help for me in myself, and my familiar friends also are departed from me. 14 He that taketh away mercy from his friend, forsaketh the fear of our Lord. 15 My brethren have passed by me, as the torrent that passeth swiftly in the valleys. 16 They that fear the hoarfrost, snow shall fall upon them. 17 At the time, when they shall be dissipated they shall perish: & after they wax hot they shall be dissolved out of their place. 18 The paths of their steps are entangled: they shall walk in vain, & shall perish. 19 Consider ye the paths (b) of Thema, the ways of Saba, and expect a little while.

(b) Sandy ways without water.

20 They are confounded, because I have hoped: they are come also even unto me, and are covered with shame. 21 Now you are come: and even now seeing my plague you are afraid. 22 Have I said: Bring ye to me, and of your substance give to me? 23 Or deliver me from the hand of the enemy, and out of the hand of the strong deliver me? 24 (c) Teach ye me, and I will hold my peace: and if I perhaps have been ignorant in any thing, instruct ye me.

(c) Job's adversaries presumed to teach him, but because they erred in their applying of true assertions in his case, which himself understood and not they, he accounted not their discourses for good doctrine.

25 Why have you detracted from the words of truth, whereas there is none of you that can control me? 26 To rebuke only you frame speeches, and you utter words in the wind. 27 You rush in upon a pupil, and you endeavour to overthrow your friend. 28 Notwithstanding accomplish that which you have begun: give ear, and see whether I lie. 29 Answer I beseech you without contention: and speaking that which is just, judge ye. 30 And you shall not find iniquity in my tongue, neither shall folly sound in my jaws.

ANNOTATIONS.
CHAP. VI.

3. As the sand of the sea.] Scarce any figure is more common in holy Scripture than Hyperbole[1]: whereby our understanding is drawn to conceive the greatness of things that otherwise surpass vulgar capacity. So Job signifieth here that his calamity being weighed with his sins in a balance, would appear heavier, not precisely in proportion of the number of the sands in the sea, but exceeding much in true comparison. [2] Of which superaboundance of pains patiently suffered by holy Job, and other Saints, more than their sins deserved, especially of our B. Saviour, who could not sin, and of our B. Lady, who never sinned, remaineth an infinity treasure of satisfactory works, appliable by the supreme steward of God's Church, Christ's Vicar in earth, for satisfaction of others which have need, and are in the communion of Saints, and perform the conditions appointed. And

[1] The use of Hyperbole in holy Scripture.

[2] Treasure of satisfactory works in the Church.

[3] Pardons do apply the suffering of some for the satisfaction of others. so this high steward may in due manner by his authority, give limited, or plenary pardons to penitents, [3] of the pains which otherwise they should suffer in this life, or in purgatory, for their sins first remitted. Other Bishops can also give or dispense so much as the Supreme Bishop allotteth to their power: all to the edification and necessity of God's servants, as dispensers, not dissipators of so holy a treasure.

CHAPTER VII.

Job explicateth diverse calamities of man's life, and namely of his own. 6. supposing it not likely that he shall return to former prosperous state, 15. desireth to die.

The life of man upon earth is a (a) warfare, and his days, as the days of an hired man.

(a) A soldier must be always ready to endure travail, to be promptly obedient, content to be beaten by his superior without all resistance, upon pain of his life: he is always subject to cares, and to danger of death, & therefore must ever be ready to die.

2 As a servant desireth the shadow, and as the hired man tarrieth for the end of his work: 3 so I also have had vain months, & have numbered to myself laborious nights. 4 If I sleep, I shall say: When shall I arise? & again I shall expect the evening, & shall be replenished with sorrows even until darkness. 5 My flesh is clothed with rottenness & filth of dust, my skin is withered, & drawn together. 6 My days have passed more swiftly, than the web is cut of the weaver, and are consumed without any hope. 7 Remember that my life is a wind, & mine eye shall not return to see good things. 8 Neither shall the sight of man behold me: thine eyes upon me, and I shall not stand. 9 As a cloud is consumed, and passeth away: so he that shall descend to [1] hell shall not ascend.

10 Neither shall he return any more into his house, neither shall his place know him any more.
11 Wherefore I also will not spare my mouth, I will speak in the tribulation of my spirit: I will talk with the bitterness of my soul. 12 Why, am I a sea, or a whale, that thou hast compassed me with a prison?
13 If I say: My little bed shall comfort me, and I shall be relieved speaking with myself in my couch:
14 Thou wilt terrify me by dreams, and by visions shake me with horror. 15 For the which thing my soul hath chosen hanging, and my bones death. 16 I have despaired. I shall now live no longer: (b) Spare me, for my days are nothing.

(b) Just Job supposing he was at the point of death, prayed God to spare or cease to punish him more, & to accept of that affliction which he had already suffered. So the Church in behalf of souls departed in state of grace prayeth God to spare and cease from further punishing them, and to give them eternal rest.

17 What is man that thou magnifiest him? Or why settest thou thy heart toward him? 18 Thou doest visit him early, and suddenly thou provest him: 19 How long doest thou not spare me, nor suffer me that I swallow my spittle? 20 I have sinned, what shall I do to thee, o keeper of men? Why hast thou set me contrary to thee, and I am become burdenous to myself? 21 Why doest thou not take away my sin, and why doest thou not take away mine iniquity? Behold now I shall sleep in the dust: and if thou seek me in the morning, I shall not be.

CHAPTER VIII.

Baldad chargeth Job to have spoken unjustly, exhorting him to turn to God, and so he shall prosper better than heretofore: 13. shewing that hypocrites shall not prosper, 20. inferreth (falsely) that God afflicteth not the sincere, nor helpeth the malignant.

But Baldad the Suhite answering, said: (a)

(a) The second conflict.
This second disputer charged Job to be obstinate, who indeed was constant in a true settled judgement.

2 How long wilt thou speak such things, & shall the spirit of the word of thy mouth be multiplied? 3 Why, doth God supplant judgment? Or doth the Omnipotent subvert that which is just? 4 Although thy children have sinned to him, and he hath left them in the hand of their iniquity: 5 Yet if thou wilt arise early to God, & wilt beseech the Omnipotent: 6 If thou wilt walk clean & upright, he will forthwith awake unto thee, and will make the habitation of thy justice peaceable: 7 In so much, that if thy former things have been little, thy later things may be multiplied exceedingly. 8 For ask the old generation, and search diligently the memory of the fathers. 9 (For we are but as yesterday, & are ignorant (b) that our days upon the earth are as a shadow.)

(b) Even thus Heretics imagine Catholics to be ignorant, & therefore fill their mouths and books with things that are not denied, and yet infer much falsehood sophistically applying one truth against another, being themselves ignorant how to reconcile difficulties.

10 And they shall teach thee: they shall speak to thee, and from their heart shall utter words. 11 Can the rush be green without moisture? Or a sedgy place grow without water? 12 When it is yet in his flower, and is not plucked with the hand, it withereth before all herbs: 13 Even so the ways of all, that forget God, and the hope of the hypocrite shall perish: 14 His folly shall not please him, and his confidence as the spiders' web. 15 He shall lean upon his house, and it shall not stand: he shall stay it up, and it shall not rise: 16 He seemeth moistened before the sun come, & in his rising his blossom shall go forth. 17 Upon a heap of rocks his roots shall be thick, and among stones he shall abide. 18 If he swallow him up out of his place, he will deny him, and will say: I know thee not. 19 For this is the joy of his way, that others may spring again of the earth. 20 God will not reject the simple, nor reach his hand to the malignant. 21 Until thy mouth be filled with laughter, & thy lips with jubilation. 22 They that hate thee, shall be clothed with confusion: and the tabernacle of the impious shall not stand.

CHAPTER IX.

Job approveth that no man avouching his own justice before God is justified. 22. Teacheth that affliction of the innocent standeth well with God's justice, wisdom, and power.

And Job answering, said: 2 (a) Indeed I know it is so, and that man is not justified compared with God.

(a) Job here granteth that which was truly said by his adversary, and sheweth how he did wrong apply true doctrine against him, and so still defendeth his own innocency, and just quarrel.

3 If he will content with him, he cannot answer him one for a thousand. 4 He is wise of heart, and strong of force: who hath resisted him, and hath had peace? 5 He that transported mountains, and they whom he subverted in his fury, knew not. 6 He that removeth the earth out of her place, and the pillars thereof are shaken. 7 He that commandeth the sun, and it riseth not: and shutteth up the stars as it were under a seal: 8 He that alone spreadeth the heaven, & goeth upon the waves of the sea. 9 He that maketh Arcturus, and Orion, and Hyades, and the inner parts of the south. 10 He that doth great things and incomprehensible, and marvelous, of the which there is no number. 11 If he come to me, I shall not see him: if he depart, I shall not understand. 12 If suddenly he ask, who shall answer him? Or who can say: Why doest thou so? 13 God whose wrath no man can resist, and under whom they stoop that (b) carry the world.

(b) Angels move the spheres of heaven.

14 How great am I then, that I may answer him, and speak in my words with him? 15 Who although I have any just thing, will not answer, (c) but will beseech my judge.

(c) Even so S. Paul, though he was not guilty in conscience of any crime, yet he would not therein justify himself: 1. Cor. 4.

16 And when he shall hear me invocating, I do not believe that he hath heard my voice. 17 For in a hurlwind shall he break me, and shall multiply my wounds yea without cause. 18 He granteth not my spirit to rest, and he filleth me with bitterness. 19 If strength be demanded, he is most strong: if equity of judgment, no man dare give testimony for me. 20 If I will justify myself, mine own mouth shall condemn me: if I will shew myself innocent, he shall prove me wicked. 21 Although I shall be simple, the self-same shall my soul be ignorant of, and I shall be weary of my life, 22 (d) One thing there is that I have spoken, both the innocent and the impious he consumeth.

(d) This is an assured true assertion, that God afflicteth both good & evil in this life.

23 If he scourge, let him kill at once, and not laugh at the pains of innocents. 24 The earth is given into the hands of the impious, he covereth the face of the judges thereof: and if it be not he, who is it then? 25 My days have been swifter than a post: they have fled and have not seen good. 26 They have passed by as ships carrying fruits, as an eagle flying to meat. 27 When I shall say: I will not speak so, I change my face, & am tormented with sorrow. 28 I (e) feared all my works, knowing that thou didst not spare the offender.

(e) Fear on man's part, and hope in God, do well consist together. So both presumption and desperation are avoided.

29 But if so also I am impious, why have I laboured in vain? 30 If I be washed as it were with snow-waters, & my hands shall shine as most clean: 31 Yet shall thou dip me in filth, and my garments shall abhor me. 32 For neither I will answer a man that is like myself: nor that may be heard with me equally in judgment. 33 There is none that may be able to reprove both, and to put his hand between both. 34 Let him take his rod from me, and let not his dread terrify me. 35 I will speak, and will not fear him: for I cannot answer fearing.

CHAPTER X.

Job scarce able to speak, yet sheweth that there is no injustice nor ignorance in God, neither is his sin the cause of so great afflictions. 9. Acknowledgeth God's love and benefits towards himself, 15. and dreadeth his strict judgement.

My soul is weary of my life, I will let my speech pass against myself. I will speak in the bitterness of my soul. 2 I will say to God: Condemn me not: tell me why thou judgest me so. 3 Doth it seem good to thee, if thou (a) calumniate me, and oppress me^ the work of thy hands, and help the counsel of the impious?

(a) Holy Job knowing it to be unpossible that God calumniateth any man, inquireth what is the cause why his goodness afflicteth the just.

4 Hast thou eyes of flesh: or as a man seeth, shalt thou also see? 5 Are thy days as the days of man, and are thy years as the times of men: 6 That thou seekest my iniquity, and searchest my sin? 7 And thou mayst know that I have done no impious thing, whereas there is no man that can deliver out of thy hand. 8 (b) Thy hands have made me, & framed me wholly round-about, & dost thou so suddenly cast me down headlong?

(b) In that I am thy creature thou mayst justly destroy me: but indeed because I am thy creature thou wilt spare me through thy mercy, giving me thy grace, which if I use well thou wilt also give me eternal rest.

9 Remember I beseech thee that as clay thou madest me, & into dust thou wilt bring me again. 10 Hast thou not as milk milked me, and curded me as cheese? 11 With skin & flesh thou hast clothed me: with bones and sinews thou hast compacted me. 12 Life and mercy thou hast given to me, and thy visitation hath kept my spirit. 13 Although thou conceal these things in thy heart, yet I know that thou rememberest all things. 14 If I have sinned and thou hast spared me for an hour: why doest thou not suffer me to be clean from mine iniquity? 15 And if I shall be impious, woe is to me: and if just, I shall not lift up my head, filled with affliction and misery. 16 And for pride as a lioness thou wilt take me, and returning thou doest marvelously torment me. 17 Thou renewest thy witnesses against me, & multipliest thy wrath toward me, and pains do war upon me. 18 Why didst thou bring me forth out of the matrice? Who would God, I had been consumed, that eye might not see me. 19 I had been as if I were not, carried from the womb to the grave. 20 Shall not the fewness of my days be ended shortly? suffer me (c) therefore, that I may a little lament my sorrow:

(c) Repentance is always necessary, but most especially at the hour of death.

21 Before I go, and return not, unto the dark land, that is covered with the mist of death: 22 A land of misery and darkness, where is the shadow of death, and no order, but everlasting horror inhabiteth.

CHAPTER XI.

Sophar imputeth Job's discourse, about the cause of his so great afflictions, to insolency of mind, and loquacity of tongue, persuading him to acknowledge grievous sins, that so he may have the reward of a just man.[1]

[1] The third conflict.

But Sophar the Naamathite answering, said: 2 Why, shall he that speaketh many things, not hear also? Or (a) shall a man full of words be justified?

(a) Sophar might have applied the vice of much speaking to himself & his fellows, alleging many things which proved not their opinion, whereas Job's allegations proved directly that which he affirmed.

3 To thee only shall men hold their peace? & when thou hast mocked others, shalt thou be confuted of none? 4 For thou hast said: My word is pure, and I am clean in thy sight. 5 And I would wish that God would speak with thee, and would open his lips to thee. 6 That he might shew thee the secrets of wisdom, and that his law is manifold, and thou mightest understand that thou art exacted much lesser things of him (b) than thy iniquity deserveth.

(b) Job's own conscience affirmed the contrary. ch. 6. v. 3.

7 Peradventure thou wilt comprehend the steps of God, and wilt find out the Omnipotent perfectly? 8 He is higher than heaven, and what wilt thou do? Deeper than hell, and how wilt thou know? 9 The measure of him is longer than the earth, & broader than the sea. 10 If he shall overthrow all things, or shall straiten them into one, who shall say against him? 11 For he knoweth the vanity of men, & seeing iniquity doth he not consider? 12 A vain man is extolled into pride, & thinketh himself born free as a wild ass's colt. 13 But thou hast confirmed thy heart, & hast spread thy hands to him. 14 If thou shalt take away from thee the iniquity (c) that is in thy hand, & injustice remain not in thy tabernacle:

(c) He could not justly confess iniquity which he had not committed.

15 Then mayst thou lift up thy face without spot, & thou shalt be stable, & shalt not fear. 16 Thou shalt also forget misery, & shalt remember it as waters that are passed. 17 And the brightness as it were of noon days, shall arise to thee at evening: and when thou shalt think thyself consumed, thou shalt rise as the day star. 18 And thou shalt have confidence, hope being set before thee, & buried thou shalt sleep secure. 19 Thou shalt rest, and there shall be none to terrify thee: and very many shall beseech thy face. 20 But the eyes of the impious shall decay, and escape shall fail them, and their hope the abomination of the soul.

CHAPTER XII.

Job sheweth the knowledge, which his friends much boasts of, to be the common known doctrine of God's servants. He more truly, and more profoundly discourseth of God's power and wisdom, still defending his own innocency in respect of great sins.

But Job answering, said: 2 Are you then men alone, & shall wisdom die with you? 3 I also have a heart even as you, neither am I inferior to you: for who is ignorant of these things, which you know? 4 He that is mocked of his friend as I, shall invocate God, and he will hear him: for the (a) simplicity of the just man is scorned.

(a) God suffereth his simple true-meaning servants to be scorned for the time, but afterward the wicked shall be forced to confess, that those whom they derided are worthily in honour before God. Sap. 5. v. 3.

5 The lamp contemned in the cogitations of the rich, is prepared to the time appointed. 6 The tabernacles of robbers abound, and they provoke God boldly, whereas he hath given all things into their hands. 7 For ask the beasts, and they shall teach thee: and the fowls of the air, and they shall tell thee. 8 Speak to the earth, and it shall answer thee, and the fishes of the sea shall tell. 9 Who is ignorant that the hand of our Lord hath made all these things? 10 In whose hand is the soul of every living thing, and the spirit of all the flesh of man. 11 Doth not the ear discern words, and the jaws of him that eateth, the taste? 12 In the ancients is wisdom, and in long time prudence. 13 With him is wisdom and strength, he hath counsel and understanding. 14 If he shall destroy, there is no man that can build: if he shut up a man, there is none that can open. 15 If he hold in the waters, all things shall be dried: and if he send them forth, they shall overthrow the earth. 16 With him is strength and wisdom: he knoweth both the deceiver, and him that is deceived. 17 He bringeth (b) counsellers to a foolish end, & judges to astonishment.

(b) crafty plotters of devices at last by God's just punishment commit so great absurdities, that the meanest may see their folly.

18 He looseth the belt of kings, & girdeth their reins with a cord. 19 He leadeth away Priests without glory, & supplanteth the great men. 20 Changing the lip of the true, and taking away the doctrine of the ancients. 21 He poureth out contempt upon Princes, relieving them that had been oppressed. 22 Who revealeth profound things out of darkness, and bringeth forth the shadow of death into light. 23 Who multiplieth nations, & destroyeth them, and restoreth the destroyed whole again. 24 Who changeth the heart of the Princes of the people of the earth, and deceiveth them, that they may go in vain where is no passage. 25 They shall grope as in the dark, and not in the light, and he shall make them go amiss as drunken men.

CHAPTER XIII.

Of their words Job confuteth his adversaries, that they have spoken that which they know not: 13. defendeth his own innocency: 22. desiring of God, if he be afflicted for secret sins, that he may know them.

Behold mine eye hath seen all these things, and mine ear hath heard, and I have understood every thing. 2 According to your knowledge I also do know: neither am I inferior to you. 3 But yet I will speak to the Omnipotent, and I covet to dispute with God. 4 First shewing you to be forgers of lying, and maintainers of perverse opinions. 5 And would God ye would hold your peace, that you might be thought to be wise men. 6 Hear ye therefore my corrections, and attend the judgment of my lips. 7 Hath God need of your lie, that for him you speak guiles? 8 Do you take his person, and do you endeavour (a) to judge for God?

(a) Job's state of sin or innocency was best known to God, next to his own conscience, not at all to his adversaries, that presumed to judge thereof.

9 Or shall it please him from whom nothing can be concealed, or shall he be deceived as a man, with your fraudulent dealings? 10 He shall reprove you, because in secret you take his person. 11 Forthwith as he shall move himself, he shall trouble you: and his terror shall come violently upon you. 12 Your memory shall be compared to ashes, and your necks shall be brought into clay. 13 Hold your peace a little while, that I may speak whatsoever my mind shall prompt me.

14 (b) Why do I tear my flesh with my teeth, and carry my soul in my hands?

(b) It seemed to his adversaries that of desperation he would tear his flesh, and so kill himself, and to be so near death as if one held his soul in his hand ready to let it fall from him.

15 Although he shall kill me, I will trust in him: but yet I will reprove my ways in his sight. 16 And he shall be my saviour: for no hypocrite shall come in his sight. 17 Hear ye my word, and receive the obscure sayings with your ears. 18 If I shall be judged, (c) I know that I shall be found just.

(c) He was in extreme anguish, but still trusted in God.

19 What is he that will be judged with me? Let him come: why am I consumed holding my peace? 20 Two things only do not to me, and then shall I not be hid from thy face: 21 Make thy hand far from me, and let not thy fear terrify me. 22 Call me, and I will answer thee: or else I will speak, and do thou answer me.

23 How great iniquities and sins I have, my wicked deeds and my offences (d) shew thou me.

(d) He denieth that he is guilty in conscience, but desireth to know of God, if he have any hid sins which himself knoweth not.

24 Why hidest thou thy face, and thinkest me thine enemy? 25 Against the leaf, that is violently taken with the wind, thou shewest thy might, and persecutest dry stubble. 26 For thou writest bitterness against me, and wilt consume me with the sins of my youth. 27 Thou hast put my feet in the stocks, and hast observed all my paths, and hast considered the steps of my feet. 28 Who as rottenness am to be consumed, and as a garment, that is eaten of the moth.

CHAPTER XIV.

Again Job describeth the miseries of man's life. 3. Nevertheless God's great providence towards him: 7. professeth his belief of the Resurrection.

Man born of (a) woman, living a short time, is replenished with many miseries.

(a) All children taking their substance from the mother, and having only a temporal life continually tending to death, cannot but be subject to many miseries: For time it-self though it may seem long, is a limited thing, and is very short, yea hath no proportion in respect of eternity, which is infinite: yet God hath care to bring this weak creature to life eternal.

2 Who as a flower cometh forth and is destroyed, and flyeth as a shadow, and never abideth in the same state. 3 And doest thou count it a worthy thing to open thine eyes upon such an one, and to bring him with thee into judgment? 4 Who can make clean him that is conceived of unclean seed? Is it not thou which only art? 5 The days of man are short, and the number of his months is with thee, thou hast appointed his limits which cannot be passed. 6 Depart a little from him, that he may rest, until his day wished for come, even as the hired man's. 7 A tree hath hope: if it be cut, it waxeth green again, and the boughs thereof spring. 8 If his root be old in the earth, and the trunk thereof be dead in the dust, 9 At the scent of water it shall spring, and bring forth leaves, as when it was first planted. 10 But when man shall be dead, and naked, and consumed, where is he I pray? 11 As if the waters should depart out of the sea, and a river made empty should be dried up. 12 So man when he is asleep shall not rise again, till heaven perish, he shall not awake, nor rise up out of his sleep. 13 Who will grant me this, that in hell thou protect me, and hide me till thy fury pass, and appoint me a time, wherein thou wilt remember me? 14 Shall man that is dead, thinkest thou, live again? All the days, in which I am now in warfare, I expect until my change do come.

15 Thou shalt call me, and I shall answer thee: to the work of thy hands thou shalt reach thy right hand.
16 Thou indeed hast numbered my steps: but thou wilt spare my sins. 17 Thou hast sealed my offences as it were in a bag, but hast cured mine iniquity. 18 A mountain falling slideth down, and a rock is removed out of his place. 19 Waters make stones hollow, and with inundation the earth by little and little is consumed: and men therefore thou shalt destroy in like manner. 20 Thou hast strengthened him a little, that he might pass away for ever: thou shalt change his face, and shalt send him forth. 21 Whether his children shall be noble, or unnoble, he (b) shall not understand.

(b) The parents after death are not afflicted with the state of their children, as they be in this life.

22 But yet his flesh whilst he shall live shall have sorrow, and his soul shall mourn upon himself.

CHAPTER XV.

Eliphaz again chargeth Job to have spoken presumptuously, and blasphemously: 14. avoucheth that no man is innocent nor just: 20. describing the malediction of the impious and hypocrites.

But [1] Eliphaz the Themanite answering, said:

[1] The fourth conflict.

2 Will a wise man answer as it were speaking into the wind, and fill his stomach with burning? 3 Thou (a) reprovest him in words, that is not equal to thee, & speakest that which is not expedient for thee.

(a) Eliphaz not able to answer Job's solid reasons, raileth against him, as if he were injurious to God, or taught others to cast away fear.

4 As much as is in thee, thou hast evacuated fear, and hast taken away prayers before God. 5 For thine iniquity hath taught thy mouth, and thou doest imitate the tongue of blasphemers. 6 Thine own mouth shall condemn thee, and not I: and thy lips shall answer thee. 7 Wast thou the first man born, and formed before the little hills? 8 Hast thou heard God's counsel, and shall his wisdom be inferior to thee?
9 What doest thou know, that we are ignorant of? What doest thou understand that we know not?
10 There are both old men & ancients among us, much elder than thy fathers. 11 Is it a great matter that God should comfort thee? But thy naughty words hinder it. 12 Why doth thy heart elevate thee, & as thinking great things, hast thou astonished eyes?
13 Why doeth thy spirit swell against God, to utter such words out of thy mouth? 14 What is man, that he should be (b) without spot, & that the born of a woman should appear (c) just?

(b) It is a very rare privilege to be without spot. (c) But spot of venial sins may be in a just man.

15 Behold among his saints none is immutable, & the heavens are not clean in his sight. 16 How much more is man abominable, and unprofitable, who drinketh iniquity as it were water? 17 I will shew thee, hear me: that which I have seen I will tell thee. 18 Wise men confess and hide not their fathers: 19 to whom only the earth was given, and stranger hath not passed by them. 20 The impious is proud all his days, and (d) the number of the years of his tyranny is uncertain.

(d) All these miseries are incident to the wicked, but are falsely applied to holy Job, who indeed was just.

21 The sound of terror is always in his ears: and when there is peace, he always suspecteth treason. 22 He believeth not that he may return from darkness to light, looking round about for the sword on every side.
23 When he shall move himself to seek bread, he knoweth that the day of darkness is prepared in his hand. 24 Tribulation shall terrify him, and distress shall compass him, as a king that is prepared to battle.
25 For he hath stretched his hand against God, & is strengthened against the Omnipotent. 26 He hath run against him with neck set upright, and is armed with a fat neck. 27 Fatness hath covered his face, and from his sides there hangeth tallow. 28 He hath dwelt in desolate cities, and in desert houses, that are brought into hillocks. 29 He shall not be enriched, neither shall his substance continue, neither shall he put his root in the earth. 30 He shall not depart out of darkness, the flame shall dry his boughs, and he shall be taken away with the spirit of his own mouth. 31 He shall not believe^ vainly deceived with error, that he may be redeemed with any price. 32 Before his days be accomplished, he shall perish: and his hands shall wither. 33 His cluster in the first flower shall be hurt as a vine, and as the olive tree casting his flower. 34 For the congregation of the hypocrite is barren, and fire shall devour their tabernacles, which gladly take gifts. 35 He conceived sorrow, and hath brought forth iniquity, and his womb prepareth guiles.

CHAPTER XVI.

Job moved by his importune friends, 4. expostulateth their severity, 12. further describeth his afflictions, and appealeth to God's judgement, that he suffereth more than his sins deserve.

But Job answering said: 2 I have heard oftentimes such things, (a) heavy comforters you are all.

(a) True and friendly comforters ought to hear the afflicted with patience, & not unmercifully charge him with crimes which they neither know, nor his conscience is guilty of.

3 Shall words full of wind have an end? Or is any thing troublesome to thee, if thou speak? 4 I also could speak things like to you: and would God your soul were for my soul. 5 I also would comfort you with words, and would wag my head upon you. 6 I would strengthen you with my mouth, and would move my lips, as sparing you. 7 But what shall I do? If I speak, my pain will not rest: and if I hold my peace, it will not depart from me. 8 But now my sorrow hath oppressed me, & all my limbs are brought to nothing. 9 My wrinkles give testimony against me, and (b) a false speaker is raised up against my face contradicting me.

(b) A great affliction, when one full of pain & distress is also forced to defend his own innocency against calumniators.

10 He hath gathered his fury upon me, and threatening me hath gnashed against me with his teeth, mine enemy hath beheld me with terrible eyes. 11 They have opened their mouths upon me, and exprobating have strucken my cheek, they are filled with my pains. 12 God hath shut me up with the wicked man, and hath delivered me to the hands of the impious. 13 I sometime that wealthy-one suddenly am broken: he hath held my neck, broken me, and set me to himself as it were a mark. 14 He hath compassed me with his spears, he hath wounded my loins, he hath not spared, and hath poured out on the earth my bowels. 15 He hath cut me with wound upon wound, he hath come violently upon me as it were a giant. 16 I have sowed sackcloth upon my skin, and have covered my flesh with ashes. 17 My face is swollen with weeping, and my eye-lids are dim. 18 These things have I suffered (c) without the iniquity of my hand, whereas I had clean prayers to God.

(c) As the adversaries still object great iniquity to him, so he yieldeth them the same true answer.

19 Earth cover not my blood, neither let my cry find place in thee to be hid. 20 For behold my witness is in heaven, and he that knoweth my conscience on high. 21 My friends full of words: mine eye distilleth unto God. 22 And would God a man might so be judged with God, as the son of man is judged with his companion. 23 For behold the short years pass away, and I walk the path, by the which I shall not return.

CHAPTER XVII.

For the grievousness of his pain Job expecteth speedy death, 4. chargeth his friends with folly for holding only remuneration in this life. 6. Himself hopeth happy rest in the other world.

My spirit shall be extenuated, my days shall be shortened, and the grave only remaineth for me. 2 I have (a) not sinned, and mine eye abideth in bitterness.

(a) Not having committed such sins as he was charged withal, in this double bitterness of corporal pain & calumniation, his eye was still upon God, expecting to be delivered.

3 Deliver me, and set me beside thee, and let any man's hand fight against me. 4 Thou hast made their heart far from discipline, and therefore they shall not be exalted. 5 He promiseth a prey to his fellows, and the eyes of his children shall fail. 6 He hath set me as it were for a proverb of the common people, and I am an example before them. 7 Mine eye is dim for indignation, and my members are brought as it were to nothing. 8 The just shall be astonished upon this, and the innocent shall be raised up against the hypocrite. 9 And the just shall hold his way, & with clean hands shall add strength. 10 Be all you therefore converted, and come, and I shall not find among you any wise man. 11 My days have passed, my cogitations are dissipated, tormenting my heart: 12 Night they have turned into day, and again after darkness I hope for light. 13 If I shall expect, [1] (b) hell is my house, and in darkness I have made my bed.

[1] Seol Ἀδὴς Infernus. (b) This text sheweth evidently that there was a place of rest called hell.

14 I have said to rottenness: Thou art my father, my mother, and my sister, to worms. 15 Where is now then my expectation, and my patience who considereth. 16 All my things shall descend into most deep hell: there at the least, shall I have rest thinkest thou?

CHAPTER XVIII.

Baldad setteth upon Job again, charging him with present impatience and former impiety, 6. and that therefore he suffereth worthy punishment. [1]

[1] The fifth conflict.

But Baldad the Suhite answering, said: 2 How long will (a) ye speak vaunting words? Understand ye first, and so let us speak.

(a) Baldad perceiving Job to speak confidently as the common doctrine of many, opposeth himself nevertheless against him and all that think as he doth, and so speaketh as to many in the plural number, will ye speak, & of himself & his fellows: are we reputed. &c. So holy Job a figure of the Church defended the common cause, his adversaries a figure of heretics speaking some truths mixed false things therewith. S. Greg. li. 14. c. 1.

3 Why are we reputed as beasts, and accounted vile before you? 4 Which destroyest thy soul in thy fury, shall the earth be forsaken for thee, and shall rocks be transported out of their place? 5 Shall not the light of the impious be extinguished, and the flame of his fire not shine? 6 The light shall be dark in his tabernacle, and the candle that is over him, shall be extinguished. 7 The steps of his power shall be straitened, and his own counsel shall cast him down headlong. 8 For he hath thrust his feet into a net, and walketh in the mashes thereof. 9 The sole of his foot shall be held in a snare, and thirst shall burn against him. 10 His gin is hid in the earth, and his spring upon the path. 11 Fears shall terrify him on every side, and his feet shall entangle him. 12 Let his strength be extenuated with famine, and let hunger invade his ribs. 13 Let it devour the beauty of his skin, let death the first-born consume his arms. 14 Let his confidence be plucked away out of his tabernacle, and let destruction as a king tread upon him. 15 Let the companions of him, that is not, dwell in his tabernacle, let brimstone be sprinkled in his tent. 16 Let his roots be dried downward, and his harvest destroyed upward. 17 Let the memory of him perish from the earth, and let not his name be renowned in the streets. 18 He shall expel him out of light into darkness, and shall transport him out of the world. 19 His seed shall not be, nor his progeny in his people, nor any remnants in his countries. 20 In his day^ the last shall be astonished, and horror shall invade the first. 21 These are then the tabernacles of the wicked man, and this is the place of him that knoweth not God.

CHAPTER XIX.

Job lamenteth of his friends' cruelty, 6. affirmeth that his so great affliction is not for his sins, 25. and comforteth himself with his undoubted belief of the Resurrection.

But Job answering, said: 2 How long do you afflict my soul, and wear me with words? 3 Behold, ten times you confound me, and are not ashamed oppressing me. 4 For although I have been ignorant, mine ignorance shall be with me. 5 But you are set up against me, & reprove me with reproaches. 6 At the least now understand ye, that God hath afflicted me (a) not with equal judgment, and hath compassed me with his scourges.

(a) Blessed Job (saith S. Gregory li. 14. c. 16. 17.) looking sincerely on his own life, saw that his affliction was greater than his sins deserved, & in that respect was not equal: yet it was just, for God being just giveth a just reward: crown of justice as S. Paul speaketh of himself (2. Tim. 4.)

7 Behold I shall cry suffering violence, and no man will hear: I shall cry out, and there is none to judge. 8 He hath hedged my path round about and I cannot pass, and in my way hath put darkness. 9 He hath spoiled me of my glory, and hath taken the crown from my head. 10 He hath destroyed me on every side, and I perish, and as it were from a tree plucked hath he taken away my hope. 11 His fury is wrath against me, and he hath so accounted me as his enemy. 12 His servants have come together, and have made themselves a way by me, and have besieged my tabernacle round about. 13 He hath made my brethren far from me, and my acquaintance as strangers have departed from me. 14 My kinsmen have forsaken me, and they that knew me have forgotten me. 15 The guests of my house, and my maidservants have counted me an alien, and I have been as it were a stranger in their eyes. 16 I called my servant, and he did not answer me, with mine own mouth I besought him. 17 My wife hath abhorred my breath, and I prayed the children of my womb. 18 Fools also despised me, and when I was departed from them, they backbited me. 19 My counsellers sometime have abhorred me: & he (b) whom I loved most hath turned against me.

(b) All refused holy Job in his affliction, even those whom he had loved most: who therefore ought most to have loved him again.

20 The flesh being consumed, my bone hath cleaved to my skin, and there are left only lips about my teeth. 21 Have mercy upon me, have mercy upon me, at the least you my friends, because the hand of our Lord hath touched me. 22 Why do you as God persecute me, and are filled with my flesh? 23 Who will grant me that my words may be written? Who will give me that they may be drawn in a Book, 24 with iron pen, & in plate of lead, or else with stile might be graven in flint-stone? 25 For (c) I know that my Redeemer liveth, & in the last day I shall rise out of the earth.

(c) An express profession of his faith of the Resurrection.

26 And I shall be compassed again with my skin, and in my flesh I shall see God. 27 Whom I myself shall see, & mine eyes shall behold, & (d) none other: this my hope is laid up in my bosom.

(d) We shall rise again, not as one tree riseth in place of another, but the self-same persons, changed in qualities, not in substance.

28 Why then do you say now: Let us persecute him, & let us find root of word against him? 29 Fly therefore from the face of the sword, because the sword is the revenger of iniquities: and know ye that there is judgment.

CHAPTER XX.

Sophar avoucheth that some wicked men flourish for a time, but are afterward justly plagued. 29. Thereupon condemneth Job as an hypocrite.

But[1] Sophar the Naamathite answering, said:

[1] The sixth conflict.

2 Therefore my diverse cogitations succeed one another, and my mind is rapt into sundry things.
3 The doctrine, wherewith thou reprovest me, I will hear, and the spirit of my understanding shall answer me. 4 This I know from the beginning, since man was placed upon the earth, 5 That the praise of the impious is (a) short, and the joy of the hypocrite as it were for a moment:

(a) All man's life is short & as a moment in comparison of eternity; but it is not always true that the wicked are shortly punished in respect of this life, as this disputer applieth it to prove Job to be impious.
Therefore Job answereth in the next chap. v. 13. That ordinarily the wicked, lead their days (to wit their whole life) in wealth and (then) in a moment go down to hell. So the rest of these men's assertions are for most part true in some sense, but ill applied.

6 If his pride rise up even to the heaven, and his head touch the clouds: 7 As a dunghill in the end he shall be destroyed, and they that had seen him, shall say: Where is he? 8 As a dream that flyeth away he shall not be found, he shall pass as a vision by night: 9 The eye that had seen him, shall not see him, neither shall his place behold him any more. 10 His children shall come to naught with poverty, and his hands shall render him his sorrow. 11 His bones shall be filled with the vices of his youth, & they shall sleep with him in the dust. 12 For when evil shall be sweet in his mouth, he will hide it under his tongue. 13 He will spare it, & not leave it, and will hide it in his throat. 14 His bread in his belly shall be turned into the gall of asps within him. 15 The riches which he hath devoured, he shall vomit out, & God shall draw them forth out of his belly. 16 He shall suck the head of asps, and the viper's tongue shall kill him. 17 (Let him not see the streams of the river, the torrents of honey, & of butter.) 18 He shall be punished for all things that he did, & yet not be consumed: according to the multitude of his inventions so also shall he suffer.
19 Because breaking in^ he hath made the poor naked: he hath violently taken a house, & built it not.
20 Neither is his belly filled: and when he shall have the things he coveted, he cannot possess them.
21 There remained not of his meat, & therefore nothing shall continue of his goods: 22 When he shall be filled, he shall be straitened, he shall burn, and all sorrow shall fall upon him. 23 Would God his belly were filled, that he may send forth the wrath of his fury upon him, and rain his battle upon him. 24 He shall fly weapons of iron, and shall fall upon a bow of brass. 25 The sword plucked out, and coming forth of his scabbard, and glistering in his bitterness: the horrible shall go and come upon him. 26 All darkness is hid in his secrets: fire that is not kindled shall devour him, he shall be afflicted left in his tabernacle.
27 The heavens shall reveal his iniquity, and the earth shall rise against him. 28 The blossom of his house shall be opened, he shall be plucked down in the day of God's fury. 29 This is the portion of an impious man from God, & the inheritance of his words from our Lord.

CHAPTER XXI.

Job requiring his friends to hear him, 7. discourseth of the cause, why some evil men prosper all this life.

But Job answering, said: 2 Hear I beseech you my words, and do penance. 3 Bear with me, that I also may speak, and after my words, if it shall seem good, laugh ye. 4 Is my disputation (a) against man, that I ought not worthily to be sorry?

(a) Though he disputed with three men, yet it was concerning divine things not human, but of God's providence, and justice, of the resurrection, of eternal life, and punishment.

5 Harken to me, and be astonished, and put the finger upon your mouth. 6 And I^ when I shall remember, am afraid, and trembling shaketh my flesh. 7 Why then do the impious live, are they advanced, & strengthened with riches? 8 Their seed continueth before them, a multitude of kinsmen, & of nephews in their sight. 9 Their houses be secure & peaceable, & the rod of God is not upon them. 10 Their bullock hath conceived, & hath not made abortion: their cow hath calved, and is not deprived of her calf. 11 Their little ones go forth as flocks, and their infants rejoice with pastimes. 12 They hold the timbrel, & the harp, & rejoice at the sound of the organ. 13 They (b) lead their days in wealth, and in a moment they go down to (c) hell.

(b) See ch. 20. v. 5. (c) The same word is in Hebrew, Greek, & Latin, for hell, as in the 7. and 17. chap. & other places, which sheweth that besides hell of the damned the resting place also of holy fathers in the old Testament was called by the general name of hell.

14 Who said to God: depart from us, we will not the knowledge of thy ways. 15 Who is the Omnipotent, that we should serve him? And what doth it profit us if we shall pray him? 16 But yet because their good things are not in their hand, be the counsel of the impious far from me. 17 How often shall the candle of the impious be extinguished, and inundation come upon them, and shall he divide the sorrows of his fury? 18 They shall be as chaff before the face of the wind, and as ashes, which the whirlwind scattereth. 19 God shall reserve the sorrow of the father to his children: and when he shall have rendered it, then shall he know. 20 His eyes shall see his own slaughter, and he shall drink the fury of the Omnipotent. 21 For what doeth it pertain to him concerning his house after him: although the number of his months be diminished the half? 22 Shall any man teach God knowledge, who judgeth the high ones? 23 This man dieth strong and in health, rich and happy. 24 His bowels be full of fat, and his bones be embrued with marrow. 25 But another dieth in bitterness of soul without any riches: 26 And yet they shall sleep together in the dust, and worms shall cover them. 27 Surely I know your cogitations, & unjust sentences against me. 28 For you say: Where is the house of the Prince? & where are the tabernacles of the impious? 29 Ask any of the wayfaring men, & you shall understand that he knoweth these self-same things. 30 Because the evil man is kept unto the day of perdition, and he shall be led to the day of fury. 31 Who shall reprove his way before him? And who shall repay him the things that he hath done? 32 He shall be brought to the graves, and shall watch in the head of the dead. 33 He hath been sweet to the gravel of [1] Cocytus, and after him he shall draw every man, and before him innumerable.

[1] * a river of hell.

34 How therefore do ye comfort me in vain, whereas your answer is shewed to be repugnant to the truth?

CHAPTER XXII.

Eliphaz contendeth that God is not pleased with a just man's afflictions: 5. falsely imputeth enormous crimes to holy Job, 12. and gross errors. 21. Wisheth him therefore to repent, that so he may prosper.

But [1] Eliphaz the Themanite answering, said:

[1] The seventh conflict.

2 Can man be compared with God, yea though he be of perfect knowledge? 3 What doth it (a) profit God if thou be just? Or what doest thou advantage him if thy way be unspotted?

(a) Indeed when a just man hath done his duty he is unprofitable to God: but he is profitable to himself, which greatly pleaseth God, who desireth man's good, & it redoundeth to God's glory that he hath such servants. Mat. 5. v. 17.

4 Shall he be afraid to reprove thee, and come with thee into judgment: 5 And not for thy very great malice, and thine infinite iniquities? 6 For thou hast taken away the pledge of thy brethren without cause, and the naked thou hast spoiled of cloths. 7 Water to the weary thou hast not given, and from the hungry thou hast withdrawn bread. 8 In the strength of thine arm thou didst possess the earth, and being the mightiest thou didst obtain it. 9 Widows thou hast sent away empty, and the arms of pupils thou hast broken in pieces. 10 Therefore art thou compassed with snares, and sudden fear troubleth thee. 11 And thoughtest thou that thou shouldest not see darkness, and that thou shouldest not be oppressed with the violence of overflowing waters? 12 Doest thou not think that God is higher than heaven, and is exalted above the top of the stars? 13 And thou sayst: For what knoweth God? And he judgeth as it were by a mist. 14 The clouds are his covert, (b) neither doth he consider our things, and he walketh about the poles of heaven.

(b) After imputation of false crimes, this disputer chargeth holy Job also with heathenish error of the Aegyptians, that God hath no providence of men in this world. Aristotel. li. de mundo. textu. 84. So some heretics in their frenzy accuse Catholics of condemned heresies.

15 Doest thou covet to keep the path of worlds, which wicked men have trodden? 16 Who were taken away before their time, and a flood hath overthrown their foundation. 17 Who said to God: Depart from us; and as though the Omnipotent could do nothing, they esteemed him: 18 Whereas he had filled their houses with good things, whose sentence be far from me. 19 The just shall see, & shall rejoice, & the innocent man shall scorn them. 20 Is not their exaltation cut down, and hath not fire devoured the remnants of them? 21 Agree thou therefore to him, and have peace: and by these things thou shalt have the best fruits. 22 Receive the law of his mouth, and put his words in thy heart. 23 If thou wilt return to the Omnipotent, thou shalt be builded up, and shalt make iniquity far from thy tabernacle. 24 He shall give for earth flint, and for flint torrents of gold. 25 And the Omnipotent shall be against thine enemies, and silver shall be heaped together unto thee. 26 Then shalt thou abound in delights upon the Omnipotent, and shalt lift up thy face to God. 27 Thou shalt ask him, and he will hear thee, and thou shalt pay thy vows. 28 Thou shalt decree a thing, and it shall come to thee, and light shall shine in thy ways. 29 For who will be humbled, shall be in glory: & he that will bow down his eyes, he shall be saved. 30 The innocent shall be saved, but shall be saved in the cleanness of his hands.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Job expecteth help and sentence of God, 6. with just fear, yet with good conscience maintaineth his own innocency.

But Job answering, said: 2 (a) Now also my talk is in bitterness, and the hand of my plague is aggravated upon my mourning.

(a) Whiles he expected some comfort of his friends, they still afflicted him more & more, charging him with false crimes & so aggravating his grief both of body and mind.

3 Who will grant me that I may know and find him, & come even to (b) his throne?

(b) Therefore he appealeth to God's judgement seat for sentence.

4 I will set judgement before him, and will fill my mouth with accusations. 5 That I may know the words that he will answer me, and understand what he will speak to me. 6 I will not that he contend with me with much strength, nor that he oppress me with the weight of his greatness. 7 Let him propose equity against me, and my judgment shall come to victory. 8 If I shall go to the East, he appeareth not: if to the West, I shall not understand him. 9 If to the left hand, what shall I do? I shall not apprehend him: if I turn myself to the right hand, I shall not see him. 10 But he knoweth my way, and hath proved me as gold that passeth through the fire: 11 My foot hath followed his steps, I have kept his way, & have not declined out of it. 12 From the commandments of his lips I have not departed, and I have hid the words of his mouth in my bosom. 13 For he is alone, and no man can turn away his cogitation: and whatsoever his soul would, that hath he done. 14 And when he shall have fulfilled his will in me, many other things also are at hand with him. 15 And therefore I am troubled at his face, and considering him I am made pensive with fear. 16 God hath mollified my heart, and the Omnipotent hath troubled me. 17 For I have not perished because of the imminent darkness, neither hath the mist covered my face.

CHAPTER XXIV.

God in his providence knoweth when he will punish the wicked, which his true servants know not, much less the impious.

Times are not hid from the Omnipotent: but they (a) that know him, know not his days.

(a) God's servants know that he will punish wickedness, but know not when the wicked presume that he will never punish them.

2 Some have transferred bounds, spoiled flocks, & fed them. 3 They have driven away the ass of pupils, and have taken away the widow's oxe for a pledge. 4 They have subverted the way of the poor, and have oppressed together the meek of the earth. 5 Others as wild asses in the desert go forth to their work: watching to the prey, do prepare bread for their children. 6 They reap the field that is not theirs, and gather the grapes of his vineyard, whom by violence they have oppressed. 7 They send men away naked taking away their cloths, which have no covering in the cold. 8 Whom the showers of the mountains do wash, & not having a covert, they embrace stones. 9 They did violence spoiling the pupils, & the common poor people they spoiled. 10 From the naked & them that go without clothing, and the hungry they have taken away the ears of corn. 11 They have rested the noontide among their heaps, which having trodden the wine presses are a thirst. 12 Out of the cities they have made men to mourn, and the soul of the wounded hath cried, & God doth not suffer it to pass unrevenged: 13 They have been (b) rebellious to the light, they have not known his ways, neither did they return by his paths.

(b) Heretics doing and teaching against their own knowledge, are afterward strucken with blindness, that they cannot see the truth. S. Greg. li. 16. c. 20.

14 At the very break of day the murderer riseth, he killeth the needy, and the poor man: but by night he will be as a thief. 15 The eye of the adulterer observeth darkness, saying: Eye shall not see me: and he will cover his face. 16 He diggeth through houses in the dark, as in the day they had appointed with themselves, and they have not known the light. 17 If suddenly the morning shall appear, they think it the shadow of death: and they walk so in darkness as it were in light. 18 He is light above the face of the water: cursed be his portion in the earth, neither walk he by the way of the vineyards. 19 Let him pass (c) from snow waters to exceeding heat, and his sin even unto hell.

(c) Sinners running into both extremes of defect and excess, are likewise punished with contrary torments.

20 Let mercy forget him: worms his sweetness: be he not in remembrance, but be he broken in pieces as an unfruitful tree. 21 For he hath fed the barren, and her that beareth not, and to the widow he hath not done good. 22 He hath pulled down the strong in his strength and when he shall stand, he will not credit his life. 23 God hath given him place for penance, and he (d) abuseth it unto pride: but his eyes be upon his ways.

(d) Man by power of free will often presumeth to spend the time in sinning which God granteth him to do penance, for former sins. Rom. 2.

24 They are elevated for a little, and shall not stand, and shall be humbled as all things, and shall be taken away, and as the tops of the ears of corn they shall be broken. 25 And if it be not so, who can reprove me that I have lied, and set my words before God?

CHAPTER XXV.

Baldad endeavoureth again to terrify Job with God's judgement, from appealing thereto, and from avouching his own innocency.

But [1] Baldad the Suhite answering, said:

[1] The eighth conflict.

2 Power and terror is with him, that maketh concord in his high ones. 3 Is there any number of his soldiers? And upon whom shall not his light arise? 4 (a) Can man be justified compared with God, or the born of a woman appear clean?

(a) Job answered before, ch. 9. yet blind and obstinate disputers still repeat the same objections.

5 Behold the moon also doth not shine, and the stars are not clean in his sight. 6 How much more man rottenness, and the son of man a worm?

CHAPTER XXVI.

Job refuteth his adversary's needless and common arguments, by more sound discoursing of God's power, and wisdom.

But Job answering, said: 2 (a) Whose helper are thou? His that is weak? And doest thou hold up the arm of him, that is not strong?

(a) Job sheweth that neither God needeth man's help:

3 To whom hast thou given counsel? Perhaps to him, that hath not wisdom, and (b) thy prudence hast thou shewed very great.

(b) Neither is Baldad's prudence able to help, if there were need.

4 Whom wouldest thou teach? Not him that made breath? 5 Behold the (c) giants groan under the waters, & they that dwell with them.

(c) Giants were not able to wade in Noe's flood, but were drowned with the rest.

6 Hell is naked before him, & there is no covert to perdition. 7 Who stretcheth out the north-wind over the vacant, and hangeth the earth upon nothing. 8 Who bindeth the waters in his clouds, that they break not forth together downward. 9 Who holdeth the countenance of his throne, & spreadeth his cloud over it. 10 He hath made a limit about the waters, till light and darkness be ended. 11 The pillars of heaven tremble, and dread at his beck. 12 In his strength suddenly the seas are gathered together, and with his wisdom he struck the proud man. 13 His spirit hath adorned the heavens & his hand being the mid-wife, the (d) winding serpent is brought forth.

(d) Not only great things before recited, but also the very least are made by God, and depend upon his providence.

14 Lo, these things are said in part of his ways: and where as we have heard scarce a little drop of his word, who shall be able to behold the thunder of his greatness?

CHAPTER XXVII.

More and more Job confirmeth his innocency, avouching that God not presently judging, 11. will in time condemn the wicked.

Job also added, taking his parable, and said: 2 God liveth, who hath (a) taken away my judgment, and the Omnipotent, which hath brought my soul to bitterness.

(a) God would not as yet have Job's cause judged, but reserved the sentence, for his greater trial in patience.

3 That as long as breath remaineth in me, and the spirit of God in my nostrils, 4 My lips shall not speak iniquity, neither shall my tongue meditate (b) lying.

(b) It were a lie to acknowledge such sins as he had not committed.

5 God forbid that I should judge you to be just: till I fail, I will not depart from mine innocency. 6 My justification which I have begun to hold, I will not forsake: for my heart doth not reprehend me in all my life. 7 Let mine enemy be as the impious, and mine adversary as the wicked one. 8 For what is the hypocrite's hope, if covetously he take by violence, and God deliver not his soul? 9 Will God hear his cry, when distress shall come upon him? 10 Or can he be delighted in the Omnipotent, and invocate God at all time? 11 I will teach you by the hand of God, what the Omnipotent hath, neither will I hide it. 12 Lo, you do all know, and why speak you vain things without cause? 13 This is the portion of an impious man with God, and inheritance of the violent, which they shall receive of the Omnipotent. 14 If his children be multiplied, they shall be in the sword, & his nephews shall not be filled with bread. 15 They that shall be left of him, shall be buried in death, and his widows shall not weep. 16 If he shall heap together silver as earth, and as clay shall prepare garments: 17 He shall prepare indeed, but the just man shall be clothed with them: and the innocent shall divide the silver. 18 He hath built his house as a moth, and as a keeper hath he made a bower. 19 The rich man (c) when he shall sleep shall take away nothing with him: he shall open his eyes, and find nothing.

(c) Some part of God's judgement falleth on the wicked in this life, but especially at their death. Psal. 75.

20 Poverty as water shall apprehend him, in the night a tempest shall oppress him. 21 The burning wind shall take him up, and carry him away, and as a whirlwind shall pull him violently out of his place. 22 And he shall cast upon him, and shall not spare: out of his hand flying he shall fly. 23 He shall clasp his hands upon him, and shall hiss upon him, beholding his place.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

The marvelous works of God, the author of nature, shew his power and wisdom, 12. and that true riches consist not in temporal creatures, but in wisdom, 28. and fear of God.

Silver hath (a) beginnings of her veins, and gold hath a place, wherein it is molten.

(a) By these more precious & rare creatures, men ought to consider the Creator, & so not set their rest in them, but in him, which is true wisdom.

2 Iron is taken out of the earth, & stone resolved with heat, is turned into brass. 3 He hath set a time for darkness, & the end of all things he considereth, the stone also of darkness, and the shadow of death. 4 The (b) torrent divideth from the pilgrim people, them whom the foot of the needy man hath forgotten, and to whom there is no way.

(b) Sudden heady waters bursting out do change the ways and passages of men.

5 The land, out of which bread grew in his place, is destroyed with fire. 6 The place of the sapphire the stones thereof, and the clods of it gold. 7 The bird hath not known the path, neither hath the eye of the vulture beheld it. 8 The children of merchants have not trodden it, neither hath the lioness passed by it. 9 He hath stretched forth his hand to the flint, he hath overthrown mountains from the roots. 10 In the rocks he hath cut out rivers, and his eye hath seen every precious thing. 11 The depths also of rivers he hath searched, & hid things he hath brought forth to light: 12 But where is wisdom to be found, and what is the place of understanding? 13 Man knoweth not the price thereof, (c) neither is it found in the land of them that live pleasantly.

(c) True wisdom is not in natural things, but in supernatural virtues.

14 The depth saith: It is not in me: and the sea speaketh: It is not with me. 15 The finest gold shall not be given for it, neither shall silver be weighed in the change thereof. 16 It shall not be compared with the dyed colours of India, nor with Sardonyx the most precious stone, or with the Sapphire. 17 Gold or glass shall not be equal to it, neither shall vessels of gold be changed for it. 18 High and eminent things shall not be mentioned in comparison of it: and wisdom is drawn out of secret places. 19 The topazius of Aethiopia shall not be equal to it, neither shall it be compared to the cleanest dying. 20 From whence then cometh wisdom? And what is the place of understanding? 21 It is hid from the eyes of all living, the fowls of the air also know it not. 22 Perdition & death have said: With our ears we have heard the fame thereof. 23 God understandeth the way of it, & he knoweth the place thereof. 24 For he beholdeth the ends of the world, & looketh on all things that are under heaven. 25 Who made a poise to the winds, & weighed the waters in a measure. 26 When he gave a law to the rains, & a way to the sounding storms. 27 Then he saw it, and declared, and prepared, and searched it. 28 And he said to man: Behold (d) the fear of our Lord, that is wisdom: and to (e) depart from evil, understanding.

(d) When man hath considered God's works, his duty is to fear God. (e) Then to depart from evil & do good.

CHAPTER XXIX.

Again Job recounteth God's former benefits, as well his grace, whereby he did good works, 5. as temporal prosperity: 9. and wisdom above other Princes.

Job also added, taking (a) his parable, and said:

(a) Parables are not only similitudes of things, but also pithy and profound sentences, such as Job, Salomon, and other wisest men uttered.

2 Who will grant me, that I may be according to the former months, according to the days in which God kept me? 3 When his lamp shined over my head, & I walked by his light in darkness? 4 As I was in the days of my youth, when God was secretly in my tabernacle? 5 When the Omnipotent was with me: and my servants round about me? 6 When I washed my feet with butter, and the rock poured the rivers of oil? 7 When I went forth to the gate of the city, and in the street they prepared me a chair? 8 Young men saw me, and hid themselves: and old men rising up stood. 9 The Princes ceased to speak, and did put the finger upon their mouth. 10 Dukes held in their voice, and their tongue cleaved to their throat. 11 The ear hearing counted me blessed, and the eye seeing gave testimony to me: 12 For that I had delivered the poor man crying out, and the pupil, that had no helper. 13 The blessing of him that was ready to perish came upon me, and I comforted the heart of the widow. 14 I was clothed with justice: and I revested me with my judgment, as with a garment and crown. 15 I was an eye to the blind, and a foot to the lame. 16 I was the father of the poor: and the cause which I knew not, I searched most diligently. 17 I brake the jaws of the wicked man, and out of his teeth I took away the prey. 18 And I said: I will die in my little nest, and as a palmtree will multiply days. 19 My root is opened beside the waters, and dew shall continue in my harvest. 20 My glory shall always be renewed, and my bow in my hand shall be repaired. 21 They that heard me, expected sentence, and attent held their peace at my counsel. 22 To my words they durst add nothing, and my speech distilled upon them. 23 They expected me as rain, and they opened their mouth as it were to a lateward shower. 24 If at any time I laughed on them, they believed not, and the light of my countenance fell not on the earth. 25 If I would have gone to them, I sat first, and when I sat (b) as a king with his army standing about him, yet was I a comforter of them that mourned.

(b) This particles (as) importeth not here a similitude, but rather that he was a very King or supreme Prince, as having supreme authority. v. 7. royal vesture and crown. v. 14. Isidorus li. de vita Sanct. Beda & alij.

CHAPTER XXX.

Holy Job sheweth the great change of his temporal estate, from welfare into great calamity.

But now they of younger time scorn me, whose fathers I vouchsafed not to put (a) with the dogs of my flock:

(a) Men scarce fit to have care of dogs derided Job in his affliction: so he was contemned of the most contemptible.

2 The force of whose hands was to me as nothing, & they were thought unworthy of life it-self. 3 Barren with poverty and famine, who gnawed in the wilderness, ill favoured by calamity and misery. 4 And they did eat grass, and the barks of trees, and the root of junipers was their meat. 5 Who taking these things violently out of the valleys, when they had found every thing, they ran to them with a cry. 6 They dwelt in the deserts of torrents, and in caves of the earth, or upon gravel. 7 Who rejoiced among these kind of things, and counted it delicacies to be under the briars. 8 The children of foolish and base men, and in the earth not appearing at all. 9 Now am I turned into their song, and become a proverb with them. 10 They abhor me, and fly far from me, and are not afraid (b) to spit in my face.

(b) Our Saviour also suffered this reproach, Mat. 26. In the Hebrew have put, in the plural number, importing plurality of Divine Persons.

11 For he hath opened his quiver, and hath afflicted me, and hath put a bridle into my mouth. 12 At the right hand of me rising, my calamities forthwith arose: they have overthrown my feet, & as with waves have oppressed with their paths. 13 They have dissipated my ways, they have lien in wait against me, and they have prevailed, and there was not that would help. 14 As when a wall is broken, and the gate opened, they have broken violently upon me, and are come tumbling down to my miseries. 15 I am brought to nothing: as a wind thou hast taken away my desire: and my prosperity hath passed away as a cloud. 16 And now my soul withereth in myself, and the days of affliction possess me. 17 In the night my bone is pierced with sorrows: and they that eat me, sleep not. 18 In the multitude of them my garment is consumed, and they have girded me about, as it were with the collar of a coat. 19 I am compared to durt, and am resembled to imbers and ashes. 20 I cry to thee, and thou hearest me not: I stand, and thou doest not respect me. 21 Thou art changed to be cruel toward me, and in the hardness of thy hand thou art against me. 22 Thou didst lift me up, and setting me as it were upon the wind thou hast mightily dashed me. 23 I know (c) that thou wilt deliver me to death, where a house is appointed for every one that liveth.

(c) Death is a comfort to a just man in tribulation.

24 But yet not to my consumption doest thou send forth thy hand: and if they shall fall, thou wilt save. 25 I wept sometime upon him that was afflicted, & my soul had compassion on the poor. 26 I expected good things, and evils are come upon me: tarried for light, and darkness brake forth. 27 My inner parts have boiled without any rest, the days of affliction have prevented me. 28 I went mourning without fury, rising up, I cried in the multitude. 29 I was the (d) brother of dragons, and fellow of Ostriches:

(d) Like to such beasts as seek solitary places to lament in.

30 My skin is made black upon me, and my bones are dried with heat. 31 My harp is turned into mourning, and my instrument into the voice of weepers.

CHAPTER XXXI.

Holy Job reciteth sincerely his own virtues, shewing thereby that he is not punished so grievously for his sins, but by God's providence for some other cause.

I have (a) made a covenant with mine eyes, that I would not so much as (b) think of a virgin.

(a) Whereas there is a continual war between a chaste mind and rebellious flesh, holy Job made his condition of truce between these enemies: that his eye should never give occasion to carnal concupiscence. (b) By which means, he was also safe from carnal cogitations. S. Greg. li. 21. c. 2.

2 For what part should God from above have in me, and inheritance the Omnipotent from on high? 3 Is there not perdition to the wicked man, and alienation to them that work injustice? 4 Doth not he consider my ways, and number all my steps? 5 If I have walked in vanity, and my foot hath hastened in guile: 6 Let him weigh me in a just balance, and let God know my simplicity. 7 If my step have declined out of the way, and if my heart hath followed mine eyes, and if spot hath cleaved to my hands: 8 Let me sow, and let another eat it: and let my progeny be plucked up by the roots. 9 If my heart hath been deceived upon a woman, and if I have lien in wait at my friend's door: 10 Let my wife be the harlot of another man, and let other men lie with her. 11 For this is a heinous thing, and most great iniquity. 12 It is a fire devouring even to perdition, and rooting up all things that spring. 13 If I have contemned to abide judgment with my man-servant, & my maid-servant, when they had any controversy against me. 14 For what shall I do when God shall rise to judge? And when he shall ask, what shall I answer him? 15 Did not he make me in the womb that made him also: & did not one form me in the matrice? 16 If I have denied to the poor, that which they would, & have made the eyes of the widow to expect: 17 If I have eaten my morsel alone, and the pupil hath not eaten thereof with me. 18 (Because from mine infancy mercy hath grown with me: and from my mother's womb it came forth with me.) 19 If I have despised him that perisheth, for that he had not clothing, and the poor man without wherewithal to cover him: 20 If his sides have not blessed me, and he was not warmed with the fleeces of my sheep: 21 If I have lifted up my hand over the pupil, yea when I saw myself in the gate the superior: 22 Let my shoulder fall from his juncture, and let my arm with his bones be broken. 23 For I have always feared God as waves swelling upon me, & his weight I could not bear. 24 If I have thought gold my strength, and have said to fine gold: My confidence. 25 If I have rejoiced upon my great riches, and because my hand found many things. 26 If I saw the sun when it shined, and the moon going clearly: 27 And my heart in secret rejoiced, and I kissed my hand with my mouth. 28 Which is (c) most great iniquity, and a denial against God the most high?

(c) By this demand he provoked his adversaries to produce what they could to convince him of idolatry or denying God, wherewith they indirectly charged him.

29 If I have been glad of his fall that hated me, and have rejoiced that evil had found him. 30 For I have not given my throat to sin, that cursing I wished his soul. 31 If the men of my tabernacle have not said: Who will give of his flesh that we may be filled? 32 The stranger tarried not without, my door was open to the wayfaring man. 33 If as man I have hid my sin, and have concealed my iniquity in my bosom. 34 If I have been afraid at a very great multitude, and the contempt of kinsmen hath terrified me: and I have not rather held my peace, & not gone out of the door. 35 Who will grant me an hearer, that the Omnipotent would hear my desire: and that himself that judgeth would write a book. 36 That I may carry it on my shoulder, and put it about me as a crown? 37 At every step of mine I will pronounce it, and as to the Prince I will offer it. 38 If my land cry against me, & with it the furrows thereof lament: 39 If I have eaten the fruits thereof without money, and have afflicted the soul of the tillers thereof. 40 For wheat let the briar grow to me, and for barley the thorn. (d)

(d) Job disputed no more with his friends but afterward submitted himself to God, acknowledging some unadvised speech. c. 39. v. 37. c. 42. v. 3.

(d) The words of Job are ended.

CHAPTER XXXII.

Eliu a young man, being angry that Job persisted in his opinion, and that his three friends could not convince him, 8. taketh upon him to confute Job, which they could not do.

But[1] these three men omitted to answer Job, for that he seemed just to himself.

[1] The ninth conflict.

2 And (a) Eliu the son of Barachel a Buzite, of the kindred of Ram, was angry and took indignation: and he was angry against Job, for that he said himself to be just before God.

3 Moreover against his friends he had indignation, for that they had not found a reasonable answer, but only had condemned Job. 4 Therefore Eliu expected Job speaking, because they were his elders that spake. 5 But when he saw that the three were not able to answer, he was wrath exceedingly. 6 And Eliu the son of Barachel a Buzite answering, said: I am younger in time, and you more ancient, therefore casting down my head, I was afraid to shew you my sentence. 7 For I hoped that longer age would speak, and that a multitude of years would teach wisdom. 8 But as I see, there is a Spirit in men, and the inspiration of the Omnipotent giveth understanding. 9 They of many years are not the wise men, neither do the ancients understand judgment. 10 Therefore will I speak: Hear ye me, I also will shew you my wisdom. 11 For I have expected your words, I have heard your wisdom, as long as you contended in words. 12 And as long as I thought you said somewhat, I considered: but as I see, (b) here is none of you that can reprove Job, and answer to his words.

(b) A notorious arrogancy to hold himself wiser than any man, either of his own sect, or of his adversaries.

13 Lest perhaps you may say: We have found wisdom, God hath rejected him, not man. 14 He hath spoken nothing (c) to me, and I will not answer him according to your words.

(c) Those that neither credit Catholic Doctors, nor yet rely upon their own elders, but every one upon his own private spirit, deny that to pertain to them which is spoken to others in the same errors. S. Greg. l. 23. c. 8.

15 They were afraid, and answered no more, and they have taken away talk from themselves. 16 Therefore because I have expected, and they spake not: they stood, and answered no more: 17 I also will answer my part, & will shew my knowledge. 18 For I am full of words, and the spirit of my belly straiteneth me. 19 Behold, my belly is as new wine without a vent, which breaketh new vessels. 20 I will speak, and take breath a little: I will open my lips, and will answer. 21 I will not accept the person of a man, & I will not make God equal to man. 22 For I know not how long I shall continue, and whether after a while my maker will take me away.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

Eliu endeavoureth to prove by Job's speech that he is unjust: 13. arguing that God (by afflicting him) hath already so judged. 23. But if by an Angel's admonition he repent, all shall be remitted.

Hear therefore Job my sayings, and harken to all my words. 2 Behold I have opened my mouth, let my tongue speak within my jaws. 3 My words are of my simple heart, and my lips shall speak a pure sentence. 4 The Spirit of God made me, and the breadth of the Omnipotent gave me life. 5 If thou canst, answer me, and stand against my face. 6 Behold God hath made me also even as thee, and of the same clay I also was formed. 7 But yet let not my (a) miracle terrify thee, and let not my eloquence be burdenous to thee.

8 Thou therefore hast said in my ears, and I have heard the voice of thy words: 9 I am clean, and without sin: unspotted, and there is no iniquity in me. 10 Because he hath found quarrels in me, therefore hath he thought me his enemy. 11 He hath put my feet in the stocks, he hath observed all my ways. 12 This therefore is it, wherein thou art not justified: I will answer thee, that God is greater than man. 13 Doest thou contend against him because he hath not answered thee to all words? 14 God, (b) speaketh once, and repeateth not the self-same the second time.

(b) It is true that God's will once uttered ought to suffice all men, for he answereth not to each one by a particular speech, but by common speech (or fact) satisfieth all men's questions: whereof S. Gregory noteth this general rule: Vita praecedentium sit forma sequentium: The life of them that go before is made a form (or rule) of them that follow. li. 23. c. 18. &. 19. But Eliu falsely supposed, that God by Job's affliction had declared that he was a wicked man. For indeed God declared the contrary c. 1. v. 1. & 8. c. 2. v. 3.

15 By a dream in a vision by night, when heavy sleep falleth upon men, and they sleep in their bed. 16 Then doth he open the ears of men, and teaching instructeth them with discipline. 17 That he may turn a man from these things, which he doth, and may deliver him from pride: 18 Delivering his soul from corruption: and his life, that it pass not unto the sword. 19 He rebuketh also by sorrow in the bed, and he maketh all his bones to wither. 20 Bread is become abominable to him in his life, and to his soul the meat before desired. 21 His flesh shall consume, and the bones that had been covered, shall be made naked. 22 His soul hath approached to corruption, and his life to things causing death. 23 If there shall be an Angel speaking for him, one of thousands, to declare man's equity. 24 He shall have mercy on him, and shall say: deliver him, that he descend not into corruption: I have found wherein I may be propitious to him. 25 His flesh is consumed with punishments, let it return to the days of his youth. 26 He shall beseech God, and he will be pacified towards him: and he shall see his face in jubilation, and he will render to a man his justice. 27 He shall behold men, and shall say: I have sinned, and indeed I have offended, and as I was worthy, I have not received. 28 He hath delivered his soul that it should not go into death, but living should see the light. 29 Behold all these things doth God work three times in every one. 30 That he may reclaim their souls from corruption, and illuminate them with the light of the living. 31 Attend Job, and hear me: and hold thy peace, whilst I speak. 32 But if thou hast what to speak, answer me, speak, for I would thee to appear just. 33 And if thou have not, hear me: hold thy peace, & I will teach thee wisdom.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

Again Eliu chargeth Job with blasphemy, and other crimes, 10. sheweth the equity of God's judgement: 20. and that all things are subject to God's power and knowledge.

Eliu therefore pronouncing spake these words also: 2 Hear ye wise men my words: and ye learned harken to me: 3 For the ear proveth words, and the throat discerneth meats by the taste. 4 Let us choose us judgment, and among us let us see what is the better. 5 Because Job said: I am just, and God hath (a) subverted my judgment.

(a) Job said not that God subverted judgement (or wrongfully judged) but God hath taken away my judgement. cha. 27. v. 2. that is, deferred to judge my cause.

6 For in judging me there is a lie: mine arrow is violent without any sin. 7 What man is there as is Job, that drinketh scorning as it were water? 8 What goeth with them that work iniquity, and walketh with impious men? 9 For he hath said: Man shall not please God (b) although he run with him.

(b) Neither did Job say this (c. 9. v. 22.) but Eliu wrested his meaning, that he might have something to reprehend. S. Greg. li. 24. c. 25.

10 Therefore ye discreet men hear me, far from God be impiety, and iniquity from the Omnipotent. 11 For he will render a man his work, & according to the ways of every one he will recompense them. 12 For in very deed God will not condemn without cause, neither will the Omnipotent subvert judgment. 13 What other hath he appointed over the earth? or whom hath he set over the world, which he made? 14 If he direct his heart to him, he shall draw his spirit and breath unto him. 15 All flesh shall fail together, and man shall return into ashes. 16 If then thou have understanding, hear that is said, and harken to the voice of my speech. 17 Can he that loveth not judgment, be healed? And how doest thou so far condemn him that is just? 18 That saith to the king, Apostata: that calleth dukes impious: 19 Who accepteth not the persons of Princes: nor hath known the tyrant, when he contended against the poor man: for all are the work of his hands. 20 They shall suddenly die, and at mid-night peoples shall be troubled, & shall pass, & take away the violent without hand. 21 For his eyes are upon the ways of men, and he considereth all their steps. 22 There is not darkness, & there is not shadow of death, that they may be hid there which work iniquity. 23 For it is no more in man's power to come to God into judgment. 24 He shall destroy many, & innumerable, & shall make other to stand for them. 25 For he knoweth their works: and therefore he shall bring night, and they shall be destroyed. 26 As impious men he hath strucken them in the place of them that see. 27 Who as it were of purpose have revolted from him, & would not understand all his ways: 28 That they might cause the cry of the needy man to come to him, & he heard the voice of the poor. 29 For he granting peace, who is there that can condemn? After he shall hide his countenance, who is there that may behold him, both upon nations, and upon all men? 30 Who maketh a man that is (b) an hypocrite reign for the sins of the people.

(b) Eliu applieth this to Job, as though he had made false shew of virtue which he had not, and that God had suffered him hitherto to reign, or rather to tyrannize for just punishment of his people's sins. But God at last declared that Job was not such a one, ch. 42. v. 7.

31 Therefore because I have spoken to God, thee also I will not prohibit. 32 If I have erred, teach thou me: If I have spoken iniquity, I will add no more. 33 Doth God require it of thee, because it hath displeased thee? For thou beganst to speak, and not I: but if thou know any better thing, speak. 34 Let men of understanding speak to me, and let a wiseman hear me. 35 But Job hath spoken foolishly, and his words sound not discipline. 36 O my father, let Job be proved even to the end: cease not from the man of iniquity. 37 Who addeth blasphemy upon his sins, let him be restrained in the mean time among us: and then let him provoke God to judgment with his speeches.

CHAPTER XXXV.

Eliu pretending that Job had said God to be unjust, sheweth that man's piety nor impiety neither profiteth nor disprofiteth God: 13. and that he judgeth all things rightly.

Therefore Eliu again spake these words: 2 Doth thy cogitation seem just to thee, that thou saidst: (a) I am juster than God?

(a) Eliu insisteth much in this calumniation: for Job never said, that he was just compared with God, nor juster than God. But that his affliction was greater than his sin. ch. 6. v. 3. c. 23. v. 7. &c.

3 For thou saidst: That which is right doth not please thee: or what will it profit thee if I sin? 4 Therefore will I answer to thy words, and to thy friends with thee. 5 (b) Look up to heaven and see, and behold the sky, that it is higher than thou.

(b) These are strong sentences (saith S. Gregory) but they agree not (or be evil applied) to the blessed person of Job. li. 26. c. 7.

6 If thou sin, what shalt thou hurt him? And if thine iniquities be multiplied, what shall thou do against him? 7 Moreover if thou do justly, what shalt thou give him, or what shall he receive of thy hand? 8 Man that is like to thee, thy impiety shall hurt: and thy justice shall help the son of man. 9 Because of the multitude of calumniators they shall cry: and shall wail for the force of the arm of tyrants. 10 And he hath not said: Where is God, that made me, that hath given songs in the night? 11 Who teacheth us above the beasts of the earth, and instructeth us above the fowls of the air. 12 There shall they cry, and he will not hear, because of the pride of the evil. 13 God therefore will not hear without cause, and the Omnipotent will behold the causes of every one. 14 Yea when thou shalt say: He considereth not: be judged before him, and expect him. 15 For he doth not now infer his fury, neither doth he revenge wickedness exceedingly. 16 Therefore Job in vain openeth his mouth, and without knowledge multiplieth words.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

Yet further Eliu sheweth, that God by his power and wisdom giveth to every one that is just. 16. Inferring (falsely) that all Job's affliction is for his sins: 22. discoursing still of God's power, wisdom, and providence.

Eliu also adding spake these words: 2 Bear with me a little, and I will shew to thee: for as yet I have what to speak for God. 3 I will repeat my knowledge from the beginning, and I will prove my maker just. 4 For indeed my words are (a) without lie, & perfect knowledge shall be proved to thee.

(a) No orator is so vain but he promiseth all truth, & speaketh some to get credit with his auditory.

5 God doth not cast away the mighty, whereas himself also is mighty. 6 But he saveth not the impious, and he giveth judgment to the poor. 7 He shall not take away his eyes from the just man, and he placeth kings in the throne (b) for ever, and there they are extolled.

(b) If Kings reign well their praise remaineth for ever. v. 11.

8 And if they shall be in chains, & be bound with the ropes of poverty. 9 He shall shew them their works, and their wicked deeds, because they have been violent. 10 He also shall reveal their ear, to chastise them: & shall speak, that they may return from iniquity: 11 If they shall hear and observe, they shall accomplish their days in good, and their years in glory. 12 But if they hear not, they shall pass by the sword, and shall be consumed in folly. 13 Dissemblers and crafty men provoke the wrath of God, neither shall they cry when they are bound. 14 Their soul shall die in tempest, and their life, among the effeminates. 15 He shall deliver the poor out of his distress, and shall reveal his ear in tribulation. 16 Therefore he shall save thee most largely out of the narrow mouth, and not having foundation under it: and the quietness of thy table shall be full of fatness. 17 Thy cause is judged as an impious man's, cause and judgment thou shalt receive. 18 Let not therefore anger overcome thee, that thou oppress any man: neither let multitude of gifts incline thee. 19 Lay down thy greatness without tribulation, & all the puissant of strength. 20 (c) Protract not the night, that (d) peoples may come up for them.

(c) The night is drawn long, when tentations are not speedily resisted. (d) whereby still worse & worse cogitations succeed in place of the first. S. Greg. l. 26. c. 38.

21 Beware thou decline not to iniquity: for thou hast begun to follow it after misery. 22 Behold, God is high in his strength, and none is like to him (e) among the law givers.

(e) Above all other Law-givers God is most able to punish transgressors, but most willing & most able to reward the observers. S. Gregory expoundeth this to be a prophecy of Christ our singular Law-giver. l. 27. c. 1.

23 Who can search his ways? Or who can say to him: Thou hast wrought iniquity? 24 Remember that thou knowest not his work, whereof men have sung. 25 All men see him, every one beholdeth far off. 26 Behold, God is great surmounting our knowledge: the number of his years is inestimable. 27 Who taketh away the drops of rain, & poureth out showers as it were gifts of water. 28 Which flow out from the clouds, that cover all things from above. 29 If he will stretch forth clouds as his tent, 30 And lighten with his light from above, he shall cover also the ends of the sea. 31 For by these he judgeth peoples, and giveth victuals to many mortal men. 32 In his hands (f) he hideth the light, & commandeth it that it come again.

(f) Christ will give the glorious light of heaven, which now is hidden to men that lost terrestrial paradise. ibidem. c. 12.

33 He sheweth his friend thereof, that it is his possession, and that he may ascend to it.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

Eliu continueth his discourse, shewing God's wisdom, power, and justice, by his marvelous works of Meteors, 14. and use thereof to man's commodity: 18. which the wisest men sufficiently understand not, much less may presume (as he unjustly chargeth Job) to contend with God:

Upon (a) this my heart is sore afraid, and is moved out of his place.

(a) Consideration of heavenly rewards mentioned in the end of the former chapter, comforteth the afflicted: but thunder and other meteors being figures of God's judgement, strike the heart with terror.

2 Hear ye his speech in the terror of his voice, and the sound proceeding out of his mouth. 3 Under all the heavens he considereth, and his light is upon the ends of the earth. 4 After him shall sounding roar, he shall thunder with the voice of his greatness, and shall not be found out when his voice shall be heard. 5 God shall thunder in his voice marvelously, he that doeth great & unsearchable things. 6 He that commandeth the snow to descend upon the earth, and the winter rains, and the shower of his strength. 7 He that signeth in the hand of all men, that every one may know his works. 8 The beast shall enter into his covert, and shall abide in his den. 9 From the inner parts shall a tempest come forth, & cold from (b) Arcturus.

(b) North wind, or north-pole.

10 When God bloweth^ frost congealeth, and again waters are poured most largely. 11 Corn desireth clouds, & the clouds spread their light. 12 Which go round about, whither-soever the will of (c) the governer shall lead them, to all that he shall command them upon the face of the whole earth.

(c) God directeth the clouds in the air, as a master mariner governeth a ship.

13 Whether in one tribe, or in his land, or in what place soever of his mercy he shall command them to be found. 14 Harken to these things Job: stand, and consider the marvels of God. 15 Doest thou know when God commanded the rains, that they shew the light of his clouds? 16 Knowest thou the great paths of the clouds, and the perfect knowledges? 17 Are not thy garments hot, when the earth shall be blown with the South wind? 18 Thou perhaps madest the heavens with him, which are most sound, cast as it were of brass. 19 Shew us what we may say to him: for we are wrapped in darkness. 20 Who shall tell him the things that I speak? Yea if man shall speak, he shall be devoured. 21 But now they see not the light: suddenly the air shall be thickened into clouds, and the wind passing by shall drive them away. 22 From the North gold cometh, & toward God (d) fearful praising.

(d) Man not able to praise God sufficiently, praiseth him with fear.

23 We cannot find him worthily: great of strength, and judgment, and justice, and he cannot be uttered. 24 Therefore shall men fear him, and all that seem to themselves to be wise, shall not dare to behold him. [1]

[1] Job convinced the former three with sound answers: this last and most arrogant with silence.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

God after terror of a whirlwind, by way of examining his client Job of diverse creatures about their nature, sheweth that no man hath perfect knowledge of them, much less of God's immensity.

But [1] our Lord answering Job out of a whirlwind, said:

[1] The third part.
The tenth and last dispute.
God discusseth the controversy, and giveth sentence for Job.

2 Who is this that wrappeth in sentences with unskillful words? 3 Gird thy loins as a man: I will ask thee, and (a) answer thou me.

(a) Only the Creator hath absolute and perfect knowledge of all creatures. As may appear by induction, or example:

4 Where wast thou when I laid (b) the foundations of the earth? Tell me if thou hast understanding.

(b) Of the creation of the earth.

5 Who set the measures thereof, if thou know: or who stretched out the line upon it? 6 Upon what are the foundations thereof grounded? Or who let down the corner stone thereof, 7 when the morning stars praised me together, and all the sons of God made jubilation? 8 Who shut in the (c) sea with doors when it brake forth, proceeding as it were out of a matrice:

(c) Of the sea,

9 When I made a cloud the garment thereof, and wrapped it in darkness as in clouts of infancy. 10 I compassed it with my bounds, and put bar and doors. 11 And I said. Hitherto thou shalt come, and shalt not proceed farther, and here thou shalt break thy swelling waves. 12 Didst thou after thy birth command (d) the morning, and shew the dawning his place?

(d) Distinction of lights,

13 And didst thou hold the extremities of the earth shaking them & hast thou shaken the impious out of it? 14 The seal shall be restored as clay, and shall stand as a garment: 15 From the impious their light shall be taken away, and the high arm shall be broken. 16 Hast thou entered into (e) the depths of the sea, and walked in the lowest parts of the great depth?

(e) The depth of the sea,

17 Have the gates of death been open to thee, & hast thou seen the darksome doors? 18 Hast thou considered the breadth of the earth? Tell me if thou know all things, 19 In what way the light dwelleth, & what is the place of darkness. 20 That thou canst bring every thing to his borders, & understand the paths of the house thereof. 21 (f) Didst thou know then that thou shouldest be born? & didst thou know the number of thy days?

(f) Man's own nativity, and what shall happen after his death,

22 Hast thou entered into the treasures of the snow, or hast thou beheld treasures of hail? 23 Which I have prepared for the time of the enemy, for the day of fight & battle? 24 What way is the (g) light spread, is heat divided upon the earth?

(g) The sun's light and heat.

25 Who (h) gave course to the most vehement shower, and the way of the sounding thunder:

(h) Diverse Meteors.

26 That it should rain upon the earth, without man in the desert, where no mortal man abideth: 27 That it should fill the desert and desolate ground, and should bring forth green grass? 28 Who is the father of rain? Or who begot the drops of dew? 29 Out of whose womb came forth ice? And frost from heaven who engendered? 30 Waters are hardened like stone, and the face of the depth is congealed. 31 Shalt thou be able to join together the shining (i) stars Pleiades, or canst thou dissipate the circuit of Arcturus?

(i) Stars, and planets.

32 Doest thou bring forth the day star in his time, & make the evening star to rise upon the children of the earth? 33 Doest thou know the order of heaven, and shalt thou put down the reason thereof on the earth? 34 Shalt thou elevate the voice in the cloud, & the violence of the waters cover thee? 35 Shalt thou send lightnings, and will they go, and returning shall they say to thee: Here we are? 36 Who put (k) wisdom in the heart of man or who gave the (l) cock understanding?

(k) Man hath his knowledge from God. (l) And the cock hath skill which man wanteth.

37 Who shall declare the manner of the heavens, and the harmony of heaven who shall make to [1] sleep?

[1] * or rest from motion.

38 When was the dust poured on the earth, and the clods compact together? 39 (m) Shalt thou take a prey for the lioness and fill the appetite of her whelps?

(m) In some Editions the 39. chap. beginneth here. Shewing by induction of sensible things (as before of insensible) that only God knoweth the nature of all creatures.

40 When they lie in the dens, & in holes sit in wait? 41 Who prepareth for the raven her meat, when her young ones cry to God, wandering about, because they have not meat?

CHAPTER XXXIX.

God Almighty prosecuteth his discourse, shewing his admirable power and providence in living creatures. 24. Whereupon Job acknowledgeth his own oversight in some light words.

Hast (a) thou known the time when the (b) wild goats bring forth young among the rocks, or hast thou observed the (c) hinds when they fawn?

(a) By God's marvelous providence appearing in the natural instinct of other creatures man may consider that the same is greater towards him. And therefore God here proposeth the examples of (b) Wild goats. (c) Hinds.

2 Hast thou numbered the months of their conceiving, and known the time of their bearing? 3 They bow down themselves to bring forth young, and they cast them, and make roarings. 4 Their young are separated, and go to feed: they go forth, and return not to them. 5 Who hath dismist the (d) wild ass free, and who hath loosed his bonds?

(d) Wild asses.

6 To whom I have given a house in the wilderness, and his tabernacles in the land of saltness. 7 He contemneth the multitude of the city, the cry of the exactor he heareth not. 8 He looketh about the mountains of his pasture, and seeketh out all green places. 9 Will the (e) Rhinoceros serve thee, and will he tarry at thy stall?

(e) Unicorns.

10 Shalt thou tie the Rhinoceros with thy collar to plough, or will he break the clods of the valleys after thee? 11 Shalt thou have confidence in his great strength, and leave thy labours unto him? 12 Wilt thou credit him that he will render thee the seed, and gather together thy barn floor? 13 The wing of the (f) Ostrich is like to the wings of the (g) Herodius, and of the hawk.

(f) Ostriches. (g) Falcons, or Ierfalcons, & other hawks.

14 When she leaveth her eggs on the earth, thou perhaps wilt heat them in the dust. 15 She forgeteth that foot may tread upon them, or beast of the field break them. 16 She is hardened toward her young, as though they were not hers, she hath laboured in vain no fear compelling her. 17 For God hath deprived her of wisdom, neither hath he given her understanding. 18 When time shall be, she setteth up the wings on high: she scorneth the horse and his rider. 19 Shalt thou give strength to the (h) horse, or put neighing about his neck?

(h) Horses are of singular great courage.

20 Shalt thou raise him up as Locusts? The glory of his nostrils is terror. 21 He diggeth the earth with his hoof, he pranceth boldly, he goeth forward to meet the armed men. 22 He contemneth fear, neither yieldeth he to the sword. 23 Upon him shall the quiver sound, the spear shall glister and the shield. 24 Fervent and fuming he suppeth the earth, neither doth he make account when the noise of the trumpet soundeth. 25 When he shall hear the trumpet he saith: Vah, he smelleth battle far off, the exhortation of the captains, and the cry of the army. 26 Doth the (i) hawk wax feathered by thy wisdom, spreading her wings to the South?

(i) Hawks; whereof Aristotel saith there be ten kinds:

Pliny sixteen.

27 Shall the (k) eagle mount at thy commandment, and put her nest in high places?

(k) Eagles, of most strong sight.

28 She abideth in rocks, and tarrieth among cragged flints, and stony hills where is no access. 29 Thence she beholdeth the prey, and her eyes see a far off. 30 Her young ones shall lick blood: and wheresoever the carcass shall be, she is present by and by. 31 And our Lord added, and spake to Job: 32 He that contendeth with God is he quieted so easily? Verily he that reproveth God, ought to answer him. 33 But Job answering our Lord, said: 34 I that have spoken (l) lightly what can I answer? I will put my hand upon my mouth.

(l) If we discuss all Job's words (saith S. Gregory.) we shall find nothing wickedly spoken, but only small specie of pride in speaking too much of his own affliction, & too little of God's goodness towards him. li. 23. c. 1.

35 One thing I have spoken, which I would I had not said: and another, to the which things I will add no more.

CHAPTER XL.

Our Lord further sheweth that man's power, nor justice, is not comparable to God's: 10. as appeareth in overcoming Behemoth 20. and Leviathan.

And our Lord answering Job out of the whirlwind, said: 2 Gird thy loins as a man: I will ask thee, & do thou tell me. 3 Shalt thou make my (a) judgment of none effect: and condemn me, that thou mayst be justified?

(a) Though Job had truly avouched that his sins deserved not so great afflictions, yet he ought to have acknowledged that God afflicted him justly, for some other cause known to God, but unknown to him: which he not confessing seemed to make God's judgement unjust or of none effect. S. Greg. l. 32. c. 3.

4 And hast thou an arm as God, and dost thou thunder with like voice? 5 Put beauty about thee, and set up thyself aloft, and be glorious, and put on goodly garments. 6 Disperse the proud in thy fury, and beholding every arrogant man, humble him. 7 Behold all the proud, and confound them, and destroy the impious in their place. 8 Hide them in the dust together, and plunge their faces in the pit. 9 And I will confess, that thy right hand is able to save thee.

10 Behold (b) Behemoth whom I made with thee, shall eat hay as it were an oxe.

(b) An Elephant the greatest of all beasts, of long life, strong, meek, temperate, chaste, overcome by the Unicorn, or Dragon, or taken by the nose & led away. How much more doth God's providence give man power to overcome the devil?

11 His strength is in his loins, and his power in the navel of his belly. 12 He gathereth together his tail as the cedar tree, the sinews of his stones are perplex. 13 His bones are as pipes of brass, his gristle as it were plates of iron. 14 He is the beginning of the ways of God, which made him, he shall apply his sword. 15 To him the mountains bear grass: all the beasts of the field shall play there. 16 He sleepeth under the shadow, in the secret of the reed, and in moist places. 17 Shadows do protect his shadow, the willows of the torrent shall compass him. 18 Lo, he shall sup up the river, & shall not marvel: and he hath confidence that Jordan may run into his mouth. 19 In his eyes as with a hook he shall take him, and with stakes he shall bore through his nostrils. 20 Canst thou draw out the (c) Leviathan with a hook, and with a rope shalt thou tie his tongue?

(c) An huge great fish, perhaps the whale, exceeding man's power to be managed, yet is subject (as also the devil signified thereby) to God's power, & providence.

21 Shalt thou put a ring in his nostrils, or bore through his jaw with a buckle? 22 Will he multiply prayers to thee, or speak to thee gentle words? 23 Will he make a covenant with thee, and shalt thou take him to be a servant for ever? 24 Shalt thou delude him as a bird, or tie him for thy handmaids? 25 Shall friends cut him, merchants divide him? 26 Shalt thou fill nests with his skin, and the cabin of fishes with his head? 27 Lay thy hand upon him: remember battle, and add to speak no more. 28 Behold his hope shall frustrate him, and in the sight of all he shall be cast down headlong.

CHAPTER XLI.

Leviathan is further described by the peculiar parts of his body, and terrible composition of all his members.

Not as (a) cruel will I raise him: for who can resist my countenance?

(a) God ruleth all his creatures, not with cruelty as a tyrant, but with justice, ease, & power.

2 Who hath given me before, that I may render unto him? All things that are under heaven be mine. 3 I will not spare him, and his mighty words, and framed to beseech. 4 Who shall reveal the face of his garment: and who shall enter into the midst of his mouth? 5 Who shall open the gate of his countenance? Dread is round about his teeth. 6 His body as shields that are cast, compact with scales fast cleaving together. 7 One is joined to another, and not so much as any air entereth between them: 8 One shall stick to another, and holding each other, they shall not be separated. 9 His sneezing is as the shining of fire, and his eyes as the twinklings of the morning. 10 Out of his mouth proceed lamps, as it were torches of lighted fire. 11 Out of his nostrils proceedeth smoke, as it were of a pot heated and boiling. 12 His breath maketh coals to burn, & a flame cometh forth out of his mouth. 13 In his neck shall strength abide, and neediness goeth before his face. 14 The members of his flesh cleave together one to another: (b) he shall send lightnings against him, and he shall not be carried to another place.

(b) God at last destroyeth him whom man cannot overcome.

15 His heart shall be hardened as a stone, and shall be stiffly compact as the smith's stithy. 16 When he shall be taken away, the (c) Angels shall fear, and being feared shall be purged.

(c) Angels with reverent fear do honour God's power. And valiant mariners and other soldiers are terrified when they see this so huge a fish. Mystically, God's preachers & perfectest servants shall naturally fear the terror of God's judgement.

17 When the sword shall apprehend him, neither spear, nor breast-plate shall be able to abide. 18 For he shall esteem iron as chaff, & brass, as rotten wood. 19 The bow-man shall not put him to flight, the stones of the sling, to him are turned into stubble. 20 As stubble will he esteem the hammer, and he will laugh him to scorn that shaketh the spear. 21 The beams of the sun shall be under him, & he shall strew gold under him as durt. 22 He shall make the deep sea to boil as a pot, and shall put it as when ointments boil. 23 A path shall shine after him, he shall esteem the depth as waxing old. 24 There is no power upon the earth, that may be compared with him, who is made to fear no man. 25 He seeth every high thing, he is (d) king over all the children of pride.

(d) And the devil reigneth over proud men. S. Greg. li. 34. c. 4. & 17.

CHAPTER XLII.

Holy Job instructed and comforted by God's discourse, acknowledgeth his fault, and craveth pardon for his oversight in speech, or cogitation. 7. God justifieth his cause against his friends. 9. They offer sacrifice for their offence. 10. All things prosper with Job, double to that he had before: 16. and he dieth happily.

And Job answering our Lord, said: 2 I know that thou canst do all things, and no cogitation is hid from thee. 3 Who is this, that concealeth counsel without knowledge? Therefore have I spoken (a) unwisely, and the things that did exceed my knowledge beyond measure.

(a) Job here simply acknowledge his error in speaking so much in defence of his own innocency, & so little of God's providence in afflicting him, for his more merit, & God's more glory.

4 Hear (I beseech thee) and I will speak: I will ask thee, and do thou tell me. 5 With the hearing of the ear I have heard thee, but now my eye seeth thee. 6 Therefore (b) I reprehend myself, and I do penance in imbers and ashes.

(b) Before he defended a truth against his opposite friends, now with more resignation he contented himself with his affliction.

7 And after our Lord spake these words to Job, he said to Eliphaz the Themanite: My fury is wrath against thee, and against thy two friends, because you have not spoken right before me, as my servant Job. 8 Take therefore unto you seven oxen, and seven rams, & go to my servant Job, and offer holocaust for yourselves: and my servant Job shall pray for you: his face I will receive, that the folly be not imputed to you: for you have not spoken right things before me, as my servant Job. 9 Eliphaz therefore the Themanite, and Baldad the Suhite, and Sophar the Naamathite went, and did as our Lord had spoken to them, and our Lord received the face of Job. 10 Our Lord also was turned at the (c) penance of Job, when he prayed for his friends. And our Lord added all things whatsoever had been Job's, double.

(c) Job did penance both for himself and others.

11 And all his brethren came to him, and all his sisters, and all that knew him before, and they did eat bread with him in his house: and wagged the head upon him, & comforted him upon all the evil that God had brought in upon him. And every man gave him one ewe, and one earlet of gold. 12 And our Lord blessed the last days of Job more than his beginning. And he had fourteen thousand sheep, and six thousand camels, and a thousand yoke of oxen, and a thousand she asses. 13 And he had (d) seven sons, and three daughters.

(d) In that he had all other things double, and children in the same number as before, it is a sign that the former perished not, but died in good state.

14 And he called the name of one Dies, and the name of the second Cassia, and the name of the third Cornustibii. 15 And there were not found in all the earth women so beautiful as the daughters of Job: and their father gave them inheritance among their brethren. 16 And Job lived after these things, an hundred forty years, and he saw his children, and his children's children, unto the fourth generation, and he died an old man, and full of days.

ANNOTATIONS.
CHAP. XLII.

◦God by his sentence condemned the error of Job's friends, and justified his assertion.

7. You have not spoken right, as my servant Job.] Holy Job being throughly tried in the furnace of tribulation, & by divine instruction confirmed in perfect patience, and other virtues, God at last gave sentence, condemning the guilty,◦ and justifying the innocent: in plain terms pronouncing that Eliphaz, Baldad, & Sophar had not spoken right before him, as his servant Job. And so these three being convinced, that notwithstanding their former pretence of defending God's cause, they had erred, and Job had maintained the truth, they submitted themselves as faulty, and humbly did penance, bringing their oblations for sacrifice to Job, as they were commanded. v. 8. & 9.

[1] Errors ought not to be holden still, being once condemned.

[2] Much less raised

As for Eliu the last disputer, persisting more vehement in his error when the others ceased from contention, he was sufficiently condemned in his fellows. And the rather for that true point of his own doctrine (ch. 33. v. 14.) that God speaketh once, and repeateth not the same the second time. For it was ever a general rule, that when God once revealed any thing by public fact, or unto competent witnesses, it sufficed for ever, to all reasonable men,[1] and so Eliu might apply the sentence to himself, which God had denounced to his three friends, in the same cause. Much less are Protestants excusable, which not only persist in errors condemned in their own fellows, as in Luther, Calvin, Beza, and others, but also in other old heresies:[2] as their doctrine of justification by only faith condemned in the Apostles' time: their denying the ceremonies of Baptism, and the Sacraments of Confirmation, and of Penance, condemned in the Novatians: or that patient sustaining of worldly losses, and other afflictions, such as Job suffered, are not satisfactory, or meritorious works.[3]

As it is manifest likewise, that mediation of one man for another, did not derogate from God's benign mercy in the law of nature,[2] wherein these men lived. A BRIEF RECAPITULATION OF THIS STRANGE AND SACRED HISTORY.

[1]For avoiding prolixity (this volume growing great) we have for the most part contracted our Annotations into the margent, making very few others in this book, which otherwise offered much more occasion, as well for explicating hard places, as of other doctrinal and moral instructions. Neither indeed can ordinary Annotations well suffice for understanding of this, and other hard books. But rather large Commentaries are required, such as S. Gregory, and other ancient Fathers, as also F. John de Pineda, and others have lately written; whereto we therefore remit the learned readers. And for the benefit of others of our nation, we shall here briefly recapitulate the sum, and principal points of this holy and admirable history, consisting in a singular holy man's conflicts and glorious victory, against invisible and visible adversaries, both in prosperous and adverse fortune.[2]

[1] Why we have made few annotations in this book.

[2] The argument of this history.

First, this holy man Job in all aboundance of wealth and riches,[1] blessed with many children (ch. 1.) sitting in a princely throne and royal dignity (ch. 29.) in the land of Hus, was not only assaulted with common tentations of the envious enemy,[2] as all are that live piously in God, but so much the more, as he was more godly, sincerer, and perfecter than other men: yet he never set his heart upon worldly or temporal things, but with all due fear so served God, and parted from evil, that

[1] Job in prosperity was tempted invisibly more than ordinary men of lower state, or less perfection.

[3] Much more by loss of all his goods & children in one day. Most of by bodily affliction. And reviling of his wife.

Satan himself (the calumniator of mankind) could not charge him with any sin at all. Though he would not for all that confess him to be just or perfect: but for further trial of him, demanded and obtained licence of God to touch all his possessions, and so bereaved him of all his goods and children in one day. [3] And when he persevering constant in virtue, thanking God for all, not sinning in his lips, neither speaking any foolish thing against God, the devil getting more ample permission to touch his bones and flesh (chap. 2.) suddenly struck him with a most grievous botch (or boyle) from the sole of the foot to the top of the head: who sitting on a dunghill, and scraping the corruption of his sores with a shell in extreme pain, his own wife, by the devil's suggestion, reviled him for his sincerity, and provoked him to blaspheme God: but he severely reprehended her folly, still keeping necessary patience.

[1] Holy Job lamented his affliction, & the general miseries of man.

[2] Where Job expected comfort in tribulation, the devil procured him more affliction.

[3] Job sore afflicted in body had nine several conflicts about the cause thereof, before it was decided.

Then came three special friends, noble wise men (or little Kings) to visit, and comfort him, who in seven days not speaking one word of consolation, nor entering into any discourse with him, at last Job himself (chap. 3.) broke this long silence (but not his patience) lamentably bewailing the extremity of his pains, imputing all to the miseries of man's estate, [1] corrupted by sin, discoursed of certain penal evils, or maladies ensuing thereupon, wishing for his own part (if it had so been God's pleasure, for he sincerely feared God) that either he had not been born, or been shortly taken out of this world, cursing sin and the proper effects thereof remaining in man, wishing also to have wanted the ordinary benefits of education in his infancy, and all his former prosperity, so that he might have escaped the calamities, wherewith he was now afflicted. All which he uttering in way of contemning all worldly things, and supposing his friends there present would have so understood him, and had compassion with him: [2] they contrarywise (by art of the devil, God so permitting) fell into indignation, and in stead of comforting their most afflicted friend, sharply reprehended him, rashly judged his conscience, and falsely condemned him, not only of impatient speech, as offensive to God, and his Angels, and to all good men, but also of other enormous sins: as pride, tyranny, presumption, hypocrisy, and blasphemy, because heretofore he seemed to the world as just and holy, and now (as they imagined) in his deserved punishment, charged God with injustice. Whereupon grew diverse long disputes between Job and his three friends, a fourth also intruding himself, when the others ceased. So that Job endured nine conflicts, [3] and in the tenth God judged him the victor, which shall yet better appear, if we repeat the sum of their arguments, and his answers, with God's decision of the controversy.

[1] The first conflict.

[2] The many point of the controversy.

[1] In the first conflict Eliphaz the chiefest of Job's friends (in the 4. and 6. chapters) accused Job of great impatience, and insolency against God, also both him and his family of tyranny, like to a cruel lion, and lion's whelps, alleging for proof the prosperity of good men, punishment of the wicked, and a particular vision. Adjured him therefore to acknowledge and repent the same. But Job (in other two chapters) avouched that indeed his afflictions were greater than his sins deserved, [2] relying upon his innocency known to his own conscience. Described also the manifold calamities of man's life, desired to die, and so to end his worldly miseries.

[1] The second conflict.

[2] The ground of these men's error.

[1] Then Baldad the second opposite friend (in the 8. chap.) pretending to free God's judgement from all shew or resemblance of injustice, charged Job and his children with former wickedness, and him as injurious to God in his speeches, of which if he would repent, he should be healed, and prosper as before: Arguing in general, that God never afflicteth the innocent, [2] nor assisteth the malignant. Insinuating thereby, that Job was an hypocrite. Whereto Job answered (ch. 9. & 10.) that indeed no man may compare, nor justify himself before God. Nevertheless it standeth well with God's justice, power, & wisdom, that innocents be sometimes exercised with tribulations, more than their offences deserve.

[1] Thirdly Sophar (the third disputer) assaulted Job (ch. 11.) imputing his speech and defence of himself to loquacity, and audacious temerity, in that in that he desired to know the causes of God's providence, in so grievous afflicting him. Of which faults holy Job purged himself (in the three next chapters) still maintaining his innocency, according to his own conscience better known to himself than to them, desiring God to instruct him, if he had any unknown sins. Discoursed also much more profoundly of God's power, wisdom, justice, and providence, as well in general, as towards himself in particular: and professed his faith, and great confidence of the Resurrection. [2] Again Eliphaz (ch. 15.) more bitterly than before condemned Job of presumption, and blasphemy, discoursed of man's corruptness and proneness to sin, describing the manners of hypocrites, and other impious men, with their miserable ends, and argued Job for such a one. Who (in the next two chapters) expostulated with these his friends, that they coming with pretence to comfort him, did so violently afflict him, by charging him with false and heinous crimes, his own conscience better knowing and testifying his former life, and state of his soul, than that their imaginations could alter his judgement. And so with contempt of this world, & desire of death and rest, appealed to God's judgement against his three friends, touching the matter in controversy. In the mean time comforted himself with meditation of the next world.

[1] The third conflict.

[2] The fourth conflict.

◦ Baldad likewise replied (ch. 18.) with hot contention, accusing job of insolent impatience, inculcating the grievous punishments both of him, and others for their impiety. In answer whereto he lamented again the want of expected comfort, especially by such friends. Still comforted himself with assured faith of the Resurrection.

◦ The fifth conflict.

◦ Sophar also (ch. 20.) attempted again to convince Job of impiety and hypocrisy, by the miserable and speedy fall of wicked men after prosperity: for so he imagined Job to be fallen into irrecoverable misery. But Job shewed the contrary, that some wicked men prosper long, yea all their life, and the same long, and then in a moment go down to hell, and so the argument of present affliction proved not their opinion against him.

◦ The sixth conflict.

◦ Eliphaz disputed the third time (ch. 22.) contending that the causes of affliction are not to be attributed to God's secret providence, but to assured sins of the wicked. Upon whom only he supposed, that afflictions fall: inferring that Job was guilty of enormous crimes, and gross errors, Urged him therefore to return to God, that he might be restored to former prosperity. Job again appealed to God's sentence, not in his terror, nor rigour of his justice, but against his adversaries in this quarrel, describing God's power, and wisdom, by which he permitteth the innocent to be afflicted, and the wicked to prosper: no man knowing how soon or how late all shall receive as they deserve.

◦ The seventh conflict.

◦ Moreover Baldad disputed the third time, very briefly (ch. 25.) endeavouring to terrify Job from further answering, and especially from appealing to God's judgement. But Job largely (in six ensuing chapters) discoursed divinely of God's sovereign Majesty, Power, Wisdom, exact justice, and infinite Mercy. Also of wicked men's destruction, of his own former prosperity, and present calamity, together with his good works, and innocency, which he still avouched in respect of great iniquities.

◦ The eighth conflict.

[1] After that Job and his three friends ceased, nothing being agreed upon in the point of controversy, the devil yet ceased not, but stirred up a young man, called Eliu, proud and arrogant, but not unlearned, who abruptly condemned them all, to wit, Job of pertinacy, the others of insufficiency. And therefore took upon him to convince Job, though the others could not. [2] Very like to late-rising Protestants or Puritans, bragging that by new arguments, and proofs never heard of, they will overthrow the Papists, or Catholic Roman Church, and doctrine, which all former enemies, Jews, Pagans, Turks, and Heretics, nor Hell gates, could not overcome. This young Eliu therefore, with his Private spirit, [3] wiser in his own conceipt than all that went before him, assaulted constant Job (ch. 32. and five more ensuing) with many words, and brags, often challenging and provoking, but not extorting any answer from so grave a man to his frivolous and idle arguments, largely discoursing of things either not denied, or so manifest false, that every mean servant of God, could easily convince them, and never approaching to the main controversy, only railed against holy Job, charging him more furiously than any had done before, with impiety, impatience, ignorance, pride, blasphemy, and obstinacy, vices far from Job's sanctity, dilating also of God's justice, mercy, wisdom, power, and providence, and that no man ought to contend, nor expostulate with God, that afflictions must be borne patiently, and that God is just, and marvelous in his works: whereof no wiseman ever doubted, and so Job convinced him with silence.

[1] In the tenth place God decided the controversy.

[2] Penitents pardoned.

[3] Job rewarded.

[1] But God himself for decision of all (from ch. 38. to the end of the Book) first by way of examining instructed Job more particularly, reciting many marvelous works of nature, shewing thereby his Divine Majesty, Power, and Wisdom, exercising Job in more patience, and withal perfecting him in humility. So that with all reverent fear and subjection, he offered and submitted himself to God's only good pleasure. Then finally God gave sentence that Job had defended the truth, & his three friends had erred. Whom after Sacrifice, and Job's prayer for them, [2] he pardoned, [3] restored Job to health, and to double prosperity, of all he had lost before, giving him also long life, and a happy end.

[1] The literal sense of this history.

[2] Allegorical.

[3] Anagogical.

[4] Moral.

[5] Holy Job proceeded by degrees to perfect patience.

[1] In this history besides the literal sense, shewing that Job was just and sincere, and not for his sins (as his friends falsely supposed) but for his more merit was most extremely afflicted, and afterwards restored to health and wealth: we have also here in the Allegorical sense, [2] an especial figure of Christ. Who as he was absolutely most innocent, and most perfect: so was he without comparison most afflicted of all mankind. Likewise Job's restoration to better state than before, signified in the Anagogical sense, [3] the Resurrection, and restoration of better, and most glorious qualities in the blessed, with fullness of days, in eternal glory. Finally in the Moral sense [4] (which S. Gregory most especially prosecuteth) all Christians have here a most notable example of all virtues, namely in patience, wherein Job proceeded by degrees to great perfection. [5] For he was first tried by the loss of all his goods and children, and was proved to be very patient. He was then most grievously tormented in body, & being left without comfort, albeit he lamentably bewailed so great extremity, wishing such days had been prevented: yet he neither spoke against God, nor good man, nor his own soul, and according to truth avouched & defended his own innocency. And at last by God's inspiration, and sweet consolation, he reprehended himself of former imperfections uttered in some words, and with full resignation to God's will, sustained all his losses and pains, not only with contentment, but also with joy.

THE END OF THE FIRST TOME.

PROEMIAL ANNOTATIONS UPON THE BOOK OF PSALMS.

The authority of this Book was ever authentical, and certain, as the assured word of God, and Canonical Scripture [1]. But concerning the Author, there be diverse opinions. For although it be manifest by the testimony of Philo and Josephus, that in their time, and always before, only King David was by all Hebrew Doctors holden for Author of all the Psalms; [2] yet after that learned Origen, and other Christian Doctors, expounded many Psalms of Christ, the Jews being pressed therewith, began to deny that all were David's: alleging for their new opinion the title of diverse Psalms, and some other difficulties, ministering occasion of much needless dispute, still acknowledging the whole book to be Canonical. Whereupon S. Jerome and S. Augustine [3], sometimes admitted those as Authors of certain Psalms, whose names are in the title thereof. S. Cyprian, S. Cyril, S. Athanasius, and others agree in general, that David writ not all: but differ much in particular, touching other supposed authors. In so much that Melchisedech, Moyses, Asaph, Eman, Idithun, The sons of Core, Salomon, Jeremie, Ezechiel, Aggaeus, and Zacharias, are all (with more or less probability) reputed Authors of several Psalms [4]. Nevertheless it seemeth that S. Jerome rather related other men's judgement, than shewed his own; as we shall note by and by. And S. Augustine (l. 17. c. 14. de civit.) maturely discussing this doubt, saith plainly, that their Judgement seemed to him more credible, who attribute all the hundred fifty Psalms to David alone [5]. Further explicating that whereas some Psalms have David's own name in their titles, some have other men's names, some none at all, this diversity importeth not diverse Authors, but signifieth other things, either pertaining to the same persons, or by interpretation of their names, belonging to the present matter, as our Lord inspired him. Likewise S. Chrysostome resolutely judgeth, that only King David was Author of this whole Book. Moved especially by this argument, for that Christ and the Apostles alleging the Psalms, do oftentimes name David as Author, and never any other [6]. Also Origen, S. Basil, Saint Ambrose, S. Hilary, Theodoretus, Cassiodorus, Beda, Eutimius, and most part of ancient and late writers, with the most common voice of Christians [7], call this book the Psalms of David: and the General Councels of Carthage, Florence, and Trent, in the Catalogue of Canonical Scriptures recite this book by the name of David's Psalter.

[1] This book undoubtedly is canonical Scripture.

[2] Late Hebrew Doctors and some Catholics hold diverse Authors of sundry Psalms.

[3] Prefat. in Psal. Epist. 134. 139.

[4] It is much more probable that David was Author of all.

[5] Proved by S. Augustin, S. Chrysostome and greatest part of Doctors.

[6] Matt. 22. v. 16. Act. 4. v. 24. Ro. 4. v. 6. Ro. 11. v. 9. Heb. 4. v. 7.

[7] The common voice of Christians & some general Councels, call it David's Psalter.

Moreover it is clear, Act. 2. that the second Psalm, though it want his name, is David's. And other Scriptures [1], 2. Paral. v. 6. and 1. Esd. 3. v. 10. say plainly, that David made the Psalms, 104. 105. 106. 117. 135. beginning: Confess to our Lord, because he is good, because his mercy is for ever. Which he appointed the Levites to sing, or play on instruments, 1. Paral. 15. & 16. and yet they have not his name in their title. Again, 2. Reg. 23. David is only entitled the egregious, or excellent Psalmist of Israel. Neither were Asaph, Eman, and Idithun any where called Prophets (as are all the writers of holy Scriptures) but only masters of music, 1. Paral. 25. And the sons of Core were only porters, 1. Paral. 26. Finally, S. Jerome (whose judgement the whole Church singularly esteemeth in all questions belonging to holy Scriptures (seemeth as much inclined, that only the Royal Prophet David was Author of this whole book, as to the contrary [2]. For in his Epistle to Paulinus, prefixed before the Latin Bible, comprehending the principal arguments of several books, when he cometh to the Psalms, without mention of other Authors, saith: David our Simonides, Pindarus, and Alceus, Flaccus also, Catullus, and Cerenus, soundeth out Christ, with harp & ten stringed Psalter, rising up from hell: so attributing the sum of this whole book to the Royal Prophet David, as if he supposed no other Author.

[1] Proved by other Scriptures.

[2] S. Jerome attributeth the sum of this book to David only.

[1] Touching therefore the argument or contents of this divine Psalter, all Catholic Doctors

[1] The Psalms are a sum of all other Scriptures.

[2] Mat. 5. 7. 11. 22. Luc. 16.

[3] S. Greg. in Psal. penitent.

[4] They contain the sum of Legal, Historical, Sapiential, and Prophetical doctrine.

uniformly agree that it is the abridgement, sum, and substance of all holy Scriptures, both old and new Testament. As may first be probably collected, by that [2] Christ himself often comprehending all the old Testament by the terms of the Law and Prophets, in one place (Luc. 24. v. 44.) seemeth not only to reduce all to the Law and Prophets jointly, but also to the Psalms alone, or severally. But whether this be our Saviour's divine meaning or no in that place, out of this and many other places, all the ancient Fathers teach expressly, that the Psalms are an Epitome of all other holy Scriptures. For examples, S. Denys. li. de Eccles. Hierar. contemplat. 2. after brief recital of the contents of other holy Scriptures, saith: This sacred book of divine Canticles, doth exhibit both a general song, and exposition of divine things. S. Basil calleth the Psalmody of David the common and most plentiful store-house of all sacred doctrine, the treasure of perfect Theology. S. Ambrose accounteth it The register of the whole Scripture. Origen, S. Cyprian, S. Jerome, S. Chrysostome, [3] S. Gregory, S. Beda, S. Bernard, Cassiodorus, Eutimius, and others use the same, or very like terms. S. Augustine particularly distinguishing all the Scriptures into four sorts of books, sheweth that the Psalms contain all [4]: The Law (saith he) teacheth some things, the History some things, the Proverbs also and Prophets teach some things: but the Book of Psalms teacheth all. It proposeth the law, recounteth things of old, prescribeth the due ordering of men's actions, and prophesieth things to come. Briefly, it is a common treasure of good doctrine, aptly administering that is necessary to every one. And a little after, exemplifying in particular points: Is not here (saith he) all greatness of virtue, and is not here the right square of justice? Is not the comeliness of chastity, the consummation of prudence, is not whatsoever may be called good, learned in the Psalms? Here is the knowledge of God, the clear pronunciation of Christ to come in flesh, the hope of general Resurrection, fear of torments, promise of glory, revelation of mysteries. Even all good things are here, as in a common great treasure laid up and heaped together.

[1] God's providence in sweetly drawing our consent & cooperation of freewill, which is necessary to salvation.

[3] S. Basil in prolog.

[5] Apoc. 5.

[6] li. 4. dialogi. c. 42.

[8] Iac. 5.

See then and observe here (Christian reader) the admirable wisdom and goodness of God [1]. The means of man's salvation being so disposed, that his own free consent and cooperation is thereto necessarily required, according to that most approved doctrine of the same S. Augustine: Qui creavit te sine te, non iustificat te sine te [2]. He that created thee without thee, doth not justify thee without thee: to help our weakness, and sweetly to draw our minds, otherwise averse from travail and pain, the Holy Ghost hath ordained that in small room [3], and in pleasant manner, we may attain necessary knowledge of God, & ourselves, easily keep the same in memory, and daily put in practice our chiefest duty, in serving and praising God, by singing, reading, or hearing these divine Psalms. Which one book (as every one shall be able to learn it, more or less perfectly) openeth and sheweth the way to understand all other Scriptures, and so to find, & enjoy the hidden treasures of God's word, in like manner as a key openeth a lock. For the whole sacred Bible is a sealed Book [4], and not rightly understood, till the seal [5], or lock be opened, by the key of God's spirit, giving knowledge; which the Holy Ghost, amongst other ways, inspireth very often by sacred Music or Psalmody. As [6] S. Gregory noteth in holy Scripture (4. Reg. 3. v. 15.) [7] where Eliseus not yet knowing God's will in a particular case, called for a Psalmist (or player on instruments) and when the Psalmist sang, the hand of our Lord came upon Eliseus, and presently he prescribing what should be done, procured plenty of water without rain, where was none before, and prophesied victory against the enemies. Reason also and experience teach, that as men of cheerful heart are apt to sing [8], so the exercise of reading, singing, or playing Psalms, is a convenient and a special means, to attain quietness or cheerfulness of mind.

[1] But itself is also sealed.

[2] But one principal

But as this holy Psalter is the key of other Scriptures, so itself is most especially a sealed, and locked Book [1], requiring many keys. Every Psalm (saith S. Hilary) hath a peculiar key, and oftentimes there be so many locks and keys of one Psalm, as there be diverse persons that speak, to diverse ends and purposes. For albeit diverse mysteries are sometimes connected [2], and so require sundry keys, yet there is but one principal & proper key of each Psalm: otherwise it should be divided into many Psalms. Our first endeavour therefore must be, to find the proper key of every Psalm, that is, to know what is principally therein contained. [3] To this purpose the learned Expositors of this book, have observed ten general points, or several matters, to which all the contents may be reduced, as it were, so many keys, and means of entrance into the sense, and true understanding of all the Psalms. And the same may likewise be called the ten strings of this divine instrument [4]. Upon one of which, every Psalm principally playeth, touching the rest more or less, as cause requireth, for more melodious harmony and perfect music.

key of each Psalm.

[3] Ten keys of the Psalter.

[4] Also ten strings.

The first key or string is God himself [1], One in Substance, Three in Persons, Almighty, All-perfect, Power, Wisdom, Goodness, Majesty, Justice, Mercy, & other Divine Attributes. The second is God's works of Creation [2], Conservation, and Governing of the whole world. The third, God's Providence [3], especially towards man, in protecting and rewarding the just, in permitting and punishing the wicked. The fourth, is the peculiar calling of the Hebrew people [4], their beginning in Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob: their marvelous increase in Aegypt: diverse estates, many admirable and miraculous things done amongst them, with their ingratitude, rejection, and reprobation. The fifth principal key and string is Christ [5], the promised Redeemer of mankind: prophesying his Incarnation, Nativity, Travails, Sufferings, Death, Resurrection, Ascension, and Glory. The sixth is the propagation of Christ's name and Religion [6], with Sacrifice and Sacraments, in the multitude of Gentiles believing in him, even to the uttermost coasts of the earth: the Catholic Church ever visible. The seventh is the true manner of serving God [7], with sincere faith and good works. The eight, holy David interposeth many things concerning himself [8]. As God's singular benefits towards him, for which he rendereth thanks and divine praises, recounteth his enemies, dangers, and afflictions of mind & body, namely by Saul, Absalom, and others, humbly beseeching and obtaining God's protection. He also expresseth in himself a perfect image and pattern of a sincere and hearty penitent: bewailing, confessing, and punishing his own sins. The ninth is the end and renovation of this world [9], with the general Resurrection, and Judgement. The tenth is eternal felicity, and punishment, according as every one deserveth in this life [10]. These are the ten keys of this holy Book; and ten strings of this Divine Psalter.

[1] 1. Key.
One God the B. Trinity.

[9] 9.
General Resurrection, & judgement.

[10] 10.
Eternal glory and pain.

Moreover to find which of these is the proper key and principal string of every Psalm [1], learned Divines use four especial ways. First [2], by the title added by Esdras, or the Seventy two Interpreters, for an introduction to the sense of the same Psalm. So it appeareth that the third Psalm treateth literally of David's danger, and delivery from his son Absalom: which is the eighth key: though mystically it signifieth Christ's Persecution, & Resurrection, which is the fifth key. Secondly [3], if there be no title, or if it declare not sufficiently they key, or principal matter contained, it may sometimes be found by allegation and application of some special part thereof in the new Testament. So it is evident Act. 4. v. 25. c. 13. v. 33. Heb. 1. v. 5. & Heb. 5. v. 5. that the second Psalm pertaineth to Christ, impugned and persecuted by diverse adversaries. Which is the fifth key. Thirdly [4], when greater things are affirmed of any person, or people, as of David, Salomon, the Jewish nation, or the like, than can be verified of them, it must necessarily be understood of Christ, or his Church, in the new Testament or in Heaven. So the conclusion of the 14. Psalm: He that doth these things, shall not be moved for ever, cannot be verified of the tabernacle, nor temple of the Jews, but of eternal Beatitude in heaven. Which is the tenth key. Though the greater part of the Psalm sheweth, that just and true dealing towards our neighbours, is necessary for attaining of eternal Glory. Fourthly [5], when both the title and Psalm, or part thereof seem hard and obscure, some part being more clear, the true sense of all may be gathered by that which is more evident. According to S. Augustin's rule li. 2. c. 9. & li. 3. c. 26. Doct. Christ [6]. So the title and former part of the fifth Psalm, being more obscure, are explained by the last verses, shewing plainly that God will justly judge all men, both just and wicked, in the end of this world. Which is the ninth key. By these and like means the principal key being found, it will more easily appear, what other keys belong to the same, and what other strings are also touched. At least the studious may by these helps make some entrance, and for more exact knowledge search the judgement of ancient Fathers and other learned Doctors.

[1] The style of this book is Poetry.

[2] Abuse derogateth not from good things.

[3] David's Psalter more ancient than any profane poetry now extant.

[4] Gen. 4.

[5] Music very ancient.

[6] Sacred poetry most excellent.

[7] Prefat.

But besides this singular great commodity, of compendious handling much Divine matter in small room [1], this book hath another special excellency, in the kind of style, and manner of uttering, which is Meter, and Verse, in the original Hebrew tongue. And though in Greek, Latin, and other languages, the same could not in like form be exactly translated, yet the number, and distinction of verses is so observed, that it is apt for music, as well voices as instruments, and to all other uses of God's servants. Neither is musical manner of uttering God's word and praises less to be esteemed [2], because profane Poets have in this kind of style uttered light, vain, and false things. For the abuse of good things, doth not derogate from the goodness thereof, but rather commendeth the same, which others desire to imitate. And clear it is, that this holy Psalmody was before any profane poetry now extant [3]. For Homer, the most ancient of that sort, writ his poem at least two hundred and forty years after the destruction of Troy, as Apolidorus witnesseth; others, namely Solinus, Herodotus, and Cornelius Nepos say longer. Whereas King David our Divine Psalmist, reigned within one hundred years after the Trojans' wars. There were indeed Amphion, Orpheus, and Muscus before David, but their verses either were not written, or shortly perished, only a confuse memory remaining of them, recited, altered, and corrupted by word of mouth: but before them were the sacred History of Job, almost all in verse; and the two Canticles of Moyses, Exodi. 15. and Deut. 32. It is moreover recorded that Jubal [4] (long before Noe's flood) was the father of them [5], that sang on harp, and organ. Music therefore is marvelous ancient. But sacred Poetry is in many other respects most excellent, and most profitable. [6] This holy Psalmody (saith S. Augustine [7]) is a medicine of old spiritual sores, it bringeth present remedy to new wounds: it maketh the good to persevere in well doing, it cureth at once all predominating passions, which vex men's souls. A little after: Psalmody driveth away evil spirits, inviteth good Angels to help us, it is a shield in night terrors, a refreshing of day travails, a guard to children, an ornament to youngmen, a comfort to oldmen, a most seemly grace to women. Unto beginners it is an introduction, an augmentation to them that go forward in virtue, a stable firmament to the perfect: It conjoineth the whole Church militant in one voice, and is the spiritual eternal sweet perfume of the celestial Armies, all Saints and Angels in heaven.

[1] Why King David writ divine poetry

[2] The first cause his natural inclination to music.

[3] 1. Reg. 16. v. 23.

[4] 2. Verse more easy &

To all this we may add other causes, which moved the Royal Prophet to write this divine poetry. [1] First, he had from his youth (by God's special providence) a natural inclination to Music [2]; wherein he shortly so excelled, that before all the Musicians in Israel, he was selected to recreate King Saul, whom an evil spirit vexed. And his skill, together with his devotion, had such effect, that when he played on the harp [3], Saul was refreshed, and waxed better. For the evil spirit departed from him, saith the holy text. Wherefore he made these Psalms, that himself and others might by singing them, employ this gift of God to his more honour. [4] Secondly, verse being more easy to learn, more firmly kept in mind, and more pleasant in Practice (for as wine, so music doth recreate the heart of man)[5] the Holy Ghost condescending to man's natural disposition, inspired David to write these psalms in meter, mixing the power of divine doctrine, with delectable melody of song, that whiles the ear is allured with harmony of music, the heart is endued with heavenly knowledge, pleasant to the mind, and profitable to the soul.[6] [7]Thirdly, David singularly illuminated with knowledge of great, and most divine Mysteries, endued also with most gracious disposition of mind, the man chosen according to God's own heart (1. Reg. 13.) would utter the same Mysteries, with godly instructions, and praises of God, in the most exquisite kind of style; that is in verse. For otherwise he was also very eloquent in prose, as well appeareth by sundry his excellent, and effectual discourses, in the books of Kings, and Paralipomenon. For which cause Moyses also described the passage of Israel forth of Aegypt through the red sea in a Canticle[8], after that he had related the same whole history more at large in prose, that all might sing, and so render thanks with melodious voice, and musical instruments praising God. Likewise in another Canticle he comprised the whole law, a little before his death[9]. So also Barac and Debora, and after them Judith[10], sung praises to God for their victories in verse. Salomon writ the end of his Proverbs, and a whole book (entitled Canticles) & the Prophet Jeremy his Lamentations in verse. Anna having obtained her prayer for a son, gave thanks to God with a Canticle. The like did King Ezechias for recovery of health. The Prophets Isaias, Ezechiel, Jonas, Abacuc, and the three children in the furnace: again in the new Testament[11], the B. Virgin-Mother, just Zachary, & devout Simeon gave thanks, & sang praises to God in Canticles.

[7] 3.
Most special, great, and memorable things writ in verse.

[8] Exo. 15.

[9] Deut. 32.

[10] Iudic. 5. Iudith. 16. Pro. 21. 2. Reg. 2. Isa. 38. Isa. 12. 26. Ezech. 38. Ioan. 2. Abac. 3. Dan. 3. Luc. 1. 2.

[11] Canticles in the new Testament.

[1]Fourthly, albeit the holy King was not permitted to build the gorgeous Temple for God's service, as he greatly desired to have done, yet he provided both store of musicians (four thousand in number, [2]of which 288. were masters to teach) & made these Psalms as godly ditties, for this holy purpose, in all solemnities of feasts, and daily sacrifice, when the Temple should afterward be built.

[1] 4.
Both divine music and ditty in God's temple.

[2] 1. Par. 23. 25.

[1]Fifthly, he made these Psalms not only for his own, & other's private devotion, nor yet so especially for the public Divine service in the Temple, and other Synagogues of the Jews, but most principally for the Christian Catholic Church, which he knew should be spread in the whole earth. Foreseeing the marvelous, great, and frequent use thereof in the Christian Clergy, and Religious people of both sexes. As he prophesieth in diverse Psalms. All the earth sing to thee: sing Psalms to thy name. Again[2], I will sing Psalms to thee (o God) in the Gentiles, in all peoples and Nations. Which himself never did, but his Psalms are ever since Christ, sung by Christians, converted from gentility, as we see in the Church's Service. [3]For the whole Psalter is distributed to be sung, in the ordinary office of our Breviary every week. And though extraordinarily, for the variety of times, and feasts, there is often alteration, yet still the greater part is in Psalms. Certain also of the same Psalms[4], are without change or intermission repeated every day[5]. And such as have obligation to the Canonical Hours, must at least read the whole Office privately, if they be not present where it is sung. The Office also of Mass[6], ordinarily beginneth with a Psalm. In Litanies, and almost all public Prayers, and in administration of other Sacraments, and Sacramentals, either whole Psalms, or frequent verses are inserted. Likewise the greatest part of the Offices of our B. Lady, and for the dead, are Psalms. Besides the seven Penitential, and fifteen Gradual Psalms, at certain times. So that Clergy men's daily office consisteth much in singing, or reading Psalms. And therefore all Bishops especially, are strictly bound by a particular Canon (Dist. 38. cap. Omnes psallentes)[7] to be skillful in the Psalms of David: and to see that other Clergy men be well instructed therein. According to the Holy Ghost's admonition, by the pen of the same Royal Prophet (Psal. 46.) Psallite sapienter, or, intelligenter, that is: Sing Psalms with knowledge, and understanding them. Not that every one is bound to know, and be able to discuss all difficulties, but competently, according to their charge undertaken in God's Church. Otherwise every one that is, or intendeth to a Priest, may remember what God denounceth to him, by the Prophet Osee (c. 4.) Because thou hat repelled knowledge, I will repel thee, that thou do not the function of Priesthood unto me. Thus much touching the Author, the contents, the poetical style, & final cause of this holy Psalter.

[1] Why this book is called the psalter.

[2] Other instruments make consort with the Psalter.

[3] All virtues are referred to God's honour.

As for the name [1], S. Jerome, S. Augustine, and other Fathers teach, that whereas amongst innumerable musical instruments, six were more specially used in David's time, mentioned by him in the last Psalm, Trumpet, Psalter, Harp, Timbrel, Organ, and Cymbal: This book hath his name of the instrument called Psalter, which hath ten strings, signifying the ten commandments, and is made in form (as S. Jerome, and S. Bede suppose) of the Greek letter Δ delta, because as that instrument rendereth sound from above, so we should attend to heavenly virtues, which come from above: Likewise using the harp, which signifieth mortification of the flesh, & other instruments [2], which signify and teach other virtues, we must finally refer all to God's glory, rejoice spiritually in heart, and render all praise to God. [3]

Concerning interpretation of holy Scriptures.

◦Scriptures are to be expounded by the common spirit of the Church, not by private men.

As Prophecy (or other holy Scripture) was not at any time by man's will, but the (Prophets) holy men of God spake◦, inspired by the Holy Ghost: so no prophecy (nor explication) of Scripture, is made by private interpretation. 2. Pet. 1. but by the same Spirit wherewith it was written, which our Saviour gave to the Church, to abide for ever, the Spirit of truth, to teach all truth. Ioan. 14. 16. Neither pertaineth it to every one, to discern the true spirit, but to some. 1. Cor. 12.

[1] They consist in understanding.

[2] Holy Fathers do best expound them.

Holy Scriptures consist not in reading, but in understanding. S. Jerome Dialogo advers. Luciferianos. The words of holy Scripture are so to be understood [1], as holy men, the Saints of God, have understood them [2], S. Aug. Ser. 18. de verb. Domini. Men must learn of men, not expect knowledge immediately of God, nor only by Angels. Idem, in Prologo Doct. Christ.

◦Some Mysteries are hidden.

There be some things, mentioned in holy Scripture◦, which God will have hidden, and those are not to be curiously searched. S. Amb. li. 1. c. 7. de vocat. Gentium.

◦They prove our humility.

By those things, which to us are hidden in holy Scripture, our humility is proved◦. S. Greg. ho. 17. super Ezech.

THE BOOK OF PSALMS

CHAPTER I.

The Royal Prophet David placed this Psalm as a Prefacer to the rest, containing 1. true happiness, which consisteth in flying sins, and serving God. 3. The good do prosper, 5. not the wicked: 6. as will appear in the end of this world. [1]

[1] The right manner of serving God. The 7. key.

Blessed (a) [1] is the man, that hath (b) not gone in the counsel of the impious, & hath (c) not stood in the way of sinners, and hath (d) not sit in the chair of pestilence:

(a) He is in the right way to eternal felicity. [1] Mat. 5. (b) not consented to evil suggestions. (c) not continued in sin. (d) not finally persisted in wicked life.

2 But (e) his will is in the way of our Lord, and in his law he will meditate day and night. [1]

3 And he shall be as a tree, that is planted nigh to (f) the streams of waters, which shall give his fruit in his time. [1] And (g) his leaf shall not fall: and (h) all things whatsoever he shall do, shall prosper.

(f) To him that useth God's grace well, more grace is continually given. [1] Jere. 17. (g) Through such grace he shall persevere. (h) all things work to the good of them that love God sincerely.

4 The impious not so, not so: but (i) as dust, which the wind driveth from the face of the earth.

(i) The wicked are carried with every light tentation.

5 Therefore the impious shall (k) not rise again in judgment: nor sinners in the (l) Council of the just.

(k) All rising at the last day, the wicked shall not rise with hope nor comfort, but in desolation. (l) the happy congregation of the blessed.

6 For our Lord (m) knoweth the way of the just, and the way of the impious (n) shall perish.

(m) approveth & rewardeth. (n) in eternal damnation.

ANNOTATIONS.
PSALM I.

1. Hath not gone, not stood, not sit.] ◦The Hebrew style and manner of discourse differeth here from other nations, in mentioning first the less evil, and the greatest last. Whereas we would say in the contrary order: He is happy that hath not sit, that is, hath not settled himself in wickedness, nor finally persisted obstinate: more happy, that hath not stood, any notable time continued in sin: and most happy, that hath not gone, not given any consent at all to evil suggestions.

◦They are happy (in hope) that decline from evil.

2. His will in the way of our Lord.] As one part of happiness consisteth in declining from evil: so the other is in doing good◦; the will desiring, and diligently endeavouring to walk in the way of virtue, and law of God. Which is true justice, and right form of good life, proposed in this Psalm, for attaining eternal beatitude.

◦Justice consisteth in flying evil and doing good.

CHAPTER II.

Christ's glory, the world repining thereat, 4. shall be propagated in all the world. 7. His divine power as well spiritual in converting men's hearts, as external, in severe justice, is prophesied. [1]

[1] Of Christ, the 5. key. Also of his Church, the 6. key.

Why did the (a) Gentiles rage, and (b) peoples meditate vain things? [1]

(a) Both gentiles (b) and Jews strive in vain against Christ. [1] Act. 4.

2 The (c) kings of the earth stood up, and the (d) Princes came together in one against our Lord, and against his Christ.

(c) Pilate and Herod. (d) Annas and Caiphas.

3 Let (e) us break their bonds a-sunder: and let us cast away their (f) yoke from us.

(e) The voice of wicked men, (f) & especially libertines striving to shake off all discipline.

4 He that dwelleth in the heavens shall (g) laugh at them: and our Lord shall scorn them.

(g) God for all this will turn the hearts of many.

5 Then shall he speak to them in his (h) wrath, & in his (i) fury he shall trouble them.

(h) severely reprehend, (i) and justly punish the obstinate.

6 But (k) I am appointed king by him over Sion his holy hill, preaching his precept.

(k) Christ shall reign in his Kingdom the Church.

7 The (l) Lord said to me: Thou art my (m) Son, I this day have begotten thee. [1]

(l) God the Father speaketh to (m) God the Son. [1] Act. 13. Heb. 1. & 5.

8 Ask of me, and I will give (n) thee the Gentiles, for thine inheritance, and thy possession (o) the ends of the earth.

(n) Christ as man hath the Church for his inheritance. (o) Spread through the whole world.

9 Thou shalt rule them in (p) a rod of iron, and as a potter's vessel thou shalt break them in pieces. [1]

(p) God's inflexible will & power. [1] Apoc. 3. & 19.

10 And (q) now ye kings understand: take instruction you that judge the earth.

(q) A prophecy that Kings shall be converted, and submit themselves to Christ's discipline.

11 Serve our Lord in (r) fear: and rejoice to him with trembling.

(r) None is secure before death.

12 Apprehend discipline (s) lest sometime our Lord be wrath, and you perish out of the just way.

(s) Some fall from the way of salvation.

13 when his wrath (t) shall burn in short time, blessed are all that trust in him.

(t) God will judge justly in the end of this short life both the evil and good. So this Psalm concludeth with the ninth key.

ANNOTATIONS.
PSALM II.

◦Persecution cannot hinder the glory of Christ.

2. Kings and Princes against Christ.] When Christ, and his Apostles preached the Gospel◦, both Jews and Gentiles, with their Princes, Kings, and Emperors most furiously resisted, but all in vain. For they could not hinder the will and power of God. But the more they persecuted, the more was increased the zeal and number of Christians.

[1] The Church never faileth.

[2] in hunc Psal.

8. The gentiles thine inheritance.] By this promise of God to Christ [1], S. Augustine convinced the Donatists [2], & in them the Protestants, that say, the Church of Christ failed, and became small, or invisible; as though Christ the Son of God could sometimes lose his inheritance, which is the Catholic Church, gathered of the Gentiles, and his possession extended to the ends of the earth.

◦Custom in sin more hardly cured.

9. As a potter's vessel.] If a potter's vessel (saith S. Jerome in hunc Psal. tom. 8.) be broken whiles it is soft, it may easily be repaired, but after it is hard◦, it cannot be made whole again. So sinners are more easily restored to grace, shortly repenting, than long obdurate: yet that which is unpossible to man, is possible to God. Mat. 10. For as clay in the potter's hand, so are you in my hand, saith our Lord, Jere. 18

◦Kings converted to Christianity.

10. Ye Kings understand.] Not only innumerable other people of all nations, but also after a while, Kings and Emperors believed in Christ◦. And such as at first persecuted, became most Christian, Catholic, Defenders of the faith.

10. Take instruction you that judge the earth.] Petilianus, Gaudentius, & other Donatists inveighing against Christian Kings [1], for punishing heretics, most falsely avouched, that Christianity never found Kings but envious, enemies, and persecuters. To whom S. Augustine answereth in several books [2], that Christian Kings and Princes are not enemies to Christianity: but are enemies to heretics, the rebels of Christ and his Church [3]. For according to his prophecy of King David, Christian Kings are instructed [4], and know it is their duty, in the service of God, to defend the Church against Heretics, and other Infidels. And it is the property of Apostates to favour heretics: So good Constantine the Great maintained Catholic unity; and Iulian the Apostata to make greater division, took Churches from Catholics and gave them to Donatists, to nourish dissension, and so to overthrow all Christians. But God still protecteth the true Church, against all such subtle, and malicious devices: because it is Christ's inheritance.

[2] Ad Petil. li. 2. c. 92.

[3] Apostates favour heretics and schismatics, because they hate all Christians.

[4] Ad Gaud. li. 2. c. 26.

11. Rejoice with trembling.] God's service is tempered with two affections: with joy ◦, in consideration of his goodness, mercy, & meekness; and with fear, in respect of his justice, and severe judgement. The one is a remedy against desperation: the other against presumption.

◦ Joy and fear.

CHAPTER III.

King David recounteth his danger, when his son Absalom conspired against him: 4. and thanketh God for his delivery: 9. acknowledging all help to be from God. Mystically, Christ's persecution, Death, Burial, and Resurrection. [1]

[1] David Persecuted by his son.
The 8. key.

The Psalm of David, when he fled from the face of Absalom his son. 2 Lord (a) why are they (b) multiplied that trouble me? Many rise up against me. [1]

(a) O God let me know how grievously I have sinned, (b) that all Israel (1. Reg. 15. v. 13.) with all their heart followeth Absalom. So against Christ, the Priests, the People, & Gentiles are conspired. [1] Ioan. 2.

3 Many say to (c) my soul: There is (d) no salvation for him in his God.

(c) my life. (d) he cannot escape.

4 But (e) thou Lord art my protector, my (f) glory, & exalting (g) my head.

(e) But I avouch that God always defendeth me, (f) giving me victory, (g) & confirming my Kingdom.

5 With my voice I have cried to our Lord: and he hath heard me from his (h) holy hill.

(h) heaven.

6 I have (i) slept, and have (k) been at rest; and have (l) risen up, because our lord hath taken me.

(i) I lay down (k) and rested in expectation of thy help. (l) And am delivered. Christ died, was buried, & rose again.

7 I will not fear thousands of people compassing me: (m) arise Lord, save me my God.

(m) I know thou wilt help me, and so I beseech thee to do.

8 Because thou hast strucken all that are my adversaries without cause: thou hast broken the (n) teeth of sinners.

(n) The strength and fury.

9 Salvation (o) is our Lord's: and thy (p) blessing upon thy people.

(o) health and safety cometh from God. (p) Aboundance of grace promised to God's servants.

ANNOTATIONS.
PSALM III.

◦Titles of the Psalms added by Esdras and the Septuagint.

1. Psalm of David.] All interpreters agreeably teach, that King David made not the titles, which are before the Psalms◦. Nevertheless they are authentical, as indited by the Holy Ghost. And it is most probable Esdras added those titles which are in the Hebrew: and the Seventy interpreters writ the other, in their Greek Edition. Both which S. Jerome translated into Latin.

[1] Five things to be noted in the titles.

[2] Psal. 4. 6. 8. 15. 16. &c.

In these titles five things may be noted [1]. First, the former two having no title at all, the general name of Psalm, common to all, is particularly appropriated to some, and other names to others. Which in all are twelve: to wit, Psalm, Inscription, Prayer, Canticle, Psalm of Canticle, Canticle of Psalm, Hymn, Testimony, Understanding, Praise of Canticle, Alleluia, & Gradual Canticle. Secondly, in the titles of some Psalms are the names of certain persons, which by S. Augustine's judgement, cited in the Proemial Annotations, and others, proveth not the same persons to be authors of those Psalms, but signifieth some other thing. Thirdly, in some titles the time is signified, when the Psalm was made, or sung. Fourthly, the matter contained in the Psalm [2], or upon what occasion it was made, is expressed in some titles. Fifthly, diverse other terms are often used in the titles of sundry Psalms, as To the end, For the Octave, For presses, and the like, all which we shall briefly explicate, where they first occur.

◦Why this is called the Psalm of David.

first therefore this third Psalm is called the Psalm of David◦, not because he is author thereof, for he is also author of the former, where his name is not expressed, as is evident by the testimony of all the Apostles, Act. 4. v. 25. but because it treateth particularly and literally of him.

◦The time and occasion of making this Psalm.

1. When he fled from the face of Absalom.] Here the time is signified◦, when this Psalm was made, to wit, immediately after the overthrow of his rebellious son Absalom, mentioned 2. Reg. 18. before his return to Jerusalem. For albeit of human, natural, and fatherly affection, he greatly lamented the death of his son, yet he rendered thanks and praises to God, as reason and duty bound him.

[1] King David prefigured Christ.

[2] The same Scripture hath diverse literal senses.

6. I have slept, and have been at rest, and have risen up.] King David by his sleeping in persecution [1], and by his resting, and delivery from his persecutors, prefigured Christ's Death, Burial, & Resurrection. As appeareth, Ioan. 2. v. 22. Where the Evangelist saith: that after Christ's Resurrection, his disciples believed the scripture, to wit, this and other like prophecies. For otherwise the old Testament doth not so expressly declare such Mysteries, as the Gospel doth: but one thing in the proper and grammatical signification of the words, and another thing in shadows and figures, and both literal. Whereupon S. Gregory teacheth (li. 20. c. 1. Moral.) that holy Scripture (amongst other incomparable excellencies) surpasseth all other doctrines [2], in the very manner of speaking: because by one and the same speech, it reporteth a thing done, and proclaimeth a Mystery: so relating things past, that with the very same words, it foresheweth things to come.

CHAPTER IV.

The holy Prophet teacheth, by his own example, to fly to God in all tribulation: 3. that other refuges are insufficient, 9. and God's help most assured. [1]

[1] Confidence in God necessary.
The 7. key.

Unto the end in (a) songs, the Psalm (b) of David.

(a) In an instrument apt for verses. (b) This Psalm pertaineth to the beloved, signified by the word David. S. Aug. li. 17. c. 14. civit. S. Beda in Psal.

2 When (c) I invocated, the God of my justice heard me: in (d) tribulation thou hast enlarged to me. (e) Have mercy on me, and hear my prayer.

(c) When Saul unjustly persecuted just David, God heard his prayers. (d) being straitly besieged (1. Reg. 23. 26.) (e) Likewise help me whensoever I shall need.

3 Ye sons of men how long are you of (f) heavy heart? Why love you (g) vanity, and seek (h) lying? [1]

(f) Why do you still harden your hearts? (g) honour, and transitory glory, (h) false and deceitful riches? [1] Eph. 4.

4 And know ye that our Lord hath made his (i) holy one (k) marvelous: (l) our Lord will hear me, when I shall cry to him.

(i) Every godly soul. (k) Rich with virtues. (l) Every just soul hath confidence in God, that he will here his cry.

5 Be ye (m) angry, and (n) sin not: the things that you say in (o) your hearts, in your (p) chambers be ye sorry for.

(m) Just anger is good & necessary against sin. (n) but then is most need to beware not to exceed in passion, have therefore a continual purpose never to sin. (o) Evil cogitations (p) bewail & repent before you sleep.

6 Sacrifice ye the sacrifice of (q) justice, and hope in our Lord. Many say: (r) Who sheweth us good things?

(q) Not only external but most especially internal sacrifice of justice, and observation of God's commandments is most necessary. (r) The solid rewards promised by God?

7 The (s) light of thy countenance, o Lord is signed upon us: thou hast given (t) gladness in my heart.

(s) reason and grace are freely given to man, whereby he may know that God will reward the just. Heb. 11. v. 6. (t) Wherein a just man inwardly rejoiceth.

8 By the fruit of their (v) corn, and (w) wine, and (x) oil, they are multiplied.

(v) (w) (x) For example and in figure of heavenly rewards, God gave temporal wealth in the old testament. (w)↑(x)↑

9 In (y) peace in the self same I will sleep, and rest:

(y) In this confidence the just may rest contented.

10 Because thou Lord hast (z) singularly settled me in hope.

(z) God so promiseth every just person in particular.

ANNOTATIONS.
PSALM IV.

1. Unto the end.] The Hebrew word Lamnatsea, signifieth to him that overcometh. And so the Hebrews interpret, that the Psalms [1], which have this word in their titles, were directed either to him that excelled others in skill of music [2]; or had authority over other musicians: or to him, whose office was to sing victories and triumphs. But the Latin, according to the Greek, hath In finem, Unto the end which (most commonly signifying perpetuity, or continuance unto the end of any thing) in the titles of the Psalms rather signifieth, that the matter contained in the Psalm, pertaineth to future times, or persons; especially to the new Testament. And so S. Augustine expoundeth it here of Christ, who is the end (or perfection) of the law [3]. Not that the principal contents belong to Christ, in his own Person, but to his mystical body the Church, and faithful people, whom the prophet here teacheth to have confidence in God, moderation in their affections, & patience in tribulation, which is the seventh key, proposing his own example, & prophetically Christ's. The same whereto Christ exhorteth, saying: Ioan. 16. v. ult. Have confidence, I have overcome the world. Signifying that his servants, through his grace, may also overcome it.

[1] The signification of this phrase, To the end in the titles of Psalms.

[3] Rom. 10.

6. Sacrifice of Justice.] Not only external Sacrifice of diverse kinds were necessary in the law of nature [1], and of Moyses, and one most excellent and complement of all, in the new Testament, but also spiritual sacrifice was ever, and is required, and that of three sorts. First [2], Sacrifice of sorrow, and contrition for sins (Psal. 50.) An afflicted spirit is a sacrifice to God. The second is sacrifice of Justice, here mentioned. The third is Sacrifice of praise (Psal. 49.) Immolate to God the sacrifice of praise. Concerning the second proposed in this place: He offereth sacrifice of Justice,

[1] Three spiritual sacrifices necessary.

[2] Of penance, Justice. Praise.

[3] What is due to God.

[4] To ourselves.
[5] To our neighbour.
[6] To our enemies.
[7] The world.
[8] The flesh.
[9] The devil.
[10] To sin.
[11] Light of reason sheweth there is a God that rewardeth.

that rendereth to every one that is due. First [3], to God as our Creator, a resignation of ourselves, even our lives, at his divine pleasure; as to our Master, we must render faith and belief, in all that he proposeth; as to our Father, hope, confidence, & reverential fear; as to our Lord and King, payment of tribute, that is observation of his law and commandments; as to our Captain, the travail of warfare in this life; as to our Physician, patience and toleration, when he cureth our wounds, by chastisement for sins; as to our Spouse, chastity of body and mind, flying all carnal and spiritual fornication; as to our Friend, frequent conversation in all acts of devotion. We owe to ourselves [4], that seeing we consist of soul and body, we keep due subordination, that the soul and reason command, & the body, and inferior appetite obey: as the servant must obey his master, and the handmaid her mistress. We owe to our neighbour [5], love from the heart, instruction also from the mouth, and assistance by our help, according to his necessary, and our ability; yea though our neighbour be our enemy. But to other enemies [6] contrary things are due. To the world [7], contempt: because the goods of this world are small, few, short, uncertain, deceitful, not satisfying the mind, and mixed with many evils and dangers. To the flesh [8] we owe chastisement, and daily care, so to feed it, that it serve the soul, & rebel not. To the devil [9] we must render the shame, that cometh by sin, acknowledging our faults, and all truths, and so return upon him all vanity and lying, wherewith he allureth & seduceth. Finally, to sin [10] itself, we owe hate, and revenge, because it is the only evil, that hurteth us; and due punishment with zeal of justice, because it dishonoureth God. He that thus offereth sacrifice of justice, may justly (as it followeth in the Psalm) hope (yet not in himself but) in our Lord. And lest any should pretend ignorance, saying: who sheweth (or teacheth) us good things? [11] as though they lacked instruction, the Prophet preventeth this vain excuse, saying: The light of thy countenance, o Lord (the light of reason, which is the image of God, whereto we are created like) is signed upon us, fixed in our understanding, that we may see there is a God, that ought to be served, and that he will reward his servants. Heb. 11.

CHAPTER V.

Just men in affliction appeal to God, the revenger of injuries, 5. knowing and professing that God hateth iniquity. 9. Therefore remit their cause to him, 11. recite certain enormous vices of the wicked, 13. and expect God's final judgement of good and bad. [1]

[1] The general judgement.
The 9. key.

Unto the end, for (a) her that obtaineth the (b) inheritance. The Psalm of David.

(a) The faithful just soul that overcometh her enemies by virtue. (b) eternal glory.

2 Receive, o Lord (c) my words with thine ears, understand my cry.

(c) The prayer of the whole Church, or of any faithful (ever beloved) soul.

3 Attend to the voice of my prayer, my King and my God. 4 Because I will pray to thee: Lord in (d) the morning thou wilt hear my voice.

(d) God's help is presently granted of his part, though it be sometimes deferred for the more good of his servants.

5 In (e) the morning I will stand by thee and will see: because thou art not a God that wilt iniquity.

(e) Before all other affairs we must pray to God. S. Cyprian. in fine orat. Dominicae.

6 Neither shall the malignant (f) dwell near thee: neither shall the unjust abide (g) before thine eyes.

(f) The wicked and wickedness have no conversation with God. (g) in the day of judgement.

7 Thou hatest all that work iniquity: thou wilt (h) destroy all that speak lie. The bloody and deceitful man our Lord will abhor:

(h) by final sentence of eternal damnation.

8 But I in the multitude of (i) thy mercy. I will enter into thy house: I will adore toward (k) thy holy temple in thy (l) fear.

(i) Not in man's power, but in God's mercy must the just trust. (k) In the Church of God. (l) with reverential fear, as in God's presence.

9 Lord conduct me in thy justice: because of mine enemies direct my way in thy sight. 10 Because there is (m) no truth in their mouth: their heart is (n) vain.

(m) No true nor solid goodness in the wicked. (n) They think nothing but vanity, and mischief.

11 Their throat is an (o) open sepulchre, they did (p) deceitfully with their tongues, (q) judge them o God [1]. Let them fail of their cogitations, according to the multitude of their impieties expel them, because they have provoked thee o Lord.

(o) yielding loathsome stench, bitterness, and rancor, (p) yet they flatter with feigned good words. (q) Albeit the just desire the conversion of the wicked, yet if they will not repent, then the just conform their desires to God's just judgement: which shall be manifested in the end of the world. [1] Psal. 13. Rom. 3.

12 And let all be glad, that hope in thee, they shall rejoice for ever: and thou shalt dwell in them. And all that love thy name shall glory in thee, 13 because thou wilt (r) bless the just. Lord, as with a shield of thy good will, thou hast crowned us.

(r) The just shall receive sentence of eternal glory.

ANNOTATIONS. PSALM V.

5. Not a God that wilt iniquity.] Seeing God will not iniquity◦, as these words testify in plain terms, it followeth necessarily, that he is not author, nor cause of any sin. For God doth nothing contrary to his own will. But he hateth iniquity, and in respect thereof hateth all that work iniquities, as the authors of iniquity, though he loveth them as his creatures, and of his part requireth their salvation.

◦God is not author nor cause of sin.

CHAPTER VI.

David's earnest and hearty prayer after he had grievously sinned. 5. Which being grounded in filial, not servile fear, 9. concludeth with assured hope, and confidence in God's mercy. [1]

[1] A pathetical prayer of a sinner & the first penitential Psalm, the 7. key.

Unto (a) the end in songs, the Psalm of David for the octave. [1]

(a) This Psalm pertaineth also to penitents in the new testament. [1] Psa. 37.

2 Lord, (b) rebuke me not in thy fury; nor (c) chastise me in thy wrath.

(b) condemn me not eternally. (c) Spare me also for part of the temporal pain, which I deserve.

3 Have mercy on me Lord, because I am weak: (d) heal me Lord, because all (e) my bones be troubled.

(d) Give me the medicine of grace. (e) My sorrow hath inwardly pierced me even to the bones.

4 And my soul is (f) troubled exceedingly: but thou Lord (g) how long?

(f) with fear of thy just wrath. (g) leavest thou me in this calamity?

5 (h) Turn thee, o Lord, and (i) deliver my soul: save me for (k) thy mercy.

(h) Shew again thy favourable countenance, (i) from this fearful affliction. (k) Though my sins have deserved the contrary yet shew thy mercy.

6 Because there is not in (l) death that is mindful of thee: and in (m) hell who shall confess to thee?

(l) This life is the time of repentance, after death no conversion. (m) In hell nothing but blasphemy.

7 I (n) have laboured in my sighing, I (o) will every night wash my bed; I will (p) water my couch with my tears.

(n) I have in part lamented. (o) I will add more sorrow & penance. (p) I will persist in my penance, till I be throughly watered with thy grace.

8 My (q) eye is troubled for fury: I have waxen (r) old (s) among all mine enemies.

(q) mine eyes are dim with weeping, for fear of thy just judgement. (r) my hairs are gray with sorrow. (s) whereat mine enemies rejoice.

9 (t) Depart from me all ye that work iniquity: because our Lord (v) hath heard the voice of my weeping. [1]

(t) After due sorrow the true penitent hath confidence in God, against his enemies. (v) Will most certainly accept of true repentance. [1] Mat. 7. & 25. Luc. 13.

10 Our Lord hath heard my petition, our Lord hath received my prayer. 11 Let all mine enemies be (w) ashamed, & very sore troubled: let them be converted and ashamed very quickly.

(w) These are not imprecations, but threatenings, that the wicked may amend, or else predictions if they persist in sin.

ANNOTATIONS.
PSALM VI.

◦The octave signifieth the world to come.

1. For the octave.] Literally is seemeth that the Psalms which have For the octave in their titles◦, were to be sung on an instrument of eight strings. So the Chaldee paraphrasis translateth, In citheris octo chordarum: in Citherns of eight strings. But prophetically S. Augustine, & others expound it, to pertain to the Resurrection in the end of this world. So David, and all penitent sinners bewail their sins, and do penance in this life, for the octave, that is for the world to come.

[1] Hell for some sinners. Purgatory for others.

[2] in Psal. 37. 1. Cor. 3.

1. In thy fury, nor in thy wrath.] By fury is signified divine justice, irrevocably condemning the wicked to eternal damnation [1]: by wrath, God's fatherly chastisement correcting sinners, whom he saveth. Whereupon S. Gregory teacheth, that the faithful soul not only feareth fury, but also wrath: because after the death of the flesh, some are deputed to eternal torments, some pass to life through the fire of purgation [2]. Which doctrine the same holy father confirmeth, by the judgement of S. Augustine more ancient. Who likewise affirmeth, that all those which have not laid Christ their foundation, are rebuked in fury, because they are tormented in eternal fire: and those which upon right foundation (of true faith in Christ) have built wood, hay, stubble, are chastised in wrath, because they are brought to rest of beatitude, but purged by fire. Let therefore the faithful soul (considering what she hath done, and contemplating what she shall receive) say: Lord rebuke me not, in thy fury: nor chastise me in thy wrath. As if she said more plainly: This only with my whole intention of heart I crave, this incessantly with all my desires I covert, that in the dreadful judgement, thou neither strike me with the reprobate, nor afflict me with those, that shall be purged in burning flames. Thus S. Gregory, in Psalm. penitent. v. 1.

CHAPTER VII.

David in confidence of his just cause, and unjust persecution, prayeth for God's help, 7. and just revenge of his enemies: 15. describing their malicious intention, and ruin. [1]

[1] David's prayer in tribulation. The 8. key.

The Psalm of David which he sung to our Lord, for the words of (a) Chusi the son of Jemini. [1]

(a) This Chusi defeated the counsel of Achitophel, as S. Aug. S. Basil & S. Chris. expound it. Others think he speaketh of that Chusi (or Chusai) who reported to him the death of Absalom. 2. Reg. 18. v. 31. [1] (2. Reg. 16.)

2 O Lord my God I have hoped in thee: save me from all that persecute me, and deliver me. 3 Lest sometime (b) he as a Lion violently take (c) my soul, whilst there is none to redeem, nor to save.

(b) Absalom, or any other enemy, if God do not resist and hinder him. (c) my life.

4 O Lord my God if I have done (d) this, if there be iniquity in my hands:

(d) Such evil as mine enemies feign & object against me.

5 If I have rendered to them that repayed me evils, let me worthily fall (e) empty from mine enemies.

(e) Let me not have the victory of them.

6 Let the enemy persecute my soul, and take it, and (f) tread down my life in the earth, and bring down my glory into the dust.

(f) Let me die with ignominy.

7 Arise Lord in thy wrath: and (g) be exalted in the coasts of mine enemies.

(g) Shew thy power.

8 And arise, o Lord my God, in the (h) precept which thou hast commanded: and a (i) synagogue of peoples shall compass thee.

(h) Seeing thou didst command to make me King, it behoveth thee to protect me. (i) many will serve thee the only true God.

9 And (k) for it return on high: our Lord judgeth peoples. Judge me, o Lord, according to (l) my justice, and according to my innocency (m) upon me.

(k) For this increase of faithful people. (l) My just cause against my particular enemies (m) let fall upon me.

10 The wickedness of sinners shall be consumed, and thou shalt direct the just, which searchest the heart and reins, o God. [1]

[1] 1. Par. 28. Iere. 11. 17.

11 My just help is from our Lord, who saveth those that be right of heart. 12 God is a just judge, strong, & patient: is he angry (n) every day?

(n) God doth not punish all sinners presently, but often deferreth.

13 (o) Unless you will be converted, he shall shake his sword, he hath bent his bow, and prepared it.

(o) Expecting if they will amend.

14 And in it he hath prepared the vessels of death: he hath made his arrows for them that burn. [1]

[1] Isa. 59. Iob. 15.

15 Behold (p) he hath bred with injustice: he hath conceived sorrow, and brought forth iniquity.

(p) The injurious persecutor purposing injustice, conceiveth envy, and bringeth forth iniquity.

16 He hath opened a pit, and digged it up: and he is fallen into the ditch, which he made. 17 His (q) sorrow shall be turned upon his head: and his iniquity shall descend upon his crown.

(q) Envy & desire to hurt others turneth to the ruin of the envyers.

18 I will confess to our Lord according to his justice: and will sing to the name of our Lord most high.

CHAPTER VIII.

God is magnified & praised for his marvelous work of creatures, 5. but especially of mankind, singularly exalted by the Incarnation of Christ. [1]

[1] Christ's Incarnation.
The 5. key.

Unto (a) the end (b) for presses, the Psalm of David.

(a) Belonging to the new Testament. (b) Suffering of Christ, and of Christians.

2 O Lord (c) our Lord, how marvelous is thy name in the whole earth! Because thy magnificence is elevated above (d) the heavens.

(c) God the Lord of all by creation, is our singular Lord, that believe and trust in him. (d) God more excellent than the heavens, he being the Creator, they a creature.

3 Out of the mouth of (e) infants & sucklings, thou hast perfected praise because of thine enemies, that thou mayest destroy the enemy & revenger. [1]

(e) Fulfilled when Christ coming into Jerusalem, children sang Ozanna. Mat. 21. [1] Mat. 21.

4 Because I shall see thy heavens, the works of thy fingers: the moon and the stars, which thou hast founded. 5 What is man, that thou art mindful of him? Or the son of man, that thou visitest him? 6 Thou hast (f) minished him a little less than Angels; with (g) glory and honour thou hast crowned him: [1]

(f) The Son in assumpted human nature, became less than Angels. (g) But in him man's nature is exalted above Angels. [1] Heb. 2.

7 And hast appointed him (h) over the works of thy hands.

(h) Christ the Lord of all creatures.

8 Thou hast subjected (i) all things under his feet, all (k) sheep and oxen: moreover also the beasts of the field.

(i) Yea of Angels. Heb. 2. (k) Not only all reasonable creatures, but all beasts, and other things obey him. The sea and the winds obey him. Mat. 8. [1]
[1] Gen. 1. v. 27. 1. Cor. 15.

9 The birds of the air, & fishes of the sea; that walk the paths of the sea. 10 (l) O Lord our Lord, how marvelous is thy name in the whole earth!

(l) The same end & beginning signify, that as God was marvelous in creating man in so happy state, that if he would, he might have avoided both sin & death: so he is marvelous in that he so rewardeth the blessed in the resurrection, that they can neither sin nor die.

ANNOTATIONS. PSALM VIII.

[1] Presses signify Christ's Passion.
[2] Isa. 63.
[3] Morally it signifieth the travails of the Church militant.
[4] vinacia.

1. Presses.] [1] Most Hebrew Doctors say the word Gittith, may either signify the place, where this Psalm was made, or the musical instrument, on which it was sung. But most Christian Doctors expound it literally of Christ's Passion, who was stretched on the Cross, and all his sacred blood pressed, and drawn out of his body. Which Metaphor Isaias also useth, demanding of Christ [2]: Why is thy clothing red, and thy garments as theirs that tread in the wine press? and answereth in Christ's person: I have trodden the Press alone. S. Augustine also applieth it morally to the Church [3], where Christ is the vine, the Apostles are the branches, & spreaders (that is preachers) of the Gospel, Christians are the grapes, Christian virtues are the wine. Namely patience, and fortitude in afflictions. Whereby the good are purified, & severed from amidst the reprobate, as wine is pressed out of the grapes, barreled, and laid up in cellars, and [4] the husks and kernels cast to hogs, or other beasts.

CHAPTER IX.

The Church praiseth God for her protection, 4. in repelling the enemy's force, 8. in punishing the wicked, and rewarding the just. [1]

[1] God's providence in protecting the good and permitting evil. The 3. key.

Unto the end, for the (a) secrets of the son, the Psalm of David.

(a) Christ's coming in humility, and Christians' afflictions, are hidden from the world, in God's providence.

2 I will (b) confess to thee, o Lord, with all my heart: I will tell all thy marvelous things.

(b) Give thanks.

3 I will be (c) glad and (d) rejoice in thee: I will sing to thy name, o most High.

(c) In mind (d) and body.

4 In (e) turning mine enemy backward: they shall be weakened, and perish before my face.

(e) God repelleth the enemy, when man is not able to resist.

5 Because thou hast done (f) my judgment and my cause: thou hast sit upon the throne which judgest justice.

(f) A just man doth his endeavor, not of himself, but by God's grace overcometh the enemy.

6 Thou hast rebuked the (g) Gentiles, and the impious hath perished: their (h) name thou hast destroyed for ever, and for ever and ever.

(g) All sinners, called Gentiles, because they were generally accounted wicked. (h) The vain glorious fame of sinners partly decayeth in this world, but most especially in the world to come.

7 The swords of the enemy have failed unto the end: and their cities thou hast destroyed. 8 Their memory hath perished with a sound: and our Lord abideth for ever. He hath prepared his throne in (i) judgment:

(i) Judicial seats of men are often corrupted, but God's never.

9 and he will judge the whole world in equity, he will judge the people in justice. 10 And our Lord is made a refuge for the poor: an helper (k) in opportunities, in tribulation.

(k) God doth not presently deliver the good from afflictions: but when it is to their spiritual profit.

11 And let them hope in thee that know thy name: because thou hast not forsaken them that seek thee, o Lord. 12 Sing to our Lord, which dwelleth in Sion: declare his (l) studies among the Gentiles.

(l) His precepts which men ought chiefly to study.

13 Because (m) requiring blood he hath remembered them: he hath not forgotten the cry of the poor.

(m) God revengeth the blood of Martyrs.

14 Have mercy on me, o Lord: See my humiliation (n) by my enemies.

(n) Procured by mine enemies.

15 Which exaltest me from the gates of death, that I may declare all thy praises in (o) the gates of the daughter of Sion.

(o) In the public view of the Church.

16 I will rejoice in thy salvation: the Gentiles are (p) fastened in the destruction, which they made. In this snare, which they hid, is their foot taken.

(p) The wicked are entangled in the snares which they lay for others.

17 Our Lord shall be known doing judgments: the sinner is taken in the works of his own hands.

18 (q) Let sinners be turned into hell, all nations that forget God.

(q) In zeal of justice, not in desire of revenge.

19 Because to the end there shall not be oblivion of the poor man: the patience of the poor, shall not perish in the end. 20 Arise Lord, let not man be strengthened: Let the (r) Gentiles be judged in thy sight.

(r) By Gentiles is often understood all great sinners. For the Jews despised Gentiles: as the Romans did all Barbarous nations.

21 Appoint Lord (s) a Law-giver over them: that the Gentiles may know that they be men.

(s) Suffer a tyrant to rule over them, that thereby they may learn what it is to use others unjustly. It seemeth to S. Augustine a Prophecy, that such as receive not Christ, shall believe Antichrist. [1]

[1] 2. Thes. 2.

The 10. Psalm, according to (t) the Hebrews.

(t) The later Hebrew Doctors.

1 (v) Why Lord hast thou departed far off, despisest in opportunities, in tribulation?

(v) In great persecution it seemeth to the weak, that god deferreth his assistance very long.

2 Whilst the impious is proud, the poor is (w) set on fire: (x) they are caught in the counsels which they devise.

(w) Extremely vexed & tormented. (x) The Prophet answereth to the complaint of the just, that indeed the wicked are caught in their own snares.

3 Because the sinner is praised in the desires of his soul: and the unjust man is blessed. 4 The sinner hath exasperated our Lord, according to the multitude of his wrath he shall (y) not seek.

(y) Not seek to recover God's favour.

5 There is no God in his sight: his ways are defiled at all time. Thy judgments are taken away from his face: he shall (z) rule over all his enemies.

(z) The wicked doth domineer for a time, and thinketh he shall do so still.

6 For he hath said in his heart: I will not be moved from generation unto generation (a) without evil.

(a) And never fall into any adversity, but still remain without misery or any evil.

7 Whose mouth is full of cursing, and bitterness, and guile: under his tongue labour and sorrow.[1]

[1] Rom. 3.

8 He sitteth in wait with the rich in secret places, to kill the innocent. 9 His eyes look upon the poor: he lieth in wait in secret, as a lion in his den. 10 He lieth in wait to take the poor man violently, violently to take the poor man whilst he draweth him. In his snare he will humble himself, and shall fall when he shall have dominion over the poor. 11 For he hath said in his heart: God hath forgotten, he hath turned away his face not to see for ever. 12 (b) Arise Lord God, let thy hand be exalted: forget not the poor.

(b) The prayer of the just in tribulation.

13 Wherefore hath the impious provoked God? For he hath said in his heart: He will not inquire. 14 Thou seest, that thou considerest labour & sorrow: that thou mayest deliver them into thy hands. To thee is the poor left: to the orphan thou wilt be an helper.

15 Break the arm of the sinner and malignant: his sin shall be sought, and shall not be found. 16 Our Lord shall reign for ever, and for ever and ever: ye (c) Gentiles shall perish from his land.

(c) Ye vilest men.

17 Our Lord hath heard the desire of the poor: thy ear hath heard the (d) preparation of their heart.

(d) The just ought always to be ready prepared in heart, to suffer patiently all that shall happen unto them.

18 To judge (e) for the pupil and the humble, that man add no more to magnify himself upon the earth.

(e) As the first works of Christ in all humility and patience were strange, and hidden to the world (v. 1.) so his last judgement shall be in majesty and manifest to all in exalting the blessed and suppressing the wicked.

ANNOTATIONS.
PSALM IX.

21. ---] After the 21. verse the late Hebrew Doctors divide this Psalm [1], beginning there the tenth, without any new title: but only this word Sela [2]: which the Septuagint, Theodotion, and Symmachus translate Diapsalma, that is, change of meter, or music, also pause or rest in singing. Aquila, whom S. Jerome rather approveth, translateth semper ever [3]. Some English Bibles omit it [4], others leave it in the text, not translating it into English. It seemeth to most Interpreters to be added as a note to stir up attention. And it occurreth often, not only in the end of Psalms, but also in other places. For it is thrice in the third Psalm. And therefore maketh no argument, that this Psalm should be divided [5]. And those which divide this into two, join two in the 147. Psalm. So that all agree in the number of 150. Psalms in the whole Psalter.

[1] Some divide this Psalm into two.

[2] Sela a note of change, or of rest in music, or rather of attention.

[3] Epist. ad Marcel.

[4] Anno. 1577. 1552. 1603.

[5] All the Psalms are just 150.

CHAPTER X.

David's friends advising him to fly from the persecution of Saul, he answereth, that his trust is in God's protection. 2. Though the persecutor be very malicious, 4. yet God will overthrow him, 5. and deliver the just.[1]

[1] God's provident care of the just.
The 3. key.

Unto (a) the end the psalm of David. I Trust in our Lord, how say (b) ye to my soul: Pass over unto the mountain as a sparrow?

(a) S. Augustine applieth it to heretics, persuading Catholics to repair unto their separate congregation, falsely calling it the mountain. (b) Ye my friends say thus.

2 For behold sinners (c) have bent the bow, they have prepared their arrows in the quiver, that they may shoot in (d) the dark, at them that be right of heart.

(c) Persecuters using all rigour and force, (d) falsely pretend other causes against the innocent to destroy them.

3 For they have (e) destroyed the things, which thou didst perfit: but the just what hath he done?

(e) It is the manner of persecuters, and especially of heretics, to destroy and pull down that others have built.

4 Our Lord is in his holy temple, our Lord his seat is in heaven. [1]

5 His eyes have respect unto the poor: his (f) eye-lids examine the sons of men.

(f) Though God seem to wink or sleep, yet his providence still watcheth, and observeth all men's actions.

6 Our Lord (g) examineth the just and the impious but he that (h) loveth iniquity, hateth his own soul.

(g) Proveth by tribulations. (h) Continuance in sin bringeth damnation to the soul.

7 (i) He shall rain snares upon sinners: fire and brimstone, and blast of storms the portion of their cup.

(i) God sparing for the time at last must needs of justice punish severely.

8 Because our Lord is just and hath loved justice: his countenance hath seen equity.

CHAPTER XI.

The Prophet describeth the paucity of just men, and aboundance of wicked, both at Christ's first coming in flesh, 6. and second in majesty, in the end of the world. [1]

[1] The state of the Church in the first and last times of Christ.
The 6. key.

Unto (a) the end for (b) the octave, the (c) Psalm of David.

(a) Christ's first (b) and last coming, (c) will bring joy to the elect.

2 Save (d) me Lord, because the holy hath failed (e) because verities are diminished from among the children of men.

(d) Christ calleth his mystical body himself. Act. 9. v. 4. (e) False and double dealing hinder from true faith.

3 They have spoken vain things every one to his neighbour, deceitful lips, they have spoken in heart and heart. 4 Our Lord destroy all deceitful lips, & the tongue that speaketh (f) great things.

(f) Indolent & arrogant.

5 Which have said: We will magnify our tongue, our lips are of us, who is our Lord? 6 For the misery of the needy, and mourning of the poor, now will I arise, saith our Lord: I will put in (g) a salvation, I will do confidently in him.

(g) When sin most abounded Christ came into this world: and in like case will come to judge.

7 Words of our Lord be chaste words: silver examined by fire, tried from the earth, purged seven fold. [1]

[1] Pro. 30.

8 Thou Lord wilt (h) preserve us: and keep us from this generation for ever.

(h) Yet still there remain some just whom God preserveth.

9 The impious walk round about: according to thy highness thou hast (i) multiplied the children of men.

(i) God sometimes suffereth the wicked to do what evil they desire.

PSALM XI.

[1] Temporal desires hinder the entrance into heaven.

[2] li. 12. c. 11. civ.

[3] Platonists' error.

9. The impious walk round about.] S. Augustine expoundeth this of worldly men desiring temporal things [1], signified by the seven days, wherein this whole life is turned about, as in a wheel, not providing for the eighth day, which is eternity, after the day of Judgement. In another place he sheweth also [2], that this sentence agreeth aptly to the Platonists, who taught that this world never endeth, but passeth & returneth round about, in a revolution of many years [3]; so that all things should happen again even as they did before, contrary to this, and many other Scriptures, affirming that God will preserve the just, and keep them from this generation for ever. Whereas the reprobate, who set their whole mind on temporal things, or expect a revolution of all, shall eternally walk without the kingdom of heaven, & never enter in; though some may call with the foolish virgins, saith S. Jerome (or some other learned author) upon this place: Lord Lord, open (the door) to us. But he will answer: that I know you not. Mat. 25.

CHAPTER XII.

A general prayer of the Church, in tribulation, either temporal or spiritual. [1]

[1] A prayer in tribulation.
The 7. key.

Unto (a) the end, the Psalm of David. How long, o Lord wilt thou forget me unto the end? How long doest thou turn away thy face from me?

(a) It more pertaineth to the new testament than to the old.

2 How long shall I put (b) counsels in my soul, sorrow in my heart (c) by day?

(b) Careful & almost perplex cogitations by reason of long persecution & man's weakness. (c) Very often every day.

3 How long shall mine enemies be exalted over me? Regard and hear me, o Lord my God. 4 Illuminate mine eyes that I sleep not (d) in death at any time: lest sometime mine enemy say: I have prevailed against him.

(d) Fall not into mortal sin,

5 They that trouble me, will rejoice if I be moved: but I have hoped in thy mercy. 6 My heart shall rejoice in thy salvation: I will sing to our Lord, which giveth me (e) good things: and I will sing to the name of our Lord most high.

(e) Patience in tribulation, and reward for victory.

CHAPTER XIII.

After general gross ignorance and impiety in the world 7. Christ shall be incarnate, the Redeemer of mankind. [1]

[1] Of Christ's Incarnation.
The 5. key.

Unto the end, a Psalm of David. The (a) fool hath said in his heart: There is no God. They are corrupt, and are become (b) abominable in their studies: there is (c) not that doth good^ no not one. [1]

(a) Wicked men drowned in sin are at last so besotted in their understanding, that they think in their heart (though they dare not utter it) that there is no God: that is, none that hath divine providence in governing the world, nor that will judge all in the end. (b) Defiled with all sorts of sin. (c) Not only the most wicked, but also all mankind were unable without a Redeemer to do good. [2] [1] Psa. 52. [2] Rom. 3.

2 Our Lord hath looked forth from heaven upon the children of men, to see if there be that understandeth, and seeketh after God. 3 All have declined, they are become (d) unprofitable together: there is not that doth good, no not one. Their throat is an open sepulchre, with their tongues they did deceitfully, the poison of asps under their lips. Whose mouth is full of cursing and bitterness: their feet swift to shed blood. (e) Destruction and infelicity in their ways, and the way of peace they have not known: there is no fear of God before their eyes. [1]

(d) Without faith in Christ none had meritorious works.

* These three verses being not in the Hebrew, nor Greek, yet are in the English, an. 1577. and are three distinct verses in other psalms. 5. 9. & 35.

(e) They are wholly occupied in vexing others. [1] Isa. 59. v. 8.

4 (f) Shall not all they know that work iniquity, that devour my people (g) as food of bread?

(f) The Prophet speaketh this in the person of God. (g) With greediness to hurt the good.

5 They have not invocated our Lord, (h) there have they trembled for fear, (i) where no fear was.

(h) Not believing in God, they feared Idols, that is, devils: (i) who indeed cannot hurt God's servants.

6 Because our Lord is in (k) the just generation, you have (l) confounded the counsel of the poor man: because our Lord is his hope.

(k) Though innumerable be very wicked, yet some are just. (l) Mocked & derided those that trust in God.

7 (m) Who will give from Sion the salvation of Israel? When our Lord shall have (n) turned away the captivity of his people, (o) Jacob shall rejoice, and (p) Israel shall be glad.

(m) The Prophet wisheth, and withal Prophesieth that Christ our Saviour will come, who is promised to Israel. (n) Redeemed man from the captivity of the devil. (o) Those that supplant vice (p) and contemplate God.

ANNOTATIONS.
PSALM XIII.

1. No not one.] S. Paul by this place, & the like (Isaie 59. v. 7.) confirmeth his doctrine (Rom. 3.) that both the Jews and the Gentiles (meaning all mankind) were in that state, that none, no not one without the grace of Christ [1], were just, nor could be justified, nor could be justified, nor saved by the law of Nature, nor of Moyses. Which proveth the necessity of faith. But neither that only faith justifieth, nor that the justest are still wicked, as Calvin and Beza falsely expound these Scriptures. For the Prophets and S. Paul speak in these places of men before they be justified, teaching that all mankind was once in sin, and none could be justified but by Christ [2]. Nevertheless they teach also that men being justified must and may serve justice unto sanctification. And that their works are not then unprofitable. For being made free from sin (saith the same Apostle to the Romans c. 6.) and become servants to God, you have your fruit unto sanctification, and the end is life everlasting Which point of doctrine, how man is justified [3], S. Augustine excellently, & briefly explicateth (li. 1. de Spiritu et lit. c. 9.) in these words: The just are justified freely by Christ his grace. They are not before purified by the law [4]: they are not justified by their proper will, but justified freely by (Christ) his grace. Not that it is done without our will, but by the law our will is shewed weak, that grace might cure the will, and the will being cured might fulfil the law, not being under the law, nor needing the law.

[1] Without Christ's grace no man is nor can be just.

[2] The law shewed the insufficiency of man's will.

[3] Grace cureth the will.

[4] The will being cured cooperateth with grace.

Whereto we may here add (and so save labour of repeating this in other places) another document of the same Doctor, in the same book (de Spirit. & lit. c. 27.) [1] that the just do not live without some sins, and yet remain in state of salvation: the wicked do sometimes certain good works [2], & still remain in state of damnation. For even as (saith he) venial sins, without it which this life is not led, do not exclude the just from eternal life: so certain good works, without which the life of the very worst is hardly found, profit nothing the unjust man to eternal salvation, but in everlasting damnation, some shall have more and some less torment.

[1] Venial sins exclude not from heaven.

[2] Good works done in mortal sins avail not to salvation.

CHAPTER XIV.

For attaining eternal glory in heaven, it is necessary to fly from sins and do good works.[1]

[1] Of eternal Beatitude.
The 10. key.

The Psalm of David. Lord who shall dwell in (a) thy tabernacle? Or who shall rest in thy holy hill?

(a) In heaven, as appeareth by the last verse.

2 He that walketh (b) without spot, and (c) worketh justice.

(b) One requisite thing is to be free or cleansed from sin.
(c) The second is to do good.

3 He that speaketh truth in his (d) heart, that hath not done guile in his (e) tongue. Nor hath (f) done evil to his neighbour, and hath not taken (g) reproach against his neighbour.

(d) Sincerely in thought, (e) word, and (f) deed. (g) Nor harkened to detraction.

4 The malignant is brought to nothing in his sight: but them that fear our Lord, he (h) glorifieth. He that sweareth to his neighbour, and deceiveth not,

(h) Glory is the reward of good works.

5 That hath not given his money to (i) usury, and hath not taken (k) gifts upon the innocent, He that doth these things, shall not be moved for ever.

(i) Usury excludeth from heaven. (k) Likewise doing wrong for bribes.

ANNOTATIONS.
PSALM XIV.

◦Why this and certain others are called the Psalms of David.

1. The Psalm of David.] As the appropriating of the general name of Psalm unto some, doth not prejudice◦, but that the rest are also Psalms, though they be called Prayers, Canticles, Testimonies, and the like: so the application of David's name to certain Psalms, proveth not other Authors of the rest. But the name of Psalm sheweth a spiritual song, apt for musical instrument; and the name of David by interpretation signifieth, that it particularly pertaineth to the beloved.

[1] Both faith and good works necessary to salvation.

5. He that doth these things.] whereas this [1], or any other place of holy Scripture, attributeth salvation to certain good works, neither faith, nor other works are thereby excluded, but presupposed as no less necessary, than those which are mentioned. Especially faith is always requisite [2], without which it is impossible to please God, and other virtues either in practise, or in purpose, and preparation of mind, when and where occasion requireth.

◦Only the state of glory is immutable.

5. Shall not be moved for ever.] All states of this world are mutable, ◦and only eternal felicity in heaven shall continue for ever. Therefore this Psalm cannot be understood of the Tabernacle, nor temple of the old Testament, which were but figures of eternal glory. But if so much purity was then requisite, much more all sincerity, and great sanctity are necessary for entrance into heaven.

CHAPTER XV.

Christ, by the mouth of David, declareth his future victory and triumph over the world, 9. and death.[1]

[1] Of Christ's victory.
The 5. key.

The (a) inscription of the title (b) to David himself. Preserve (c) me, o Lord, because I have hoped in thee.

(a) Stylographia signifieth a thing most worthy to be noted, to wit, Christ crucified: (b) and most worthy of the Prophet's consideration. (c) Christ as man did often pray, as appeareth in the Gospel.

2 I have said to our Lord: Thou art my God, because thou (d) needest not my goods.

(d) Christ's passion was not needful nor profitable to God but to man.

3 (e) To the Saints that are in his land, he hath made all my wills marvelous in them.

(e) God speaketh shewing that Christ should make his marvelous charity known to his Apostles, and other servants.

4 Their infirmities were (f) multiplied: afterward they (g) made haste. I will not assemble their (h) conventicles of blood: neither will I be mindful of their (i) names by my lips.

(f) Men feeling their infirmities and miseries, (g) make haste in seeking remedies. (h) Sacrifices of idols shall cease in Gentiles. (i) Their names shall be changed from heathen to be called Christians.

5 (k) Our Lord the portion of mine inheritance, and of my (l) cup: thou art he, that will restore mine inheritance unto me.

(k) Eternal glory consisteth in seeing God. (l) God is the reward of suffering pains for Christ.

6 (m) Cords are fallen to me in goodly places: for (n) mine inheritance is goodly unto me.

(m) In division of temporal inheritance, land is measured by cords, as Josue 10. so portions in heaven are given with large measure: (n) Christ also received all nations for his inheritance.

7 I will bless our Lord, who hath (o) given me understanding: moreover also even till (p) night my (q) veins have rebuked me.

(o) Wisdom to make good election of spiritual things rather than temporal. (p) Not only by day, but also by night. (q) Also my corporal pains give me instruction.

8 I (r) foresaw our Lord in my sight always: because he is (s) at my right hand, that I be not moved. [1]

(r) Christ had God continually before his eyes: every man ought to think frequently of God. (s) For god still protecteth the just. [1] Act. 2. v. 25.

9 For this thing my heart hath been glad, and my tongue hath rejoiced: moreover also my flesh shall rest in hope. 10 Because thou wilt not leave my soul (t) in hell: neither wilt give (v) thy holy one to see corruption [1]. Thou hast made (w) the ways of life known to me, thou shalt make me full of joy with (x) thy countenance: delectations on thy right hand, even to (y) the end.

(t) In limbo Patrum. (v) Christ's body corrupted not in the grave. [1] Act. 2. & 3. (w) Death and resurrection is the way to life. (x) Perfect glory consisteth in seeing God. (y) In eternity.

ANNOTATIONS.
PSALM XV.

5. Our Lord the portion of mine inheritance.] Christ, whom the Jews expected as an earthly conqueror, that should advance himself and them temporally in this world [1], was indeed, as the children and multitude called him, King of Israel (Joan. 12.) At which time (as also before) he exercised temporal Jurisdiction, in correcting abuses in the Temple (Mat. 21. Joan. 2.) And when Pilate demanded of him if he were a King (Joan. 18. v. 37.) he answered: Thou sayst, that I am a King. For this I was born, and for this came I into the world, that I should give testimony to the truth. And though he answered withal, that his Kingdom (to wit the possession and use thereof) was not of this world, yet Pilate by God's providence, writ the title, and would not alter it, JESUS of Nazareth King of the Jews. [2] But Christ's chief inheritance, and reward of his merits is God

[1] Christ a King sometimes exercised temporal jurisdiction.

[2] God the proper inheritance of Christ, and Christians.

[3] Clergy men profess expressly to serve God, for God himself not for temporal profit.

[4] Psal. 61. v. 11. 2. Tim. 2. v. 4.

himself, as here he professeth by his Prophet David: which is also the only true & perfect inheritance of all Christ's servants, wherefore Clergy men more particularly profess the same, when they first enter into their spiritual state [3], addicting and dedicating themselves to serve God in Ecclesiastical function, not for temporal inheritance, but for a better lot, God himself, who is all Good, and most perfect goodness, true riches, and eternal inheritance. In which election of state to live and serve God in, every Clergy man sayth: Our Lord is the portion of mine inheritance, and of my cup: Thou art he that will restore mine inheritance unto me. Man calleth it his inheritance, because he was created to serve God, and for his service to inherit God: which reward though he lost by sin, yet every one returning to God's service, and persevering therein, recovereth by Christ new right and title to the same inheritance, performing their duties in their several vocations. Some travailing in the world, but not loving it [4]: others sequestered from secular affairs duly administering sacred offices, more peculiarly called Divine service.

[2] 1552. 1577. 1603.

10. Not leave my soul in hell.] How Calvin and Beza sometimes corrupt this text, always pervert the sense [1], and most absurdly oppose themselves against all ancient holy Fathers, concerning the Article of Christ's descending in soul into that part of hell called Lymbus patrum, is largely noted Gen. 37. Act. 2. & 1 Pet. 3. Only here we may not omit to advertise the reader, that some Protestant Bibles permitting the world hell to remain in the text [2], a latter Edition for hell, putteth grave, with this only note in the former place, that this is chiefly meant of Christ, by whose Resurrection all his members have immortality And Act. 2. they repeat their new text by this paraphrasis: Thou shalt not leave me in the grave. wresting that which pertaineth to the body rising from the grave, to the soul, which was not at all in the grave, all time the body lay there.

CHAPTER XVI.

A just man's prayer in tribulation, 10. describing his enemies' cruelty, 13. by way of imprecation foresheweth their destruction, 15. and declareth that the just shall be satisfied in glory. [1]

[1] God's providence protecting the just.
The 3. key.

The prayer of David. Hear, o Lord my (a) justice: attend my petition. With thine ears hear my prayer, (b) not in deceitful lips.

(a) In my just cause hear my petition (b) seeing I pray sincerely, not in feigned affection.

2 From (c) thy countenance let my judgment proceed: let thine eyes see equities.

(c) Thou that seest all things declare my right against mine adversaries.

3 Thou hast proved (d) my heart, and visited it (e) by night: (f) by fire thou hast examined me, (g) and there is no iniquity found in me.

(d) My intention. (e) Most secret cogitations. (f) By tribulations. (g) Whose conscience is pure from grievous sin, may pray with this confidence, otherwise repentance is first necessary. But the whole Church may ever pray in this manner, because there be always some just and holy, in respect of whom it is truly called holy.

4 That my mouth speak not the works of men: for the (h) words of thy lips I have kept the (i) hard ways.

(h) For thy precepts. (i) The narrow way of virtue.

5 (k) Perfit my passes in thy paths, that my steps be not moved.

(k) None can of themselves walk rightly, but by God's help.

6 I have cried, because thou hast heard me, o God: incline thine ear to me, and hear my words. 7 Make thy mercies marvelous, which savest them that hope in thee. 8 From them that resist (l) thy right hand keep me, as the apple of the eye. Under the shadow of thy wings protect me:

(l) Against thy omnipotent power.

9 from the (m) face of the impious, that have afflicted me. Mine enemies have compassed my soul,

(m) From their cruel and furious countenance.

10 they have shut up their (n) fat: their mouth hath spoken pride.

(n) They have shut out all pity or commiseration.

11 Casting me forth now have they compassed me: they have set their eyes to bend them (o) unto the earth.

(o) They intend utterly to destroy me even to the ground.

12 They have taken me as a lion ready to the prey: and as a lion's whelp dwelling in hid places. 13 Arise Lord, (p) prevent him, and supplant him: deliver my soul from the impious, (q) thy sword

(p) Except God prevent, man's industry is not sufficient. (q) Refrain their power, which they have by thy permission, that they may not persecute so much as they intend.

14 from the enemies of thy hand. Lord from (r) a few out of the land divide them, (s) in their life: their belly is filled of (t) thy secrets. They are filled with children: and they have left their remnants to their little ones.

(r) This is a prophecy, that the wicked, which are many, shall at the day of judgement be separated from the elect (s) which judgement beginneth sometimes in this life. (t) The pleasures of this world, which God approveth not, nor acknowledgeth amongst good things.

15 But (v) I in justice shall appear to thy sight: I shall be (w) filled when thy glory shall appear?

(v) The just shall be approved. (w) Nothing doth satiate man's mind, but the sight of God in eternal glory.

ANNOTATIONS. PSALM XVI.

1. The prayer of David.] This Psalm of the matter contained is called a prayer. Which holy David so composed◦, as was both convenient for himself, being molested with unjust afflictions by the wicked, and for any other just person, or the whole Church in persecution, serving as a spiritual sword to strike the enemies, and as a shield to bear off with patience and fortitude all their forces.

◦This Psalm called a Prayer is both a sword & buckler in affliction.

CHAPTER XVII.

King David's thanks to God for his often delivery from great dangers. First in general, 9. then more particularly describeth God's terrible manner of fighting for him, 18. against his cruel, and otherwise potent enemies: 22. attributing the same to God's good pleasure, and justice of his cause. 31. Praiseth God, 33. his only protector, 41. and depresser of his enemies. [1]

[1] David singularly protected by God.
The 8. key.

Unto (a) the end, (b) to the servant of our Lord David, who spake to our Lord the words of this canticle, in the day, that our Lord delivered him out of the hand of all his enemies, and out of the hand of (c) Saul, and he said: [1] I will (d) love thee o Lord (e) my strength:

(a) Though literally this Psalm pertained to David, yet in figure of Christ, and of the Church, or every just soul. (b) The Holy Ghost inspired David to render these thanks for his often delivery from dangers. (c) Saul is specially named, because he was his most potent worldly enemy. [1] (2. Reg. 22.) (d) These first words (as also diverse others) are added, and many changed in this and other Psalms by the Septuagint, who often leaving the Hebrew text render the sense, and so this agreeth in substance with the same Psalm recorded 2. Reg. 22. (e) By whom I am strong.

2 Our Lord is my firmament, and my refuge, and my deliverer. 3 My God is my helper, and I will hope in him. My protector and the (f) horn of my salvation, and my receiver. [1]

4 Praising I will invocate our Lord: & I shall be saved from mine enemies. 5 The (g) sorrows of (h) death have compassed me: and (i) torrents of iniquity have troubled me.

(g) This is aptly applied to all mankind after his fall, declaring our state in sin, and inducing to penance, in the office of Mass on Septuagesima Sunday. (h) Mortal flesh subject to death. (i) Violent incursions of tentations to sin.

6 The sorrows of (k) hell have compassed me: the (l) snares of death have prevented me.

(k) Exceeding great afflictions of mind, like torments of hell, which I also fear. (l) Secret tentations have deceived me.

7 In my tribulation I have invocated our Lord, and have (m) cried to my God: And (n) he hath heard my voice from his holy temple: and my cry in his sight, hath entered into his ears.

(m) Earnest prayer is the best remedy in all tribulations. (n) As it is certain that God heard David's prayers, so he assuredly heareth all that sincerely fly unto him.

8 The earth was shaken & trembled: the foundations of mountains were troubled, and were moved, (o) because he was wrath with them.

(o) God's anger against sin maketh high and lofty things to shake, even the most obstinate presumptuous sinners.

9 (p) Smoke arose in his wrath: and fire flamed up from his face: coals were kindled from him.

(p) Divine wrath is like to smoke of the nostrils, or flaming fire, & burning coals.

10 He (q) bowed the heavens, and descended: and (r) darkness under his feet.

(q) God's punishment sometimes cometh so swiftly, as if the heavens bowed towards the earth. (r) God's fury is as a dark desolate night, or horrible mist.

11 And he (s) ascended upon the cherubs, and flew: he flew upon the wings of winds.

(s) Yet when sinners repent, God most speedily, as flying with wings of mercy, comforteth & protecteth them.

12 And he put darkness his (t) covert, his tabernacle is round about him: darksome water in the clouds of the air.

(t) God being in himself incomprehensible, is also secret in his determinations, and covert in his proceedings or acts.

13 Because of the (v) brightness in his sight the clouds passed, hail and coals of fire.

(v) God's splendor oppressing man's sense, yet instructeth him by his marvelous works. Which mystically signifieth, that Christ illuminateth the world by his Apostles, and other preachers denouncing his justice, peace, and his will in all things pertaining to man.

14 And our Lord thundered from heaven, and the Highest gave his voice: hail and coals of fire. 15 And he shot his arrows, and dissipated them: he multiplied lightnings, and troubled them. 16 And the fountains of waters appeared, and the foundations of the world were revealed. At thy rebuke, o Lord, at the blast of the spirit of thy wrath. 17 He sent from on high, and took me: and he received me out of many (w) waters.

(w) From tribulations.

18 He delivered me (x) from my most strong enemies, and from them that hated me: because they were made strong over me.

(x) From Saul, Absalom, Moabites, Ammonites, and temporal & spiritual enemies.

19 They prevented me in the day of mine affliction: and our Lord was made my protector.

* So in the rest of this Psalm the Prophet speaketh for most part in proper terms, without Metaphors or other figures. Yet in the mystical sense of Christ, and Christians.

20 And he brought me out into largeness: he saved me, because he (y) would me.

(y) Of his good pleasure without my deserts.

21 And our Lord will reward me according to my justice, and according to the purity of my hands he will reward me. 22 Because I have kept the ways of our Lord, neither have I done impiously from my God. 23 Because all his judgments are in my sight: and his justices I have not repelled from me. 24 And I shall be immaculate (z) with him, and shall keep me from mine iniquity.

(z) By his grace.

25 (z) And our Lord will reward me according to my justice: & according to the purity of my hands in the sight of his eyes.

(z) He repeateth the 21. verse, inculcating that God will render to every one as they deserve.

26 With the holy thou shalt be holy, and with the innocent man thou shalt be innocent. 27 And with the elect thou shalt be elect: and with the perverse thou shalt be perverted. 28 Because thou wilt save the humble people: and the eyes of the proud thou wilt humble. 29 Because thou dost illuminate my lamp o Lord: my God illuminate my darkness. 30 Because in thee I shall (a) go over the wall.

(a) Pass over all difficulties.

31 My God his (b) way is unpolluted: the words of our Lord are examined by fire: he is protector of all that hope in him.

(b) God's precepts.

32 For (c) who is God but our Lord? Or who is God but our God?

(c) One only God, Creator and Saviour of all.

33 God that girded me with strength: and made my way immaculate. 34 That perfited my feet as it were of harts: and setting me upon high things. 35 That teacheth my hands to battle: and hast put mine arms (d) as a bow of brass.

(d) Amongst other acts David killed a lion, and a bear, & Goliath. 1. Reg. 17.[1]

[1] 2. Re. 22.

36 And hast given me the protection of thy salvation: & thy right hand hath received me. And thy discipline hath corrected me unto the end: and thy discipline, the same shall teach me. 37 Thou hast enlarged my passes under me: and my steps are not weakened: 38 I will pursue mine enemies, and overtake them: and will not return till they fail. 39 I will break them, neither shall they be able to stand: they shall fall under my feet. 40 And thou hast girded me with strength to battle: and hast supplanted them that rise against me under me. 41 And (e) mine enemies thou hast given me their back, & them that hate me thou hast destroyed.

(e) As God giveth strength to his servants, so he diminisheth the natural strength and courage of his enemies.

42 They cried, neither was there that would save them, to our Lord, neither did he hear them. 43 And I will break them to powder, as the dust before the face of wind: as the durt of the streets I will destroy them. 44 Thou wilt deliver me from the contradictions of the people: thou wilt appoint me to be head of the Gentiles. 45 A people (f) which I knew not hath served me: in the hearing of the ear it hath obeyed me.

(f) Conversion of Gentiles to Christ, as the Moabites, Idumeans, and others were subdued by David. 1. Par. 11. 14. 18. 19. 20.

46 The (g) children being aliens have lied to me, the children aliens are inveterated, and have halted from their paths.

(g) The revolting and reprobation of the Jews, prefigured by Absalom's rebellion and others. 2. Reg. 15. 16.

47 Our Lord liveth, and blessed be my God, and the God of my salvation be exalted. 48 O God (h) which givest me revenges, & subduest peoples under me, my deliverer from mine angry enemies.

(h) God still protecteth the Church of Christ, as he preserved David.

49 And from them that rise up against me thou wilt exalt me: from the unjust man thou wilt deliver me. 50 Therefore will I confess to thee among nations, o Lord: and will say (i) a Psalm to thy name.

51 Magnifying the salvations of his king, and doing mercy to his Christ David, and to his seed for ever.

CHAPTER XVIII.

God's perfect goodness and glory is shewed by his great works, and by his Apostles, sent with heavenly commission to preach in all tongues to all nations. 6. Christ's coming into the world, and return unto heaven: 8. his immaculate Law: 13. wherein notwithstanding the just shall have need to pray for remission of smaller and daily sins.[1]

[1] Propagation of the Catholic faith.

The 6. key.

Unto (a) the end, the Psalm of David.

(a) Pertaining to the beloved of the new Testament.

2 The (b) heavens shew forth the glory of God, and the firmament declareth the works of his hands.

(b) The silent works of God declare his Majesty to them that consider thereof, his Preachers declare the same by words, to all that will hear.

3 (c) Day unto day uttereth word: and night unto night sheweth knowledge.

(c) The constant course of times sheweth that the same was disposed by God's power, and daily propagation of faith, especially of Christian doctrine, sheweth Christ's power, & assured perpetuity of his Church.

4 There are (d) no languages, nor speeches, whose voices are not heard.

(d) Some of every language or nation have believed in Christ, receiving the Catholic Religion.

5 (e) Their sound hath gone forth into all the earth; and unto the ends of the round world the words of them.

(e) S. Paul affirmeth that this hath been fulfilled by the Apostles preaching in all the world. Rom. 10.

6 He put his tabernacle in (f) the sun: & himself as a (g) bridegroom coming forth of his bride-chamber. He hath rejoiced as a giant to run the way,

(f) By the sun a most excellent and superelemental creature, the Prophet describeth Christ, making his course through this world, illuminating, comforting, and strengthening the Church his tabernacle, wherein he perpetually dwelleth. (g) Christ the bridegroom, & the Church his bride are never divorced; his love, wisdom, and power, ever conserving her by his immaculate law.

7 his coming forth from the top of heaven: And his recourse even to the top thereof: neither is there that can hide himself from his heat. 8 The law of our Lord is immaculate (h) converting souls: the testimony of our Lord is faithful, giving wisdom to little ones.

(h) The old law was likewise pure in itself and holy, but the new also maketh the observers immaculate.

9 The justices of our Lord be right, making hearts joyful: the precept of our Lord lightsome, illuminating the eyes. 10 The fear of our Lord is holy, permanent for ever and ever: the judgments of our Lord be true, justified in themselves. 11 To be desired above gold and much precious stone: and more sweet above honey and the honey-comb. 12 For thy servant (i) keepeth them, in keeping them is (k) much reward.

(i) How sweet the law of God is, his servants find not by reading, or by hearing only, but by keeping it. (k) Conformably to this text the Prophet professeth (Psa. 118. v. 12.) that he kept them for reward, in which place the heretics' translation is corrupted.

13 Sins (l) who understandeth? From my secret sins cleanse me:

(l) None in this life knoweth perfectly his own estate, whether he be worthy of love or hate, Eccle. 9. but hopeth and feareth.

14 and from other mens spare thy servant. If (m) they shall not have dominion over me, then shall I be immaculate; and shall be cleansed from the greatest sin.

(m) If mortal sins have not dominion in the soul, it is just: and shall be in time immaculate from all sin.

15 And the words of my mouth shall be such as may please: and the meditation of my heart in thy sight always. O Lord (n) my helper and my (o) Redeemer.

(n) God's helping grace is still necessary to persevere, (o) as his first grace redeeming man is necessary for our first conversion.

ANNOTATIONS.
PSALM XVIII.

◦God converteth and justifieth souls instructing them by

8. The Law of our Lord is immaculate, converting souls.] God's law in it-self being most pure, and immaculate, is the proper means, whereby the Holy Ghost converteth souls from sins to justice◦. Not that every one is justified, which readeth, heareth, or knoweth the law, but by keeping it, through grace of the Holy Ghost. Who is the author and worker of justice, by disposing the soul to cooperate in manner partly here described: God's faithful and most true testimony by his law giveth wisdom, faith, and knowledge to the humble, his right justices, comfort the hearts of the faithful, his clear precept teacheth them their duty; his holy fear persevereth with them; his true judgements are most delectable, and desirable above all worldly riches or pleasures. So by these and like spiritual motives the soul freely desireth, accepteth, undertaketh, endureth, and by continual assistance of grace observeth God's law; and so meriteth the great reward, which is promised for keeping it. v. 12. 2. Tim. 4. v. 6.

his law, and sweetly drawing their free cooperation by grace.

Faithful people join their prayer for their Prince or Prelate, 4. with sacrifice offered for his preservation, and prosperous success.[1]

[1] The subjects' prayer for their superior.
The 7. key.

Unto (a) the end, the Psalm of David.

(a) Though such a prayer was very fitly made for David, Ezechias, or other Kings of Juda, yet it more properly serveth for Christian Kings and Prelates.

2 Our Lord hear (b) thee in the day of tribulation: the name of the God of Jacob protect thee.

(b) The King or other superior praying for himself, his subjects pray with him, and for him. It may also be applied to Christ, praying whilst he was mortal, or now praying for his mystical body the Church: but in both these cases our prayers are only necessary for his servants, not for him.

3 Send he aid to thee from the holy place: and from Sion defend he thee. 4 Be he mindful of all thy (c) sacrifice: and be thy holocaust made (d) fat.

(c) The Hebrew word MINCA signifieth sacrifice of flour, and unbloody, so pertaineth to the Eucharist, in form of bread and wine. (d) Be acceptable for him, for whom it is offered.

5 Give he unto thee according to thy heart: and confirm he all thy counsel. 6 We shall rejoice (e) in thy salvation: and in the name of our God we shall be magnified.

(e) In the prosperous state of thee our superior.

7 Our Lord accomplish all thy petitions: now have I known that our Lord hath saved (f) his CHRIST. He shall hear him from his holy heaven: the salvation of his right hand is (g) in powers.

(f) His anointed King, or Priest. Mystically faithful people acknowledge the victory of Christ our Saviour over death and all his enemies. (g) In great strength, or heavenly forces.

8 These in chariots, and these in horses: but we will invocate in the name of the Lord our God.
9 (h) They are bound, & have fallen: but we have risen & are set upright.

(h) Men trusting in human and worldly power fall into captivity.

10 Lord (i) save the king, and hear us in the day, that we shall invocate thee

(i) By protection of the head the body is also conserved.

CHAPTER XX.

Praise to God for Christ's exaltation after his passion: 9. and depression of his enemies.[1]

[1] Christ's exaltation.
The 5. key.

Unto (a) the end, the Psalm of David.

(a) Pertaining to the new Testament, principally to Christ, partly to godly and victorious Kings, and generally to all the blessed, which overcome spiritual enemies.

2 Lord in (b) thy power the king shall be glad: and upon thy salvation he shall rejoice exceedingly.

(b) Christ our King as man overcoming his enemies by his divine power, rejoiceth in victory.

3 The (c) desire of his heart thou hast given him: and of the will of his lips thou hast not defrauded him.

(c) Christ's most special desire was the salvation of his people.

4 Because thou hast (d) prevented him in blessings of sweetness, thou hast put on his head a crown of precious stone.

(d) This most principally verified in Christ, is also applied to Martyrs, which suffer, or are ready in preparation of mind to suffer death for the truth.

5 He asked life of thee: and thou gavest him length of days for ever, and for ever and ever. 6 Great is his glory in thy salvation: glory and great beauty thou shalt put upon him. 7 Because thou shalt give him (e) to be a blessing for ever and ever: thou shalt make him joyful in gladness with thy countenance.

(e) All Saints receive blessing of glory, but only Christ imparteth such grace to others: for in him all are blessed that are eternally glorified. Gen. 21. Ioan. 1.

8 Because the king hopeth in our Lord: and in the mercy of the Highest he shall not be moved. 9 Let (f) thy hand be found of all thy enemies: let thy right hand find all that hate thee.

(f) The just conforming their desires to God's will, do pray that the wicked may be punished. It is also a Prophecy, that so it shall come to pass.

10 Thou (g) shalt put them as an oven of fire (h) in the time of thy countenance: our Lord in his wrath (i) shall trouble them, and fire shall devour them.

(g) And so it followeth in the next verse: Thou shalt put them &c. (h) This also cannot be understood of any but of Christ, who in the general or particular judgement shall give sentence upon the wicked. (i) And immediately hell fire shall devour them.

11 Their (k) fruit thou shalt destroy from the land: and their seed from the children of men.

(k) All the wicked, and namely the Jews who persecuted Christ, fail in their devices.

12 Because they have turned the evils upon thee: they have devised counsels, which they could not establish. 13 Because thou shalt put them back: in thy remnants thou shalt prepare their countenance. 14 Be exalted Lord in thy power: (l) we will chant and sing thy powers.

(l) Whilst the wicked perish, the just rejoice & praise God in song and Psalm.

CHAPTER XXI.

Christ prayeth in his Passion, 7. describeth the acerbity thereof; 20. foresheweth by way of prayer his Resurrection: 23. More clearly the foundation and propagation of his church (27. & 30. interposing the singular food of the most Blessed Sacrament) even to the ends of the earth in all nations. [1]

[1] Christ's Passion & effects thereof.
The 5. key.

Unto the end for the (a) morning enterprise, the Psalm (b) of David.

(a) Redemption of mankind undertaken by Christ, and performed by his death, began to be shewed by his Resurrection in the morning of the third day. S. Augu.
(b) In figure of Christ the beloved of God.

2 God (c) my God have respect to me: (d) why hast thou forsaken me? (e) Far from my salvation are the words of my sins.

(c) God is God of all his creatures, but in more peculiar sort God of Christ by personal union. (d) Thou neither deliverest me from dying: nor yieldest me such comfort as thou vouchsafest to other Saints. v. 6. Mat. 27. (e) I am neither delivered from dying, nor comforted in my passion, having undertaken to die for the sins of mankind, & reputed them as mine own words or facts.

3 My God I shall cry (f) by day, (g) & thou wilt not hear: and by night, and (h) not for folly unto me.

(f) Albeit I cry by day, (g) and by night, on the cross and in the garden, to have the chalice of death removed from me, & shall not be heard, (h) yet there is no folly, nor fault in this petition, which is with submission of man's will to God's will.

4 But (i) thou dwellest in the holy place, (k) the praise of Israel.

(i) Thou from heaven wilt hear when it is convenient. (k) Whose wisdom and goodness the Church worthily praiseth.

5 In thee (l) our fathers have hoped: they hoped, and thou didst deliver them.

(l) Patriarchs, Prophets, and other holy men praying in their distresses obtained their requests.

6 They cried to thee, and were (m) saved: they hoped in thee, and were (n) not confounded.

(m) Were temporally delivered by thy mighty hand from their persecutors. (n) Not frustrate of their humble prayers.

7 (o) But I am a (p) worm and no man: a (q) reproach of men and (r) outcast of the people.

(o) God that comforteth his servants in their tribulations, left Christ without his ordinary consolation, to suffer more than ever any other did. (p) Wicked persecuters respected not Christ as a man, but contemned him, as a very worm (q) as most reproachful of all men (r) as the basest of all the people.

8 (s) All that see me have scorned me: they have spoken with the lips, & wagged the head.

(s) Almost all became Christ's cruel enemies at the time of his passion, afflicting, blaspheming, and scorning him, as the Evangelists record.

9 (t) He hoped in the Lord, let him deliver him: let him save him, because he (v) will him.

(t) The Evangelists write how all these things were fulfilled by wicked men, speaking these blasphemies, and reproaches. (v) God seemed to be well pleased with Christ, as with his own Son: if it be so, let him deliver him from these afflictions, say these blasphemers.

10 Because thou art he that (w) hast drawn me out of the womb: my hope from the breasts of my mother.

(w) Divine power without man formed me in the womb of my mother a Virgin.

11 Upon thee I (x) have been cast from the matrice: (y) from my mother's womb thou art my God,

(x) As I have no father but thee O God: so without intermission from mine incarnation to this time, I have had thee my protector: (y) leave me not now without comfort, seeing I must die as thou hast determined, and I freely consented: yet leave me not in death but raise me again to life. Psal. 15. v. 9. 10.

12 depart not from me. Because tribulation is very nigh: because there is (z) not that will help.

(z) Almost all are become mine enemies, and those few that would, cannot help me.

13 Many (a) calves have compassed me: (b) fat bulls have besieged me.

(a) Delicate lascivious young men, (b) and the scribes, Pharisees, and elders of the people have all conspired against me.

14 They have (c) opened their mouth upon me, as a lion ravening and roaring.

(c) Condemning me and persuading the people to cry: Crucify, crucify him.

15 As (d) water I am poured out: and all (e) my bones are dispersed. (f) My heart is made as wax melting in the midst of my belly.

(d) So weakened with pains of torments, as fluid water not able to consist. (e) My bones and strongest parts of my body are weakened, verified, when our Saviour fell down under his cross. (f) The part that first and last liveth is weakened as soft wax by heat of the fire, and ready to fail.

16 My strength is withered as a (g) potsherd, and my tongue (h) cleaved to my jaws: and thou hast (i) brought me down into the dust of death.

(g) All my powers and radical humidity is dried up, as a potter's vessel is baked in the furnace. (h) Through exceeding great drought, which our Saviour professed on the cross saying: I thirst. (i) Thus thou O God has suffered me to come to the last breath of life, next to death. Yet finally our Saviour gave up his spirit before he should have died. v. 21.

17 Because many (k) dogs have compassed me: the counsel of the malignant hath besieged me. They have digged my hands and my feet:

(k) Again this Royal Prophet recounteth by whom and how our B. Saviour should suffer, even as clear as the Evangelists afterwards have written the history.

18 they have (l) numbered all my bones. But themselves have (m) considered and beheld me:

(l) Our Saviour's body was so racked on the cross, that his bones might be seen and counted. (m) The persecuters wittingly determined all this cruelty: beheld it with their eyes, and without all compassion persisted in malice, rejoiced, and blasphemed.

19 they have (n) divided my garments among them: and upon my (o) vesture they have cast lot.

(n) The soldiers that crucified our Saviour, taking his garments for their prey: (o) yet in mystery of his Church divided not his coat.

20 But thou Lord (p) prolong not thy help from me: look toward my defence.

(p) He prophesieth Christ's speedy resurrection.

21 Deliver, o God, (q) my soul from the sword: and mine (r) only one from (s) the hand of the dog.

(q) Christ's soul was not separated from his body by force of the torments, but he preventing death freely yielded up his spirit. Ioan. 10. v. 9. & 10. (r) The most pure, and sanctified soul, of whose fullness all other just souls are sanctified. (s) That it stay not in hell, which devoured all other souls in the old Testament.

22 Save me out of the lion's mouth: and my humility from the horns of unicorns. 23 I will (t) declare thy name to my brethren: in the midst of the Church I will praise thee,

(t) The propagation of the Church of Christ in all nations.

24 Ye that fear our Lord praise him: all the (v) seed of Jacob glorify ye him.

(v) Not the carnal but spiritual children of Jacob, Isaac, and Abraham. Rom. 9. v. 8.

25 Let all the seed of Israel fear him: because he hath not contemned nor despised the petition of the poor. Neither hath he turned away his face from me: and when I cried to him he heard me, 26 With thee is my praise in (w) the great Church: I (x) will render my vows in the sight of them that fear him.

(w) The Church gathered both of Jews and Gentiles is very great and universal. (x) Our Saviour promised to give his own body, the bread of life. Ioan. 6. and performed the same at his last supper.

27 The (y) poor shall eat, and shall be filled: and they shall praise our Lord that seek after him: their hearts (z) shall live for ever and ever.

(y) Those that be faithful, humble, and poor in spirit participate the fruit of this most excellent Sacrament. (z) The effect of this B. Sacrament is the resurrection in glory, and life everlasting.

28 All the ends of the earth (a) shall remember, and be converted to our Lord. And all the families of the Gentiles shall adore in his sight.

(a) Gentiles which have been idolaters shall recollect themselves, when they hear Christ preached, and shall turn to true Religion.

29 (b) Because the kingdom is our Lord's: and he shall have dominion over the Gentiles.

(b) Although men can neither deserve to be converted, nor to persevere in justice; yet Christ meriteth to have a continual Kingdom, which is the perpetual visible Catholic Church.

30 All the (c) fat ones of the earth have eaten, and (d) adored: in his sight shall all fall (e) that descend into the earth.

(c) Not only the poor sort, but also the mighty ones of the world shall be converted to Christ, participate his B. Body in the Sacrament, (d) and religiously adore the same. (e) All that adore God, shall adore him in this Sacrament.

31 And (f) my soul shall live to him: and my (g) seed shall serve him.

(f) Death being once overcome, it shall have no more power. (g) Again the Prophet inculcateth the continuance of the Catholic Church.

32 The generation to come shall be shewed to our Lord: and the (h) heavens shall shew forth his justice to the people that shall be born, whom our Lord hath made.

(h) Apostles, and other preachers of Christ.

ANNOTATIONS.
PSALM XXI.

◦Christ's Resurrection. The Passion of Christ

1. For the morning enterprise.] In respect of the end for which Christ suffered, this Psalm is entitled: for the morning enterprise: that is, for Christ's glorious Resurrection◦, and other effects of his Passion. Which holy David by the spirit of Prophecy so describeth here long before with diverse particular circumstances, as the Evangelists have since historically recorded, that it may not unfitly be called, The Passion of Jesus Christ according to David.

according to David.

3. Thou wilt not hear.] Our B. Saviour seeing his most terrible death imminent, prayed conditionally [1], if it pleased his heavenly Father, to have the same removed from him, & was not heard, as the Psalmist here prophesieth. The principal reason was, because God of his divine charity had decreed, that mankind should be redeemed by this death of his Son. Christ also himself of his excellent charity, consented here unto, & therefore persisted not in his conditional prayer, but added absolutely & prayed, that not his own will, but his Fathers might be fulfilled. And in this he was heard [2], to his own more glory and other infinite benefits of innumerable souls, as it followeth, v. 25. When I cried to him he heard me. S. Paul also witnesseth (Heb. 5. v. 7.) that Christ offering prayers and supplications to him that could save him from death, was heard for his reverence: that is, in respect of his inestimable merit in human nature united in person to God. Another cause, why Christ was not delivered from violent death [3], as many holy persons were, when they cried to God in distress, as S. Augustine sheweth (Epist. 120. c. 11.) was for example to Christians, whom God will have to suffer temporal afflictions, and death, for the glory of life everlasting, according to S. Peter's doctrine, Christ suffered for us, leaving an example that you may follow his steps. [4]

[1] Christ's conditional prayer was not heard.

[2] His absolute prayers were always heard.

[3] Christ suffered for our example.

[4] 1 Pet. 2.

17. They have digged.] Of obstinate malice the Jews have corrupted this place (and God knoweth how many others) in the Hebrew text of some editions ◦, reading caari, which signifieth as a lion, without all coherence of the sense, for caaru, they digged or pierced; to avoid so plain a prophecy of nailing Christ's hands and feet to the cross.

◦ The Hebrew text corrupted by the Jews.

23. I will declare thy name to my brethren.] Here it is evident that this Psalm is of Christ ◦, not of David, by S. Paul's allegation (Heb. 2. v. 11. 12.) saying: He that sanctifieth (to wit Christ) disdained not to call the sanctified his brethren.

◦ This Psalm is of Christ.

23. In the midst of the Church I will praise thee.] After Christ's Passion and Resurrection, in the rest of this Psalm, other two principal points of Christian Religion are likewise prophesied: His perpetual visible Church, and the B. Sacrament of his body. The former is here prophesied by way of inviting all the seed of Jacob to glorify God (v. 24.) all the seed of Israel to fear him (v. 25.) to wit, innumerable Christians [1], the true Israelites, the universal Church in the whole world. As for heretical parts or parcels in the world, such as the Donatists, which going forth from the Catholic Church say: Christ hath lost his great Church, the devil hath taken the whole world from him, and he remaineth only in a part of Africa, they do not praise God (saith S. Augustine) but dishonour God and Christ, as if God were not faithful in his promise [2], as if Christ were dispossessed of his Kingdom the Catholic Church. Lest any should reply, that Christ is praised though the Church be decayed, or be very small, the Holy Ghost hath prevented such arguments, saying v. 26: His praise is in the great Church. Which could neither be verified in the part of Donatists in Afrike, nor now in the part of Protestants since Luther in Europe. Further S. Augustine explicateth [3], & urgeth the verses following in this Psalm, against the same blind, deaf, and obstinate Donatists, who did not, or would not see, nor hear, that all the ends of the earth shall remember, and be converted to our Lord. The holy Scripture saith not, the ends of the earth, but all the ends. Well go too (saith this great Doctor) peradventure there is but one verse, thou thoughtest upon something else, thou talkedst with thy brother, when one read this; mark, he repeateth and knocketh upon the deaf: All the families of the Gentiles shall adore in his sight: Yet the heretic is deaf, he heareth not, let one knock again: Because the Kingdom is our Lord's, and he shall have dominion over the Gentiles. Hold these three verses brethren. Thus and more S. Augustine against those that think the true Church may fail, or become invisible or obscure. And though it be not in like prosperous state at all times, and in all places, yet it is always conspicuous, and more general than any other congregation professing whatsoever pretended religion.

[1] Prophecy of the visible and universal Church.

[2] in hunc Psal.

[3] S. Augustine proveth the Church to be always visible and great by this Psalm.

[1] The Eucharist prophesied in this place.

[2] Real presence of Christ in the Eucharist.

27. The poor shall eat.] Seeing this Psalm is of Christ, as is proved by S. Paul's allegation of 23. verse, and by the concordance thereof with the Evangelists [1], it is necessarily deduced, that the vows mentioned in the former verse, and these words, the poor shall eat and be filled, cannot be referred to the sacrifices of the old Testament, but to the blessed Sacrifice and Sacrament of the Eucharist, which our Saviour promised, after he had replenished the people with five loaves, and which he instituted at his last supper in presence of his Apostles. So S. Augustine doubteth not to understand it, and to teach, as well in his double exposition of this Psalm as in his 120. Epistle. c. 27. The poor, that is the humble and poor in spirit, shall eat & be filled: the fat ones, or the rich being proud, do also adore and eat, but are not filled. They also are brought to the table of Christ [2], and participate his body and blood, but they adore only, are not also filled, because they do not imitate (Christ's humility) they disdain to be humble. Where it is clear, this holy father by Christ's body and blood meaneth not bread and wine as signs of his body and blood, for bread and wine cannot be lawfully adored: neither doth he mean our Lord's body as it was on the cross, or is in heaven, for so it is not eaten, but as it is in forms of bread and wine on Christ's table, the Altar.

(d) which is the first justification. (e) God's precepts which the baptised must observe Mat. 28. v. 20. (f) Salvation is in the name and power of Christ, not in man's own merit.

4 For although I shall walk in (g) the midst of the shadow of death, I will (h) not fear evils: because thou art with me. Thy (i) rod and thy (k) staff: they have comforted me.

(g) In great dangers of tentations to mortal sin, (h) yet by God's grace we may resist. (i) God's direction and law is straight, (k) and strong.

5 Thou hast prepared in my sight (l) a table (m) against them that trouble me. Thou (n) hast fatted my head with oil: and my (o) chalice inebriating how goodly is it!

6 And thy mercy shall follow me (p) all the days of my life. And that I may dwell in the house of our Lord, (q) in longitude of days.

(p) Continual and final perseverance is by God's special grace. (q) In eternal life.

The 5. key.

The (a) first of the Sabbath, the Psalm of David. The earth is our Lord's, and (b) the fullness thereof: the round world, and all that dwell therein.

(a) Christ rising from death the first day of the week, had all power given him in heaven and in earth. Mat. 28. (b) Not only the soil it-self, but all the fruit, and all that dwell therein are God's.

2 Because he hath founded it upon the seas: and upon the rivers hath prepared it. 3 Who (c) shall ascend into the mount of our Lord? Or who shall stand in his holy place?

(c) Though Christ created and redeemed all, yet only the just shall inherit heaven.

4 The innocent of hands, and of clean heart, that hath not taken his soul (d) in vain, nor sworn to his neighbour in guile.

(d) Not occupied himself in vain and unprofitable things, but in commendable works.

5 He shall receive blessing of our Lord: and (e) mercy of God his Saviour.

(e) God's mercy goeth before justification: just works follow, and so glory is the reward of all.

6 This is (f) the generation of them that seek him, of them that seek the face of the God of Jacob.

(f) This sort of people thus serving God, shall receive everlasting bliss.

7 Lift up your gates (g) ye Princes, and be ye lifted up, o eternal gates: and the King of glory shall enter in.

(g) The Prophet contemplating in spirit Christ's Ascension, inviteth Angels to receive him, and (by prosopopoeia) speaketh also to the gates of heaven, by which he is to enter.

8 (h) Who is this King of glory? Our Lord (i) strong & mighty, our Lord mighty in battle.

(h) Angels answer admiring, & demanding as in a dialogue, how Christ is become so glorious. (i) The Prophet answereth that Christ by his power hath overcome all enemies in battle.

9 (k) Lift up your gates ye Princes, and be ye lifted up, o eternal gates: and the King of glory shall enter in.

(k) Again he willeth Angels to open the gates, and biddeth the gates to enlarge themselves.

10 (l) Who is this King of glory? (m) The Lord of powers^ he is the King of glory.

(l) The Angels demand as before: (m) The Prophet answereth, That Christ is Lord also of Angels, and all heavenly powers under God.

CHAPTER XXIV.

A general prayer of the faithful against all enemies, 4. with desire to be directed in the way of godliness, 7. and to be pardoned for sins past, 9. acknowledging God's meekness, 17. our weakness, necessity of help, and hope in God: 22. concludeth with prayer for the whole Church. [1]

[1] A prayer of the faithful.
The 7. key.

Unto (a) the end, the Psalm of David. To thee, O Lord, I have lifted up (b) my soul:

(a) This Psalm pertaineth more properly to the new testament. And is artificially composed: the verses beginning with distinct letters in order of the Hebrew Alphabet, to the last verse. (b) My mind to be attentive.

2 my God in thee is my confidence, let me (c) not be ashamed.

(c) Not be frustrate of my petition.

3 Neither let mine enemies scorn me: for all (d) that expect thee, shall not be confounded.

(d) That patiently expect the time when God will assist.

4 (e) Let all be confounded that do unjust things in vain. Lord shew me thy ways: and teach me thy paths.

(e) This manner of praying is frequent in the Psalms, signifying as a prophecy, that so it will come to pass, and the conformity of the just to God's justice.

5 Direct me (f) in thy truth, and teach me: because thou art God my Saviour, and thee have I expected (g) all the day.

(f) In true faith and religion. (g) All our life we must desire more and more knowledge of true doctrine.

6 Remember, O Lord, thy commiserations, and thy mercies: that are from the beginning of the world.

7 The sins (h) of my youth, and (i) my ignorances do not remember. According to thy mercy remember thou me: for thy goodness, O Lord.

(h) From the first use of reason, at which time many are careless, (i) & negligent to learn how to serve God.

8 Our Lord is (k) sweet, and (l) righteous: for this cause he will give a law to them that sin in the way.

(k) As God is sweet in giving good motions: (l) so he is severe to them that resist his grace.

9 He will direct the mild in judgment: he will teach the meek his ways. 10 All the ways of our Lord be (m) mercy and (n) truth, to them that seek after his (o) testament and his (p) testimonies.

(m) God mercifully preventeth with his grace: (n) and justly rewardeth good works. (o) God's law is his covenant with man: (p) and testimony of his will.

11 For thy name, o Lord, thou wilt be propitious to my sin: for (q) it is much.

(q) Sin in respect of aversion from God is great, & needeth his grace.

12 Who is the man that (r) feareth our Lord? He [1] appointeth him a law in the way that he hath chosen.

(r) He that feareth God, which is the beginning of wisdom, receiveth five spiritual commodities here mentioned: [1] 1. God instructeth him by his law:

13 His soul [1] shall abide in good things: and [2] his seed shall inherit the land.

[1] 2. bestoweth all necessaries upon him: [2] 3. others shall imitate his good example.

14 Our Lord is [1] a firmament to them that fear him: & [2] his testament that it may be made manifest to them.

[1] 4. God will protect him: [2] 5. According to God's covenant he shall enjoy the manifest sight of God for his eternal reward.

15 Mine eyes are always to our Lord: because he will pluck my feet out of the snare. 16 Have respect to me, and have mercy on me: because I am (s) alone and poor.

(s) Man's weakness without God's help.

17 The tribulations of my heart are multiplied: deliver me from (t) my necessities.

(t) Tribulations cannot be avoided, but must necessarily be suffered: therefore, o God, give us grace to pass through them without sin.

18 See my (v) humiliation and my labour, and (w) forgive all my sins.

(v) Mine affliction. (w) Take away the cause, and affliction will be mitigated.

19 Behold mine enemies, because they are multiplied, and with (x) unjust hatred hated me.

(x) Wicked men of hatred do endeavour to draw others into sin.

20 Keep my soul, and deliver me: I shall (y) not be ashamed, because I hoped in thee.

(y) Those that hope in God shall never be confounded.

21 The innocent and righteous have cleaved to me: because I expected thee. 22 (z) Deliver Israel, o God, out of all his tribulations.

(z) All the letters of the Alphabet being complete in this Psalm, this last verse beginneth with Pere, Redeem, praying God to redeem and deliver Israel, that is, the whole Church, from tribulations.

CHAPTER XXV.

David in banishment among the Philistines, trusteth in the justice of his cause, 9. and prayeth God earnestly to deliver him, that he may with more freedom and commodity serve him as he desireth. [1]

[1] David's prayer distressed in persecution.
The 8. key.

Unto (a) the end the Psalm of David. Judge (b) me, o Lord, because I have walked in my innocency: and hoping in our Lord I shall not be weakened.

(a) This Psalm is also a convenient prayer for any Christian in tribulation. (b) Be thou, o God, arbiter of the cause between Saul and me, thou knowest mine innocency in this behalf, though I am unjustly charged by Saul and his friends.

2 (c) Prove me Lord, and tempt me: burn my reins and my heart.

(c) Lest perhaps I be not so innocent as I desire, and as in respect of Saul I hope that I am, do thou O God prove me as thou wilt by tribulations.

3 Because thy mercy is before mine eyes: and I am well pleased in thy truth. 4 I (d) have not sitten with the Council of vanity: and with them that do unjust things I will not enter in.

(d) David in confidence of a good conscience, and zeal against the wicked, allegeth his sincere proceeding, more than ordinary men may do, God so inspiring him extraordinarily.

5 I have hated the Church of the malignant: and with the impious I will not sit. 6 I (e) will wash my hands among innocents: (f) and will compass thy altar, o Lord:

(e) The rest of this Psalm every Priest reciteth in Mass, before he offer the holy Sacrifice, professing & putting himself in memory, that he must only communicate with the innocent, or of pure conscience, (f) and so approach to the Altar. prefigured Levit. 6. v. 4. [1]

[1] Ep. 120. c. 11.

7 That I (g) may hear the voice of praise, and (h) shew forth all thy marvelous works.

(g) Shutting the ears of my heart from evil and vain thoughts I will attend to godly inspirations, (h) and so with mental prayer and external voice (as the holy order of this sacred office requireth) praise thee, o God, in thy marvelous works.

8 Lord I have loved (i) the beauty of thy house, and the place of (k) the habitation of thy glory.

(i) I cannot but singularly love the excellency of this place dedicated to thy service: where is true faith, unity, and charity of thy people, the guard of holy Angels, the administration of sacred mysteries, assistance of the Holy Ghost, real presence of Christ our Lord, all replenished with Divine majesty. (k) This representeth unto me the glorious heavenly kingdom of God and all Saints.

9 (l) Destroy not, o God, my soul with the impious, and my life with bloody men.

(l) Suffer me not therefore to be contaminate by the wicked, nor to be devoured with them.

10 In whose (m) hands are iniquities: their (n) right hand is replenished with gifts.

(m) They are still ready to commit more and more iniquities. (n) Themselves being corrupted, endeavour by gifts of worldly commodities to corrupt others.

11 But (o) I have walked in mine innocency: (p) redeem me, and have mercy on me.

(o) Every one ought so to purge his conscience, that he may be innocent or free from great sins. (p) Deliver me from this necessity of dwelling among the wicked.

12 My (q) foot hath stood in the direct way: in (r) the Churches I will bless thee o Lord.

(q) I intend to walk right. (r) I desire to praise thee amongst thy true faithful servants.

ANNOTATIONS.
PSALM XXV.

5. I have hated the Church of the malignant.] Holy David forced by reason of persecution to dwell ◦A singular great affliction to be hindered from God's true service. Christians must abhor, and abstain from all conventicles of Heretics and other Infidels.

amongst Infidels the Philistians◦; after he had twice spared King Saul's life (1. Reg. 24. v. 5. &. c. 26. v. 9.) lamented (v. 9.) how great affliction it was to him, to be cast out, that he could not dwell in the inheritance of our Lord (where God was rightly served) and that his enemies had done so much as in them lay, to make him fall into idolatry, by their fact, as it were saying: Go serve strange gods. Nevertheless his zeal was such, that (as he here professeth) he hated the Church of the malignant: that is, the congregations of all miscreants: & his immaculate religious purity was so perfect, that he would not so much as in external shew conform his actions to theirs, in matters of religion, nor yield his bodily presence in their conventicles, but said: With the impious I will not sit. Instructing us Christians (for the word to the end in the title sheweth that this Psalm pertaineth also to us) that we must both hate the Church or congregations of the malignant, to wit, of Paynims, Jews, Turks, and Heretics, and not sit, nor personally be present with them in the exercise of their false pretended religions.

CHAPTER XXVI.

David being in great distress through persecution, and having assured confidence in God, describeth the great security of God's protection, 7. sheweth the same experienced in himself, 12. prayeth for continuance thereof 13. and encourageth his own soul, in hope of life everlasting, to persevere in virtue.[1]

[1] An other confident prayer of David in tribulation. The 3. key.

The Psalm of David (a) before he was anointed. Our Lord is (b) my illumination, and (c) my salvation, (d) whom shall I fear? Our Lord is the protector of my life, of whom shall I be afraid?

(a) Before his second anointing, as is probable. 2. Reg. 2. (b) Against ignorance God illuminateth his servants. (c) Against infirmity he giveth strength. (d) So he needeth not to fear any man's malice, subtlety, nor force. Luc. 21. v. 15.

2 Whilst the harmful approach upon me, to eat my flesh. Mine enemies that trouble me, themselves are weakened and are fallen. 3 If camps stand together against me, my heart shall not fear. If battle rise up against me, in this will I hope. 4 One thing I have asked of our Lord, this will I seek for, that I (e) may dwell in the house of our Lord all the days of my life. That I may see the pleasantness of our Lord, and visit his temple.

(e) How special a benefit David esteemed it to be in the Catholic Church, the only true house of God!

5 Because he hath (f) hid me in his tabernacle: in the day of evils he hath protected me, in the (g) secret of his tabernacle.

(f) Albeit the spiritual or carnal enemy seek to overthrow me, yet I am secure in the Catholic Church. (g) God either suffereth not the enemy to find his servant,

6 In (h) a rock he hath exalted me: and now he hath (i) exalted my head over mine enemies. I (k) have gone round about, and have immolated in his tabernacle an host of jubilation: I (l) will sing, and say a Psalm to our Lord.

(h) or not to be able to hurt him spiritually. (i) When a martyr or confessor dieth, then he getteth the victory against the persecutors. (k) Diligently recounting all thy benefits, I render thanks by sacrifice and praise. (l) Not only in heart, but also singing with loud voice and instrument.

7 Hear, o Lord, my voice, wherewith I have cried to thee: have mercy on me, and hear me. 8 My (m) heart hath said to thee, my face hath sought thee out: (n) thy face, o Lord, I will seek.

(m) In my inward sincere cogitations I desire and seek that I may see thee (n) face to face. 1. Cor. 13. v. 12.

9 Turn (o) not away thy face from me: (p) decline not in wrath from thy servant. Be (q) thou my helper: forsake me not, neither despise me, o God my Saviour.

(o) In the mean time, o Lord, grant me thy favour, (p) leave me not, though thou be angry with me. (q) He speaketh in the person of orphans.

10 because (r) my father and my mother have forsaken me: but our Lord hath taken me.

(r) Though carnal parents forsake the just man in tribulation, yet God hath then most special care of him.

11 Give me (s) a law, o Lord, in thy way: (t) and direct me in the right path, because of mine enemies.

(s) Establish my heart in thy law. (t) Conserve me in the right way, which thou hast already taught me: and it is the more necessary, because mine enemies labour to pervert me.

12 Deliver me not into (v) the souls of them that trouble me: because (w) unjust witnesses have risen up against me: and iniquity hath lied (x) to it-self.

(v) The wills. (w) False witnesses accused David, others accused Christ: Mat. 26. others do still accuse the just Mat. 5. (x) The wicked please themselves in lying, but the chief hurt finally turneth upon themselves.

13 I (y) believe to see the good things of our Lord, in the land of the living.

(y) The Prophet and all just men are comforted by God, and hope of reward in heaven.

14 (z) Expect our Lord, do manfully: and (a) let thy heart take courage, and (b) expect thou our Lord. [1]

(z) The just exhorteth his own soul to patience, (a) fortitude, (b) and longanimity. [1] Psal. 30.

CHAPTER XXVII.

David prayeth to be defended from the eternal destruction of the wicked, 4. which (by way of imprecation, or conformity to God's justice) he prophesieth. 6. Feeling by inspiration that his prayer is heard, rendereth thanks to God, 9. and prayeth for all the people. [1]

[1] Another prayer of David for delivery from evils. The 8. key.

A psalm to David himself. To thee, o Lord, I will cry, my God (a) keep not silence from me: lest at any time thou hold thy peace from me, & I shall be like to them that go down into the lake.

(a) Omit not to comfort me.

2 Hear, o Lord, the voice of my petition whilst I pray to thee: whilst I lift up my hands to thy holy temple.

3 (b) Draw me not together with sinners: and with them that work iniquity destroy me not. Which speak peace with their neighbour, but evils in their hearts.

(b) Suffer me not to be overcome: for God tempteth none to evil. Iac. 1.

4 (c) Give them according to their works, & according to the wickedness of their inventions. According to the works of their hands give unto them: render them their retribution.

(c) The just in zeal of justice pray that sin may be punished.

5 Because they have (d) not understood the works of our Lord, and in the works of his hands thou shalt destroy them, & (e) not build them up.

(d) Ignorance doth not excuse when men may and will not understand. (e) God saveth not without our cooperation with his grace.

6 blessed be our Lord: because he hath heard the voice of my petition. 7 Our Lord is my helper, and my protector: in him my heart hath hoped, and I was holpen. And (f) my flesh flourished again: & (g) with my will I will confess to him.

(f) Being comforted in spirit my body is as it were refreshed. (g) Freely & gladly.

8 Our Lord is the strength of his people: and he is (h) the protector of the salvations of his anointed.

(h) God protecteth and prospereth the King's good endeavours for his people.

9 Save (i) thy people, o Lord, and bless thine inheritance: and rule them, and extol them for ever.

(i) As Psal. 19. and often elsewhere the subjects pray for their Superior: so mutually the superior prayeth for the subjects.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

The royal Prophet seeing in spirit the most sacred Mysteries, brought by Christ into this world, inviteth all to offer their best things, even themselves wholly, as sacrifice of thanks, for so excellent benefits, preached with magnificence. 5. Whereby innumerable are gathered into his Church, here replenished with grace, and in heaven with glory. [1]

[1] The Church of Christ endowed with excellent mysteries.
The 6. key.

The Psalm of David, in the consummation (a) of the tabernacle. Bring (b) to our Lord ye children of God: bring to our Lord (c) the sons of rams.

(a) 2. Reg. 6. v. 17. 1. Par. 16. v. 1. (b) Offer sacrifice of thanks for the singular benefits after recounted in this Psalm. (c) Rams were of the more principal things that were offered in the law of Moyses. But the sons of rams import in mystical sense better hosts than rams.

2 Bring to our Lord (d) glory and honour, bring to our Lord glory unto his name: adore ye our Lord (e) in his holy court.

(d) The first thing in sacrifice is to glorify, honour, and adore God in sincerity of spirit, (e) in his holy Catholic Church.

3 The voice of our Lord (f) upon waters, the God of (g) majesty hath (h) thundered: Our Lord upon (i) many waters.

(f) Here is a greater matter intimated than happened in the bringing of the Ark into a tabernacle prepared in Sion, when David danced, and offered hosts for sacrifice, others joining with him in that solemnity. But this voice of our Lord upon waters is rather verified of our Blessed Saviour's own preaching with (g) majesty (h) thundering, & by his Apostles upon (i) many waters, many nations:

4 The voice of our Lord (k) in power: the voice of our Lord (l) in magnificence.

(k) in power of miracles, (l) in magnificence preaching, as having indeed power, not as the Scribes and Pharisees. Mat. 7. v. 29.

5 The voice of our Lord (m) breaking cedars: and our Lord shall break the (n) cedars of Libanus:

(m) Breaking cedars; among innumerable others, converting highest Potentates (n) of Libanus; Emperors, Kings, and greatest Princes of the world:

6 And he shall break them in pieces as a (o) calf of Libanus. (p) And the beloved as (q) the son of unicorns.

(o) as a calf of Libanus; so meekly submitting themselves to Christ's yoke, and spiritual obedience of his Church. (p) All which is done by Christ our Lord the beloved of God, (q) as the son of unicorns, is most tenderly beloved by the parents.

7 The voice of our Lord (r) dividing the flame of fire.

(r) This voice of our Lord dividing the flame of fire. The Holy Ghost proceeding from the Father and the Son, came upon the Apostles, as in divided tongues of fire.

8 The voice of our Lord (s) shaking the desert, and our Lord shall move (t) the desert of Cades.

(s) Wherewith the desert, the Gentiles of the wide and wild world, were shaken and moved, (t) the desert of Cades, some of the Jews also compunct in heart with remorse of conscience, hearing the voice of Saint Peter and other Apostles.

9 The voice of our Lord (v) preparing [1] harts, and he shall discover thick woods (w): and (x) in his temple all shall say glory.

(v) The same voice of our lord preparing harts, inspiring the minds of men with speed, like hinds and does to ascend the high hills of free and perfect life, in contemplative virtues. [1] cervos. (w) So our Saviour shall discover the thick woods, reveal the hidden Mysteries of the old Law, by preaching Christian doctrine, and use of Christian Religion (x) in his holy Temple, the Catholic Church, wherein all true Christians shall glorify God.

10 Our Lord maketh (y) to inhabit the flood: and our Lord (z) shall sit King for ever.

(y) Making the great aboundance of people, who are like the sea when it overfloweth the land, to dwell in the same Church. (z) Christ our Lord sitting, & ruling King over all for ever:

11 Our Lord (a) will give strength to his people: our Lord (b) will bless his people in peace.

(a) by his grace giving strength to his people, to pass through the tentations of this life, (b) and bless the just with eternal peace in heaven.

ANNOTATIONS.
PSALM XXVIII.

1. In consummation of the tabernacle.] The seventy Interpreters testify by adding this title [1], that King David made this Psalm (as he did also some others) when the Ark of God was brought into the tabernacle [2], which he had pitched for it in Sion. 2 Reg. 6. 1. Paral. 16. Wherein he saw by prophetical spirit, and here uttereth other far greater mysteries, & more excellent benefits, brought into the world by Christ, and preached by him, and his Apostles, than agreed to the Ark, or the time of the old Testament; but are verified in the admirable fruit of innumerable people of all nations, and of many great Potentates converted to Christianity.

[1] Mysteries of the Catholic Church prophesied in this Psalm.

[2] 104. 105. &c.

CHAPTER XXIX.

King David by voice and instrument rendereth thanks to God for his peaceable state in the Kingdom, 5. inviteth others to rejoice in God's benefits, teaching by his own example that God sometimes giveth more comfort, sometimes sheweth his wrath, but all for our good. [1]

[1] David rendereth thanks for his establishment in his Kingdom.
The 8. key.

A Psalm of Canticle, (a) in the dedication of David's house.

(a) The general name of Psalm common to this whole book containing in all 150. is more particularly appropriated to some, which more specially were played upon musical instruments, as on the Psalter, Harp, &c. Others are called Canticles, which were most usually sung with human voices. So this, called a Psalm of Canticle, signifieth that voices began the music, and instruments were adjoined. As contrarywise others are called Canticles of Psalms, where instruments began and voices followed.
(b) After many great tribulations, King David prospering built an excellent house or palace (2. Reg. 5. v. 11. Paralip. 14. v. 1.) And at his first dwelling therein, made this Psalm, beginning himself to sing the same with voice, other musicians joined with him in praises of God and thanks-giving for his benefits.

2 I will (c) exalt thee, o Lord (d) because thou hast received me: neither hast (e) delighted mine enemies over me.

(c) Though God in himself is most high, and neither needeth, nor can be exalted by men, yet the royal Prophet knew it was his duty to sing thanks and praises to him, (d) for his delivery from many troubles and dangers. (e) Not suffering his enemies to be delighted in his ruin.

3 O Lord my God I have cried to thee, and thou hast (f) healed me.

(f) Conserved my body in health amongst innumerable dangers.

4 Lord thou hast (g) brought forth my soul out of hell: thou hast saved me from them that go down into the lake.

(g) Preserved my soul from greater dangers of sins, and so from hell.

5 Sing to our Lord (h) ye his Saints: and (i) confess to the memory of his holiness.

(h) Ye that are just and holy praise God for it, from whom it cometh, and not from yourselves: (i) confess his mere goodness without your deserts.

6 Because (k) wrath is in his indignation: (l) and life in his will. At (m) evening shall weeping abide: and in the morning gladness.

(k) When he is angry, (l) yet he meaneth well unto us. (m) The state of a just man's life is often changed from sorrow to comfort, and from comfort to sorrow.

7 And I said in my aboundance: (n) I will not be moved for ever.

(n) Though we suppose ourselves firmly established:

8 O Lord (o) in thy will thou hast given strength to my beauty. Thou hast (p) turned away thy face from me, and I became troubled.

(o) yet God of his good will towards us sometimes giveth strength, and courage, (p) sometimes suffereth us to our own weakness,

9 To thee o Lord (q) I will cry: and I will pray to my God.

(q) therefore we must still cry and pray for God's help,

10 (r) What profit is in my blood, whilst I descend into corruption? Shall dust confess to thee, or declare thy truth?

(r) in manner here expressed or the like.

11 Our Lord hath heard, and had mercy on me: our Lord is become my helper. 12 Thou hast turned my mourning into joy unto me: thou hast cut my sackcloth, and hast compassed me with gladness.

13 That (s) my glory may sing to thee, and I be not compunct: Lord my God for ever (t) will I confess to thee.

(s) Finally in this my good state (t) I shall always confess and praise thee.

CHAPTER XXX.

A prayer of a just man exceedingly afflicted, still confident in God. 11. Describing his many calamities (in respect of his enemies) undeserved, 18. prayeth for his own delivery, and their just punishment. 20. Praiseth and thanketh God for his goodness. 24. exhorteth all others to do the same. [1]

[1] How to pray in affliction.
The 7. key.

Unto (a) the end, the Psalm of David, for (b) excess of mind.

(a) Pertaining to the new Testament: (b) especially to the just troubled: & almost distracted in mind in great affliction. See. v. 23.

2 In thee o Lord (c) have I hoped, (d) let me not be confounded for ever: in thy justice deliver me. [1]

(c) How grievously soever I am afflicted yet I trust in thee, (d) therefore I pray thus. [1] Psa. 70.

3 Incline thine ear to me, make haste to deliver me. Be unto me for a God protector: and for a house of refuge, that thou mayst save me. 4 Because thou art my strength, and my refuge: and for thy name thou wilt conduct me, and wilt nourish me. 5 Thou wilt bring me out of this snare, which they have hid for me: because thou art my protector. 6 Into (e) thy hands I commend my spirit: thou hast (f) redeemed me, o Lord God of truth. [1]

(e) I offer and resign myself to thee. (f) Thou hast often delivered me. This verse is most aptly applied in all resignations of our souls to God's will, namely whensoever we receive the B. Sacrament: likewise in the hour of death, and at many other times. [1] Luc. 23.

7 Thou hast hated them that observe vanities, unprofitably. But I have hoped in our Lord: 8 I shall rejoice and be joyful in thy mercy. Because thou hast respected my humility, thou hast saved my soul out of necessities. 9 Neither (g) hast thou shut me up in the hands of the enemy: thou hast set my feet in a large place.

(g) not suffered me to be shut up.

10 Have mercy upon me, o Lord, because I am in tribulation: mine eye is troubled for wrath, my soul, and my belly: 11 Because (h) my life is decayed for sorrow: and my years for groanings. My strength is weakened for poverty; and my bones are troubled.

(h) All my parts external and internal, body and mind are troubled.

12 Above all mine enemies I am made a reproach, both to my neighbours exceedingly: and (i) a fear to my acquaintance. They that saw me, fled forth from me:

(i) My friends dare not converse with me, lest they incur displeasure for my sake.

13 I am forgotten, from the heart as one dead. I am made as a vessel destroyed: 14 because I have heard the reprehension of many that abide round about: In that whilst, they assembled together against me, they consulted to take my soul. 15 But I have hoped in thee. O Lord: I said, Thou art my God: 16 my lots are in thy hands. Deliver me out of the hands of my enemies, and from them that persecute me. 17 (k) Illustrate thy face upon thy servant, (l) save me in thy mercy:

(k) Make thy light so shine in my soul, that I may understand that is right. (l) And through thy mercy deliver me from the force of mine adversaries.

18 Lord let me not be confounded, because I have invocated thee. Let the impious be ashamed, and brought down into hell: 19 let the deceitful lips be made mute. Which speak iniquity against the just, (m) in pride and (n) abuse.

(m) So proudly behaving themselves, as if they had no superior, neither in earth nor in heaven, to whom they shall at last render account: (n) and abusing their present power and authority, which they have of God.

20 How great is the multitude of thy sweetness, o Lord which thou (o) hast hid for them that fear thee. Thou hast perfited it for them that hope in thee, (p) in the sight of the children of men.

(o) As yet in this present life the reward of the just is hid: (p) but shall be made manifest in sight of all men.

21 Thou (q) shalt hide them in the secret of (r) thy face from the disturbance of men. Thou shall protect them in thy tabernacle from the contradiction of tongues.

(q) In the mean time the just is in great estimation in the secret knowledge of God. (r) title of honour, as we speak to a king; your majesty: or to a noble man, your Lordship.

22 Blessed be our Lord: because he hath made his mercy marvelous to me in the fenced city. 23 But I have said in (s) the excess of my mind: I am cast away from the sight of thine eyes. Therefore thou hast heard the voice of my prayer, whilst I cried to thee.

(s) In mine extreme affliction being almost distracted in my mind, I said that in reason I would not have said. Holy Job spake some things in such state of affliction. cap. 3. & 42.

24 (t) Love our Lord all ye his Saints: because our Lord will require truth, & will repay them aboundantly that do proudly.

(t) The prophet, or other just person, exhorteth all the servants of God

25 Do ye (v) manfully, and let your (w) heart take courage, all ye that (x) hope in our Lord.

(v) to constancy. (w) Longanimity, (x) and final perseverance to the end.

CHAPTER XXXI.

Forgiveness of sins is a happy thing: 3. whereto many are brought by affliction giving them understanding, so moving them to confess their sins, 6. pray for remission, 10. not despair, but hope in God's mercy, and so rejoice with sincere heart. [1]

[1] The second penitential Psalm.
The 7. key.

To (a) David himself understanding. Blessed are they, (b) whose iniquities are forgiven: and whose sins (c) be covered. [1]

(a) This Psalm sheweth how David was brought to understand his sins, to confess, bewail, and obtain remission of them. (b) The first blessing of a sinner is the forgiveness of his sins. (c) By charity, which covereth the multitude of sins. 1. Pet. 4. [1] Rom. 4. 1. Pet. 4.

2 Blessed is the man, to whom (d) our Lord hath not imputed sin, neither is there (e) guile in his spirit.

(d) Satisfaction being made. (e) When sinners repent sincerely without guile, then God forgiveth: without which cooperation none is justified.

3 Because (f) I held my peace, my bones are [1] inveterated, (g) whilst I cried all the day.

(f) Because I acknowledged not my grievous sins, I was still sore afflicted: [1] waxed as if they were old. (g) though otherwise I ceased not to pray, but without any fruit or good effect.

4 Because day & night thy hand is made heavy upon me: I (h) am turned in my anguish, whilst (i) the thorn is fastened.

(h) Thy divine providence reducing me, (i) by remorse of mine own conscience, which telleth me that I deserve all this affliction.

5 (k) I have made my sin known to thee: and my injustice I have not hid. I said: I will confess against me my injustice to our Lord: and thou hast forgiven the impiety of my sin.

(k) Therefore I do no longer dissemble with men, nor am silent to thee, but expressly acknowledge my sins.

6 For this (l) shall every holy one pray to thee, in time convenient. But yet (m) in the flood of many waters, they shall (n) not approach to him.

(l) As I do now recall myself being strucken with God's heavy hand; so must every one that will be purged from his sins and sanctified pray to thee, when he is afflicted. (m) Though calamities be marvelous great like to a deluge: (n) yet they shall not oppress him, that relieth upon God.

7 Thou art my refuge from tribulation, which hath compassed me: my exultation, deliver me from them that compass me. 8 I (o) will give thee understanding, and will instruct thee in the way, that thou shalt go: I (p) will fasten mine eyes upon thee.

(o) God speaketh, promising by these tribulations to give his servants understanding, and instruction: (p) with perpetual protection.

9 Do (q) not become as horse and mule, which have no understanding. In (r) bit and bridle bind fast their cheeks that approach not to thee.

(q) Be not therefore careless, like to brute beasts, but considerative of your actions. (r) The Prophet or any just soul beseeching God to hold this strait hand of discipline over sinners, for their conversion.

10 Many (s) are the scourges of a sinner, but (t) him that hopeth in our Lord mercy shall compass.

(s) Sinners deserve much punishment. (t) But repenting, and trusting in God shall find his mercy.

11 (v) Be joyful in our Lord and rejoice ye just, and glory all ye right of heart.

(v) The end of true penance is joy, to which therefore the Prophet inviteth all penitents.

ANNOTATIONS.
PSALM XXXI.

[1] Vexation giveth understanding.
[2] Sin must be punished.
[3] Good works are of grace.

1. Understanding.] When David had sinned and some-while neglected to confess his fault [1], God's mercy by affliction made him to understand his own estate, who then repenting, confessing, and sorrowing for his sins, made this Psalm: which is therefore entitled Understanding or Instruction of David [2]. It giveth us also to understand, and to know, saith S. Augustine, that we must neither trust in our own merits, nor presume to escape punishment of sin. Thy first understanding therefore or lesson, must be, to know thyself to be a sinner. The next is [3], that when with faith thou beginnest to work well by love, thou attribute not this to thine own strength, but to the grace of God.

[1] in epist. ad Ro. c. 4.
[2] Protestants expound this place contrary to many other clear places.
[3] Contrary to the exposition of ancient fathers.
[4] God covering or not imputing sins

1. Whose sins are covered. 2. not imputed.] Calvin and his complices gather poison of these holy words [1] [2], denying that sins are truly taken away, but only covered, and still remain say they in the justest. Which sense would make this Scripture contrary to other places. Isaie 6. Thine iniquity shall be taken away, and thy sin shall be cleansed. Ioan. 1. The lamb of God which taketh away the sins of the world. Act. 3. Be penitent & convert, that your sins may be put out. 1. Cor. 6. You are washed, you are sanctified, you are justified: & the like, which shew the true real taking away of sins, true sanctification and justification. As S. Jerome (or some other ancient authentical Author) explicateth this place saying: Sins are so covered by baptism & penance [3], that they are not to be revealed in the day of judgement, nor imputed in him that diligently purgeth himself in this world, or by martyrdom. S. Augustine teacheth the same, saying: Sins are covered, are wholly covered, are abolished. Neither must you understand (saith he) that sins are covered, as though still they were, & lived. Why then did the Prophet say: sins are covered? They are not to be punished. More clearly li. 1. c. 13. cont. duas Epist. Pelag. The Pelagians calumniating Catholics, as if they taught, that sins are not taken away, but shaven, as hairs are cut with a razor; the roots remaining in the flesh: which (he answereth) none affirmeth but an infidel Likewise S. Gregory teacheth, that a sinner covereth his sins well when with contrary virtues he overwhelmeth former vices, and with good deeds blotteth out former evil deeds. He covereth them evil, when either for shame, or fear, or obstinacy, or desperation, he concealeth his sins, omitting to confess them. God covereth sins [4], as a physician covereth wounds, by applying medicinal plaster, which indeed cureth them. Thus ancient learned holy Fathers expound this text. Further explicating, that albeit things covered, and only thereby hid from men, do remain as they were before they were hid, yet whatsoever is hid to God, is indeed utterly taken away, for nothing that is, can be hid from God. And the contrary doctrine of Protestants is injurious either to God's power [5], if they say he cannot quite take away sins; or to his mercy, if he will not; or to his justice, if he never punish sins ever remaining; and to his truth, if he repute otherwise, than indeed the thing is. It is also injurious to Christ [6], to say, his blood and death is not effectual to take away sins: injurious to innumerable places of holy Scripture [7], which affirm plainly that sins by God's grace are utterly taken away: Finally, it is injurious to Saints in heaven [8], arguing them as still infected with sins, if indeed sins yet remain in them: which is most absurd, and blasphemy to speak. And yet followeth by necessary consequence. For if the justest lived & died in sin, they should remain eternally in sin.

doth quite take them away.

[5] The contrary doctrine is injurious to God:

[6] to Christ.

[7] To holy Scriptures.

[8] To glorified Saints.

2. Neither is there guile in his spirit.] In remission of sins the penitent necessarily must so cooperate [1], that he have no guile in his spirit, or heart. For if he have, then he faileth of the foresaid blessedness, and his iniquities are not forgiven, nor his sins covered to God, but to be imputed and punished. Yet the repentance of a sinner be it never so sincere, hearty, and without guile, doth not merit remission of sin, but only disposeth thereto. But after remission it is satisfactory for the pain due for sins [2], and meritorious of glory. According as S. Augustine here teacheth saying: Good (or meritorious) works go not before faith and remission, but follow the same.

[1] Sincere repentance is a necessary disposition to remission of sin.

[2] After remission it is satisfactory and meritorious.

CHAPTER XXXII.

The Prophet exhorteth to praise God, 4. describing his power, providence, mercy, and wisdom. 16. No salvation but by him: 20. And therefore prayeth for his help. [1]

(c) In mortification, offering your bodies a living host, Rom. 12. (d) Of this instrument this book is called the Psalter: and it signifieth the observation of the ten commandments, without which no praise pleaseth God.

3 Sing ye to him (e) a new song: sing well to him in jubilation.

(e) Praising God for the grace of Christ in the new testament.

4 Because the (f) word of our Lord is right, and all his works are (g) in faith.

(f) God's rules and precepts are most just and right. (g) He performeth whatsoever he promiseth.

5 He loveth (h) mercy and judgment: the earth is full of the mercy of our Lord.

(h) God ever joineth these virtues together.

6 By (i) the word of our Lord the heavens are established: and by the spirit of his mouth all the power of them,

(i) God's word is omnipotent.

7 Gathering together the waters of the sea, as it were in a bottle: putting the depths (k) in treasures.

(k) Unknown, as riches hid in secret places.

8 Let all the earth fear our Lord: and let all the inhabitants of the world be moved at him. 9 Because he said, and they were made: he commanded and they were created, 10 Our Lord (l) dissipateth the counsels of nations: and he reproveth the cogitations of people, and he reproveth the counsels of princes.

(l) As in Babylon he confounded their tongues.

11 But the counsel of our Lord abideth for ever, the cogitations (m) of his heart in generation and generation.

(m) His absolute will is always fulfilled.

12 Blessed is the nation, whose God is our Lord: the people (n) whom he hath chosen for his inheritance.

(n) The people of Israel in the old testament: and Christians of all nations in the new.

13 Our (o) Lord hath looked from heaven: he hath seen all the children of men.

(o) God's perpetual providence.

14 From his prepared habitation he hath looked upon all that inhabit the earth 15 Who (p) made their hearts severally: who understandeth all their works.

(p) God's wisdom infinite.

16 The (q) king is not saved by much power: and the giant shall not be saved in the multitude of his strength.

(q) No power in earth is of any force without God.

17 The horse faileth (r) to safety, (s) and in the aboundance of his force he shall not be saved.

(r) Of his master (s) or of himself.

18 Behold the eyes of our Lord be upon them that fear him: and on them, that hope upon his mercy. 19 That he may deliver their souls from death: and nourish them in famine. 20 Our soul expecteth our Lord: because he is our helper and protector. 21 Because in him our heart shall rejoice: and we have trusted in his holy name. 22 (t) Let thy mercy, o Lord, be made upon us, as we have hoped in thee.

(t) O God which hast all perfection, shew thy mercy in protecting & saving all that trust in thee.

2 I (b) will bless our Lord at (c) all time: his praise always in my mouth.

(b) I praise God (c) both in prosperity and adversity.

3 In our Lord (d) my soul shall be praised: let the mild hear, and rejoice.

(d) When I serve our Lord, my soul shall be praised in his service.

4 Magnify ye our Lord with me: and let us exalt his name for ever. 5 I have sought out our Lord, and he hath heard me: and from all my tribulations he hath delivered me. 6 Come ye to him, and be illuminated: and your faces shall not be confounded. 7 This (e) poor man hath cried, and our Lord hath heard him: and from all his tribulations he hath saved him.

(e) Every man, be he how poor soever, when he prayeth shall be heard.

8 The (f) Angel of our Lord shall put in himself about them that fear him: and shall deliver them.

(f) The proper Guardian Angel of every one.

9 Taste ye, and see that our Lord is sweet: blessed is the man, that hopeth in him. 10 Fear (g) ye our Lord all ye his Saints: because there is no lack to them that fear him.

(g) With filial fear.

11 The (h) rich have wanted, and have been hungry: but they that seek after our Lord shall not be diminished of any good.

(h) The rich of this world setting their mind upon their wealth, are poor in spiritual gifts.

12 Come children, hear me: I will teach you the fear of our Lord. 13 who is the man (i) that will have life: loveth to see good days?

(i) Every one desireth to be happy, but he indeed shall be happy, that flyeth from evil, and doth good.

14 Stay thy tongue from evil: and thy lips that they speak not guile. 15 Turn away from evil, and do good: seek after peace and pursue it. 16 The eyes of our Lord upon the just: and his ears unto their prayers. 17 But the (k) countenance of our Lord is upon them that do evil things: to destroy their memory out of the earth.

(k) God seeing all men's actions & intentions, will render as they deserve.

18 The just have cried, and our Lord hath heard them: and out of all their tribulations he hath delivered them. 19 Our Lord is nigh to them, that are of a contrite heart: and the humble of spirit he will save. 20 Many are the tribulations of the just: and out of all these our Lord will deliver them. 21 Our Lord keepeth all their (l) bones: there shall not one of them be broken.

(l) Though the just seem for a time to be forsaken, yet God that giveth them internal strength, will at last reward and crown in them his own gifts.

22 The death of sinners is very ill: and they that hate the just (m) shall offend.

(m) For their sin they are suffered to fall into more sin.

23 Our Lord will redeem the souls of his servants: and all that hope in him (n) shall not offend.

(n) Contrarywise those that accept of his grace, shall finally not offend.

ANNOTATIONS.
PSALM XXXIII.

1. He changed his countenance.] S. Augustine by holy David's changing of his countenance, and by changing the King of Geth his name, who in the book of Kings (where the history is recorded) is called Achis, and here Abimelech, gathereth that here is an hidden, and great Mystery [1]. Which he explicateth partly by interpretation of the Hebrew names, but more especially by David's changing of his countenance, which prefigured Christ, eternal God, becoming also man, and so making great changes in the world. For as David killed Goliath, and for his good act got envy, so Christ killing the devil, and humility in Christ's members killing pride [2], are persecuted by the wicked [3]. For Christ was both to the ruin, and Resurrection of many. He changed Sacrifice and Priesthood. The Jews had sacrifice according to the order of Aaron, in victims of cattle, and this was in mystery. For there was not then the Sacrifice of the body and blood of our Lord: which the faithful, and those that have read the Gospel do know, which Sacrifice is now spread in all the round earth [4]. A little after: The Sacrifice of Aaron is taken away, and the Sacrifice according to the order of Melchisedech began to be. He therefore, I know not who, changed his countenance? Let it not be, I know not who, for our Lord Jesus Christ is known. He would have our health to be in his body and blood. From whence did he commend his body and blood? From his humility. For unless he were humble, he would neither be eaten nor drunk. Behold his highness [5]: In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and God the Word. Lo the everlasting meat, and Angels eat it, supernal powers eat it, celestial spirits eat it, and they eat, and are fatted, and the thing remaineth whole, which satiateth and rejoiceth them. How then hath the wisdom of God fed us with the same bread? [6] The Word was made flesh and dwelt in us. It were too long to recite this great Doctor's whole discourse. He further sheweth that Christ dismissed the Jews, and went from them to the Gentiles. Thou seekest now Christ (saith he) among the Jews, and findeth him not: [7] because he hath changed his countenance. For they sticking to the sacrifice according to the order of Aaron held not the Sacrifice according to the order of Melchisedech, and have lost Christ: and the Gentiles have begun to have him. Again, this holy father willeth us to remember the Gospel: When our Lord Jesus Christ spake of his body, he said: Unless you eat the flesh of the Son of man, [8] and drink his blood, you shall not have life in you: because he had changed his countenance, this seemed as fury and madness unto them, to give his flesh to be eaten of men, & his blood to be drunk, therefore David was reputed mad before Achis, when he said: you have brought this mad man unto me. Doth it not seem madness: Eat ye my flesh, and drink my blood? He seemed to be mad. Thus S. Augustine. Never imagining the figurative interpretation of our new Sacramentaries: who say Christ gave no more but a figure of his body & blood, for then it had been easily understood by the Capharnaites, and no such contradiction nor murmuring had happened. Yet S. Augustine saith more plainly, if more plain may be: Christ carried himself in his own hands. [9] And how this can be done (brethren) in man, who can understand? For who is carried in his own hands? A man may be carried in the hands of others, no man is carried in his own hands. We find not how it can be understood in David according to the letter: but in Christ we find it. For Christ was carried in his own hands, when giving his very body, he said: This is my body; for he carried his body in his own hands.

14. 15. Stay thy tongue, &c.] Both these verses, and frequent other places in the Psalms, shew plainly that justice consisteth not only in faith,◦ but in abstaining from evil and doing good: yet requiring and presupposing true faith, without which no works are available to justice, nor to everlasting life.

CHAPTER XXXV.

The Prophet describeth the wicked malice of obstinate sinners. 6. Against which he opposeth God's infinite goodness, 9. with his provident mercy towards the worst, and just reward of the good; 12. praying to escape the dangerous gulf of pride. [1]

[1] God's providence.
The 3. key.

Unto (a) the end, to (b) the servant of our Lord David himself.

(a) More specially describing the state of men in the new testament, than in the old. (b) Instruction for David, not as a King, or a Prophet, but as the poor servant of God.

2 The unjust hath said within himself, that he (c) would sin: there is no fear of God before his eyes.

(c) Wittingly and resolutely preferring wicked life before virtuous.

3 Because he hath done deceitfully in his sight: (d) that his iniquity may be found unto hatred.

(d) God so hateth sin committed of mere malice that he commonly rejecteth such sinners, and more often offereth new grace to those, that sin of frailty or ignorance.

4 The words of his mouth are iniquity, and guile: he (e) would not understand that he might do well.

(e) Some ignorance is invincible, when one hath a good will to learn, doing his endeavour to know the truth in doctrine, & his duty in manners, but cannot get knowledge thereof, and then he is excused before God, though he err in opinion, or in fact: others are negligent to learn, and their error is gross ignorance, and is a sin, greater or less, according to the importance of the thing, which they ought to know. Others, are more willful, desiring to be ignorant: that they may sin with the less remorse, or repining of their own conscience, and this is affected ignorance, and most heinous and odious sin. For which God often leaving them destitute of ordinary grace, which he giveth to others, they fall into reprobate sense, and into more horrible sins.

5 He hath meditated iniquity in his bed: he hath set himself on every way not good, and malice he hath not hated. 6 Lord (f) thy mercy is in heaven: and (g) thy truth even to the clouds.

(f) God doth not utterly shut up his mercy from the most willful & wicked sinners, but giveth them sometimes good motions, and sufficient help, that they may repent, be justified, & saved, if they do not wittingly harden their own hearts, and still willfully repel God's grace. (g) For so God promiseth (who is most faithful) that he will forgive sinners, and receive them into his favour again, whensoever they resolving to serve him, repent and cease to sin.

7 Thy justice as the hills of God: thy judgments are great depth. Men & (h) beasts thou wilt save, o Lord,

(h) Thou, o God, that hast care of all creatures, not only of men but also of brute beasts, art ever ready of thy part to save both moderate men, in whom the light of reason remaineth, and also gross senseless persons, which are become brutish like horse and mule or other beasts.

8 as thou (i) hast multiplied thy mercy, o God. But (k) the children of men (l) shall hope in the covert of thy wings.

(i) For so our Lord multiplieth his mercy. (k) Yet with condition that senseless or brutish men, must become reasonable men, the children of men, not colts, whelps, pigs &c. (l) Sinners thus converted shall not only have all necessaries in this life, as all living creatures have in this world, but also shall hope of spiritual, heavenly, & eternal glory prepared for Angels, and children of men: as in the verses following.

9 They shall be inebriated with the plenty of thy house: and with the torrent of thy pleasure thou shalt make them drink. 10 Because with thee is the fountain of life: and in thy light we shall see light. 11 Extend thy mercy to them that know thee, and thy justice to them, that are of a right heart. 12 Let (m) not the foot of pride come to me: and let not (n) the hand of a sinner move me.

(m) Lest any impediment hinder the obtaining and possession of eternal reward, the just must specially pray not to be infected with pride: (n) nor be overcome by the forcible tentations of other sinners, by persuasion, nor evil example.

13 There (o) have they fallen that work iniquity: they were expelled, (p) neither could they stand.

(o) The first sin, to wit of devils, was pride, and man's sin was by persuasion of the devil. (p) Neither of which could escape punishment.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

An exhortation not to envy nor imitate the evil, who for most part prosper in this world, and are damned eternally: but to fly evil and do good, duly considering that God diversly permitteth and punisheth the wicked, and likewise comforteth and afflicteth the just, all for their good. [1]

[1] An exhortation to contempt of this world. The 7. key.

A Psalm (a) to David himself. Have (b) no emulation toward the malignant: neither envy them that do iniquity.

(a) For David's and every just man's instruction. (b) Neither be thou offended that the wicked do prosper in this world, nor imitate them that thou mayst also prosper.

2 Because (c) they shall quickly wither as grass: and as the blossoms of herbs they shall soon fall.

(c) For all this life & consequently the prosperity thereof is short, and uncertain.

3 (d) Hope in our Lord and do good: and inhabit the land, and thou (e) shalt be fed in the riches thereof.

(d) Put thy trust in God, living content in this world: (e) & he will give thee that is necessary.

4 Be delighted in our Lord: & he will give thee the petitions of thy heart. 5 (f) Reveal thy way to our Lord, and hope in him: and he will do it.

(f) Commend all thine affairs to God.

6 And he will (g) bring forth thy justice as light: and thy judgment as midday:

(g) Partly making virtue appear to the comfort of the virtuous, and example of others in this life, but especially in the next world.

7 Be subject to our Lord, and pray him. Have no emulation in him, that prospereth in his way: in a man that doth injustices. 8 Cease from wrath, and leave fury: have not emulation that thou be malignant.
9 Because they that are malignant, shall be cast out: but they that expect our Lord, the same shall inherit (h) the land.

(h) The land of the living.

10 And yet a little while, and the sinner shall not be: and thou shalt seek his place, and shall not find it.
11 [1] But the meek shall inherit the land, and shall be delighted in multitude of peace.

[1] Mat. 5.

12 The sinner shall observe the just: & shall gnash upon him with his teeth. 13 But our Lord shall scorn him: because he foreseeth that his day shall come.
14 Sinners have drawn out the sword: they have bent their bow; That they may deceive the poor and needy: that they may murder the right of heart. 15 Let (i) their own swords enter into their hearts: and let their bow be broken.

(i) By way of imprecation (as in many other places) the Prophet foresheweth that wicked men shall fall into the evils, which they prepare for others.

16 Better is a little to the just, above much riches of sinners. 17 Because the arms of sinners shall be broken in pieces: but our Lord confirmeth the just.
18 Our Lord knoweth the days of the immaculate: and their inheritance shall be for ever. 19 They shall not be confounded in the evil time, and in the days of famine they shall be filled: 20 because the sinners shall perish. But the enemies of our Lord forthwith as they shall be honoured and exalted, vanishing shall vanish as smoke. 21 The sinner shall borrow, and not pay: but the just is merciful and will give. 22 Because they that bless him shall inherit the land: but they that curse him shall perish. 23 With our Lord the step of man shall be directed: and he shall like well of his way.
24 When (k) he shall fall, he shall not be bruised: because our Lord putteth his hand under.

(k) Though the just fall of frailty or ignorance into venial sin, yet God's grace shall stay him that he fall not into mortal. The just falleth seven times in the day, & riseth. Prov. 24.

25 I have been young, for I am old: and I have not seen the just forsaken, (l) nor his seed seeking bread.

(l) So King David observed: and it very rarely happeneth, that the just or their children are destitute of necessary sustenance in this world [1]. If it chance in some, it is to their greater merit, and is manifestly recompensed in spiritual gifts. In which sense S. Basil expoundeth, that it is always verified. For God ever rewardeth good works either temporally, or spiritually, or both ways. S. Augustin also (conc. 3. in hunc Psal.) exemplifieth in Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob with all his family, who were forced to go into other countries by reason of famine, and by God's providence were there sustained, Gen. 12. 26. 46. and S. Paul among his other tribulations mentioneth famine and thirst. 2. Cor. 11. v. 27. Seeing therefore these so just persons sought their bread in necessity, he expoundeth this holy Scripture in the Allegorical sense, that the Church from her beginning in Jerusalem to the end of the world, never wanteth the true word of God, true faith and doctrine, which is the spiritual bread wherewith the soul is nourished.

26 All the day he is merciful and lendeth: & his seed shall be in blessing. 27 (m) Decline from evil, & do good: and (n) inhabit for ever & ever.

(m) In these two principles, Declining from evil and Doing good, true justice consisteth. (n) And he that finally observeth these two points, meriteth and shall possess heaven.

28 Because our Lord loveth judgment, and he will not forsake his saints: they shall be preserved for ever. The unjust shall be punished: and the seed of the impious shall perish. 29 But the just shall inherit the land: and shall inhabit for ever and ever upon it. 30 The mouth of the just shall meditate wisdom, and his tongue shall speak judgment. [1]

[1] Pro. 31. Isa. 51.

31 The law of his God in his heart: and his steps shall not be supplanted. 32 The sinner considereth the just: and seeketh to (o) murder him.

(o) To draw him to mortal sin, which is death of the soul.

33 But our Lord will not leave him in his hands: neither will he condemn him, when judgment shall be given of him. 34 Expect our Lord, and keep his way: and he will exalt thee, that thou mayst inherit the land: when the sinners shall perish^ thou shalt see. 35 I have seen the impious highly exalted, and advance as the cedars of Libanus. 36 And I passed by, and behold he was not: and I sought him, and his place was not found. 37 Keep innocency, and see equity: because there are (p) remains for the peaceable man.

(p) Rewards.

38 But the unjust shall perish together: the remains of the impious shall perish. 39 But the salvation of the just is (q) of our Lord: and he is their protector in the time of tribulation.

(q) Man's justice and well doing is not of his own power but of God's grace.

40 And our Lord will help them, and deliver them: and he will take them away from sinners, and save them, because they have hoped in him.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

King David, or any other penitent, earnestly prayeth God to remit his sins, and mitigate the pains which he acknowledgeth himself to have deserved, 12. lamenting the afflictions which he suffereth by such as sometimes were his friends, 14. whose tentations he now resisteth, trusting in God, resigning himself to God's will, confessing his own iniquity, and humbly praying for God's help. [1]

[1] The third penitential Psalm.
The 7. key.

A Psalm of David, in (a) recordation of the sabbath.

(a) In remembrance that by sin we lost the rest and peace, which man had in the state of innocency; secondly we lost the peace of conscience; thirdly the rest and peace of eternal felicity.

2 Lord (b) rebuke me not in thy fury: (c) nor chastise me in wrath.

(b) Condemn me not to eternal pain: (c) nor punish me in purgatory fire; but purge me so in this life, that the purging fire be not needful. By which fire (saith S. Aug.) though some shall be saved (gravior tamen erit ille ignis, quam quicquid potest homo pati in hac vita) yet that fire shall be more grievous, than whatsoever a man can suffer in this life. S. Gregory also expoundeth this same place, as if David said thus: I know it will come to pass, that after the end of this life, some shall be cleansed by purging flames, some shall be under the sentence of eternal damnation. But because I do esteem that transitory fire more intolerable than all present tribulation, I desire not only not to be rebuked in fury of eternal damnation, but also I fear to be purged in the wrath of transitory correption. Thou therefore, o Lord, whom I serve in my spirit, whom I know to be the Saviour of all men, rebuke me not in fury of perpetual damnation, nor chastise me in wrath of purging punishment. See Annotat. Ps. 6.

3 Because (d) thy arrows are fast sticked in me: and thou hast (e) fastened thy hand upon me.

(d) Afflictions of mind and body sent by thy just judgment. (e) Thou hast struck me with an heavy hand.

4 There is (f) no health in my flesh at (g) the face of thy wrath: my bones have no peace at (h) the face of my sins.

(f) I already feel in my flesh, in all my bones, and powers, great affliction, (g) considering thy justice (h) and my sins.

5 Because mine iniquities are gone (i) over my head: and as a (k) heavy burden are become heavy upon me.

(i) Which are exceedingly increased, almost overwhelming my spirit. (k) Sins not washed away by penance by their weight carry the soul into more and more wickedness.

6 My (l) scars are putrefied and corrupted, because of my foolishness.

(l) Still corrupting those parts which were whole before, as a pestered sore that is not cured.

7 I am become miserable, and am made (m) crooked even to the end: I went sorrowful all the day.

(m) Not able to go straight to do any good work, being guilty of grievous sin.

8 Because (n) my loins are filled with illusions: and there is no health in my flesh.

(n) Concupiscence striving in me.

9 I am afflicted and am humbled exceedingly: I (o) roared for the groaning of my heart.

(o) From the sorrow of my heart my voice hath broken out into clamour.

10 Lord (p) before thee is all my desire: and my groaning is not hid from thee.

(p) O God thou knowest my desire, to be restored to thy favour.

11 My heart is troubled, my strength hath forsaken me: and the light of mine eyes, and the same is not with me. 12 My (q) friends, and my neighbours have approached, & stood against me. And they that were near me, stood far off:

(q) Those that were my friends and companions in sin are become mine enemies, because I forsake them.

13 and they did violence which sought my soul. And they that sought me evils (r) spake vanities: and meditated guiles all the day.

(r) Sought by all means to entangle me again.

14 But I as (s) one deaf did not hear: and as one dumb not opening his mouth.

(s) I now renounce all sin.

15 And I became as a man not hearing: and not having reproofs in his mouth. 16 Because (t) in thee, o Lord have I hoped, thou wilt hear me, o Lord my God.

(t) I now rely upon thee, o God.

17 (v) Because I said: Lest sometime mine enemies rejoice over me, and whilst my feet are moved, they spake great things upon me.

(v) For this cause I am returned to thee and do pray that mine enemies may not prevail against me.

18 Because I (w) am ready for scourges: and my sorrow is in my sight always:

(w) I resign myself to thee.

19 Because (x) I will declare my iniquity: and I will (y) think for my sin.

(x) Though thou knowest all, yet with mouth confession is made to salvation. (y) And I meditate of that which my sin hath deserved.

20 But mine enemies live, and are confirmed over me: and they are multiplied that hate me unjustly. 21 They that repay evil things for good, (z) detracted from me: because I followed goodness.

(z) One kind of detraction is in revealing secret faults, another in feigning and imputing false crimes, the third (here mentioned) in calling virtue vice, as penance hypocrisy.

22 (a) Forsake me not, o Lord my God, depart not from me.

(a) Grant me Lord final perseverance in thy grace and service.

23 Attend unto my help, o Lord the God of my salvation.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

A just man in remediless persecution resolveth to suffer all with peace and silence: 5. praying God to take him from this world, confessing the vanity thereof, 8. and relying on God's providence (11. who punisheth man for his sins) prayeth for release.[1]

[1] God's providence.
The 3. key.

Unto (a) the end, to (b) Idithun himself, a canticle of David.

(a) Some expound this Psalm of the Jews in captivity in Babylon, but this title, and the matter contained shew, that it rather pertaineth to the new Testament. (b) To be sung by Idithun and his scholars & successors, or rather by Christians.

2 I (c) have said: I will keep my ways, that I offend not in my tongue. I have set a guard to my mouth, when the sinner stood against me.

(c) Weak men in affliction, not able to deliver themselves, seek revenge, by murmuring and other evil speeches, but the perfect resolve to rule their tongues:

3 I was dumb and humbled, and kept silence (d) from good things: and (e) my sorrow was renewed.

(d) Even to forbear sometimes from their own just defence: (e) though thereby they endure more persecution.

4 My (f) heart waxed hot within me: & in my meditation a fire shall burn.

(f) Sorrow suppressed maketh the heart to burn with zeal and indignation.

5 I have spoken in my tongue: Lord (g) make mine end known to me. And the number of my days what it is: that I may know what is lacking to me.

(g) If it may please thee, let me know how long I shall live, desiring to die; as Elias desired. 3. Reg. 19.

6 Behold thou hast put my days measurable, and my (h) substance is as nothing before thee. Doubtless all things are vanity, every man living.

(h) My life and all that I have is as nothing compared to thy eternity.

7 Surely man passeth as (i) an image, yea and he is troubled in (k) vain. He gathereth treasure, and knoweth not to whom he shall gather them.

(i) As a shadow or image appearing in a glass, which is quickly forgot. (k) Therefore there is no cause man should be troubled in mind for temporal miseries.

8 And now what is my expectation? Is not our Lord? And my substance is with thee. 9 From all mine iniquities deliver me: (l) a reproach to the foolish thou hast given me.

(l) Thou hast suffered me to be reproached by the foolish that prosper in this world.

10 I was dumb, and opened not my mouth, (m) because thou didst it:

(m) I know my tribulation is by thy providence.

11 Remove thy scourges from me. 12 By the strength of thy hand I have fainted in reprehensions, for iniquity thou hast chastised man. And thou hast made his (o) soul pine away as a spider: but vainly is every man troubled.

(o) My life decayeth as a spider having spent all her moisture.

13 Hear my prayer, o Lord, and my petition; with thine ears receive my tears. Keep not silence: because I am a (p) stranger with thee, and a pilgrim, as my fathers.

(p) All men are strangers in this life, heaven being our home.

14 Forgive me, that I may (q) be refreshed before I depart: and (r) shall be no more.

(q) That I may recover spiritual strength in this life: (r) after which I shall not be in state to do free works of satisfaction nor merit.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

Christ's faithful members after long expectation congratulate his coming in flesh. 6. He directing his speech to his Father, professeth to perform the Redemption of mankind, and to denounce the same in the whole world: 12. prayeth for his servants, undertaking to satisfy for their sins. [1]

[1] Christ's coming and redeeming of mankind. The 5. key.

Unto (a) the end, a Psalm to David himself.

(a) Pertaining unto the new Testament.

2 Expecting (b) I expected our Lord, and he hath attended to me.

(b) The faithful of the old and new Testament rejoice in the coming of Christ.

3 And he heard my prayers, and brought me out of the lake of misery, and from the mire of dregs. And hath set my feet upon a rock: and hath directed my steps. 4 And he hath put a new canticle into my mouth: a song to our God. Many shall see, and shall fear: and they shall hope in our Lord. 5 Blessed is the man, whose hope is in the name of our Lord: and hath not had regard to vanities and false madness. 6 Thou hast done many thy marvelous things, o Lord my God: & in thy cogitations there is none that may be like to thee. I (c) have declared and have spoken: they (d) multiplied above number.

(c) Christ by himself and by others preached the Gospel of salvation. (d) The multiplication of Christians thereby.

7 (e) Sacrifice and oblation thou wouldest not: but (f) ears thou hast perfited to me. [1] Holocaust and for sin thou didst not require:

(e) No sacrifice of the old testament sufficed to satisfy God's justice for the sin of man. (f) Christ by the ear of obedience performed the redemption of man by his death, as was determined from eternity. S. Paul for (ears) saith (body). See Annotations Heb. 10. [1] Heb. 10.

8 then said I, Behold I come. In the (g) head of the book it is written of me,

(g) The sum of holy Scripture is of Christ's Incarnation & death for redemption of man.

9 that I should do thy will: my God I would, and thy law in the midst of my heart. 10 I have (h) declared thy justice in the great Church, lo I will not stay my lips: Lord thou hast known it.

(h) Again Christ inculcateth the preaching and receiving of his Gospel in the whole world.

11 Thy justice I have not hid in my heart: thy truth and thy salvation I have spoken. I have not hid thy mercy, and thy truth from the (i) great Council.

(i) In the greatest and wisest congregations of this world, Christ concealeth not his mercy and truth. So himself professed before Annas, Caiphas, Pilate, and their counsels. Saint Paul preached Christ at Athens, and in many nations, and so the other Apostles. For their voice went into all the coasts of the earth.

12 (k) But thou, o Lord, make not thy commiserations far from me: thy mercy, and thy truth have always received me.

(k) The Prophet now speaketh in the name of Christ's mystical body the Church: praying to be made partaker of mercy, and to be delivered from evils.

13 Because evils have compassed me, which have no number: mine iniquities have overtaken me, & I was (l) not able to see. They are multiplied above the hairs of my head: and (m) my heart hath forsaken me.

(l) The sins also of those which believe in Christ are so many, that they cannot be fully seen in particular. (m) I almost faint in considering so many and so great iniquities amongst those that profess Christ.

14 It may please thee, o Lord, to deliver (n) me: Lord have respect to help me.

(n) The whole Church prayeth in the name of all for the infirm members.

15 Let (o) them be confounded and ashamed together, that seek my soul to take it away. Let them be turned backward, and be ashamed that will me evils.

(o) The Prophet foresheweth that the reprobate for their obstinate malice, seeking to hurt others shall be confounded.

16 Let them forthwith receive their confusion, that (p) say to me: Well, well.

(p) That scornfully say: Well, well: wishing all evil to good men.

17 Let all (q) that seek thee rejoice and be glad upon thee: and let them that love thy salvation, say always: Our Lord be magnified:

(q) Which not only in mouth and outward profession, but also in sincerity of heart seek thee, may with confidence rejoice, and praise God.

18 But (r) I am a beggar, and poor: Our Lord is careful to me. Thou art (s) my helper, & my protector: my God be not slack.

(r) Christ speaketh in the name of sinners truly repenting, whose sins he undertaketh to redeem, and wash away by his passion. (s) The faithful of the old testament pray for Christ's first coming into this world, & the faithful now pray for his second coming to purge his Church, and to reward the good.

CHAPTER XL.

The Prophet pronounceth them happy that will believe in Christ, coming in humility and poverty. 5. Christ describeth his own poor afflicted state in this life, by reason he is to satisfy for the sins of the world; the malice of his adversaries, 10. especially of Judas, 11. and by way of prayer, prophesieth his own Resurrection. [1]

[1] Christ's Passion and Resurrection.

The 5. key.

Unto (a) the end, a Psalm to David himself. [1]

(a) Pertaining to the new testament, as appeareth by the 10. verse alleged by our Saviour. [1] Io. 13. v. 18.

This Psalm is also applied by the Church in the office of the sick, whom whosoever assisteth in that case, may hope to have assistance in their own like necessity.

2 Blessed is the man that understandeth concerning (b) the needy, and the poor: in (c) the evil day our Lord will deliver him.

(b) He is happy that is not scandalized in Christ (Luc. 7. v. 23.) coming in poverty, & suffering extreme afflictions. (c) He that trusteth in Christ, notwithstanding the contrary motives of his worldly misery, shall be delivered by him in all distress.

3 Our Lord (d) preserve him, and give him life, and make him blessed in the land: and (e) deliver him not unto the will of his enemies.

(d) Our Lord will give to such servants more grace in this life, and glory in the next. (e) Not suffer him to be overcome in tentations.

4 Our Lord help him (f) upon the bed of his sorrow: thou hast turned all his couch in his infirmity.

(f) When such constant servants are sick to death, Christ will most especially comfort and help them.

5 I said: (g) Lord have mercy on me: heal my soul, because I have sinned to thee.

(g) Christ in the behalf of his mystical body confesseth their sins, and prayeth for them.

6 Mine enemies have spoken evils to me: When shall he die (h) and his name perish?

(h) After death suffered for mankind, Christ riseth, and his name and kingdom is glorious.

7 And if (i) he came in to see, he spake vain things: his heart hath gathered together iniquity to himself. He went forth, and spake together.

(i) Those that came not of good will, but of malice to observe Christ's deeds and words, carped at both, sometimes saying, he taught against the law, and against Moyses; sometimes that he cast out devils in the power of Beelzebub.

8 All mine enemies whispered against me: they did think evils to me. 9 They (k) have determined an unjust word against me: (l) shall not he that sleepeth add to rise again?

(k) At last they resolved that he should die. (l) But they could not so suppress his power, for he rose again in glory.

10 For (m) the man also of my peace, in whom I hoped: who did eat my breads, hath greatly trodden me under-foot. [1]

(m) By our Saviour's application of this verse, it is certain that the traitor Judas is here described. Ioa. 13. v. 18. [1] Io. 13. Act. 1.

11 But thou, o Lord, have mercy upon me, and raise me up again: and I (n) will repay them.

(n) In the day of judgement Christ Judge of all will render to every one as they deserve.

12 In this I have known that thou wouldest me: because mine enemy shall not rejoice over me. 13 But me thou hast received (o) because of innocency: and thou hast confirmed me in thy sight for ever.

(o) As before in respect of sinners, Christ Judge of all will render to every one: so here in his own person he avoucheth his own innocency, which made him apt to satisfy for others.

14 Blessed be our Lord the God of Israel (p) from the beginning of the world, and for evermore: (q) Be it, be it.

(p) For this mercy of Almighty God in saving the elect by his Son's death he is to be praised for ever eternally. (q) All the Blessed agree in this, that God is eternally to be praised and thereto say Amen, So be it, so be it.

Some divide the Psalms into five books, supposing the first book to end here with these words, Be it, be it: not observing that the last Psalm hath not this ending. S. Jerom confuteth this opinion by our Saviour's and S. Peter's naming it the book, not books of Psalms. Luc. 20. v. 42. Act. 1. Moreover if this were the end of one book, then the Psalm following should not be called the 41. Psalm but the first Psalm of the second book.

CHAPTER XLI.

The fervent desire of the just, 6. much afflicted in this life, 12. and assured hope of eternal joy. [1]

[1] Eternal glory.
The 10. key.

Unto the end, understanding to the sons of (a) Core.

(a) The sons of Core repented, and departed from their father's schism, and so escaped miraculously the horrible pit of damnation, into which their father and his complices fell. Num. 26. v. 10. By which example all seduced and deceived Christians are admonished, not to persist in schism or other sins. And worldly men, ambitious of honour be warned to desire & seek God above all things, first of all the kingdom of heaven (to be living members of the Catholic Church) and the justice thereof: to seek things which are above, not which are upon the earth; lest hell devour them, as it devoured the complices of Core. Num. 16. v. 31.

2 Even as the hart (b) desireth after the fountains of waters: (c) so doth my soul desire after thee, o God.

(b) A hart waxing old, and burdened with much hair, and great horns, draweth a serpent into his nostrils: so being infected with poison, desireth most ardently to drink, and afterwards casteth his horns, and hair, and becometh as it were young again. (c) With such fervent desire a true penitent, feeling himself infected with poison of sins, seeketh the water of God's grace.

3 My soul hath thirsted after God (d) the strong (e) living: (f) when shall I come and appear before the face of God?

(d e) God is omnipotent, and indeed the only true living God: devils who are honoured in idols, can do no more than God permitteth, and so they can kill the souls, that consent unto their tentations, but cannot restore spiritual life again. (e)↑(f) The soul being justified, and still assaulted with new tentations desireth to be with God.

4 My (g) tears have been breads unto me day and night: whilst it is said to me daily: (h) Where is thy God?

(g) I have had no other refection, but to lenify my sorrow with weeping. (h) The wicked exprobate the just, as though God would never help them, because he suffereth them to be sometimes long in tribulation.

5 These things have I remembered, and have poured out my soul in me, because I shall pass into the place (i) of a marvelous tabernacle, even to the house of God. In the voice of exultation, and confession: the sound of one feasting.

(i) King David was not permitted to build the temple, much less did he enter into any such marvelous tabernacle in his mortal life, but must needs be understood, to speak here of the heavenly tabernacle, prepared by Christ for his servants.

6 Why (k) art thou sorrowful my soul? & why dost thou trouble me? Hope in God, because yet I (l) will confess to him: the salvation of my countenance,

(k) The Prophet comforteth himself, or any just soul, in the hope of everlasting joy. (l) I render thanks and praises.

7 and my God. My soul is troubled toward myself; therefore will I be mindful of thee from the land (m) of Jordan, and Hermoniim from the little mountain.

(m) All this life is like to the small strait place between Jordan and a little hill called Hermoniim, but from this straitness the hope of the just is, to be placed in heaven.

8 Depth (n) calleth on depth, in the voice of (o) thy flood-gates. All thy high things, and thy ways have passed over me.

(n) One tentation still succeedeth another: (o) and the same so great, as if God opened the gates, and suffered them to overflow like floods of water.

9 In (p) the day our Lord hath commanded his mercy: and (q) in the night a song of him. With me (r) is prayer to the God of my life:

(p) But God helpeth in opportunity, not suffering his servants to be tempted above their strength, giving them fruit with tentations: (q) yea in the greatest tribulation, he giveth ordinarily most comfort, making them sing spiritually in heart, if not also in voice. (r) One special means to procure divine consolation is prayer in distress.

10 I will say to God: Thou art my defender. Why hast thou forgotten me? And why go I sorrowful, whilst mine enemy afflicteth me? 11 Whilst my bones are broken, mine enemies that trouble me have upbraided me: Whilst they say to me day by day: Where is thy God? 12 Why art thou heavy, o my soul? & why dost thou trouble me? (s) Hope in God, because yet I will confess to him: the salvation of my countenance, and my God.

(s) Still the just soul taketh comfort in assured hope of salvation, the eternal vision of God.

CHAPTER XLII.

The just invocateth God's sentence against the deceitful, that seek his spiritual overthrow, 4. acknowledgeth his help, from Almighty God the B. Trinity, in whose vision glory consisteth. [1]

[1] One God the B. Trinity.
The 1. key.

A Psalm (a) of David. Judge (b) me, o God, & discern my cause from the nation not holy, from the unjust and deceitful man (c) deliver me.

(a) Holy David often prefiguring Christ, here representeth every faithful servant of God, and particularly when they begin a great and holy work; as when Priests celebrate the divine Sacrifice, they with their assistants recite by interchangeable verses this Psalm. (b) After that we have examined, and prepared ourselves to the most holy Sacrifice and Sacrament, according to S. Paul's admonition (let a man prove himself, and so eat this bread, & drink this chalice, 1. Cor. 11.) we pray God, to judge between our true sincere intention, and the unjust deceitful endeavours of our enemy: (c) and so to deliver and protect us from subtle malice.

2 Because thou art God (d) my strength: (e) why hast thou repelled me? And why go I sorrowful (f) whilst the enemy afflicteth me.

(d) With thee I can do any thing, without thee nothing, (e) thou seemest sometimes not to regard me, (f) whilst tentations are more sensible than thy grace.

3 Send forth (g) thy light and thy truth: (h) they have conducted me, and have brought me into thy holy hill, and into thy tabernacles.

(g) As thou hast sent Christ the light and truth into this world, grant us the same now in particular. (h) These two gifts of God, the light of knowing our duties and truth, with sincere intention to perform the same, have brought us into thy Church and unto thy Altar.

4 And (i) I will go in to the altar of God: to God, which (k) maketh my youth joyful. I will confess to thee (l) on the harp (m) o God (n) my God:

(i) Accompanied with light of truth, & sincere intention, we confidently approach to thine Altar, o God, (k) who changest our old corruption into newness of life. (l) But to this purpose we praise God on the harp, mortifying our affections. (m) (n) The former word is of the plural number in Hebrew, Eloim, the other of the singular, signifying the Blessed Trinity, one God. (n) ↑

5 (o) why art thou sorrowful, o my soul? And why dost thou trouble me? (p) Hope in God, because yet (q) will I confess to him: the salvation (r) of my countenance, and (s) my God.

(o) Thou needest not therefore my soul, to be pensive or desolate. (p) But trust in God, (q) praise him, (r) whom I hope to see face to face, (s) the true eternal God.

CHAPTER XLIII.

The Prophet describeth the first calling, and difficult state of the Jewish nation, 6. their prosperity at other times. 10. Again their afflictions in captivity, and persecutions. [1]

[1] The state of the Jews.
The 4. key.

Unto (a) the end, for the sons of (b) Core to understanding.

(a) Though this Psalm doth first and literally pertain to the people of Israel, yet all things happening to them, were in figure of the Christian Catholic Church, which began with difficulties, afterwards prospered, and again suffereth much persecution. (b) Core signifieth caluus, bald; also calvaria a scull, or place of sculls: the name of the place where our Saviour was crucified: so the children of Core signify the children of Christ. S. Aug.

2 O God we have heard with our ears: our fathers have declared to us. The (c) work that thou hast wrought in their days: & in the days of old.

(c) The particular calling of Abraham out of Chaldea, protection of him, and Isaac, and Jacob, the delivery of all Israel out of Aegypt, and establishing them in the promised land of Chanaan, with innumerable, great, & strange things done for them.

3 Thy hand destroyed the nations, and thou didst plant them: thou didst afflict the peoples, and expel them. 4 For (d) not by their own sword did they possess the land, and their own arm did not save them: But thy right hand, and thine arm, and the illumination of thy countenance: because (e) thou wast pleased in them.

(d) The Israelites conquered not by ordinary power, but by the miraculous hand of God. See Iosue 23. (e) Not that this people deserved of themselves, but of God's free election, all the world being wicked, he gave peculiar grace to Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and some others, & then for their sakes protected the whole people, in them conserving a visible Church.

5 Thou art the same my King and my God: which commandest the salvations of Jacob. 6 In (f) thee we shall turn out our enemies with (g) the horn, & in thy name we shall contemn them that rise up against us.

(f) As in former examples, so in David's time, not man's strength, but God's hand gave them great victories. (g) As an oxe with his horn casteth a small thing into the wind.

7 For I will not hope in my bow: and my sword will not save me. 8 For thou hast saved us from them that afflict us: and them that hate us thou hast confounded. [1]

[1] Ios. 24. 1. Reg. 17. 2. Reg. 8.

9 In God we shall be praised all the day: and in thy name we will confess for ever. 10 But (h) now thou hast repelled and confounded us: and thou wilt not go forth, o God, in our hosts.

(h) The Prophet foretelleth that after prosperity God would suffer the Jews to fall into captivity, & many afflictions, which also signified allegorically diverse states of Christ's Church.

11 Thou hast turned us back behind our enemies: and they that hated us spoiled for themselves. 12 Thou hast given us as sheep that are to be eaten: and thou (i) hast dispersed us among the nations.

(i) The Jews are now marvelously dispersed and depressed.

13 Thou hast sold thy people (k) without price: and there was (l) no multitude in the exchanges of them.

(k) In the destruction of Jerusalem the remnant of the people were sold for small, as it were for no price. They had sold Christ for thirty pence; (l) and now no multitude, nor number of money at all was given for them, but thirty of them were sold for one penny. Iosephus de bello Iudaico.

14 Thou hast made us a reproach to our neighbours, a scorn and mocking stock to them that are round about us. 15 Thou hast made us for a parable to the Gentiles: a wagging of the head among the peoples. 16 All the day my shame is against me, and the confusion of my face hath covered me. 17 At the voice of the upbraider, and the reproacher: at the face of the enemy and persecutor. 18 All these things have come upon us, (m) neither have we forgotten thee: and we have not done wickedly in thy testament.

(m) Until Christ's passion the Jewish people did not wholly fall from God and true religion. And of them were chosen the Apostles, and many others, that founded and propagated the Church of Christ.

19 And our heart hath not revolted backward: & (n) thou hast declined our paths from thy way.

(n) The negative particle is here understood by zeugma, according to the Hebrew, thus: Our heart hath not revolted backward, neither hast thou suffered our paths to decline from the way.

20 (o) Because thou hast humbled us in the place of affliction, and the shadow of death hath covered us.

(o) Another Hebrew phrase, if we have, for, we have not.

21 If we have forgotten the name of our God, and if we have spread forth our hands to a strange god, 22 Will not God inquire of these things? For he knoweth the secrets of the heart. Because (p) for thee we are killed all the day: we are esteemed as sheep of slaughter. [1]

(p) The Prophets and others, persecuted partly before Christ, much more the Apostles, and other Christians in the new Testament. [1] Rom. 8.

23 (q) Arise, why sleepest thou, o Lord? Arise, and expel us not to the end.

(q) A prayer in affliction.

24 Why dost thou turn away thy face, forgettest our poverty and our tribulation? 25 Because (r) our soul is humbled in the dust: our (s) belly is glued in the earth.

(r) We are at death's door, ready to become dust. (s) Lying as groveling sorrowing on the earth: Arise Lord, help us: and redeem us for thy name, till thou deliver us from these tribulations.

26 Arise Lord, help us: and redeem us for thy name.

CHAPTER XLIV.

David singularly moved in heart and tongue, 3. prophesieth Christ's excellency, endowing his Church with most worthy dowries. 11. By way of exhortation foreshewing her internal and external beauty: 17. with perpetual succession of Pastors feeding the flock even to the world's end. [1]

[1] Christ most excellently endowing his Church. The 6. key.

Unto (a) the end, for them, (b) that shall be changed, (c) to the sons of Core (d) for understanding, (e) a Canticle for the beloved.

(a) Pertaining to the new Testament. (b) Gentiles converted from paganism to Christianity: (c) and all others returning from schism, or other sins, (d) for their instruction. (e) This Psalm is a marriage song of the beloved bridegroom and bride, Christ and his Church.

2 My (f) heart hath uttered (g) a good word: I tell my works (h) to the king. My (i) tongue is the pen of a scribe, that (k) writeth swiftly.

(f) I have received by divine inspiration in my heart and cogitation, (g) a most high Mystery. (h) To the honour therefore and glory of this King (whom I secretly see in my heart) I utter and refer all my works, and this particular Canticle. (i) From the aboundance of my heart, my tongue also speaketh, (k) & that presently without delay.

3 (l) Goodly of beauty above the sons of men, grace is poured abroad in thy lips: therefore hath God blessed thee for ever.

(l) Description of Christ, most excellent in all internal and external gifts.

4 Be (m) girded with thy sword upon thy thigh, o most mighty.

(m) The Prophet seeing in spirit the perfections which he wisheth in Christ, in manner of congratulating, describeth his fortitude, fighting against the devil for the Church.

5 With thy beauty and fairness (n) intend, (o) proceed prosperously, and (p) reign, Because of (q) truth, and (r) mildness, and (s) justice: and thy right hand shall conduct thee marvelously.

(n) Purposing, (o) prosecuting, (p) and perfecting the conquest, and so establishing thy spiritual Kingdom. (q) Not with warlike armour of this world, but by assaulting the adversary with truth: (r) defending thyself and thy soldiers with the shield of mildness, (s) and striking the enemy with the sword of justice. Which right force of spiritual fight hath marvelous good success.

6 Thy (t) sharp arrows, the (v) peoples underneath thee shall fall into the hearts of the king's enemies.

(t) Preaching of Christ's Gospel, his grace moving the hearts of the hearers, is lively and forcible, more piercing than any two edged sword. (v) The example of people converted, shall move the hearts of the adversaries to come also unto the truth.

7 Thy seat o God (w) for ever and ever: a rod of direction the rod of thy Kingdom.

(w) Christ's Kingdom shall have no end. Luc. 1. v. 33.

8 Thou (x) hast loved justice, and hast hated iniquity: therefore God, (y) thy God, hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness (z) above thy fellows.

(x) Thou defendest and rewardest the good, finally forsakest and punishest the wicked. (y) More peculiarly the God of Christ, by hypostatical union. (z) Diverse Kings (as David himself, Iosaphat, Ezechias, and Iosias) were as godly as Salomon, and persevered good to the end, which is doubted Salomon did not; but Christ incomparably was anointed, & endued with all graces above all Kings.

9 (a) Myrrh, and (b) Aloes, and (c) Cassia from thy (d) garments, from houses of ivory, out of the which

(a) Mortification which conserveth from putrefying. (b) humility assuaging pride, (c) being small in the first spring, groweth great. (d) Humanity assumpted, and sanctified persons, in whom Christ dwelleth as in clean, shining, odoriferous houses.

10 (e) the daughters of kings have delighted thee in thy honour.

(e) Sincere faithful souls more dear to their spouse Christ, than daughters of temporal Kings.

11 The (f) Queen stood on thy right hand in golden raiment: compassed with (g) variety. (h) Hear daughter, and (i) see, and (k) incline thine ear: and forget thy people, and the house of thy father.

(f) The Catholic Church, in faith purified as gold: (g) with variety of states, as Clergy, Laity, and diverse sorts of religious Orders, and other professions, all united in the same faith, hope, and charity. (h) Carefully all that Christ thy spouse speaketh to thee by his Spirit. (i) Diligently put the same in practice: (k) with all obedience and readiness, and return not to former infidelity, nor to corrupt life.

12 And the King (l) will covet thy beauty: because he is the Lord thy God, and (m) they shall adore him.

(l) Christ loveth the Church adorned with his gifts, (m) and mutually his true children love and serve him.

13 And the daughters (n) of Tyre with gifts, all the rich of the people shall beseech thy countenance.

(n) Many of all nations submit themselves, and all that they have to Christ.

14 All the glory of that daughter of the King is (o) within, in (p) borders of gold,

(o) Internal virtues are most special ornaments: (p) exterior are required to edify others in diverse sorts of virtues.

15 clothed round about with varieties. (q) Virgins shall be brought to the King after her: her (r) neighbours shall be brought to thee.

(q) By this means many more are converted to Christianity: (r) and one country inviteth and draweth another.

16 They shall be brought in joy and exultation: they shall be brought into the temple of the King.

17 (s) For thy fathers there are born sons to thee: thou shalt make them Princes over all the earth.

(s) As Apostles came in place of Patriarchs and Prophets: so still Bishops and Priests succeed in the Church, Pastors, and governors thereof.

18 They shall (t) be mindful of thy name in all generation and generation. Therefore shall (v) peoples confess to thee for ever: and for ever and ever.

(t) These Pastors shall still teach the true Christian doctrine. (v) And still there shall be Christian people that will follow and profess the same.

ANNOTATIONS.
PSALM XLIV.

◦Calvin expoundeth this Psalm contrary to S. Paul.

7. Thy seat, o God, for ever and ever.] Seeing S. Paul (Heb. 1. v. 8.) affirmeth expressly that these words are spoken of the Son of God, Christ our Saviour, and thereby proveth his excellency above Angels: John Calvin is wonderful bold to avouch that in the simple & proper sense◦, David spake of his son Salomon, and the daughter of Pharao, as if that were the literal sense, and S. Paul only expounded it mystically. But first, the solemn preface in the two first verses importeth far greater things, than agree to any terrestrial King. Secondly, this excellent beauty described (v. 3) above the sons of men, cannot be verified of Salomon: for Absalom (2. Reg. 14.) and Adonias were also very beautiful (3. Reg 1. v. 6.) As for Salomon's wisdom, or other virtues, he persevered not therein, and so he was not blessed for ever. Thirdly, the Prophet here calleth the person of whom, and to whom he speaketh, God. v. 7. & 12. Fourthly, not only the ancient Fathers, and Doctors of the Church, but also the Hebrew Rabbins, and the Chaldee paraphrasis, expound this Psalm literally of the promised Messias, and his kingdom the Church.

◦No salvation out of the Church.

16. They shall be brought into the temple of the King.] The temple of the King, saith S. Augustine, is the Church◦, the temple of the King is in unity, the temple of the King is not ruinous, not cut insunder, not divided: the joining of living stones is charity. Nothing is more evident. Attend now the very temple of the King, for from thence he speaketh, because of the unity spread in the round earth. For those that would be virgins (faithful souls) unless they be brought into the temple of the King (the Catholic Church) they cannot please the bridegroom.

◦Perpetual succession of Bishops in place of the Apostles.

17. For thy fathers there are born sons to thee.] The apostles begot thee (o Christ and Church) they were sent, they preached, they are the fathers◦. But could they be always corporally with us? Could any of them tarry here till this time? Could they tarry to the time yet to come? But was therefore the Church left desolate by their departure? God forbid. For thy fathers, sons are born to thee. What is this, for thy fathers, sons are born to thee? The Apostles were sent fathers, in place of the Apostles sons are born to thee; Bishops are appointed. For whence were the Bishops born, that are at this day through the world? The Church herself calleth them fathers, she begat them, & appointed them in the seats of the fathers. Do not therefore think thyself desolate (o Christian Church) because thou seest not Peter, seest not Paul: for thou seest not them by whom thou wast born, but of thine issue fatherhood is sprung to thee: For thy fathers, sons are born to thee, thou shalt make them Princes over all the earth. This is the Catholic Church. Her children are made Princes over all the earth: her sons are constituted for fathers. Let them acknowledge this that are cut off: let them come to the unity, be they brought into the temple of the King. Thus S. Augustine.

CHAPTER XLV.

The Church in persecution acknowledgeth God's perpetual defence, 5. making her thereby more glorious, 10. sometimes granting rest (11. God himself checking the persecuters) and ever protecting her.[1]

[1] The Church prospereth also in persecution.

The 6. key.

Unto (a) the end, to the sons of Core, for (b) the secrets.

(a) Belonging to the Church of Christ. (b) As well the cause, why God suffereth his Church to be persecuted, as his assured protection in difficulties, are hidden secrets to the world.

2 Our God is a refuge (c) and strength: an (d) helper in tribulations, which (e) have found us exceedingly.

(c) All refuge is not secure, for one man is not able always to defend another: but God is a sure and strong refuge. (d) Ever able and in convenient time willing to help. (e) This whole world is full of tribulations, but the Church suffered the greatest in the first persecutions, & shall suffer as great in the time of Antichrist. English Catholics suffer most of all nations in this age, and cannot be suppressed, but still increase in number and fortitude.

3 Therefore will we (f) not fear when (g) the earth shall be troubled: and (h) mountains transported into the heart of the sea.

(f) Therefore all Catholics may assuredly know, that the whole Church cannot fail (g) though very many, as now in England, (h) and very eminent persons, as some noblemen, and some Priests have revolted, yet all will not.

4 Their waters have sounded, and were troubled: the mountains were troubled in his strength. 5 The violence of the river (i) maketh the city of God joyful: the Highest hath sanctified his tabernacle.

(i) Such bad examples make the good to recollect themselves more diligently, and to rejoice in God's grace, by which they stand fast.

6 God is in the midst thereof, it shall not be moved: God will help it (k) in the morning early.

(k) Before the heat of persecution shall invade all, for the elect the days of tribulation are shortened.

7 Nations are troubled, and (l) Kingdoms are inclined: he gave (m) his voice, the earth was moved.

(l) Sometimes one nation or Kingdom rebelleth against the Church, but cannot destroy it. (m) By the spirit of Christ, Antichrist, and all his members shall be destroyed.

8 The Lord of hosts is with us: the God of Jacob is our defender. 9 Come ye, & see the works of our Lord, what wonders he hath put upon the earth:
10 (n) taking away wars even unto the end of the earth. He shall destroy bow, & break weapons: and shields he shall burn with fire.

(n) The Church sometimes hath great peace and tranquility.

11 (o) Be quiet, and see that I am God: I shall be exalted among the gentiles, and I shall be exalted in the earth.

(o) God himself restraineth the wicked, suddenly abating their fury, or cutting off their forces.

12 The Lord of hosts is with us: the God of Jacob is our defender.

CHAPTER XLVI.

Gentiles are called, and invited to praise God for his magnificence: for Christ's Ascension, and power. [1]

[1] Vocation of Gentiles.
The 6. key.

Unto the end, for (a) the sons of Core.

(a) For Christians that leave the sins of their fathers, and rejoice in Christ crucified. See Annotations. Psal. 4.

2 All ye Nations (b) clap hands: make jubilation to God in the voice of exultation.

(b) True joy of the heart sheweth it-self both in voice of exultation, and also in gesture of body, by clapping of hands, dancing (as King David did before the Ark 2. Reg. 6.) likewise with instruments.

3 Because our Lord is high, (c) terrible: a great King over (d) all the earth.

(c) To all the wicked, (d) not only of one or few kingdoms, but of all the earth.

4 He hath made peoples subject (e) to us: & gentiles under our feet.

(e) When Kings and countries become Christians, they are made subjects to the Church that was before, not heads and rulers therefore.

5 He hath chosen his inheritance in us: the beauty of Jacob which he loved. 6 (f) God is ascended in (g) jubilation: and our Lord in the voice of trumpet.

(f) Christ God & man, after his Passion, rose from death and ascended: (g) Not leaving his Church desolate, but making her joyful by another comforter, the Holy Ghost.

7 Sing ye to our (h) God, sing ye: Sing ye to our (i) King, sing ye.

(h) The same Christ is our God, by his Divinity: (i) and our King by his Humanity.

8 Because God is King of all the earth: sing ye (k) wisely.

(k) Do your endeavour to understand what you sing, read, or hear in God's word. At least to know the principal Mysteries, and points of Christian doctrine, every one according to their capacity and state or profession.

9 God shall reign over the gentiles: God sitteth upon his holy seat. 10 Princes of peoples are gathered together with (l) the God of Abraham: because the strong (m) gods of the earth are exceedingly advanced.

(l) The faithful of the old and new Testament are united in the service of one & the same eternal God. (m) In respect of the Blessed Trinity, holy Scripture here, and in many places useth names of the plural number, as Eloim, Gods, not dividing God's substance, which is one, but insinuating distinction of Divine Persons, The Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost. Which Mystery is more expressly mentioned in Baptism, & professed by Christian Gentiles, than it was by the people of the Jews.

CHAPTER XLVII.

God most, and every-where laudable, is especially praised in the Church of Christ (prefigured by Sion, and there begun.) 9. All things being fulfilled in the Church, even as they were prophesied and promised, 12. the faithful are exhorted to consider and congratulate the same. [1]

[1] The Church founded and protected by God.
The 6. key.

A Psalm (a) of Canticle to the sons of Core, the (b) second of the Sabbath.

(a) Voices beginning the music instruments prosecuted. (b) Especially for the second day of the week, the day after the sabbath, which is our Sunday, called Dominica, our Lord's day.

2 Great is our Lord, and to be praised exceedingly, in (c) the city of our God, in his holy mount.

(c) Jerusalem, and mount Sion were most obliged to praise God, for greatest benefits received: so the Catholic Church thereby prefigured, & having received far greater, is most of all bound to be grateful.

3 Mount Sion is founded with the exultation of (d) the whole earth, (e) the sides of the North, the city of the great King.

(d) This cannot be affirmed of Sion, or Jerusalem, but is only verified of the Catholic Christian Church: (e) whose coasts do extend to the North, & to all quarters of the round earth.

4 God shall be known in (f) the houses thereof, (g) when he shall receive it.

(f) The same one God, one Christ, one Faith, & one Religion in all particular Churches of the whole militant Church. (g) And this Universality and Unity shall be, after that Christ taking man's nature shall be ascended, and shall send the Holy Ghost, to found & begin this Church.

5 For behold the kings of the earth (h) were gathered together: they assembled in one.

(h) For the assured certainty of that is foreshewed, the Prophet speaketh in the pretertense, as if it were already done in his time, which he then saw in spirit.

6 They seeing it so were in admiration, were troubled, were moved: 7 Trembling took them. Their sorrows (i) as a woman travailing.

(i) Nothing more moveth the heart, & affecteth all the body and soul, than spiritual cogitations of faith and religion, and therefore it is compared to a woman travailing with child, who hath most careful and grievous pains.

8 In a vehement spirit (k) thou shalt break the ships of Tharsis.

(k) In which great conflict of man's spirit, God by his grace giveth force, to break through the contrary assaults of our enemy, to remove all impediments, and to overcome the difficulties.

9 (l) As we have heard, so have we seen in the city of the Lord of hosts, in the city of our God: God hath founded it for ever.

(l) This consideration, that all is now done, that was of old prophesied, is a marvelous confirmation to Christians.

10 We have received thy mercy, o God, (m) in the midst of thy temple.

(m) Grace and mercy is only granted to those that are within, or come unto the Catholic Church.

11 According to thy name, o God, so also is thy praise unto the ends of the earth: thy right hand is full of (n) justice.

(n) As God is praised for his mercy, so also for his justice: which do never prejudice the one the other.

12 Let mount Sion be glad, and the daughters of Juda rejoice, because of thy judgments, o Lord. 13 Compass Sion, and embrace ye her: (o) tell ye in her towers.

(o) Consider the fortresses or the Church, which are the holy Fathers, and Doctors, that watch and defend her walls.

14 Set your hearts (p) on her strength: and (q) distribute ye her houses, that you (r) may declare it in another generation.

(p) So rest you assured for all matters of faith in this pillar of truth. (q) Observe and mark diligently how many particular Churches were speedily founded in the world, (r) and declare this to other generations, that they may also hold fast the same faith, or return unto it, if they be relapsed; or at last embrace it, if sooner they have not.

15 Because (s) this is God, our God for ever, and for ever and ever: he (t) shall rule us evermore.

(s) Christ God incarnate that worketh all this, is our very God and Saviour, not for a few years, an hundred, six hundred, or a thousand, but for ever & ever. (t) He shall rule as a King, and consequently have a Kingdom, his militant Church, evermore, to the very end of this world. As he shall likewise have his triumphant Church in eternity.

CHAPTER XLVIII.

The royal Prophet inviting all states and sorts of men to hear him attentively, 6. sheweth that all ought to fear eternal damnation, that live wickedly; 9. vainly and foolishly seeking (13. even like brute beasts) carnal pleasures, which they cannot long enjoy, nor long escape hell: 16. confidently animating himself, and all good men, that trust not in this world. [1]

[1] Exhortation to fly from sin for fear of hell.
The 7. key.

Unto the end, (a) to the sons of Core a Psalm.

(a) In this and diverse other titles, both before and yet ensuing, is said, To the sons, or, for the sons of Core, a Psalm, or Canticle, or understanding & the like; but in no place, a Psalm, Canticle &c. of the sons of Core: which no way proveth that they were the authors of such Psalms, but rather the contrary.

2 Hear these things (b) all ye Gentiles: receive with your ears all ye that (c) inhabit the earth.

(b) All ye nations and sorts of people (c) that dwell upon the earth, learn this lesson which I will teach you.

3 All ye earthly persons, and children of men: together in one^ the rich and the poor. 4 My mouth shall speak wisdom, and the meditation of my heart prudence. 5 I will (d) incline mine ear unto a parable: I will (e) open my proposition (f) on a Psalter.

(d) Holy David harkened to God inspiring him, (e) and declared to others that which he received from God, (f) not only by his pen or tongue, but also for better instilling it into their minds he sounded it upon the instrument called the Psalter, which had ten strings, signifying the observation of the ten commandments.

6 (g) Why shall I fear in the evil day? (h) The iniquity of my heel shall compass me.

(g) What especial thing is there in this life, why or for which I or any have cause to fear the dreadful day of judgement? (h) Marry this we must fear, iniquity, by which any supplanteth, defraudeth, oppresseth, or any way wrongeth others, for that will involve the offender in the sentence of eternal damnation.

7 They (i) that trust in their strength: and glory in the multitude of their riches.

(i) Such be they that trust in their present power, riches, or other worldly things.

8 A (k) brother doth not redeem, (l) man shall redeem: he shall not give unto God his reconciliation.

(k) A man's own brother cannot help a sinner in that day, (l) much less any other man: so the Hebrew phrase by zeugma, understandeth another negative particle.

9 And the price of the redemption of his own soul:

and he shall (m) labour for ever,

(m) Still suffer pain,

10 and (n) shall live yet unto the end.

(n) and not die, but live in eternal torments.

11 He shall not see death, when he shall see (o) the wise dying, (p) the unwise, and (q) the fool shall perish together. And they shall leave their riches to strangers:

(o) All both wise and foolish do die temporally: but the wise living in eternal joy, the foolish live in eternal pain. (p) Those that believe not any other life after this, (q) and those that believing another life, yet live badly in this, shall perish in eternal damnation.

12 and their (r) sepulchres their (s) houses for ever. Their Tabernacles in generation and generation: they have renowned their (t) names in their lands.

(r) They shall never return from their sepulchers (s) to enjoy again their houses and earthly possessions. (t) Which vainly they labour to establish in their posterity.

13 And (v) man when he was in honour, did not understand: he was compared to beasts without understanding, and became like to them.

(v) A most pithy and brief consideration, for man to think, how absurdly, he being endowed with reason, understanding, & free will, like unto Angels, and capable of eternal glory, setteth his whole study and care upon corporal and temporal things, so making himself like unto brute beasts.

14 This their way is (w) a scandal to them: and (x) afterward in their mouth they shall take pleasure.

(w) This care of worldly things is the stumbling block, and cause of eternal ruin: (x) yet they shall be obstinate, and praise their own desires, still persisting therein.

15 As (y) sheep they are put in hell: death shall feed upon them. And the just shall rule over them (z) in the morning: and their aid shall wax old in hell from their glory.

(y) Among other creatures a sheep can least help herself in misery: even so the damned in hell are altogether unable to deliver themselves from thence, or to get any relief. (z) In the general resurrection they shall be most of all in misery, as ever dying and never dead: the just whom they wronged, shall be their judges, all friends shall fail them, after they have passed their glory and pleasure in this world.

16 Nevertheless (a) God will redeem my soul out of the hand of hell, when he shall take me,

(a) The confidence of the just.

17 Fear not when a man shall be made rich: and when the glory of his house shall be multiplied. 18 Because when he shall die, he shall not take (b) all things: neither shall his glory go down with him.

(b) He shall leave all worldly things and take nothing with him.

19 Because his soul in his life shall be (c) blessed: he will confess to thee (d) when thou shalt do him good.

(c) Temporally: (d) so long as he enjoyeth worldly profits, he will seem grateful to God.

20 He shall enter in, even to the progenies of his fathers: and he shall (e) not see light for ever.

(e) But they shall not see the true light of heaven.

21 (f) Man, when he was in honour, did not understand: he was compared to beasts without understanding, and became like to them.

(f) Remember and consider, o worldly man, that God made thee an excellent creature: which thou neglecting makest thyself like to a beast. As, v. 13.

CHAPTER XLIX.

Christ in his first coming calleth all Nations: 3. in his second will judge the world. 7. In the mean time God exhorteth all men to serve him in purity of virtue, which he much preferreth before external sacrifice of the old law: 17. reprehending such as profess or teach the right way, and live wickedly. [1]

[1] General Judgement. The 9. key.

A Psalm (a) to Asaph. The (b) God of gods our Lord hath spoken: and he hath called the earth, from the rising of the sun even to the going down.

(a) To be sung or tuned by Asaph a master of music. (b)

God Almighty, who is greater than are all falsely supposed gods; or holy persons, that participating of his goodness are called gods (as Kings, Priests, Judges) coming into this world in man's nature, calleth all men to salvation.

2 Out (c) of Sion the beauty of his comeliness.

(c) The Church of Christ began in Sion.

3 God will come (d) manifestly: our God and he will not keep silence. (e) Fire shall burn forth in his sight: and round about him a mighty tempest.

(d) Christ that came in humility, & more obscurely to suffer, and to redeem us, will come in majesty, and manifestly to judge. (e) Immediately before the general judgement, fire shall burn all transitory things.

4 He shall (f) call the heaven from above: and (g) the earth to discern his people.

(f) Give signs in the firmament, (g) and in earth.

5 Gather ye together his Saints unto him: which ordain his testament (h) above sacrifices.

(h) Which know that to keep God's commandments in following virtues, is above the oblation of external sacrifice.

6 And the heavens shall shew forth his justice: because God is Judge. 7 (i) Hear, o my people, and I will speak: Israel, and I will testify to thee: God thy God am I.

(i) God instructeth his people.

8 I will not rebuke thee in thy sacrifices: and thy holocausts (k) are in my sight always.

(k) Sacrifices are grateful to God:

9 I will (l) not take calves out of thy house: nor buck-goats out of thy flocks.

(l) But in regard that God needeth not these earthly things, he rather requireth a grateful mind. For otherwise man indeed can give nothing to God: seeing all that is in the whole world is God's own in propriety.

10 Because all the wild beasts of the woods be mine, the cattle in the mountains and oxen. 11 I have known all the fowls of the air: and the beauty of the field is with me. 12 If I shall be hungry, I will not tell thee: for the round earth is mine, and the fullness thereof. 13 Will I eat the flesh of oxen? Or will I drink the blood of buck-goats? 14 (m) Immolate to God the sacrifice of praise, and (n) pay thy vows to the Highest.

(m) Spiritual sacrifices of praise, (n) & due payment of voluntary vows made in honour of God,

15 And (o) invocate me in the day of tribulation: I will deliver thee, and thou shalt glorify me.

(o) and praying to him for help in tribulation are most grateful.

16 But to the sinner God hath said: (p) Why doest thou declare my justices, and takest my testament by thy mouth?

(p) He that will teach others, must especially fly from sin, & serve God sincerely.

17 But thou hast hated discipline & cast my words behind thee. 18 If thou didst see a thief, thou didst run with him: and with adulterers thou didst put thy portion. 19 Thy mouth hath abounded with malice: and thy tongue forged guiles. 20 Sitting thou spakest against thy brother, and against thy mother's son thou didst put a scandal: 21 these things hast thou done, and I have held my peace. Thou hast thought unjustly that I will be like thee: I will reprove thee, and set it against thy face. 22 Understand these things you that forget God: lest sometime he take you violently and there be none to deliver you. 23 The sacrifice of praise (q) shall glorify me: and there is the way, by which I will shew him the salvation of God.

(q) God is honoured by man's gratitude, and other good works.

ANNOTATIONS.
PSALM XLIX.

14. 23. The sacrifice of praise.] For better and more due performing of external sacrifice [1], it is requisite, that those which offer it, or desire to participate, do bring with them necessary internal virtues, or disposition; as sorrow and repentance for their sins, which is a kind of improper

[1] Sacrifice of praise disposeth men to the fruit of external sacrifice.

[2] The Sacrifice of the Eucharist prophesied.

sacrifice (mentioned in the next Psalm;) the sacrifice of justice, which rendereth to every one that is due (Psal. 4.) and sacrifice of praise, or thanks-giving, for all God's benefits received or expected; which kinds of internal and improper sacrifices, do nothing prejudice, but rightly prepare men of the fruit of external sacrifice, ever used in the law of nature, the law of Moyses, and of Christ. This place also hath another higher and prophetical sense of the Sacrifice of Christ's body in the Eucharist [2], which is both propitiatory, and Sacrifice of praise and thanks-giving. So S. Augustine (orat. adversus Judeos c. 6.) teacheth, that here certainly is a plain change of the old sacrifices. The same he affirmeth Ep. 120. c. 18. God foreshewing that the old sacrifices should be changed, which were offered in shadow of a sacrifice to come. I will not take (saith God of Israel calves nor goats at thy hand &c. but appointeth that all Israel (all nations from the rising of the sun to the setting) shall immolate the sacrifice of praise, the same Christ whom old Simeon knew an infant, whom he received into his hands. Likewise li. contra advers. legis & Prophet. c. 20. The Church offereth to God in the body of Christ the sacrifice of praise.

CHAPTER L.

King David in great sorrow for his sins: of adultery and murder, most seriously prayeth God of his manifold mercy to remit and purge all his offences, and pains due for them: 12. to restore unto him the grace of the Holy Ghost, lost by his sins; 15. that he may teach others (as indeed his singular example may teach the whole world true penance) 19. contrition of heart, worthily to offer sacrifice, for the whole Church. [1]

[1] The fourth penitential Psalm.
The 7. key.

Unto (a) the end, a Psalm of David, [1]

(a) Pertaining not only to David, but also to all penitents, especially of the new testament. [1] 2. Reg. 12.

2 when Nathan the Prophet came to him, after that he had sinned with Bethsabee. 3 Have mercy on me, o God, (b) according to thy great mercy. And according (c) to the multitude of thy commiserations, take away mine iniquity.

(b) My sins being very great, need thy great mercy. (c) Yea many sorts of thy mercies: not only remission of the crimes, but also mitigation of the pains due for the same: Thy merciful grace, to be truly sorry, to make some part of satisfaction, to beware hereafter not to fall again, to give better example of penance, and of virtuous life, and to persevere to the end.

4 Wash me (d) more amply from mine iniquity: & (e) cleanse me from my sin.

(d) O God thou hast forgiven me, and taken away my sins, as thy Prophet hath told me (2. Reg. 12. v. 13.) but my soul so foully polluted, needeth yet more washing. (e) Cleanse also the dregs that remain, and all habits and inclinations to sin. So our Saviour afterwards taught. (Ioan. 13. v. 10.) He that is washed needeth not saving to wash his feet (ill affections and relics of former sins) but is clean wholly.

5 (f) Because I do know mine iniquity: and my sin is (g) before me always.

(f) Whilst I did not know, nor consider, nor acknowledge my sins, I could not be forgiven, but now I know and acknowledge them: (g) and I cease not to consider of them with sorrow.

6 To thee (h) only have I sinned, and have done evil before thee: that thou mayst (i) be justified in thy words, and mayst (k) overcome when thou art judged.

(h) Principally (for so this particle, only, here signifieth) the enormities of my sins consist in that I have offended thy Divine Goodness and Majesty, the King of the worlds, immortal, invisible, only God, to whom is due all honour and glory for ever and ever, 1. Tim. 1. v. 17. (i) Thou which hast promised forgiveness to all sinners that truly convert, shall herein be justified by receiving me again to grace: (k) and overthrow thy calumniators, that judge wickedly of thy proceedings, as if either thy justice or mercy were perverted.

7 For behold I (l) was conceived in iniquities: & my mother conceived me in sins.

(l) I & all are born in original sin, the relics whereof, concupiscence and weakness, incline us to other sins, which we have added. In regard of which our infirmity, thy mercy is ready to recall us and help us.

8 For behold thou (m) hast loved truth: (n) the uncertain and hidden things of thy wisdom thou hast made manifest to me.

(m) Besides thou hast also given me knowledge of true faith, and right doctrine, which thou ever lovest, and art accustomed to reduce, and direct such into the true way of penance. (n) Yea thou hast moreover shewed to me things uncertain, or unknown to many others, given me the gift and spirit of prophecy, to know hid mysteries, and to every one God giveth some particular benefits, which he loveth in him, and is ready of his part to confirm and maintain the same, that they be not lost.

9 Thou shalt sprinkle me with (o) hyssop, and I shall be cleansed: thou shalt wash me, and I shall be made (p) whiter than snow.

(o) Most merciful Lord thou wilt (as I see in the spirit of prophecy) sprinkle me, and all men with thy blood from the Cross, where they shall give thee vinegar about hyssop to drink (Ioan. 9.) (p) by which washing I shall be clean from sin, and become in time pure, yea whiter than snow. A figure of this hyssop was observed in Moyses' Law. Num. 16. signifying the lively heat of Christ's infinite charity.

10 To (q) my hearing thou shalt give joy and gladness, and (r) the bones humbled shall rejoice.

(q) When mine affections shall be clean purged, I shall take singular great delight to hear of thee, (r) and all my powers of mind and body, which are now afflicted, shall rejoice.

11 (s) Turn away thy face from my sins: and wipe away all mine iniquities.

(s) Leave off thy cogitation of punishing, to which purpose first take away mine iniquities, for otherwise if they remain, God's justice cannot but punish them.

12 (t) Create a clean heart in me, o God: and renew a right spirit in my (v) bowels.

(t) Create in me new grace, whereby my heart shall be pure. So S. Paul calleth a just soul a new creature, Galat. 6. v. 15. (v) In my inward thoughts.

13 Cast me not away from thy face: and thy Holy spirit (w) take not from me.

(w) Suffer me not so to fall again, that thy grace depart from me.

14 Render unto me (x) the joy of thy salvation? And (y) confirm me with the principal spirit.

(x) Which I had before my fall, of Christ promised of my seed, and alter not the same for my sins. David also and other penitents pray here, that God will restore unto them the joy, which they had in the state of grace, of eternal salvation promised. (y) Confirm & conserve in me hereafter a strong, constant, and willing spirit to persevere.

15 I (z) will teach the unjust thy ways: and the impious shall be converted to thee.

(z) No way can a penitent better shew himself grateful to God, for remission of his sins, than by instructing, exhorting, & persuading other sinners to repentance, to leave their former ill ways, and turn to God.

16 Deliver me (a) from bloods, o God, the God of my salvation: and my tongue shall exult thy justice.

(a) From the guilt and punishment of murder, causing Urias and others with him to be slain. Other penitents pray to be delivered from what sins soever they have committed, by shedding blood, or other wrongs & injuries, promising to praise God's justice, in offering and giving grace, according to his promise to sinners, that they may repent.

17 Lord thou (b) wilt open my lips: & my mouth shall shew forth thy praise.

(b) Thou, o God, first stirring me up, opening my lips, which of myself I cannot do, then my tongue and mouth will praise thee.

18 Because if thou (c) wouldest have had sacrifice, I had verily given it: with holocausts thou wilt (d) not be delighted.

(c) If thou wouldest especially legal sacrifice, I would easily have offered great store: (d) but the best of that kind is not sufficient:

19 A sacrifice to God is (e) an afflicted spirit: a contrite and humbled heart, o God, thou wilt not despise.

(e) true contrition of heart pleaseth thee far better.

20 Deal favourably, o Lord, in thy good will (f) with Sion: that the walls of Jerusalem may be built up.

(f) After a penitent hath remission of his own sins, he must pray for the whole Church.

21 (g) Then shall thou accept sacrifice of (h) justice,

(i) oblations, & (k) holocausts: (l) then shall they lay calves upon thine altar.

(g) The Church prospering, her faithful children shall offer (h) the sacrifice of justice, rendering to every one that is due; (i) also free offerings without obligation, (k) yea holocausts, which is the chiefest, (l) calves, and like hosts upon the altar, according to the state of the old law: but in the law of Christ, the most B. Sacrifice by him instituted.

ANNOTATIONS.
PSALM L.

[1] Temporal punishment is due after remission of sins.

[2] Custom of sin maketh more proneness to fall again.

2. When Nathan came to David.] As Nathan denouncing to David that our Lord had (upon his repentance and confession) taken away his sin [1], added nevertheless, that because he had made the enemies of God to blaspheme, his son should die: so David knowing that more was required than only confession, for that the bond of satisfaction remained after his sins were remitted, persisted in penance, praying, lamenting, and beseeching God according to his great and manifold mercies, to take away his iniquity, albeit the prophet Nathan had now told him, that our Lord had taken away his sin, because there yet remained temporal pain due for the same. He prayeth also v. 4. that God will, wash him more amply, from his iniquity, and cleanse him from his sin. [2] For albeit the gilt of mortal sin be washed and taken away, yet besides temporal punishment that is due, the soul that was so polluted, needeth to be washed, and cleansed from the evil habit, or proneness to fall again, gotten by the former custom, or delectation in sin.

◦Concupiscence remaineth after original sin.

7. I was conceived in iniquities.] Another reason why sinners after remission of all mortal sins◦, need to be washed, and cleansed, is, because being born in original sin, after remission thereof, there remaineth concupiscence, that striveth against virtue, and inclineth to sin, from which we must pray, and labour to be more and more washed and cleansed.

◦Spiritual sacrifice preferred before external.

19. Sacrifice.] Holy Scriptures make often comparison between two kinds of sacrifices◦, preferring internal before external, as more grateful to God. And of spiritual sacrifices, this of a contrite spirit is first in order, and maketh the way to the sacrifice of justice, because justice presupposeth repentance, and finally succeedeth sacrifice of praise, and thanks-giving.

CHAPTER LI.

Holy David inveigheth against wicked Doeg a traitor, 7. prophesieth his ruin, 10. and his own exaltation. [1]

[1] David's invective against Doeg.
The 8. key.

Unto the end, understanding to David, 2 When Doeg (a) the Idumeite came and told Saul: David is come into the house of (b) Achimelech. [1]

(a) Of the race of Esau, half a Jew, but either an Infidel, or fautor of Infidels, a spy for Saul, a persecutor of David, & a murderer of Innocents. 1. Reg. 22. v. 9. 18. (b) High Priest, slain with 84. more Priests and others, because they were supposed to favour David. ibidem. [1] (1. Reg. 22.)

3 Why doest thou (c) glory in malice, which are mighty in iniquity?

(c) Thou persecutor Doeg, why art thou so malicious, to abuse thy credit with King Saul, to the murdering of innocents?

4 All the day hath thy tongue thought injustice: as a sharp razor thou (d) hast done guile.

(d) Playing the part of a spy, in betraying to Saul, that I was with Achimelech?

5 Thou hast loved malice more than benignity: (e) iniquity rather than to speak equity.

(e) Though he told a truth, yet it was iniquity to betray innocents.

6 Thou hast loved all words of precipitation, a deceitful tongue. 7 Therefore will God destroy thee for ever, he will (f) pluck thee out, & remove thee out of thy tabernacle: & (g) thy root out of the land of the living.

(f) Thou shalt utterly be destroyed, (g) & all thy race.

8 The just shall see, and fear, and shall laugh at him, and they shall say: 9 Behold the man, that hath not put God for his helper. But hath hoped in the multitude of his riches, and hath (h) prevailed in his vanity.

(h) for a short time in this world.

10 But I as (i) a fruitful olive tree in the house of God, have hoped in the mercy of God for ever: and for ever and ever.

(i) David prophesieth his own exaltation, and conservation of his seed in the Kingdom of Israel.

11 I will (k) confess to thee for ever, because thou hast done it: and I will expect thy (l) name, because it is good in the sight of thy Saints.

(k) Sing praise & thanks to thee. (l) Thy Goodness, which agreeth to thy name.

CHAPTER LII.

As in the thirteenth Psalm, Christ's incarnation is prophesied, after that sin abounded in the world: so here is foreshewed that after general wickedness, 5. Christ will come to judge the bad, 7. and deliver the good. [1]

[1] The general Judgement.
The 9. key.

Unto the end, for (a) Maeleth, (b) understandings of David. The fool hath said in his heart: There is no God.

(a) Weakness, or mourning. (b) S. Augustin expoundeth this Psalm as an instruction to those that suffer persecution and injuries, especially near the end of the world.

2 They are corrupt, and become abominable in iniquities: there is not that doth good. 3 God hath looked forth from heaven, upon the children of men: to see if there be that understandeth, or seeketh after God. 4 All have declined, they are become unprofitable together: there is not that doth good, no there is not one. 5 Shall they not all know that work iniquity, that devour my people as food of bread? 6 God they have not invocated: there have they trembled for fear, where no fear was. Because God hath (c) dissipated the bones of them (d) that please men: they are confounded, because God hath despised them.

(c) God will overthrow all the counsels and forces (d) of worldly politics.

7 (e) Who will give out of Sion the salvation of Israel? When God shall convert the captivity of his people: Jacob shall rejoice, and Israel shall be glad.

(e) The true Church afflicted desireth Christ's coming to deliver the oppressed.

CHAPTER LIII.

David in distress cryeth to God for help, 6. Confidently trusting therein, 8. and promising sacrifice of thanks-giving. [1]

[1] A prayer in distress.
The 7. key.

Unto (a) the end, (b) in songs^ understanding for David

(a) Though historically this Psalm (b) was sung by David the author thereof, shewing how he prayed in danger, and rendered thanks for his delivery,

2 when the Zipheites were come, and said to Saul: (c) Is not David hid with us? [1]

(c) when upon notice given that he abode in the mountains, Saul straitly besieged him, with a great army, but the Philistiims invading the country, Saul was forced to leave David, and to turn his forces against them, 1. Reg. 23. yet it pertaineth also literally to all just men in distress, especially to the Church of Christ, praying in like dangers, and God by his like providence delivering his servants in extremities.[1] 1. Reg. c. 23. & 26.

3 O God save me (d) in thy name: and in thy strength (e) judge me.

(d) For the glory of thy name (e) for the justness of my cause defend me.

4 O God hear my prayer with thine ears: receive the words of my mouth. 5 Because (f) strangers have risen up against me, & the strong have sought my soul: and they have not set God before their eyes.

(f) Barbarous highland men have betrayed the place of mine abode to the persecuters.

6 For (g) behold God helpeth me: and our Lord is the receiver of my soul.

(g) But I fear them not, because I am in God's protection.

7 (h) Turn away the evils of mine enemies: and in (i) thy truth destroy them.

(h) A just prayer, that God will turn intended mischief upon the devisers' heads, (i) according to his promise, that he will defend the innocent.

8 (k) I will voluntarily sacrifice to thee, and (l) will confess to thy name o Lord, because it is good:

(k) Offering voluntary sacrifice, more than is commanded. (l) And praise thee, o God.

9 (m) Because thou hast delivered me out of all tribulation: and (n) mine eye hath looked down upon mine enemies.

(m) As I am bound (n) I rejoice in thy just judgements against the wicked.

CHAPTER LIV.

The Prophet (as well in his own, as other just men's person) describeth great calamities suffered, 10. prayeth against the wicked, 13. lamenting especially that those which profess friendship, are adversaries, 17. and declareth God's providence in protecting the good, and destroying the bad.[1]

[1] God's providence towards the good and bad. The 3. key.

Unto (a) the end (b) in songs, (c) understanding to David.

(a) A song as well for King David himself, as others of all times (b) to sing (c) and consider God's providence, in suffering one man to afflict another in this life.

2 Hear my prayer, o God, despise not my petition. 3 Attend to me and hear me. 4 I am made sorrowful in my (d) exercise: and am troubled at the voice of the enemy: and at the tribulation of the sinner. Because they have (e) wrested iniquities upon me: & (f) in anger they were troublesome to me.

(d) This life is a warfare, and a continual combat. (e) Calumniated me, (f) and persecuted me in great fury.

5 My heart is troubled in me: & (g) the fear of death is fallen upon me.

(g) So inwardly afflicted, as if death were at hand.

6 Fear and trembling are come upon me: and (h) darkness hath covered me.

(h) I have scarce sense, or discourse of reason, being almost overwhelmed with trouble.

7 And I said: (i) Who will give me wings as of a dove, and I will fly: and rest?

(i) Would God I could fly, that in the simplicity of a dove, I might speedily part away from these afflictions.

8 (k) Lo I have gone far flying away: and I abode in the wilderness.

(k) I have fled so far as I could from troubles:

9 I (l) expected him, that (m) saved me from (n) pusillanimity of spirit, and (o) tempest.

(l) For the rest I remitted to God's will and good pleasure, (m) and he suffered me not to be overthrown, (n) though I am weak, (o) and the tentations are great.

10 (p) Precipitate, o Lord, and (q) divide their tongues: because I have seen (r) iniquity, and (s) contradiction in the city.

(p) O God abate the pride of arrogant persecuters, (q) suffer them not to agree amongst themselves. (r) They are full of all iniquity, (s) they have also contentions among themselves, turn the same to our good.

11 Day and night shall iniquity compass it upon the walls thereof, and (t) labour in the midst thereof, and (v) injustice.

(t) With their continual great iniquity, they have their troubles, (v) but leave not their injustice.

12 And there hath not ceased out of the streets thereof (w) usury and guile.

(w) They are still usurers, and deceitful oppressors of the poor.

13 For (x) if mine enemy had spoken evil to me, I would verily have born it. And if he that hated me had spoken great things upon me: I would perhaps have hid myself from him.

(x) It is a greater grief to suffer injuries of those that seem to be friends.

14 But (y) thou a man of the same mind: my (z) guide, and my familiar.

(y) A man that was, or seemed of the same mind, faith, and religion, (z) whom I so trusted, that I would have gone, whithersoever he should have led me.

15 Which didest (a) take sweet meats together with me: in the (b) house of God we walked with consent.

(a) Thou that didst participate the same holy sacraments with me, (b) in the Catholic Church.

16 Let (c) death come upon them: and let them go down quick into hell. Because there is wickedness in their habitations, in (d) the midst of them.

(c) As Core & his complices: spoken of just zeal, not of desire to revenge: verified in those that sin wittingly and knowing, for they descend, as it were, alive into hell. (d) The whole crew of the wicked conspire in iniquity.

17 But I have cried to God, and our Lord will save me.

18 In (e) the evening, and morning, & at midday, I will [1] speak, and declare, and he will hear my voice.

(e) The Prophet alludeth to three more specially appointed hours of Divine service, the daily sacrifice at morning, and evening, and other sacrifices commonly about midday. Which also are the three principal times of Divine Service in the Church of Christ: Matins, Evensong, and the Sacrifice of Mass. Which Eutymius and other Grecians call Liturgiam. S. Clement also (li. 7. c. 25. Apost. Instit.) testifieth that the Apostles ordained three set hours of common prayer every day. [1] * or pray

19 He will redeem my soul in peace from them, that approach to me: because among many (f) they were with me.

(f) Many enemies combined together approached unto me, to overthrow me.

20 God will hear, and he (g) which is before the worlds will humble them.

(g) Eternal God.

21 For there is (h) no change with them, & they feared not God: he hath stretched forth his hand in repaying.

(h) They will never repent of their wickedness.

22 They have contaminated his testament, they are (i) divided by the wrath of his countenance; and (k) his heart hath approached. (l) His words are made softer than oil: and (m) the same are darts.

(i) They harden their hearts against his threatened wrath: (k) but God's providence illuminateth others to know and teach the truth, when it is impugned or contemned. (l) God's words, which in themselves are meek and sweet, (m) are hard to the incredulous, & as darts that wound them. Christ said (Ioan. 6.) Unless one eat my flesh, & drink my blood, he shall not have life in him, which the Capharnaites not understanding said one to another: This is a hard speech, who can abide it? Which S. Augustin here saith was the first heresy against our Saviour's preaching. It was not hard to S. Peter, who in the name of the rest, answered, that Christ had the words of eternal life. He yet understood not the secret of our Lord's speech, but he piously believed that the words were good, which he understood not.

23 (n) Cast thy care upon our Lord: and he will nourish thee: he will not give (o) fluctuation to the just for ever.

(n) Therefore in all doubts of doctrine, in all distresses of persecution, and other difficulties which surpass thy weakness, cast thy care upon our Lord, and he will nourish thee. (o) He will not suffer the just to remain always in fluctuation, that is, in doubtful, dangerous, and wavering thoughts or perplexities, as when a ship is tossed in the waves of the sea, but will give quiet repose of mind, as in a sure haven without danger of drowning.

24 But thou, o God, wilt bring (p) them down into the pit of destruction. (q) Bloody and deceitful men shall not live half their days, but I will hope in thee, o Lord.

(p) Contrarywise the wicked and obstinate shall fall into destruction. (q) Often or for most part blood-suckers die before the course of nature requireth, as Saul, Absalom, Achitophel, Achab, Jezabel, and the like.

CHAPTER LV.

David being in danger before Achis King of Geth, confidently imploreth God's help, against the great malice and power of his enemies; 8. foresheweth their ruin, his own exaltation, 12. and offereth praises and thanks. [1]

[1] David's prayer in danger.
The 8. key.

Unto (a) the end, (b) for a people, that is made far from the Saints, David in (c) the inscription of the title, (d) when the foreigners held him in Geth. [1]

(a) This Psalm pertaineth also to future times, (b) for the use of any just persons, or people, that are against their will separated from the public divine Service of holy Church: (c) most worthy to be noted with title, for perpetual memory, (d) made by David when the Philistiims detected him to their King in Geth. [1] 1. Reg. 12. v. 12.

2 Have mercy on me, o God, because (e) man hath trodden upon me: (f) all the day impugning he hath afflicted me.

(e) Now one sort of ill disposed men, now another, (f) never cease to seek my destruction.

3 Mine enemies have trodden upon me all the day: because they are (g) many that war against me.

(g) Saul with his great army, the Philistiims, & other strangers, some in manifest hostility, others detecting and betraying me to mine adversaries. So all that live godly in Christ have many enemies visible and invisible.

4 From (h) the height of the day I shall fear: (i) but I will trust in thee.

(h) Of these most eminent great dangers I am indeed afeared, (i) but so that my trust and assured confidence is in thee, o God.

5 In God I will praise (k) my words, in God have I hoped: I will not fear what flesh may do to me.

(k) Words and promises made to me, or the good which I speak or do by God's grace.

6 All the day did they (l) detest my words; against me (m) all their cogitations are unto evil.

(l) They calumniate whatsoever I say, (m) wrestling all my words to evil sense.

7 They will (n) inhabit and keep secret: they will observe my heel. As they have expected (o) my soul,

(n) They meet together, and secretly conspire to entrap me or catch me tripping. (o) To take my life:

8 (p) for nothing shalt thou save them: (q) in wrath thou wilt break peoples. O God,

(p) for this their vain purpose to destroy me, thou wilt save them, as they deserve, that is, (q) thou wilt break them in pieces.

9 I have shewed my life to thee: thou hast set my tears in thy sight. As also in thy promise: 10 then shall mine enemies be turned backward. In what day soever I shall invocate thee: lo I have known that thou art my God. 11 In God I will praise (r) the word, in our Lord will I praise thee saying: I have hoped in God, I will not fear what man can do to me.

(r) I will always gratefully acknowledge thy promises, and sayings, for they are assured.

12 In me, o God (s) are thy vows, which I will render, praises to thee.

(s) I have purposed and vowed to offer sacrifice of praise, and by thy help will perform it.

13 Because thou hast delivered my soul from death, and my feet from falling: that I may (t) please before God, in (v) the light of the living.

(t) Do that pleaseth God, (v) in true faith and pious works.

CHAPTER LVI.

The Prophet prayeth in tribulation, 4. testifieth God's help, 6. praiseth his greatness: 8. promising and inviting all nations to praise him. [1]

[1] David's great patience.
The 8. key.

Unto (a) the end, (b) destroy not, to David in (c) the inscription of the title, (d) when he fled from the face of Saul into the cave. [1]

(a) The heroical facts of David are for example to all Christians. (b) Innocent David having opportunity to kill his unjust persecutor, obeyed the motion of God, suggesting unto him, not to destroy his enemy, contrary to the counsel of his friends: (c) a thing most worthy to be recorded for perpetual memory, (d) being in so great and unjust trouble, as to lie in the cave of a mountain, yet spared to kill, or hurt him, that drive him into such straits. See the history 1. Reg. 24. [1] 1. Reg. 22. 24.

2 Have mercy on me, o God, have mercy on me: because my soul hath trusted in thee. And I will hope in the shadow of thy wings, until iniquity pass. 3 I will cry to God the highest: God that hath done me good. 4 He sent (e) from heaven, and delivered me: he hath given into (f) reproach them that trod upon me. God hath sent his mercy and his truth,

(e) Extraordinary divine help, passing man's power. (f) It fell reproachfully to Saul, that David might have slain him if he would, yet did neither hurt him, nor insult upon him, but meekly and piously admonished him of his error, and injurious persecution.

5 and hath delivered my (g) soul out of the midst of (h) lions' whelps: I slept troubled. The sons of men, their (i) teeth are weapons and arrows: and their (k) tongue a sharp sword.

(g) My life (h) from most mighty and ravenous persecuters. (i) Though they have not lion's natural teeth, yet they exercise cruelty by artificial weapons, (k) and with their cruel tongues incite their followers to the same fury. 1. Reg. 22. v. 16.

6 Be exalted above the heavens, o God: and thy glory upon all the earth. 7 They prepared a snare for my feet: and bowed down my soul. They (l) digged a pit before my face: and they are fallen into it.

(l) Saul endeavoured many ways to overthrow David, amongst other means provoked him to set upon the Philistiims, thinking they should have slain him. 1. Reg. 18. v. 17. but the same Philistiims overthrew Saul. 1. Reg. 31.

8 My heart is ready, o God, my heart is ready: I will sing, and say [1] a Psalm.

[1] Psalms more in use with Christian Gentiles, than they were with the Jews. See page. 12.

9 Arise my glory, arise psalter and harp: I will arise early. 10 I will confess to thee among (m) peoples, o Lord: and I will say a Psalm to thee among (n) the Gentiles.

(m n) God's benefits bestowed upon David, and upon faithful Christians prefigured by him, are for ever to be praised by all people's and nations. (n) ↑

11 Because thy mercy is magnified even to the heavens, and thy truth even to the clouds. 12 Be exalted above the heavens o God: and thy glory upon all the earth.

CHAPTER LVII.

Holy David inveigheth against dissembling wicked men: 7. describeth their manifold punishment, 11. wherein the just shall be comforted. [1]

[1] God's providence in suffering evil.
The 3. key.

Unto (a) the end, (b) destroy not, to David, in (c) the inscription of the title.

(a) This Psalm was made upon the same occasion, and to the same purpose as the former, (b) to exhort the just and innocent to patience, (c) by David's memorable example.

2 If (d) in very deed you speak justice: judge right things ye sons of men.

(d) Few are so wicked, but they speak and pretend just things:

3 For in (e) the heart you work iniquities: in the earth your (f) hands forge injustice.

(e) But neither think well, (f) nor do well, but both contrary, which feigned sanctity is double iniquity.

4 (g) Sinners are alienated from the matrice, they have erred from the womb: they have spoken false things.

(g) These wicked sinners that flatter and incite King Saul, seem to have spent all their life from their infancy in malice.

5 They have fury according to the similitude of (h) a serpent: as of (i) the asp that is deaf, and stoppeth his ears.

(h) Their fury is unquiet, till they may wound the innocent with their poisonful sting, (i) neither will they harken to good admonitions, but stop their ears like an asp, that layeth one ear close to the ground, & stoppeth the other with his tail.

6 Which will not hear the voice of the enchanters, and of the sorcerer enchanting wisely. 7 God shall break their (k) teeth in their mouth, the (l) cheek-tooth of the lions, our Lord will break in pieces.

(k) But God will break their cruel force, (l) though it seemeth most strong and insuperable.

8 They shall come to nothing as water running down: he hath (m) bent his bow till they be weakened.

(m) God's just determination of punishing the wicked still remaineth bent and ready, though execution be some while deferred.

9 As (n) wax that melteth, shall they be taken away: (o) fire hath fallen on them, and they have not seen the sun.

(n) That force and power which is now invincible, hard and strong like a lion's strongest teeth, shall then be as impotent and soft as wax: (o) God's wrath, like fire, the most forcible element, shall fall upon them, and they shall be cast into utter darkness, deprived of the sun and all comfortable light.

10 Before your (p) thorns did understand the old briar: as living so in wrath he swalloweth them.

(p) Before their malice can bring to effect the great mischiefs which they plot and purpose, God suddenly cutteth them off, before they fully understand of either sickness or death, casteth them as it were alive into hell.

11 The just (q) shall rejoice when he shall see revenge: he shall wash his hands in the blood of a sinner.

(q) The just rejoice in the punishment of the wicked for three causes, first in zeal of justice, conforming his will and mind to God's judgement; secondly, for that himself through God's mercy hath escaped that terrible damnation; thirdly, for that he is now delivered from molestation, and continual tribulation.

12 And man shall say: If certes there be fruit to the just: (r) there is a God certes judging them on the earth.

(r) The just seeing, or by faith knowing what punishment remaineth for the wicked, is thereby assured that the good shall reap fruit for his well-doing, and that in the mean time God ruleth and judgeth on the earth, though as yet it appeareth not so evidently.

CHAPTER LVIII.

Holy David (being besieged in his own house by men sent to kill him) confidently prayeth God to deliver him, 6. and all faithful nations in like danger: 7. and praiseth God. [1]

[1] Another prayer of David in danger.
The 8. key.

Unto the end, destroy not, to David in the inscription of the title, (a) when Saul sent, and watched his house to kill him. [1]

(a) King Saul having thrice attempted in vain to kill David (1. Reg. 18. v. 11. &c. 19. v. 9.) sent some of his guard to fetch him, from his own house, that he might be slain: but God moved the mind of Michol, to admonish him of the danger and to help him away in safety, though Saul thought she would have been a scandal unto him (or cause of ruin) by the hands of the Philistians. 1. Reg. 18. v. 21. Upon which occasion David made this Psalm. As he also made others, for perpetual memory of God's like benefits, in delivering him in imminent dangers, when Saul sent three troops of sergeants to kill him, and followed them himself. 1. Reg. 19. v. 20. likewise when he was known and bewrayed before Achis King of Geth. 1. Reg. 21. also in Ceila, in the deserts of Ziph, and of Maon, c. 23. in Engaddi, c. 24. in Hachila, c. 26. and again amongst the Philistians, c. 27. and 30.[1] 1. Reg. 19.

2 Deliver me from mine enemies, o my God: and from them that rise up against me defend me. 3 Deliver me from them that work iniquity: and from bloody men save me. 4 Because lo they (b) have taken my soul: the strong have fallen violently upon me.

(b) They have so straitly besieged me, that it is now in their hands to take away my life.

5 Neither is it mine iniquity, nor my sin, o Lord: (c) without iniquity have I run, and gone directly.

(c) Of my part I have committed no fault against mine enemies, for which they can have any just cause to persecute me.

6 Rise up to meet me, and see: and thou, o Lord, the God of powers, God of Israel, attend to visit (d) all nations: have (e) no mercy on all that work iniquity.

(d) The Prophet foreseeing in spirit, that the Catholic Church shall be unjustly persecuted, prayeth, and teacheth others to pray, that God will mercifully visit his faithful people of all nations: (e) and not spare obstinate persecuters.

7 They will return (f) at evening: and they shall suffer famine (g) as dogs, and shall compass the city.

(f) Persecuters labouring how much, or how long soever, shall at night, that his, in the end of all their wicked endeavours be unsatisfied in their desires, (g) as hungry dogs that run hunting all the day, & night also, still seeking & not finding wherewith to fill their ravenous mouths and devouring bellies.

8 Behold they (h) will speak in their mouth, and a sword in their lips: (i) because who hath heard?

(h) They threaten and determine to use all cruelty, (i) as if there were no God, that heareth, and will punish it.

9 And thou, o Lord wilt scorn them: thou wilt bring to nought all the nations. 10 I will keep my strength to thee: (k) because thou art my receiver:

(k) Through God's grace the Church is still strong and the virtuous do persevere.

11 my God, thy mercy shall prevent me. 12 God will shew unto me concerning mine enemies, kill them not (l) lest sometime my peoples forget. Disperse them in thy strength: and (m) depose them^ my protector, o Lord.

(l) God suffereth afflictions to fall upon his servants, to keep them exercised, lest in prosperity they forget their duties to him. (m) Deprive them of power, that they may not do so much evil as they desire.

13 The sin of their mouth, the word of their lips: and let them be taken in their pride. And for (n) cursing and lying they shall be (o) talked of

(n) After that their iniquity is complete (o) they shall be accused and punished for their blasphemies and lies.

14 in consummation: in wrath of consummation and they shall not be. And they shall know that God will rule over Jacob: and over the ends of the earth.

15 They (p) shall be turned at evening, and shall suffer famine as dogs: & shall compass the city.

(p) As v. 7.

16 They shall be (q) dispersed to eat: and if they be not filled, they (r) will murmur also.

(q) They shall in vain seek oil for their lamps with the foolish virgins, repent with Judas, and finding no help, (r) shall continually blaspheme in hell.

17 But I will sing thy strength: and will exalt thy mercy in (s) the morning. Because thou art become my receiver, and my refuge in the day of my tribulation.

(s) In the resurrection.

18 My helper, I will sing to thee, because thou art God my receiver: my God, my mercy.

CHAPTER LIX.

King David after his own and the people's many tribulations, 8. rendereth thanks for their renowned victories, 11. achieved by God's only power.[1]

[1] King David's thanks for victories.
The 8. key.

Unto the end, for them (a) that shall be changed, in (b) the inscription of the title (c) to David himself, (d) for doctrine,

(a) The change of state from adversity to prosperity in the people of Israel, was a figure of the like change in the Church of Christ, (b) worthy to be remembered, (c) for the instruction (d) of God's beloved,

2 (e) when he set fire on Mesopotamia of Syria, and in Sobal, and Joab returned, and struck Idumaea in the valley of salt-pits twelve thousand.[1]

(e) as the same are more largely recorded in the books of Kings. [1] 2. Reg. 8. & 10. & 1. Paral. 18.

3 O God thou (f) hast repelled us, & hast destroyed us: thou wast angry (g) and hast had mercy on us.

(f) God suffereth his people to be afflicted, as well for their sins, as for exercise in virtue, (g) after sheweth his mercy in pardoning, and favour in advancing them.

4 Thou hast moved the earth, and hast troubled it: heal the breaches thereof, because it is moved. 5 Thou hast shewed unto thy people (h) hard things: thou hast made us drink the wine of compunction.

(h) Punishing sinners.

6 Thou hast (i) given a signification to them that fear thee: that they fly from the face of the bow.

(i) Warning them to amend.

7 That thy beloved (k) may be delivered, save me with thy right hand, and hear me.

(k) and then restoreth them to former good state.

8 God hath spoken in (l) his holy: I shall rejoice, and (m) shall divide Sichem: and shall measure the valley of tabernacles.

(l) God also as he hath promised by his holy oracle, (m) hath advanced King David in his temporal Kingdom, and doth much more advance him, and other elect in everlasting life.

9 Galaad is mine, and Manasses is mine: and Ephraim the strength of my head. 10 Juda my king: Moab (n) the pot of my hope. Into Edom I will (o) stretch out my shoe: the foreigners are subject to me.

(n) As a vessel for meaner uses. (o) Bring it under my dominion.

11 Who shall conduct me into a fenced city? Who shall conduct me even into Idumea? 12 Shall not thou, o God, (p) that hast expelled us: and (q) wilt not thou o God, go forth in our hosts?

(p) As God doth sometimes punish (q) so he also rewardeth.

13 Give us aid from tribulation: because man's salvation is vain. 14 In God we shall do (r) strength: and he shall bring to nothing them that afflict us.

(r) Strongly, with fortitude.

CHAPTER LX.

Faithful people of the whole earth pray, and acknowledge that God mercifully heareth their prayer. 6. Expect the eternal kingdom of Christ, in which they shall praise him for evermore.[1]

[1] A confident prayer for Christ's Incarnation.
The 5. key.

Unto the end, (a) in hymns to David.

(a) In songs of praise and thanks to God.

2 Hear, o God, my petition: attend to my prayer. 3 From (b) the ends of the earth I have cried to thee: whilst my heart was in anguish, thou (c) didst exalt me on a rock.

(b) From all coasts of the earth faithful people pray to God. (c) The Church builded upon an assured foundation, is exalted to great power and dignity.

4 Thou hast (d) conducted me, because thou art made my hope: a tower of strength from the face of the enemy.

(d) God conducteth, defendeth, and delivereth those that confidently trust in him.

5 I shall inhabit in (e) thy tabernacle for ever: I shall be protected in the covert of thy wings.

(e) In the Church, a place of assured protection.

6 Because thou my God hast heard my prayer: thou hast given inheritance to those that fear thy name.
7 Thou wilt add (f) days upon the days of the king: his years even unto the day of generation and generation.

(f) Christ's kingdom, the Church, perpetual to the end of this world, and eternal after the general Resurrection.

8 He is permanent for ever in the sight of God: his (g) mercy and (h) truth who shall require?

(g) Who is able to understand or explicate how great Christ's mercy is in redeeming us, (h) and his truth in performing his promised rewards?

9 So (i) will I say a Psalm to thy name for ever and ever: that I may render my vows (k) from day to day.

(i) For so inestimable benefits I will always praise thee with Psalms, Canticles, or other thanks in this life. (k) and eternally in the life to come.

CHAPTER LXI.

A just man encourageth his own soul to serve God in sincere humility, 9. exhorteth also all others to trust in God, not in false and worldly policy, or wealth, because God's power & mercy will render to every one as they deserve. [1]

[1] Exhortation to good life, in respect of reward or punishment.
The 7. key.

Unto the end, for (a) Idithun a Psalm of David.

(a) Directed to Idithun, one of the masters of music, to sing it, or to make tune for it.

2 Shall (b) not my soul be subject to God? For of him is my salvation.

(b) The wicked treating to ruinate others, David, or any just man, feareth them not, because his soul is subject to God.

3 For he is my God, and my saviour: my receiver, (c) I shall be moved no more.

(c) Therefore I firmly purpose never to be moved from God.

4 (d) How long set you violently upon a man: (e) you all do kill, as it were upon (f) a wall that is leaning, and a wall shaken.

(d) In vain do you mine adversaries still assault me, (e) though ye be all confederate to kill me, (f) supposing me to be like a ruinous or shaken wall, that is easily thrown down.

5 But (g) yet they thought to repel my price. (h) I ran in thirst: they (i) blessed with their mouth, and cursed with their heart.

(g) They think still to deprive me of my reward, the price of my labours and merits, (h) but I run so much more diligently, as thirsting after righteousness in this life, and glory in the next, to finish my course. (i) A most dangerous tentation, when after threats and cruelty, persecutors endeavour by sweet words and promises to persuade the just to fall into sin.

6 But yet my soul be thou subject to God: because my patience is from him. 7 Because he is my God, and my saviour: my helper (k) I shall not remove.

(k) I resolutely purpose not to yield to any tentation.

8 In God is my salvation, and my glory: the God of my help, and my hope is in God. 9 Hope in him (l) all ye the congregation of people: pour out your hearts before him: God is our helper for ever.

(l) God's faithful servants are not only constant themselves, but also exhort and persuade all others, as much as in them lieth, to serve God and trust in him.

10 But yet the children of men are vain, the children of men are (m) liars in balances: that they may deceive by vanity together.

(m) Using false weights they defraud one another.

11 Hope not in iniquity, and covet not robberies: if riches abound set not your heart upon them.
12 (n) Once hath God spoken, these (o) two things have I heard:

(n) God having once spoken it is most assured. (o) Two especial attributes of God.

13 That (p) power is God's, and (q) mercy, o Lord, is to thee: because thou wilt render to every one according to his works. [1]

(p) God is omnipotent, so that he can both reward and punish infinitely; (q) and Merciful, that he is ready to receive all sinners into his favour, if they will repent & turn unto him. [1] Mat. 16. Rom. 2. 1. Cor. 3. Gal. 6.

CHAPTER LXII.

David in banishment with great affection desireth to unite himself with God in meditation, 4. purposing and promising ever to praise him: 10. prophesieth the vain endeavours, and condemnation of his enemies and his own advancement. [1]

[1] David's devotion in banishment.
The 8. key.

A Psalm (a) of David when he was in the desert of Juda. [1]

(a) Holy David made this devout meditation when he was in the forest of Haret, or desert of Ziph. 1. Reg. 22. & 23. and could not come to the tabernacle of God, nor to Jerusalem, where he especially desired to be, in the inheritance of our Lord, which was to him a great affliction. As the like is now to Catholics, when they are put in close prison for their faith, or otherwise hindered, that they cannot be present at the most holy and daily Sacrifice. In which case we must supply as we may, this great loss, and comfort ourselves with this, or like Psalm, or prayer, saying: O God my God, to thee I watch. [1] Reg. 22.

2 O God my God to thee I watch, (b) from the morning light. (c) My soul hath thirsted to thee, (d) my flesh to thee very many ways.

(b) Even from the first dawning of the morning, (c) my soul thirsteth after thee, (d) yea also my very flesh, and whole body feeleth great pains, by this affliction of mind, and desireth relief and rest.

3 In a desert land, and inaccessible, and without water, (e) so in the holy have I appeared to thee, (f) that I might see thy strength, and thy glory.

(e) Being now in case that I cannot serve thee, o God, as I would, yet I exhibit myself present in spirit, before thy holy place, (f) meditating thy power, and thy glory.

4 Because (g) thy mercy is better than lives, my lips shall praise thee.

(g) This consolation in banishment from thy divine Service, is sweeter to me than many temporal lives, or any worldly prosperity.

5 (h) So will I bless thee in my life: and in thy name I will lift up my hands.

(h) for as the Passions of Christ abound in us (saith S. Paul. 2. Cor. 1.) so also by Christ our comfort aboundeth.

6 As with (i) marrow and fatness let my soul be filled: (k) and my mouth shall praise with lips of exultation.

(i) Replenish my soul, o God, with the aboundance of thy grace, (k) so shall I be more able to praise thee.

7 (l) If I have been mindful of thee upon my bed, (m) in the morning I will meditate on thee:

(l) Seeing in the night, also in my bed I meditate on thee; (m) I will more diligently do the same in the morning.

8 because thou hast been my helper. 9 And in the covert of thy wings I will rejoice, my soul hath cleaved after thee: thy right hand hath received me. 10 But (n) they in vain have sought my soul, (o) they shall enter into the inferior parts of the earth.

(n) My temporal and spiritual enemies: (o) and they shall be damned for their sins.

11 They (p) shall be delivered into the hands of the sword, they shall be (q) the portions of foxes.

(p) It happened literally to Saul, that he was slain in battle; which he made against his enemies (q) and his dead body was hung on a wall (1. Reg. 31.) exposed to wild beasts, or birds, though it was afterwards burnt and buried.

12 But (r) the king shall rejoice in God, all shall be praised that swear by him: because the mouth is stopped of those that speak wicked things.

(r) David was presently after Saul's death exalted to the Kingdom, in figure of Christ, whose name and glory was exalted, after the destruction of the Jews by Pagan Emperors.

CHAPTER LXIII.

A prayer of the just reposing their whole trust in God: 7. and rejoicing that the enemies' machinations are frustrate. [1]

[1] A confident prayer in tribulation.
The 7. key.

Unto the end, a Psalm of David. 2 Hear o God my prayer when I make petition: from the fear of my enemy deliver my soul. 3 Thou (a) hast protected me from the (b) assembly of the malignant: from the multitude of them that work iniquity.

(a) By example of thy former protection, (b) from the conspiracy of wicked men, I trust most assuredly in thy help.

4 Because they have sharpened their tongues as a sword: they have bent the bow a bitter thing, 5 that they may shoot in secrets at the immaculate.
6 Suddenly they will shoot at him, and will not fear: they (c) have confirmed to themselves a wicked word. They have talked to hide snares: they have said, Who shall see them?

(c) They are resolved to entrap me.

7 They have searched iniquities: they (d) have failed searching with scrutiny.

(d) But as they have failed, so they shall still fail, and be overreached in their bad counsels, as Achitophel. 2. Reg. 17.

8 Man shall come to a deep heart: and God shall be exalted. (e) Children's arrows are made their wounds:

(e) God hath chosen the weak of this world to confound the strong.

9 and their tongues are weakened against them. All that saw them (f) were troubled:

(f) Much marveled seeing the wicked so punished.

10 and every man feared. And they shewed forth the works of God: and they understood his doings. 11 The just shall rejoice in our Lord, and shall hope in him, & all the right of heart (g) shall be praised.

(g) The just shall be praised, for rightly serving God.

CHAPTER LXIV.

God is rightly praised in Sion and Jerusalem (in his Church only) for his benefits bestowed and promised, 8. unto which also in the time of grace all nations shall be called. [1]

[1] Conversion of Gentiles.
The 6. key.

To the end, a Psalm of David, (a) the Canticle of Jeremy, and Ezechiel, to the people of the transmigration, when they began to go forth.

(a) The seventy Interpreters seeing David here prophesy of the people's return from Babylon, added the names of Jeremy and Ezechiel, who being in that captivity prophesied the same more largely. As likewise these and other Prophets, foresaw in spirit, and more especially prophesied the going forth of all nations from Babylon, that is, forsaking Idolatry, and embracing true Religion in the Church of Christ, so S. Augustin, Eutymius, and others.

2 An hymn, o God, becometh thee (b) in Sion: & a vow shall be rendered to thee in Jerusalem.

(b) Not in Babylon, nor elsewhere, but only in the Church, praises and vows are grateful to God.

3 Hear my prayer: (c) all flesh shall come to thee.

(c) All nations shall know thee.

4 The words of the wicked (d) have prevailed upon us: and thou wilt be (e) propitious to our impieties.

(d) The wicked are insolent in threatening; (e) but thou mercifully pardoning our sins, they shall not hurt us.

5 (f) Blessed is he whom thou hast chosen and taken: he shall dwell in thy courts.

(f) They are happy to whom thou hast prepared grace and glory.

6 (g) We shall be replenished in the goods of thy house: holy is thy temple, (h) marvelous in equity. Hear us, o God our saviour, the hope of all the ends of the earth, and in the sea far.

(g) The voices of the faithful, rejoicing in the hope of eternal glory. Rom. 5. (h) Nothing polluted shall enter into heaven. Apo. 21.

7 Preparing (i) mountains in thy strength, girded with might:

(i) Thou which art all powerful, as appeareth by the huge mountains

8 which troublest (k) the depths of the sea, the sound of the waves thereof.

(k) seas, and other thy works.

9 The Gentiles shall (l) be troubled, and they that inhabit the borders shall be afraid of thy signs: (m) the out-goings of the morning and evening thou shalt delight.

(l) Thou wilt by thy omnipotent power move the hearts of obdurate men, and so convert innumerable of all nations to thee. (m) Thou wilt draw many to thee, with joy and gladness, from the uttermost coasts of the east and west.

10 Thou hast visited the earth, and hast inebriated it: thou hast multiplied to enrich it. The (n) river of God is replenished with waters, thou hast prepared their (o) meat: because (p) so is the preparation thereof.

(n) God wrought diverse miracles in waters (Gen. 7. Exo. 7. 14. 15. Iosue. 3. 4. Reg. 5. 6 &c.) (o) likewise in providing meat for his people (Exo. 16, 3. Reg. 17, 4. Reg. 4, 7. &c.) which were figures of Baptism, Eucharist, and other Sacraments of Christ, washing from sins, and augmenting grace, (p) so replenishing the Church with most sacred Mysteries.

11 Inebriate (q) her rivers, (r) multiply her fruits: in her drops she shall rejoice springing.

(q) Endowing the Apostles and other preachers with spiritual grace and learning, (r) continuing the succession of pastors to water and seed the faithful people.

12 Thou wilt (s) bless the crown of the year of thy goodness: (t) and thy fields shall be replenished with plenty.

(s) God blesseth the whole course, or circle of time, of the Church militant in this world, (t) and the crown, or happy end of every just person's life.

13 The (v) beautiful places of the desert shall be fat: and the (w) little hills shall be girded about with exultation.

(v) Even those which before had only a shew of beauty, but indeed were barren, shall yield aboundant fruit. (w) Those which are more eminent shall particularly rejoice in their own and other's spiritual progress in virtue.

14 The (x) rams of the sheep are clothed, and (y) the valleys shall abound with corn: (z) they will cry, yea they will say an hymn.

(x) The principal pastors shall in proportion rejoice above the rest for the grace and glory of all their flock. (y) The subjects also and inferior people shall be satiate with their happy lot. (z) All together, prelates and people, higher and lower shall with uniform voice sing praises to God, and perpetual hymns.

ANNOTATIONS.
PSALM LXIV.

[1] Perpetuity of the Church.

[2] S. Aug. Eutym.

[3] Reward of the just.

[4] Saints' crowns are of God's benignity.

[5] The Corones of our Lord, and our Lady.

12. God will bless the crown.] Under the Allegory of the land of Jury [1], whereunto the people of God were to be restored after their captivity in Babylon, the Psalmist here prophesieth greater things, than can be verified of the temporal state of the Jews [2], that the militant Church, shall still be blessed from the beginning to the end, yielding expected fruit; and all the just, that persevere to the end of their lives, shall receive most happy and glorious rewards of their labours [3]. As Saint Paul after his meritorious travails confidently expected his glorious reward, when he said (2. Tim. 4.) I have fought a good fight, I have consummate my course, I have kept my faith. Concerning the rest, there is laid up for me, a Crown of justice [4], which our Lord will render to me in that day, a just Judge. And not only to me, but to them also that love his coming. And this is called the crown of the year of God's benignity, because God of his own benignity, without man's former desert giveth grace, and in the end for merit following, giveth a crown of glory. So our Blessed Saviour according to his fullness of grace, which was in his soul, and infinite merit, received a crown of glory, in the consummation of his temporal life, after the space of thirty three years. And our Blessed Lady the mother of God, received an answerable crown to her excellent grace and merits, in the consummation of her life, at the end of sixty three years. In memory of which numbers of years, devout men have piously instituted certain forms of prayers, called the Crowns, or Corones of our Saviour [5], and of our Lady.

CHAPTER LXV.

The prophet inviteth all men to praise God for his marvelous works, and benefits done to the Jews. 7. Who being ungrateful, 8. Gentiles are called, 16. and bring forth better fruit. [1]

[1] Gentiles succeed the Jews.
The 6. key.

Unto the end, a Canticle (a) of resurrection. Make ye (b) jubilation to God all the earth,

(a) Mystical resurrection, Gentiles succeeding in place of the Jews. (b) Shew your internal joy by external words and deeds.

2 say a Psalm to his name: give glory to his praise.
3 Say ye to God: (c) How terrible are thy works, o Lord! In the multitude of thy strength thine enemies (d) shall lie to thee.

(c) In drowning the world, in confounding the tongues in Babel, in burning Sodom and Gomorrha with brimstone, in plaguing the Aegyptians, in drowning Pharao and his whole army in the red sea; in destroying the Chananites and other infidels, in punishing the ten tribes, and afterwards the other two by captivity, & innumerable other punishments, all for sins, (d) for which even the wicked, though not sincerely converted, yet of servile fear, feigned and falsely promised to amend, but performed it not: as Pharao afflicted with plagues, was forced to promise liberty to the children of Israel, which he afterwards denied.

4 Let all the earth adore thee, and sing to thee: let it sing a Psalm to thy name. 5 Come ye, and see the works of God: terrible in counsels over the children of men. 6 Who turneth (e) the sea into dry land, in (f) the river they shall pass on foot, (g) there we shall rejoice in him.

(e) The red sea, (f) when Iosue brought the people over Iordan, (g) in remembering and reciting these singular benefits.

7 Who ruleth in his strength for ever^ his eyes look upon the gentiles: (h) they that exasperate him let them (i) not be exalted in themselves.

(h) God's chosen people the Jews did often exasperate God by their ingratitude, murmuring, and other sins: whom the Prophet therefore admonished, (i) not to be proud, lest they be subdued and brought low.

8 Ye (k) Gentiles bless our God: and make the voice of his praise heard.

(k) By way of invitation the Psalmist prophesieth the conversion of Gentiles.

9 Who hath put (l) my soul in life: and hath not given my feet to be moved.

(l) The voice of the whole Church: confessing God's providence and protection, that she never faileth; for the Jews falling from Christ the Gentiles believed in him; and some nations or countries falling from Religion, others are converted.

10 Because thou (m) hast proved us, o God: by fire thou hast tried us, as silver is tried.

(m) God suffereth his Church to be persecuted with all kinds of tribulation, as some are here recited.

11 Thou hast brought us into a snare, thou hast laid tribulations on our back: thou hast set men upon our heads. 12 (n) We have passed through fire and water: and thou hast brought us out into refreshing.

(n) But through God's assistance his servants pass through, and overcome all tentations.

13 I will go into thy house with (o) holocausts: I will render thee (p) my vows:

(o) Sacrifice of thanks, (p) and voluntary vows,

14 which my lips have distinguished. And (q) my mouth hath spoken in my tribulation.

(q) that which any promiseth to God in tribulation, they must perform accordingly.

15 (r) Holocausts with marrow will I offer to thee, with incense of rams: I will offer to thee oxen with buck goats.

(r) These were the best external sacrifices of the old law:

16 (s) Come ye, hear, and I will tell all ye that fear God, what great things he hath done for my soul.

(s) But both then and now the internal sacrifices of contrite heart, of justice, and of divine praise best please God.

17 To him have I cried with my mouth, and have exulted (t) under my tongue.

(t) From the heart, which is under the tongue, and directeth the tongue what to speak.

18 (v) If I have beheld iniquity in my heart, our Lord will not hear.

(v) Whosoever will be heard in prayer, must repent of his sins.

19 Therefore hath God heard, and hath attended to the voice of my petition. 20 Blessed be God who hath not removed my prayer, and his mercy from me.

CHAPTER LXVI.

The prophet prayeth for (and withal foresheweth) the propagation of the Church of Christ. [1]

[1] Propagation of the Church.
The 6. key.

Unto the end, in hymns, a Psalm (a) of Canticle to David.

(a) This Psalm beginning to be sung by voices, instruments were adjoined.

2 God (b) have mercy upon us, and (c) bless us: (d) illuminate his countenance upon us, and (e) have mercy on us.

(b) God first remit our sins: (c) then give us thy manifold graces, (d) grant faith and repentance, (e) and so forgiveness of sins.

3 That we may know thy way upon earth: in all nations thy salvation. 4 Let peoples, o God, confess to thee: (f) let all peoples confess to thee.

(f) All nations shall be converted.

5 Let nations be glad & rejoice: because thou judgest peoples in equity, and the nations in earth thou doest direct. 6 Let peoples, o God, confess to thee, let all peoples confess to thee: 7 the earth hath yielded her fruit. (g) God, (h) our God bless us,

(g) God the Father, (h) God the Son,

8 (i) God bless us: and let all the ends of the earth fear him.

(i) God the Holy Ghost, save the people of all nations, by Evangelical preaching of thee, the most Blessed Trinity.

CHAPTER LXVII.

Notwithstanding great persecutions the Church prospereth. 10. Especially in the new testament, by Apostolical function, 18. ministry of Angels, Christ's Ascension, coming of the Holy Ghost, 31. confirming the faithful, repressing the insolent, and converting many. 35. For all which the prophet inviteth all men to praise God. [1]

[1] The Church still conserved.
The 6. key.

Unto the end, a Psalm of Canticle, to David himself. 2 Let (a) God arise, and let his enemies be dispersed, and let them that hate him (b) fly from his face.

(a) In manner of praying that God will vouchsafe to defend the Church, the Psalmist prophesieth that God will arise, (b) and the enemies shall fly away, not daring to abide the combat.

3 As smoke vanisheth, let them vanish away: as wax melteth at the presence of fire, so let sinners perish at the presence of God. 4 And (c) let the just make merry, and rejoice in the sight of God: and let them be delighted in mirth.

(c) As God is terrible to the wicked: so he is comfortable to the just.

5 Sing to God, say a Psalm to his name: (d) make way to him, who (e) mounteth upon the west, (f) Lord is his name. Rejoice ye in his sight, they shall be troubled at the presence of him:

(d) Resist not God's inspiration, but receive it with joy and thanks. (e) Who triumpheth over death (f) God is Lord, not only of these or those nations, countries or other creatures, but absolutely and universally of all.

6 the father of orphans, and judge of widows. God in his (g) holy place:

(g) That is the true holy Church, which hath

7 God that maketh men to inhabit (h) of one manner in a house. That bringeth forth them (i) that be bound, in strength, likewise them that (k) exasperate, that dwell (l) in sepulchres.

(h) unity in doctrine, touching faith and manners. S. Cypr. ep. 76. (i) That be bound in sin, (k) even rebellious wills are altered by God's mercy, & freely embrace his law, (l) also the dead and dry hearts that cared not for spiritual things are softened, and quickened with new grace.

8 O God (m) when thou wentest forth in the sight of thy people, when thou didst pass through the desert.

(m) The benefits bestowed on the Israelites, are written in the books of Moyses, Iosue, and Judges.

9 The earth was moved, and the heavens also distilled, at the presence of the God of Sina, at the face of the God of Israel. 10 (n) Voluntary rain shalt thou separate, o God, to thine inheritance: and it was (o) weakened, but thou hath perfiteth it.

(n) Not man's deserving, but God's mere good will, and free grace caused Christ to come, and by himself and his Apostles to preach the Evangelical doctrine, which watereth the whole world. (o) God chose the weak, but made them strong.

11 Thy (p) living creatures shall dwell in it: thou hast prepared (q) in thy sweetness for the poor, o God.

(p) Those whom thou has chosen, and so made thine own peculiar people, shall enjoy this grace. (q) Thou gavest Manna in the desert, the B. Sacrament in the new testament.

12 Our Lord shall give (r) the word to them that evangelize, (s) with great power.

(r) God giveth to the Preacher what to speak, (s) and to some he giveth also power to work miracles, in confirmation of their doctrine. Mar. 16.

13 The (t) King of hosts the beloved of the beloved: and (v) to the beauty of the house, to divide the spoils.

(t) Some potent King, or (as it is in Hebrew) Kings being beloved, of the beloved of God, the only Son of God, shall yield themselves to the same beloved Son of God: (v) which shall redound to the glory and beauty of his Church, gaining such spiritual preys from the devil.

14 If ye (w) sleep among the midst of the lots, the wings of a dove laid over with silver, and the hinder parts of her back in the paleness of gold.

(w) If you be in such danger, that the adversaries cast dice, or lots for your persons, and goods, yet you shall be delivered, as if a dove, with her glistering feathers, like silver and gold, fly away into a secure place, without loss or diminution, but rather with increase of virtues.

15 Whilst (x) the heavenly discerneth kings over her, (y) with snow they shall be made white in Selmon.

(x) When the heavenly King determineth thus of earthly Kings, (y) they shall be purged from their sins, and made white like snow, that falleth in mount Selmon. which is a shadowed hill, thick with trees, in mount Ephraim near to Jordan.

16 The (z) mountain of God a fat mountain. A mountain (a) curded as cheese, a (b) fat mountain:

(z) The Church of God is visible, and durable like to a mountain. (a) Combined, or joined together, as when milk is turned into curd, and so into cheese. (b) Fruitful, enriched by spiritual gifts of the Holy Ghost.

17 why (c) suppose you curded mountains? A mountain, in which it hath well pleased God to dwell therein: for indeed our Lord will dwell even to the end.

(c) Ye that are not of this Church, do in vain and erroneously imagine, that any other mountains are united.

18 The (d) chariot of God is ten thousand fold, thousands of them that rejoice, our Lord in them, (e) in Sina in the holy place.

(d) Innumerable Angels, ministers of God's will, do continually attend upon his Divine Majesty, as if he (who otherwise needeth no service) were carried by them, as in a chariot of infinite magnificence. Dan. 7. (e) So God appeared in Majesty, when he gave his law in mount Sinai.

19 Thou art (f) ascended on high, thou (g) hast taken captivity: thou (h) hast received gifts in men: for even those (i) that do not believe, our Lord God to inhabit. [1]

(f) Christ ascended with innumerable Angels attending upon him, (g) carried with him the fathers of the old testament, that had been captive, (h) as man he received gifts of God, in and for men, his faithful servants, (i) yea also he received for his merit, that innumerable, which before were incredulous were converted, and God dwelt in their souls. [1] Ephe. 4.

20 Blessed be our Lord day by day: the God of our salvations will make us a prosperous journey. 21 Our God is the God of saving: and (k) the issues of death are of our Lord, our Lord.

(k) Our Lord, I say, our Lord, and none but he could overcome death by dying.

22 But yet God (l) still break the heads of his enemies: the hairy crown of them, that walk in their sins.

(l) Though Christ died to deliver all men from death, yet he will give capital sentence of eternal death to all that obstinately remain his enemies, and multiply sins upon sins, to the end of their temporal life.

23 Our Lord said: Out (m) of Basan I will convert, I will convert (n) into the depth of the sea.

(m) Even of the rudest barbarous nations, many shall be converted to Christianity (n) namely God's grace is extended into the Islands of the Ocean, and other seas.

24 That thy foot (o) may be dipped in blood: the tongue of thy dogs (made red) with the same (blood) of the enemies. [1]

(o) But such severe slaughter shall fall upon the obstinate contemners of this grace, that men's feet shall be defiled in their blood, and dogs shall lap it. [1] Ex inimicis ab ipso.

25 They (p) have seen thy enterings in, o God, the enterings of my God: of my King who is (q) in the holy place.

(p) Many have seen, or known in general, but the faithful more exactly know how Christ came into this world, his conversation therein, and his going forth; (q) his reigning now in heaven our Mediator, by whom all other intercessors have access to God.

26 (r) Princes came before (s) joined with them that sang, in the midst (t) of young women playing on timbrels.

(r) The Apostles sowing the first seed of Evangelical doctrine, (s) with whom other Apostolical men, (t) and other souls of all nations converted by their preaching, most joyfully sing together in heart, voice, & instruments: especially in good works, shew their grateful affections to our Redeemer.

27 In (v) Churches bless ye God our Lord, of (w) the fountains of Israel.

(v) And all this in the particular Churches of diverse Kingdoms, and parts of the world: (w) beginning with the Israelites in Jerusalem, and so proceeding into all Jury, and Samaria, and to the utmost of the earth. Act. 1.

28 There (x) Benjamin a young man, in excess of mind. (y) The Princes of Juda their leaders: the Princes of Zabulon, the Princes of Nephthali.

(x) S. Paul of Jacob's youngest son Benjamin, last called to Apostleship, was chiefly sent to the Gentiles. (y) Other Apostles of diverse tribes sent first to the Jews, secondarily to Gentiles.

29 Command thy strength, o God: (z) confirm this, o God, which thou hast wrought in us.

(z) As the Church began by the omnipotent power of God; so by the same only power it is conserved.

30 From thy temple in Jerusalem, kings shall offer gifts to thee. 31 Rebuke (a) the wild beasts of the reed, the congregation (b) of bulls in the kine of thy peoples: (c) that they may exclude them, which are tried with silver. Dissipate the nations that will wars:

(a) Chastise therefore, o God, all persecuters of thy Church, who are but as weak wavering reeds, in comparison of thy power, (b) no better than bulls, with kine, that is, captains and popular people, (c) endeavouring to alienate the constant proved Confessors from their faith.

32 Legates shall come (d) out of Aegypt: Aethiopia shall prevent his hands to God.

(d) A prophecy that many should be converted to Christ in Aegypt, & Aethiopia: as appeareth by the innumerable multitude of religious Monks, & Nuns in those countries, shortly after the Apostles' days.

33 Ye Kingdoms (e) of the earth sing to God: sing to our Lord:

(e) The like afterwards in all other nations, whom therefore the Prophet inviteth to praise God, for so inestimable benefits in the whole world.

34 Sing ye to God, that mounteth upon the heaven of heaven, to the East. Behold he will give to his voice (f) the voice of strength:

(f) Christ will come to judge, in terror of voice, and with magnificence, accompanied with holy Angels and other Saints.

35 give you glory to God upon Israel, his magnificence, and his power in the clouds. 36 God is marvelous in his Saints, the God of Israel he will give power and strength to his people, God be blessed.

ANNOTATIONS. PSALM LXVII.

16. The mountain of God.] For better discerning the true Church from other congregations, the Prophet here describeth certain properties thereof [1], for he calleth it a mountain, because it is most visible to all men. secondly, a fat mountain, that is, replenished with all virtues, and gifts of the Holy Ghost; whereof it is called Holy [2]. Thirdly, it is curded, or consolidated in unity of faith and Religion [3], which conjoin the whole body, making it solid and firm, as the oven turneth liquid milk into curd, and so into cheese. Fourthly, it is the Congregation, wherein God always remaineth, even to the end, for ever [4]; which sheweth two other properties; that the Church never faileth, nor erreth in doctrine [5]: God still dwelling therein, and consequently conserveth it from error in doctrine.

[1] Marks of the Church: Visibility.
[2] Sanctity.
[3] Unity.
[4] Perpetuity.
[5] Assured verity.

17. Why suppose you curded mountains.] As for other congregations ◦, it is certain and evident, that they are not the Church of God, because they are not curded, that is not united, in the same points of faith, but only in negative points, and in general opposition against the Catholic Church, and among themselves notoriously disagreeing and divided. As they also want the other marks of the true Church.

◦ No other pretended Church hath the mark of unity or the rest.

CHAPTER LXVIII.

Christ in midst of afflictions (as one in dangerous waters) 5. describing the malice of persecutors, and his own true zeal, 14. prayeth his heavenly Father for help. 23. By way of just imprecation, foresheweth the severe punishment of his adversaries, 30. his own glorious Resurrection, and prosperous building of his Church. For which he inviteth all creatures to praise God. [1]

[1] Christ's afflictions and victory.
The 5. key.

Unto (a) the end, (b) for them that shall be changed, (c) to David.

(a) Pertaining to the new Testament, (b) for Gentiles converted to Christianity, and from vice to virtue, (c) prefigured in David.

2 Save me, o God: because (d) waters are entered into my soul.

(d) Vehement afflictions environ my heart.

3 I (e) stick fast in the mire of the depth: and there is no sure standing. I am come into the depth of the sea: and a tempest hath overwhelmed me.

(e) I am as one entangled with quicksand or quagmire in the bottom of a great water.

4 I have (f) laboured crying, my jaws are made hoarse: my eyes have failed, whilst I hope in my God.

(f) Our Lord sweat blood for anguish in his prayer, and was not delivered from his passion, neither are his servants presently delivered from tribulations, but as is most to God's honour and their own good.

5 They are multiplied above the hairs of my head, that hate me without cause.[1] Mine enemies are made strong, that have persecuted me unjustly: (g) then did I pay the things that I took not.

[1] Ioan. 15. (g) Our Saviour who had no sin, payed the ransom for all sins.

6 O God thou knowest my (h) foolishness: and (i) mine offences are not hid from thee.

(h) O God thou knowest, that this which seemeth folly to worldly men, is true wisdom (i) and though men charge men with offences, thou knowest that I am innocent.

7 (k) Let them not be ashamed upon me, which expected thee, o Lord, Lord of hosts. Let them not be confounded upon me that seek thee, o God of Israel.

(k) Suffer not the weak to be scandalized in my passions.

8 Because for thee have I sustained reproach, confusion hath covered my face. 9 I am become a foreigner to my brethren, and a stranger to the sons of my mother. 10 Because (l) the zeal of thy house hath eaten me: and the reproaches of them that reproached thee, fell upon me.[1]

(l) The zeal of seeking God's honour, in propagating and advancing his Church, is the cause of persecution. As we see those are less persecuted, which have less godly zeal.
[1] Ioan. 2. Rom. 15.

11 And I covered my soul in fasting: and it (m) was made a reproach to me.

(m) The wicked do reproach those that mortify themselves.

12 And I put hair cloth my garment, & I became a parable to them. 13 They spake against me (n) that sat in the gate; and they sung against me that drank wine.

(n) The great men and judges, also the drunkards and rascality of the people.

14 But I, (o) my prayer to thee, o Lord: a time of thy good pleasure, o God. (p) In the multitude of thy mercy hear me, in the truth of thy salvation:

(o) But I direct my prayer to thee. (p) Expecting the time of thy good pleasure.

15 Deliver me out of the mire, that I stick not fast: deliver me from them that hate me, and from the depths of (q) waters.

(q) Tribulations.

16 Let not the tempest of water drown me, nor the depth swallow me: (r) neither let the pit shut his mouth upon me.

(r) Though Christ died and was buried, and in soul descended into hell, yet he could not be holden in his sepulchre, nor in limbo, but rose again.

17 Hear me, o Lord, because thy mercy is benign: according to the multitude of thy commiserations have respect to me. 18 And turn not away thy face from thy servant: because I am in tribulation, hear me speedily. 19 Attend to my soul, and deliver it: (s) because of mine enemies deliver me.

(s) That they may either be converted, or confounded, and so do no more hurt.

20 Thou knowest my reproach & my confusion, & my shame. 21 In thy sight are all they that afflict me, my heart hath looked for reproach and misery. And I expected somebody that would be sorry together with me, and there (t) was none: and that would comfort me, and I found not.

(t) Not any that could mitigate our Saviour's affliction, would shew compassion towards him.[1]
[1] Mat. 27. Ioan. 19.

22 And they gave (v) gall for my meat: & in my thirst they gave me vinegar to drink.

(v) But contrarywise when he complained of thirst, they gave him gall and vinegar to drink.

23 (w) Let their table be made a snare before them, & for retributions, and for a scandal.[1]

(w) A Prophecy of the destruction of the Jews, at the time of Pasch, when they should think to eat their paschal lamb with joy.[1] Rom. 11.

24 Let (x) their eyes be darkened that they see not: and make (y) their back crooked always.

(x) They are also blind in heart, that they will not see the truth of Christ's doctrine: (y) but bow themselves to earthly things, and worldly gains even to this day.

25 Pour out thy wrath upon them: and let the fury of thy wrath overtake them. 26 Let their habitation be made desert: and in their tabernacles let there be none to dwell.[1]

[1] Act. 1.

27 Because (z) whom thou hast strucken, they have persecuted: and upon the sorrow of my wounds they have added.

(z) Christ, whom God of his mercy designed to suffer death, for redemption of mankind, the Jews of mere envy and malice persecuted to death.

28 Add thou (a) iniquity upon their iniquity: and let them not enter into thy justice.

(a) A prophecy that God would suffer them, to fall from one iniquity to another.

29 (b) Let them be put out of the book of the living: and with the just let them not be written.

(b) In the end of their lives, they shall not be found in the book of life, where they suppose themselves to be written.

30 (c) I am poor and sorrowful: (d) thy salvation, o God, hath received me.

(c) The voice of Christ, humbling himself to death, even to death of the Cross: (d) from which he rose again.

31 I will praise the name of God with canticle: and will magnify him in praise. 32 And (e) it shall please God more than a young calf: that bringeth forth horns and hoofs.

(e) Devout praise and thanks-giving please God more than sacrifices of the most tender calves, which were otherwise also grateful sacrifices.

33 Let the poor see and rejoice: seek ye God, and your soul shall live. 34 Because our Lord hath heard the poor: and he hath not despised (f) his prisoners.

(f) God doth assuredly comfort all such, as are imprisoned for professing the truth.

35 Let (g) the heavens and earth praise him, the sea, and all the creeping beasts in them.

(g) All the creatures of God.

36 (h) Because God will save Sion: (i) and the cities of Juda shall be built up. And they shall inhabit there, & by inheritance, they shall get it.

(h) God will always establish and protect the Catholic Church: (i) and particular Churches, members of the universal, shall also prosper.

37 And (k) the seed of his servants shall possess it, and they that love his name shall dwell in it.

(k) Perpetual succession of the Catholic Church.

CHAPTER LXIX.

Another prayer of David, when he was persecuted by Absalom: made in a Psalm after his delivery. [1]

[1] David's prayer in persecution.
The 8. key.

Unto (a) the end, a Psalm of David, in remembrance, that our (b) Lord saved him.

(a) An apt prayer also for the afflicted in the new Testament, (b) from the danger of Absalom (2. Reg. 18.) or from any persecutor.

2 O God (c) intend unto my help: Lord (d) make haste to help me.

(c) All men at all times need God's help: (d) but most present need, in present dangers. The rest of this Psalm is contained in the 39. Psalm from the 15. verse. But there the whole Church prayeth for help, the world being almost drowned in sins; here David, or other particular persons, or peoples pray in their several distresses.

3 Let them be confounded and be ashamed, that seek my soul. [1]

[1] Psa. 39.

4 Let them be turned away backward, and be ashamed that will me evils. Let them be turned away forthwith ashamed, that say to me: Well, well. 5 Let all that seek thee rejoice, and be glad in thee, and let them say always: Our Lord be magnified: which love thy salvation. 6 But I am needy and poor: O God help me, thou art my helper, and deliverer: o Lord be not slack.

CHAPTER LXX.

King David, or any other just person prayeth God to continue his grace and protection against the malice of the enemy. 5. Recounteth God's mercy in delivering him from falling into tentations: 6. prayeth for the same in old age, or weakness of body and spirit, 20. and promiseth perpetual gratitude and praises. [1]

[1] A prayer for perseverance in virtue.
The 7. key.

1 Psalm (a) for David, (b) of the sons of Jonadab, and (c) the former captives. In thee o Lord (d) I have hoped, let me not be confounded for ever:

(a) Though this Psalm (as also diverse others) is entitled to, or for David, it proveth not that some other was the author thereof, but the Seventy Interpreters insinuate hereby, that it pertaineth in more particular sort to David, growing old; (b) they add also the sons of Jonadab a most holy family; (c) who for their singular piety, were suffered to remain in Jerusalem in the first captivity. Jer. 35. (d) The words of David, or any faithful just person.

2 in (e) thy justice deliver me, and receive me. Incline thine ear to me and save me.

(e) God of his justice revengeth the injuries done to his servants.

3 Be unto me for a God protector, and for a fenced place: that thou mayst save me: Because thou art my firmament, and my refuge. 4 My God deliver me out of the hand of the sinner, and out of the hand of him that doth against the law, and of the unjust. 5 Because thou art (f) my patience, o Lord; o Lord my hope from my youth.

(f) Through thy grace I have patience to expect thy pleasure, when I shall be relieved.

6 Upon thee have I been confirmed from the womb: from my mother's belly thou art my protector. In thee is my singing always: 7 I was made to many as (g) a wonder: & thou art a strong helper.

(g) It seemeth strange to most men, why the just have more troubles than the wicked.

8 Let my mouth be filled with praise, that I may sing thy glory: (h) all the day thy greatness.

(h) A necessary prayer for perseverance, which none can have without special and continual help of grace.

9 Reject me not in the time of old age: (i) when my strength shall fail, forsake me not.

(i) Against this special danger, and last assaults of the enemy, Christ hath instituted the Sacrament of Extreme Unction.

10 Because mine enemies have said to me: and they that watched my soul consulted together. 11 saying: God hath forsaken him, pursue, and take him: because there is none to deliver. 12 O God be not far from me: my God have respect to mine aid. 13 Let them be confounded & fail that detract from my soul: let them be covered with confusion and shame, that seek evils to me. 14 But I will always hope: and (k) will add upon all thy praise.

(k) The best means to conserve virtue, is to exercise the same, adding good works towards our neighbours, and praises to God.

15 My mouth shall shew forth thy justice: all the day thy salvation. Because (l) I have not known learning, (m) I will enter into the (n) powers of our Lord:

(l) I profess not exact knowledge of natural things; (m) but I consider and contemplate the infinite power of God, which appeareth in his works, (n) and his just judgements, as partly have appeared in punishing, and rewarding some in this life, but especially will be manifest in the end of this world.

16 O Lord I will be mindful of thy justice only. 17 O God thou hast taught me from my youth: and until now I will pronounce thy marvelous works. 18 And unto ancient age, and old age: o God, forsake me not? Until I shew forth thy arm to all the generation, that is to come. Thy might, 19 and thy justice, o God, even to the highest, great marvels, which thou hast done: O God who may be like to thee? 20 How great tribulations hast thou shewed me, many and evil: and turning thou (o) hast quickened me: and from the depths of the earth thou hast brought me back again.

(o) After tribulations recreated me.

21 Thou hast multiplied thy magnificence: and being turned thou hast comforted me. 22 For I also will confess to thee in the instruments of Psalm thy truth:

O God, I will sing to thee on the harp, holy one of Israel. 23 My (p) lips shall rejoice when I shall sing to thee; and my soul which thou hast redeemed.

(p) I will praise thee with mouth and heart.

24 Yea and my tongue all the day shall meditate thy justice: when they shall be confounded and ashamed that seek evils to me.

CHAPTER LXXI.

By way of prayer the Psalmist prophesieth Christ's coming, our King and Judge: 4. the deliverer of mankind from the thraldom of the devil. 8. The greatness of his spiritual kingdom in the Gentiles, 16. and his continual glory and praise.[1]

[1] Christ our King & Judge.
The 5. key.

Concerning (a) Salomon.

(a) This Psalm is of Christ, prefigured by Salomon, whose Kingdom was most glorious of all the Kings of God's people; for of King Salomon himself many things in this Psalm cannot be truly understood. S. Aug.

2 O God give thy judgment to (b) the king: and thy justice to (c) the son of the king. To judge thy people in (d) justice, and thy poor in judgment.

(b) O God most blessed Trinity, give power and authority, to the Son of Man, God incarnate, King of all kings, (c) the Son of king David, to judge for mankind against the devil. (d) Christ paying ransom for all mankind, and so man renouncing the devil and serving God, is justly, not injuriously delivered from captivity of sin, and of the devil.

3 Let (e) the mountains receive peace for the people: and (f) the little hills justice.

(e) A prophecy of the Apostles receiving power to preach Christ's Gospel, of peace and reconciliation of men to God by penance, (f) and of other Apostolical men that follow their steps.

4 He (g) shall judge the poor of the people, and shall save the children of the poor: and he shall humble the calumniator.

(g) Salomon in figure of Christ was for a time a just and good King.

5 And he shall (h) continue with the sun, and before the moon in generation and generation.

(h) But only Christ, not Salomon, nor any other King of that people, continueth or reigneth for ever.

6 He (i) shall descend as rain upon a fleece: and as drops distilling upon the earth.

(i) The manner of Christ's Incarnation most silent, sweet, and grateful.

7 There shall rise in his days justice, and aboundance of peace, (k) until the moon be taken away.

(k) Again the Prophet inculcateth, that Christ's kingdom, his Church, shall continue for ever.

8 And he shall rule (l) from sea unto sea: and from the river even to the ends of the round world.

(l) The Church is not only universal in all times, but also in places.

9 Before him shall the Aethiopians fall down: and his enemies shall lick the earth.[1]

[1] Isa. 60.

10 The (m) kings of Tharsis, and (n) the Islands shall offer presents: the kings of the Arabians, and of Saba shall bring gifts.[1]

(m) The three Sages or Kings, which adored our Saviour, and offered gold, frankincense, & myrrh, were the first that fulfilled this prophecy: & afterwards Constantin the Great, and other Emperors, Kings, and Princes. (n) Amongst other Islands Great Brittany (the greatest of Europe) was converted to Christ, according to this prophecy: first some few in the Apostles' time (Metaphrastes apud Surium, Theodoret, epist. ad Timoth. Sophronius Ser. de Nat. Apost, & alij.) More in the time of Eleutherius. Lastly, our English nation by S. Augustin and others sent by S. Gregory.[1]

11 And all kings of the earth shall adore him: all nations shall serve him. 12 Because he shall deliver the poor from the mighty: and the poor which had no helper. 13 He shall spare the poor and needy: and he shall save the souls of the poor. 14 From usuries and iniquity he shall redeem their souls: and their name shall be honourable before him. 15 And [1] he shall live, and there shall be given him of the gold of Arabia, and they shall adore it always: all the day they shall bless him.

[1] How is this prophecy verified, except the Church be always visible?

16 And there shall be a firmament in the earth in the tops of mountains, the fruit thereof shall be extolled far above Libanus: and they shall flourish of the city, as the grass of the earth. 17 Be his name blessed for ever: before the sun his name is permanent. And all the tribes of the earth shall be blessed in him: all nations shall magnify him. 18 Blessed be our Lord the God of Israel, (o) who only doth marvelous things.

(o) No miracles can be done but by God's power.

19 And blessed be the name of his majesty for ever: and all the earth shall be filled with his majesty. (p) Be it, be it.

(p) Above all other desires, the holy Prophet wished God's glory, and praises in all the earth, as it is in heaven.

20 (q) The praises of David, (r) the son of Jesse are ended.

(q) It seemeth by this appendix added by Esdras, that this Psalm was last composed, though not put in the last place, but as it came to his hands. (r) David the natural son of Jesse, made no more Hymns, that is, no more musical praises of God after this Psalm, but: the prefigured David Christ our Saviour, the Son of God, in his body the Church, singeth still new praises. S. Aug. in enarrat. Psal. sequentis. 72.

CHAPTER LXXII.

The royal Prophet, first professing the unspeakable goodness of God, 2. in the person of the weak complaineth, that the wicked prosper and the just are afflicted: 15. reprehendeth the murmuration, for though we cannot comprehend the secret judgements of God, 18. yet they are most just. 25. So with desire to rest in God, he promiseth ever to praise him. [1]

[1] Affliction in this world is recompensed in the end. The 9. key.

A Psalm (a) to Asaph. How (b) good is God to Israel, to them that are of a right heart! [1]

(a) To be sung by Asaph the master of music, and his company. (b) God is so excellent good, as no tongue can express, no heart can conceive. [1] Psa. 39.

2 But (c) my feet were almost moved, my steps almost slipped.

(c) The peace and prosperity of the wicked tempted me to leave the right narrow way, and to go the broad easy way with them.

3 Because I have had zeal upon the wicked, seeing the peace of sinners. 4 Because there is (d) no respect to their death: and (e) stability in their plague.

(d) They never think of death; (e) and if they suffer some affliction, they quickly remove it from them.

5 In (f) the labours of men they are not, and with men they shall not be scourged.

(f) They travail not so much as good men do, neither are they so often punished.

6 Therefore (g) hath pride held them, they are covered with their iniquity and impiety.

(g) Which maketh them proud, and so they run into all sorts of iniquity.

7 Their iniquity hath proceeded as it were of fat: they have passed into (h) the affection of the heart.

(h) Whatsoever mischief came in their mind, they feared not to commit it in fact.

8 They have thought and have spoken wickedness: they have spoken iniquity (i) on high.

(i) Boldly extolling their own words and works, and despising others.

9 They have set their mouth unto heaven: and their tongue hath passed in the earth. 10 Therefore will my people (k) return here: and (l) full days shall be found in them.

(k) For this prosperity of the wicked, some of God's people will fall from the right way, (l) and their days will abound with calamities.

11 And they have said: (m) How doth God know, and is there knowledge in the highest?

(m) The voice of the weak, inclining to diffidence, & doubt of God's knowledge and providence.

12 Lo the sinners themselves, and they that abound in the world, have obtained riches. 13 And I said: Then have I justified my heart without cause, and have washed my hands amongst innocents: 14 And have been scourged all the day, and my chastising in the mornings. 15 If I said: I will speak this: behold (n) I reproved the nation of thy children.

(n) The Prophet in his own person answereth, that if he should say such things, he should reprove God's children as faulty, unworthy of his protection, and to be neglected; whereas it is God's providence to chastise his children whom he loveth.

16 I (o) thought to know this thing, it is labour before me:

(o) In this life we cannot know the particular causes, why the just are afflicted, & many wicked prosper in this world.

17 Until I may enter into the sanctuary of God: and may understand concerning their latter ends. 18 But yet (p) for guiles thou hast put it to them: thou hast cast them down whilst they (q) were elevated.

(p) But only in general we are taught, that evils are prepared for the guiles, or deceits, (q) pride, and other sins of the wicked.

19 How are they brought into desolation, they have failed suddenly: they have perished for their iniquity.

20 As the dream of them that rise, o Lord, in thy city thou shalt bring their (r) image to nothing.

(r) Not real but imaginary felicity.

21 Because my heart is (s) inflamed, and my reins are changed:

(s) Almost burned up with afflictions.

22 And I am brought to nothing, and knew not. 23 As (t) a beast am I become with thee: and I (v) always with thee.

(t) Charged with heavy burdens, without knowledge how long or to what end, (v) yet not destitute of thy protection.

24 Thou hast held my right hand: and in thy will thou hast conducted me, and with glory thou hast received me. 25 For what is to me (w) in heaven? And besides thee what would I upon the earth?

(w) Nothing to be desired in heaven nor in earth but God.

26 My (x) flesh hath fainted, and my heart: God of my heart, and God my portion for ever.

(x) In body and mind I thirst after thee, my true inheritance.

27 For behold, they (y) that make themselves far from thee, shall perish: thou (z) hast destroyed all that fornicate from thee.

(y) Men by their freewill make themselves enemies to God.
(z) Determined their damnation, foreseeing their final sins.

28 But it is good for me to cleave to God: to put my hope in our Lord God. That I may shew forth all thy praises, in the gates of the daughter of Sion.

CHAPTER LXXIII.

Faithful people pressed with persecution lamentably complaining, beseecheth God to respect his own inheritance, cruelly afflicted, 10. and left long without help, 12. whereas heretofore he relieved his people in like distresses. 18. And therefore confidently hopeth he will revenge the blasphemers of his name.[1]

[1] A prayer in long affliction.
The 7. key.

Understanding (a) to Asaph. Why hast thou, o God, (b) repelled for ever: is thy fury wrath upon the sheep of thy pasture?

(a) Instruction for the congregation of the faithful in distress, not to seek temporal rewards and prosperity, but to expect spiritual and eternal. S. Aug. (b) In long persecution the weak begin to fear or suspect, that God hath utterly abandoned them.

2 Be (c) mindful of thy congregation, (d) which thou hast possessed from the beginning. Thou hast (e) redeemed the rod of thine inheritance: mount Sion, in which thou hast dwelt.

(c) But the stronger pray with confidence, (d) being assured that God who hath conserved his Church hitherto, from the beginning of the world, will conserve it still to the end. (e) Another reason why God will conserve his Church is, because he hath delivered it often in a strong arm; as from bondage in Aegypt, from persecution and oppression in the time of Judges, and Kings, and lastly redeemed it from the tyranny of the devil by Christ's death.

3 Lift up thy hands upon (f) their prides for ever: how great things hath the enemy done malignantly in the holy place?

(f) Thirdly the pride of the enemies moveth God to revenge their wickedness, & so to deliver his own people.

4 And they that hate thee have gloried: in the midst of (g) thy solemnity. They have set (h) their signs, for signs:

(g) They pretend to keep solemn feasts like to thine. (h) They set up altars against thine altars, or some new devised external shew, against the holy Rites of the Church:

5 and have not known, (i) as in the issue on high. As (k) in a wood of trees they have with axes

(i) and that in public places, in the ends of high ways, or ports, and pinnacles. (k) The Prophet describeth the manner how persecutors destroy temples and all sacred things. [1]

[1] 4. Reg. 25.

6 cut out the gates thereof together: in hatchet and chip-axe they have cast it down. 7 They have burnt thy sanctuary with fire: they have polluted the tabernacle of thy name in the earth. 8 Their (l) kindred together have said in their heart: Let us make all the festival days of God to cease from the earth.

(l) The whole crew or band of persecutors.

9 Our (m) signs we have not seen, there is now no Prophet: and he will know us no more.

(m) The weak complain that God sheweth not wonted signs, nor sendeth succourse to his people, by raising some Prophet, or other means to help them.

10 How long, o God, shall the enemy upbraid: the adversary provoke thy name for ever? 11 Why doest thou turn away thy hand, and thy right hand, out of the midst of thy bosom for ever? 12 But (n) God our King before the worlds: he hath wrought salvation in the midst of the earth. [1]

(n) The perfect do answer, that God both hath, and will relieve his people. [1] Luc. 1. v. 70.

13 Thou in thy strength hast confirmed (o) the sea: thou hast (p) crushed the head of Dragons in the waters.

(o) Made the red sea like walls. (p) Drowned Pharao and his host.

14 Thou hast broken the heads of the dragon: thou hast given him for meat to the peoples (q) of the Aethiopians.

(q) Of black devils.

15 Thou hast (r) broken up fountains, and torrents, thou hast dried the rivers (s) of Ethan.

(r) Given water out of rocks, (s) made passage over Jordan.

16 The day is thine, and the night is thine: thou hast made the morning and the sun. 17 Thou hast made all the coasts of the earth: the summer and the spring thou hast formed them. 18 Be mindful of this, the enemy hath upbraided our Lord: and a foolish people hath provoked thy name. 19 Deliver not to beasts the souls that confess to thee: and the souls of the poor forget not for ever. 20 Have respect unto thy testament: because they that are (t) obscure of the earth, are filled with houses of iniquities.

(t) Ignorant, blind, and barbarous infidels, lodge all Kinds of iniquity in their consciences.

21 (v) Let not the humble be turned away being confounded: the poor and needy shall praise thy name.

(v) And therefore it is unmeet, that faithful people should be in bondage under them.

22 Arise God, judge thy cause: be mindful of those thy reproaches, that are (w) from the foolish man all the day.

(w) These foolish audacious men do continually blaspheme all holy things.

23 (x) Forget not the voices of thine enemies: the (y) pride of them that hate thee, hath ascended always.

(x) Omit not to punish them, (y) seeing they are obstinate & obdurate in pride and in hatred.

CHAPTER LXXIV.

Christ (with his Assessors) will judge the whole world at the last day: in the mean time exhorteth sinners to amend their life; 7. for none shall escape just judgement. 12. The wicked shall be punished, and the good rewarded. [1]

[1] General judgement.
The 9. key.

Unto the end, (a) Corrupt not, a Psalm of Canticle to Asaph.

(a) Either this was the beginning of a song, to the tune whereof this Psalm was sung; as some Hebrew Rabbins testify; or, as S. Augustin and other fathers explicate, the Septuagint do admonish us by occasion of this Psalm, not to fail in our hope, for that God will in no case violate his promise nor purpose, but will render to every one in the day of Judgement, as they deserve.

2 We (b) will confess to thee, o God: (c) we will confess, and will invocate thy name. We will tell thy marvelous works:

(b) Christ with his Apostles, and other assessory judges, will praise and thank God, for his admirable good providence, and government of this world. (c) This duplication of the same word, confirmeth us of the assured performance of that, which is here prophesied.

3 when (d) I shall take a time, I will judge justices.

(d) Christ our singular, principal, and proper Judge only, and no mere creature, knoweth the determinate time of general judgement.

4 (e) The earth is melted, and all that dwell in it: (f) I have confirmed the pillars thereof.

(e) The earth at that time shall be purged with flaming fire: (f) yet shall not be destroyed, but changed in qualities.

5 I said to the wicked: (g) Do not wickedly; and to them that offend: (h) Exalt not the horn.

(g) An epitome, or brief sum of Christ's doctrine, to fly from sin. (h) Be not proud, abuse not the power you have, to do what you please.

6 Exalt not your horn on high: speak not iniquity against God. 7 For neither from the East, nor from the West, nor from the desert mountains:

8 (i) because God is Judge. (k) This man he humbleth, and him he exalteth:

(i) When other Judges sit on tribunals, some may be absent, or escape from their sentences: but all without exception shall be brought in person, when Christ God and Man shall judge. (k) Some shall have sentence of eternal pain in hell: some of eternal reward in glory,

9 (l) because there is a cup in the hand of our Lord (m) of mere wine full of mixture. And he hath poured it out (n) of this into that, but yet the dregs thereof are not emptied: all the sinners of the earth shall drink.

(l) though (partly in this world, partly in particular judgement of every soul) God hath already, and will before the last day punish sinners, yet there resteth more punishment, and no impenitent sinners shall escape, but all shall drink of the bitter cup of eternal damnation. (m) Strong wine not delayed with water, but mingled with bitter sharp things, as gall, vinegar, brimstone, &c. and so poured into festered wounds, so they shall suffer untolerable endless pain, mixed with the worm of conscience, loss of glory, rancour of heart, and eternal desperation. (n) Variety of hellish torments, from one extreme to another: as from snow-waters to exceeding heat. Job. 24.

10 But I will shew forth for ever: I will sing to the God of Jacob. 11 And I will break all the horns of sinners: and (o) the horns of the just shall be exalted.

(o) The just for well using their power of freewill, and of all power given them in this life, are rewarded in heaven.

CHAPTER LXXV.

The Royal Prophet singeth God's praises, for his particular providence towards the Jews: 10. Further to be extended to all the meek of the whole earth. [1]

[1] God's providence towards his people.
The 3. key.

Unto the end, in praises, a Psalm (a) to Asaph, a Canticle to (b) the Assyrians.

(a) For the congregation of faithful and godly people. (b) Amongst others, one notorious example of God's providence is recorded of an hundred fourscore & five thousand Assirians, slain in one night by an Angel. 4. Reg. 19.

2 God is known (c) in Jewry: in Israel his name is great.

(c) God was not only known in general, as to pagan Philosophers, and some others, but more particularly to the Jews, the issue of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, by his special benefits towards them.

3 And (d) his place is made in peace; and (e) his habitation in Sion.

(d) God suffering all other nations to err for their sins, in their fond fantasies of false gods, reserved the Israelites for his Church, (e) establishing the principality thereof in Sion.

4 (f) There he brake the powers of bows, the shield, the sword, and the battle.

(f) For obtaining and conserving of Sion from wicked Infidels, God overthrew all sorts of contrary forces.

5 Thou (g) doest illuminate marvelously from the eternal mountains:

(g) God not only gave his people temporal victories over their enemies, but also illuminated their minds with knowledge of true religion:

6 all the foolish of heart (h) were troubled. They (i) slept their sleep: and all the men of riches found nothing in their hands.

(h) others are often troubled in mind, hearing the truth, but are not converted through their obstinate folly. (i) Worldly men in supine carelessness, as in a sleep pass over this life, and afterwards find themselves excluded from heaven, for lack of merits, and good works, with the foolish virgins.

7 At (k) thy reprehension, o God of Jacob, they (l) have all slumbered that mounted on horses.

(k) God undertaking the defence of his people, and threatening the adverse part, (l) they failed in courage, as men overcome with drowsiness of sleep.

8 Thou art terrible, and who shall resist thee? (m) From that time thy wrath.

(m) Even from the first notice of thy will, the adversaries were dejected, fearing thy potent wrath.

9 From (n) heaven thou [1] hast made thy judgment heard: (o) the earth trembled and was quiet.

(n) Terrible signs from the firmament appearing before the day of judgement, [1] The Prophets do often speak in the pretertense, for the assurance of the things to come. (o) persecutors and others being terrified shall be astonished and silent.

10 When God arose unto judgment, (p) that he might save all the meek of the earth.

(p) God will come to judge the world, more especially for the justs' sake.

11 Because (q) the cogitation of man shall confess to thee: and (r) the remains of the cogitation shall keep festival day to thee.

(q) Men that shall seriously think and meditate upon these things, will praise and thank God for them: (r) and the effect and sweet repast of such meditation, shall make as it were a great festival day, in the devout soul spiritually joined with God.

12 (s) Vow ye and (t) render to our Lord your God: all ye that round about him bring gifts. To (v) the terrible,

(s) The soul thus inflamed with God's love, is then apt of gratitude, for his goodness towards man, to make vows of things whereto we are not obliged, (t) but most necessary it is to be maturely advised, and not rashly nor lightly to vow; for being once vowed, we are strictly bound to whatsoever we have lawfully promised. And it is great sin to vow undiscreetly. (v) Remembering that for vows, and all other works we must answer to God, who is a terrible judge, ready to punish in body and soul, sparing none for their greatness, nor Princes nor Kings, nor vulgar sort, for all are to him alike.

13 and him that taketh away the spirit of Princes, terrible to the kings of the earth.

CHAPTER LXXVI.

Any faithful devout person meditating God's benefits, 7. examineth his conscience, that nothing be in his soul, that may offend God. Who is always ready to forgive: 11.

and therefore he still reneweth his purpose to serve God sincerely, 15. particularly remembering the delivery of Israel from Aegypt. [1]

[1] God's special protection of the Jews.
The 4. key.

Unto the end, for (a) Idithun, a psalm (b) to Asaph.

(a) For Idithun to sing, or to make tune for it. (b) For the faithful congregation to consider God's benefits.

2 With (c) my voice I have cried to our Lord: with my voice to God (d) and he attended to me. [1]

(c) Having heretofore prayed, (d) I have obtained. [1] Psal. 141.

3 In the day of my tribulation I sought God, with my hands (e) in the night before him: and I (f) was not deceived. My (g) soul refused to be comforted,

(e) Especially being in tribulation, and praying with heart and hands lifted up, as well in the night as day: (f) I was not frustrate of my prayer. (g) I was sometimes in such anguish that nothing seemed comfortable,

4 I (h) was mindful of God and was delighted, and was exercised: and (i) my spirit fainted.

(h) but I relied upon God so firmly, (i) that my spirit came into an ecstasy or trance.

5 Mine eyes (k) prevented the watches: I was (l) troubled & spake not.

(k) I arose early before the ordinary time of awaking, (l) my heart being attentive inwardly, I uttered nothing with my tongue.

6 I thought upon old days: and the eternal years I had in mind. 7 And I meditated in the night with my heart, and I was exercised, and I (m) swept my spirit.

(m) I diligently examined my conscience.

8 Why, (n) will God reject for ever: or will he not add to be better pleased as yet?

(n) Assuredly God will not reject for ever, but he will be pleased with his Church.

9 Or will he cut off his mercy for ever, from generation unto generation? 10 Or will God forget to have mercy? Or will he in his wrath keep in his mercies? 11 And I said: (o) Now have I begun; (p) this is the change of the right hand of the Highest.

(o) Whilst I thus thought, I erred greatly, now I see and confess that God suffereth all calamities for the good of his servants: (p) and this I knew not by myself, but by the inspiration of God, making this change in me by his gracious hand.

12 I have been mindful of the works of our Lord: because I will be mindful from the beginning of thy marvelous works. 13 And I will meditate in all thy works: and in thy inventions I will be exercised. 14 O God in the holy is thy way: what god is great as our God? 15 thou art the God that doest marvelous things. Thou hast made thy power known among peoples: 16 thou hast with thine arm redeemed thy people, the children of (q) Jacob, and Joseph.

(q) The progeny of Jacob, received and nourished in Aegypt for Joseph's sake, as his adopted children.

17 The waters (r) saw thee, o God, the waters saw thee: and they were afraid, and the depths were troubled.

(r) The red sea, and Jordan felt thy divine power, and obeyed thy will.

18 A (s) multitude of the sounding of waters: the clouds gave a voice. For indeed arrows do pass:

(s) Noise of waters meeting after the Israelites were passed, thunders and lightnings also happened, to the terror of the persecutors, though not mentioned in Exodus.

19 the voice of thy thunder in a wheel. Thy lightnings shined to the round world: the earth was moved and troubled. 20 Thy way in the sea, and thy paths in many waters: and thy steps shall not be known. [1]

[1] Exo. 14.

21 Thou hast conducted thy people as sheep: (t) in the hand of Moyses and Aaron.

(t) By the ministry of Moyses and Aaron.

CHAPTER LXXVII.

The Royal Prophet exhorting the people to attend, 5. reciteth many great benefits of God towards their forefathers (whose ingratitude, often rebellion, and chastisement he still noteth) 9. as in their entrance into the land of Chanaan: 12. also before the same in Aegypt, and in the desert. 42. How God plagued the Aegyptians: 52. protected, and conducted his people into the promised land. 56. Where likewise they often offended, were punished: 65. yet were still conserved: 69. and the tribe of Juda exalted in King David. [1]

[1] God's great Benefits bestowed upon the Jews, and their ingratitude.
The 4. key.

Understanding (a) to Asaph. My people attend ye to (b) my law: incline your ear unto the words of my mouth.

(a) Commended to Asaph a chief musician, that the people might understand and consider God's benefits. (b) Neither the law, nor the people was David's, but presenting God's person, he speaketh in his name or authority, with whose inspiration he was replenished. S. Greg. Prefat. in Job c. 2. [1]
[1] Mat. 13. 5, 35.

2 I will open my mouth in (c) parables: I will speak (d) propositions from the beginning.

(c) Albeit the Prophet reciteth historically things done, yet the same were parables, similitudes, and figures of other things: (d) yea of secret hidden Mysteries, obscurely signified in the old Testament, and revealed in the new.

3 How great things have we heard and (e) have known them, and (f) our fathers have told us.

(e) Which partly we know by written holy Scriptures (f) partly by Traditions.

4 They were not hid from their children, in another generation. Telling the praises of our Lord, and his powers, and his marvelous works which he hath done.
5 And he (g) raised up a testimony in Jacob: and (h) made a law in Israel. How great things he commanded our fathers, (i) to make the same known to their children:

(g) God of his mercy without precedent merit, raised up a peculiar people of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, (h) and gave them a particular law, first of Circumcision, & more largely by Moyses. (i) So Abraham instructed his children & his house after him, Gen. 18.

6 that (k) another generation may know. The children that shall be born, and shall rise up, and shall tell their children.

(k) in like sort others taught their children.

7 That they may (l) put their hope in God, and may (m) not forget the works of God: and may (n) seek after his commandments.

(l) For three causes God gave his law, that his people may have confidence in him, he shewing his care to instruct and govern them: (m) that they remember his benefits: (n) and keep his commandments.

8 That they become not as their fathers: (o) a perverse generation and exasperating. A generation, that hath not directed their heart, their spirit hath not been faithful towards God. [1]

(o) The Jewish nation very often, and in great numbers murmured, rebelled, and committed other great sins, and therefore David exhorted the people of his time, not to do the like. And this exhortation pertaineth more especially to Christians, as S. Paul teacheth. 1. Cor. 10. [1] 1. Par. 7. v. 21.

9 The (p) children of Ephrem bending, and shooting with bow: were turned in the day of battle.

(p) They first (trusting in their own strength) without God's commandment (Num. 14.) went forth to battle and were overthrown. 1. Par. 7. v. 21.

10 They kept not the testament of God: and in his law they would not walk. 11 And they forgat his benefits, and his marvelous works, which he shewed them.
12 Before their fathers he did marvelous things in the land of Aegypt, in the field (q) of Tanis.

(q) Tanis the principal city in Aegypt, near the river Nilus, where Moyses wrought his great miracles.

13 He divided the sea & brought them through: and he made the waters to stand as in a bottle. [1]

[1] Exo. 14.

14 And he (r) conducted them in a cloud by day: and all the night by light of fire.

(r) This cloud shadowed them from the heat of the sun in the day, and the fire shined in the night, all the time that they were in the desert.

15 He struck the rock in (s) the desert: and gave them water to drink as in a great depth.

(s) In mount Horeb: and there was continual water in all the camp, which occupied near four miles in length and breadth.

16 And he brought forth water out of the rock: and made waters run down as rivers. 17 And they added as yet to sin unto him: they provoked the Highest to wrath in the place (t) without water.

(t) Which naturally wanted water: but by miracle had aboundance.

18 And they tempted God in their hearts: so that they asked (v) meats for their lives.

(v) Not content with Manna, they demanded to have flesh.

19 And they spake evil of God, they said: Can God prepare a table in the desert? 20 Because he struck the rock and waters ran, & torrents flowed: (w) Can he also give (x) bread, or prepare a table for his people?

(w) Still incredulous, not believing God's omnipotency, they thought that, albeit he had given them manna and water, yet he could not give them flesh. (x) By bread in general is understood all competent meat usual for a table.

21 Therefore our Lord heard, and (y) made delay: and (z) fire was kindled in Jacob, and wrath ascended upon Israel.

(y) For this incredulity, murmuring, and other sins, God kept the children of Israel forty years in the desert, till all that were of age when they came from Aegypt, were dead, except only Iosue and Caleb. (z) In the mean time amongst other punishments, many murmurers were burnt to death with strange fire. Num. 11.

22 Because they believed not in God, nor hoped in his salvation. 23 And he commanded the clouds from above, and opened the gates of heaven. 24 And he rained them Manna to eat, and bread of heaven he gave to them. 25 Bread (a) of Angels did man eat: he sent them victuals in aboundance.

(a) Manna made by Angels.

26 He (b) transported the South-wind from heaven: and in his power he brought in the South-west-wind.

(b) God so changed the wind, that it brought aboundance of quails and other birds into their camp. Exo. 16. Nu. 11.

27 And he rained upon them flesh as dust: and as the sand of the sea feathered fowls. 28 And they fell in the midst of their camp: about their tabernacles. 29 And they did eat and were filled exceedingly, and their desire he brought to them: 30 They were not defrauded of their desire. (c) As yet their meats were in their mouth:

(c) Immediately after a month (for so long they had aboundance of these birds, ibid. v. 20.) they were strucken with a plague, & many died for their concupiscence.

31 And the wrath of God ascended upon them. And he killed their fat ones, and (d) the chosen of Israel he hindered.

(d) The most fresh strong men died, and so were hindered from possessing the promised land of Chanaan.

32 In all these things they sinned as yet: and they believed not in his marvelous works. 33 And their days failed in vanity: and their years (e) in haste.

(e) In forty years above six hundred thousand died.

34 When he slew them, they sought him: and they returned, and (f) early they came to him.

(f) They offered morning sacrifice.

35 And they remembered that God is their helper: and the high God is their redeemer. 36 And they loved him (g) with their mouth, and with their tongue they did lie to him.

(g) But were not sincere in their hearts.

37 But their heart was not right with him: neither were they counted faithful in his testament.

38 (h) But he is merciful, and will be propitious to their sins: and he will not destroy them. And he abounded to turn away his wrath: and he kindled not all his wrath.

(h) Howsoever multitudes of people commit great sins, and are severely punished, yet God's mercy preserveth some by his effectual grace, and never suffereth the whole Church to fail, nor to be destroyed.

39 And he remembered that they are flesh: (i) spirit going, and not returning.

(i) Man's life is like the wind, that still passeth, and the same returneth not. As Aristotle teacheth. Here the Hebrews note the midst of the Psalter, in 1263. verses, and so many in the rest.

40 How (k) often have they exasperated him in the desert: provoked him to wrath in the place without water.

(k) The people of Israel murmured so often in the desert, that it was not easy to tell how often. See the Annotation.

41 And (l) they returned, and tempted God: and the holy one of Israel they exasperated.

(l) For eftsoons repenting they offended God again and again.

42 They did not remember his hand: in the day that he redeemed them from the hand of the afflicter.

43 As he put (m) his signs in Aegypt, and his wonders in the field of Tanis.

(m) The first sign was in turning a rod into a serpent, which was a miracle, but no plague, the other signs were also plagues to the Aegyptians.

44 And he turned (n) their rivers into blood, & their (o) showers that they might not drink.

(n) The first plague. (o) Pools, lakes, and all sorts of water, yea showers, or rain water which seldom happeneth in Aegypt.

45 He sent upon them (p) a swarm of flies, and it eat them: and (q) the frog, and it destroyed them. [1]

(p) The fourth plague, in order as they are recited in Exodus. (q) The second plague. [1] * Coenomyiam.

46 And he gave their fruits to (r) the blast, and their labours to (s) the locust.

(r) This was a less plague, not mentioned in Exodus, with the greater. (s) The eighth plague. [1]

[1] Exod. 10.

47 And he killed their vineyards with (t) hail: and their mulberry trees with (v) hoar-frost.

(t) The seventh plague. (v) This also is omitted in Exodus. [1]

[1] Exod. 9.

48 And he delivered (w) their beast to hail: and their possession (x) to fire.

(w) Not only all trees, and plants, but also beasts were subject to the hail, (x) and to fiery lightnings.

49 He sent upon them (y) the wrath of his indignation: indignation, & wrath, and tribulation: immissions (z) by evil angels.

(y) In these general terms, of wrath, indignation, and tribulation, the Prophet comprehendeth all the other plagues, to wit, the third of sciniphs, the fifth of pestilence, the sixth of boyles in men and beasts, the ninth of darkness three days together. (z) All which God sent by the ministry of devils, evil Angels.

50 He made a way to the path of his wrath, he spared not their lives from death: and their cattle he shut up in death. 51 And (a) he struck all the first-born in the land of Aegypt: the first fruits of all their labours in the tabernacles (b) of Cham.

(a) The tenth and greatest plague, Exod. 11. v. 5. & c. 12. v. 29. [1] (b) Egyptians also descended from Cham, by his son Mesraim. Gen. 10. v. 6.

[1] Exod. 11.

52 And he (c) took away his people as sheep: and led them as a flock in the desert.

(c) After that Aegypt was thus plagued, God brought Israel out of their servitude, as a shepherd leadeth his sheep, and defendeth them.

53 And he brought them forth in hope, and they feared not: and the sea covered their enemies. 54 And he brought them into (d) the mount of his (e) sanctification, the mount, which his right hand purchased. And he cast (f) out the gentiles from their face: and by lot he divided the land of them in a cord of distribution:

(d) Judea a hilly country. (e) Into that country which God chose, and endowed with many blessings. (f) As is written in Josue.

55 And he made the tribes of Israel to dwell in their tabernacles. 56 And (g) they tempted, and exasperated God the highest, and they kept not his testimonies.

(g) After the conquest and quiet possession, the Israelites often fell into gross sins, especially in the time of Judges.

57 And they turned away themselves, & kept not the covenant: even as their fathers, they were turned as a (h) crooked bow.

(h) A crooked bow deceiveth the archer, so this people failed to serve God, and deceived themselves.

58 They incensed him to wrath in their (i) hills: and in their [1] gravens they provoked him (k) to emulation.

(i) In their altars erected in hills to Idols. [1] * Sculptilibus.
(k) By graven images of Idols, they provoked God to indignation.

59 God heard, and contemned: and he brought Israel to nothing (l) exceedingly

(l) Not absolutely to nothing, but punished them exceedingly, till they repented and then spared and delivered them from tribulation, as appeareth in the book of Judges.

60 And he rejected the tabernacle (m) of Silo, his tabernacle, (n) where he dwelt among men.

(m) The Ark of God sometime kept in Silo, Iosue 18. in the tribe of Ephraim, was taken by the Philistiims. 1. Reg. 4. and never returned thither again. (n) But wheresoever the Ark was, there God more especially heard their petitions, and gave answers.

61 And he delivered (o) their force into captivity: and their beauty into the hands of the enemy.

(o) For their sins God suffered the Ark to be taken,

62 And he (p) shut up his people in the sword: and he despised his inheritance.

(p) And the Israelites to be sore afflicted by their enemies.

63 (q) Fire devoured their young men: and their virgins were not lamented.

(q) The zeal and just wrath of God suffered these calamities to happen.

64 Their (r) Priests fell by the sword: and their widows were not wept for.

(r) Ophni and Phinees the sons of Heli slain: and Heli himself hearing that the Ark was taken, fell from his stool and broke his neck. 1. Reg. 4.

65 And (s) our Lord was raised up as one that sleepeth: as a mighty man having surfeited of wine.

(s) Nevertheless God plagued the infidels, and conserved his Church. 1. Reg. 5.

66 And he struck his enemies on the hinder parts: an everlasting reproach he gave to them. 67 And he rejected the tabernacle (t) of Joseph: and the tribe of Ephraim he chose not.

(t) As before. v. 60.

68 But he chose the tribe (v) of Juda, mount Sion which he loved.

(v) After a time the Ark was brought into the tribe of Juda.

69 And he built (w) his sanctuary as of unicorns in the land, which he hath founded for ever.

(w) The Church was firm, and ever preserved in the old testament till Christ, and from Christ's time to the end of the world.

70 And (x) he chose David his servant, and took him from the flocks of sheep: from after the ewes with young he took him.

(x) God's particular grace in choosing and exalting David, was a special benefit to the Israelites.

71 To (y) feed Jacob his servant, and Israel his inheritance.

(y) To rule and govern the people of Israel.

72 And he fed them in the innocency of his heart: and in the understandings of (z) his hands he conducted them.

(z) Prudently using his power and authority.

ANNOTATIONS.
PSALM LXXVII.

40. How often have they exasperated?] Moyses (Deu. 9. v. 7.) repeating what had passed in the desert, chargeth the people that they had still provoked our Lord to wrath, [1] from the day, that they came out of Aegypt, and always contended against him. And our Lord himself expostulating their ingratitude & often murmuring saith (Num. 14. v. 22.) in the beginning of the second year, that they had then tempted him ten times [2]; either by this certain number signifying an uncertain, or else chiefly ten times; for so often we find recorded that they tempted him, and murmured within that small time more notoriously. First [3], near unto the red sea (Exod. 14. v. 11.) where seeing the Aegyptians pursuing them, they murmured against Moyses; for bringing them out of Aegypt, saying: It had been much better to have served the Aegyptians, than to die in

CHAPTER LXXVIII.

The Prophet, in person of the Church, lamenteth the cruelty of persecutors (both in the old and new testament) 5. prayeth for release, with just revenge against God's enemies, that blaspheme his name, 3. and promiseth to be grateful in divine praises.[1]

[1] The Church suffereth very great persecutions. The 6. key.

A Psalm (a) to Asaph. O God (b) the Gentiles are come into thine inheritance, they (c) have polluted thy holy temple: they have made Jerusalem (d) as a watch tower of fruits.

(a) To be sung by Asaph and his company, in the behalf of people united in faith. (b) Cruel infidels have invaded those things, which pertain to thy Church: (c) even possessed & profaned the holy temple of the Jews, & Churches of Catholic Christians. Fulfilled by Antiochus in Jerusalem, by the Vandals in Afrike, by Protestants, and Puritans, in diverse parts of Europe, and will be more universally by Antichrist in all Christendom. (d) Instead of great and fair Churches, God's servants are fain to use mean houses, yea poor cottages.

2 They have made (e) the carcasses of thy servants, meats for the fowls of the air: the flesh of thy Saints for the beasts of the land.

(e) Some persecutors suffer not Martyrs' bodies to be buried, but hang them on poles and pinnacles, where birds may eat them.

3 They have poured out their blood as water round about Jerusalem: and there was none to bury them.

4 We are (f) become a reproach to our neighbours: a scorn and mock to them that are round about us.

(f) Christians Galileans, Catholics Homousians, and now Papists, in spite and reproach.

5 How long, o Lord, wilt thou (g) be angry for ever: shall thy zeal be kindled as a fire?

(g) Sins provoking God's wrath are one cause why he suffereth his people to be persecuted.

6 Pour out thy wrath upon the Gentiles, (h) that have not known thee: & upon the Kingdoms, that have not invocated thy name.

(h) Though the faithful commit some sins, yet in respect that they believe rightly, have zeal in God's cause, and deny not God, they are near to grace and favour.

7 Because they have devoured Jacob: and his place they have made desolate. 8 (i) Remember not our old iniquities, let thy mercies quickly prevent us: because we are become exceeding (k) poor.

(i) Especially when they repent, and confess their sins; than those that neither know nor will know God, but obstinately impugn and resist the truth. (k) So much afflicted, and despised, that none will regard the truth which we profess.

9 Help us, o God our Saviour: and for the glory of thy name o Lord deliver us: and be propitious to our sins for thy name's sake. 10 Lest they say perhaps amongst the Gentiles: (l) where is their God? And (m) be notified in the nations before our eyes. The revenge of the blood of thy servants, which hath been shed:

(l) Albeit, o Lord, thou suffer us to be punished, yet suffer not thine enemies to insult, as though thou were not our God; and consequently thou hadst no people at all in the world. (m) Therefore we pray, that the revenge of thy servants' blood may be so notified, that it cannot be denied, nor doubted of. Which is also here prophesied, that it will so come to pass in the end.

11 let the groaning of the fettered enter in thy sight. According to the greatness of thine arm possess thou (n) the children of them that are put to death.

(n) Preserve also, o God, the relics of thy servants, the successors of thy Martyrs.

12 And (o) render to our neighbours sevenfold in their bosom: their reproach wherewith they have reproached thee, o Lord.

(o) This also is a prophecy, that God will most severely revenge the blasphemy of persecutors.

13 But (p) we thy people, and the sheep of thy pasture, will confess to thee for ever. Unto generation and generation we will shew forth thy praise.

(p) God's people delivered from persecution, and perpetually conserved, will always praise God for the same.

CHAPTER LXXIX.

The Prophet prayeth for the release of Israel in great tribulation. 15. Foresheweth the coming of Christ to redeem man from sin, and from thraldom of the devil. [1]

[1] Christ our Redeemer from sin and captivity. The 5. key.

Unto (a) the end, for (b) them that shall be changed, testimony to (c) Asaph, a Psalm.

(a) Pertaining to the new Testament, (b) especially to Gentiles that shall be converted to Christ. (c) For perpetual memory to the congregation of faithful.

2 Thou that rulest Israel, attend: that (d) conductest Joseph as a sheep. Which sittest upon the Cherubs, (e) be manifest (f)

(d) By Joseph the Prophet understandeth all Israel; because the first-birth-right being taken from Ruben was given to him, to wit double portion of inheritance, two tribes of twelve. (e) Appear and shew thy mighty hand before thy people: (f) whereof Ephraim, Benjamin, and Manasses following the Ark, when they marched or camped, should most directly see what appeared therein, the other nine tribes being places before it, and on both sides. Num. 2.

3 before Ephraim, Benjamin, and Manasses. Raise (g) up thy might, and come to save us.

(g) Thou which always can help us, now use thy power in delivering us from this temporal misery.

4 O God (h) convert us: and shew (i) thy face, & we shall be saved.

(h) Set us in a better state. (i) Shew thy benign countenance and favour. Mystically, send the promised Messias, Christ, the essential Image of God. 2. Cor. 4. v. 4. Colos. 1. v. 15.

5 O Lord the God of hosts, how long wilt thou be angry (k) upon the prayer of thy servant?

(k) How long wilt thou defer to hear our prayer?

6 Thou wilt feed us with the bread of tears: and give us drink with tears (l) in measure.

(l) Thou dost justly punish us, but thou temperest the same with measure, that it exceed not to our ruin.

7 Thou hast made us to be a contradiction to our neighbours: and our enemies have scorned us. 8 O God of hosts (m) convert us: and shew thy face, and we (n) shall be saved.

(m) God first preventing with his grace, (n) man may cooperate therewith to his justification and salvation.

9 Thou didst transport (o) the vineyard out of Aegypt: thou didst cast out (p) the Gentiles, and plantedst it.

(o) Thy Church and people, (p) The Chananites.

10 Thou wast the guide of the way, (q) in the sight thereof: thou didst plant the roots thereof, and it (r) filled the earth.

(q) The cloud and pillar of fire were visible guides. (r) And it multiplied mightily.

11 (s) The shadow of it covered the mountains: and the boughs of it the cedars of God.

(s) Hyperbolical speech, to signify the great multiplication of the Israelites.

12 It extended her branches even to (t) the sea; and her boughs unto (v) the river.

(t) From the Mediterranean sea of Palestine, (v) to the river Euphrates. Exod. 23. v. 31. Deut. 11. v. 24.

13 Why hast thou destroyed the hedge thereof: and all that pass by the way do pluck it. 14 The (w) boar of the wood hath destroyed it: and (x) the singular wild beast hath eaten it.

(w) Cruel enemies more like to most cruel beasts than to men. (x) Yea so cruel, as none else in the world are like unto them.

15 O God of hosts return: regard (y) from heaven, and see, and visit this vineyard.

(y) The Prophet now prayeth for the coming of Christ, which he saw in spirit.

16 And (z) perfit it, which thy right hand hath planted: and upon (a) the son of man whom thou hast confirmed to thee.

(z) The Church of the old testament in her best state wanted the perfection which the Church of Christ hath. (a) Christ our Messias most commonly called by this title: The Son of man.

17 (b) Things burnt with fire, and digged down at the increpation of thy countenance shall perish.

(b) So thy vineyard cannot endure if it be still afflicted, and trodden down.

18 Let (c) thy hand be upon the man of thy right hand: and upon the son of man, whom thou hast confirmed to thee.

(c) Christ working by God's power redresseth all miseries.

19 And we depart not from thee, thou wilt quicken us: and we will invocate thy name. 20 (d) O Lord the God of hosts convert us: and shew thy face, and we shall be saved.

(d) The same is the 8. and the 15. verse (with little alteration) and here repeated the third time. In which we also pray for three things: First to be purged and converted from sin: secondly to be illuminated by Christ, the Image of God: Thirdly, to be sanctified, and saved in eternal glory, to have the fruition of the most Blessed Trinity.

CHAPTER LXXX.

All men are invited to celebrate festival days, 6. which were instituted in memory of benefits received. 9. The devout shall be protected, and the negligent left in distress. [1]

[1] Invitation to celebrate festival days devoutly. The 7. key.

Unto (a) the end, for (b) wine presses, a Psalm to (c) Asaph himself.

(a) This Psalm pertaineth not only to the old testament, but also to the new. (b) God's servants oppressed with tribulations. (c) To be sung by Asaph a chief master of music.

2 Rejoice to God our helper: make Jubilation to the God of Jacob. 3 Take ye Psalm, and (d) give timbrel: pleasant Psalter with the harp.

(d) Make ready all these musical instruments.

4 Sound ye with trumpet in (e) the [1] new moon, in (f) the [2] notable day of your solemnity.

(e) In the Calends, or first day of every month, in remembrance of God's providence, and perpetual government of all creatures: [1] The feast of Noemenia. (f) and most especially solemnity in the first day of the seventh month, in memory of Isaac conserved from death, in whom God promised Abraham to multiply his seed, and to bless all nations. Gen. 17. v. 21. c. 21. v. 12. c. 22. v. 18. [2] Feast of trumpets.

5 Because it is a precept in Israel, and judgment to the God of Jacob. 6 He put it for a testimony in (g) Joseph, when he came out of the Land of Aegypt: he heard a tongue which he knew not.

(g) The people of Israel signified by Joseph, as Psal. 79. v. 2.

7 He [1] turned away his back (h) from burdens: his hands served in baskets.

[1] In memory of this benefit Pasch was instituted. (h) God delivered the same people from their untolerable bondage of carrying burdens in baskets, from gathering straw, making bricks, and other servitude. Exo. 1. v. 14. c. 5. v. 7.

8 In (i) tribulation thou didst invocate me, and I heard thee: I heard thee in the secret of the tempest: I (k) proved thee at the water of contradiction.

(i) The admonition of God to the people: (k) yet after so great benefits thou didst murmur, and contradict me. Exo. 17. Num. 20.

9 Hear, o my people, and I (l) will contest thee: Israel (m) if thou wilt hear me.

(l) Seriously admonish thee. (m) Man by free will may choose whether he will obey or no.

10 [1] There shall be (n) no new god in thee, neither shalt thou adore a strange god.

[1] The feast of Pentecost in memory of the law. (n) This was another great benefit, to give an express law, for their instruction.

11 For I am the Lord thy God, which brought thee out of the land of Aegypt: (o) dilate thy mouth and I will fill it.

(o) Observing my commandments, ask what thou wilt, and I will give it thee.

12 And my People heard not my voice: and Israel attended not to me. 13 And I let them alone, according to the desires of their heart, they shall go in their own inventions. [1]

[1] Rom. 1. v. 24.

14 If my people had heard me, if Israel had walked in my ways: 15 I had (p) for nothing (q) perhaps humbled their enemies: and had laid my hand upon those that afflict them.

(p) Very easily, (q) of my freewill and liberality, without necessity or obligation.

16 The enemies of our Lord have lied to him: and (r) their time shall be for ever.

(r) The wicked that promise to serve God, and do it not, shall be in eternal torments.

17 And (s) he fed them of the fat of corn: and out of the rock with honey he filled them.

(s) In the mean time God bestowed these benefits upon them, for the justs' sake.

CHAPTER LXXXI.

The Prophet declareth, 2. that God reprehendeth unjust Judges and Magistrates: premonisheth them of his severe & eternal punishment: 8. whereto the prophet conforming his will prayeth for the same. [1]

[1] Admonition to Magistrates.
The 7. key.

A Psalm to Asaph. God stood in the assembly (a) of gods, and in the midst he (b) judgeth gods.

(a) The words of the Prophet, admonishing all Magistrates, that when they sit in judgement, or determine any cause, God who is there and every-where present, (b) attendeth their processes and therefore it behoveth them to be advised what they do: even as if they heard God speaking as here followeth:

2 (c) How long judge ye iniquity: and accept ye the persons of sinners.

(c) The words of God, though not uttered sensibly, yet in effect intimated by his law, according whereto he will proceed in judgement against unjust judges.

3 Judge ye for the needy and the pupil: justify ye the humble, and the poor. 4 Take away the poor: and deliver the needy from the hand of the sinner. 5 They (d) knew not, neither did they understand, they walk in darkness: (e) all the foundations of the earth shall be moved.

(d) Such judges proceed in gross ignorance, not caring to understand, but content to walk in darkness. (e) Ye are so evil disposed, that you would turn all upside down, justifying the wicked, and condemning the just.

6 I said: You are (f) gods, and the sons of the highest all.

(f) For your office which you participate of me, you are certain gods upon earth.

7 (g) But you shall die as men: and fall (h) as one of the Princes. [1]

(g) But when you die you shall find that you are men, subject to God's judgement: (h) yea your punishment will be grievous, and importable: for the mighty shall mightily suffer torments. [1] Sap. 6.

8 (i) Arise, o God, judge the earth: (k) because thou shalt inherit in all the Gentiles.

(i) Again the words of the Prophet praying God, (k) that seeing he is Lord of all, he will judge all.

CHAPTER LXXXII.

The Church impugned by all sorts of enemies 10. prayeth God to confound them, as he hath done diverse the like: 17. whereby some shall be converted. [1]

[1] Persecuters of the Church confounded or converted. The 6. key.

A Canticle of Psalm to Asaph. 2 O God (a) who shall be like to thee? (b) Hold not thy peace, neither (c) be thou appeased, o God:

(a) Seeing none is like to thee, o God, (b) shew thy power and majesty, (c) be not silent.

3 for behold (d) thine enemies have made a sound: they that hate thee (e) have lifted up the head.

(d) The cruel persecuters are most insolent (e) and proud.

4 They have taken malignant counsel upon thy people: and they have devised against thy Saints.

5 They have said: Come, and let us destroy them out of (f) the nation: and let (g) the name of Israel be remembered no more.

(f) That there be no more any faithful people, (g) any Catholic left alive.

6 Because they have devised with one consent: they have together made a covenant against thee. 7 The tabernacles of (h) the Idumeians, and (i) the Ismahelites, (k) Moab, and (l) the Agarens.

(h) The progeny of Esau, (i) the seed of Ismael (k) descending from the elder son of Lot. (l) The issue of Abraham by Agar, who falsely call themselves Saracens, as if they were of Sara.

8 (m) Gebal, and (n) Ammon, (o) Amalec: (p) the foreigners, with (q) the inhabitants of Tyre.

(m) People of Gebal a city of Syria, (n) of the other son of Lot. (o) Those that first oppugned the Israelites, after they were parted from Aegypt. Exo. 17. (p) The Philistians, (q) and Tyrians, all near neighbours, and some of them near akin to the Israelites, were their great enemies.

9 Yea and (r) Assur also is come with them: they are made an aid to the children of Lot.

(r) Others also coming further off, joined against God's people, in figure that all heretics, and other infidels conspire together against Catholics.

10 Do to them as (s) to Madian, and (t) Sisara: as to (v) Jabin in the torrent Cisson.

(s) The Psalmist therefore prayeth (and withal prophesieth) that God will at last destroy them, as he did Madian. Num. 31. Iudic. 6. & 7. (t) Sisara, Captain general, (v) for Jabin King of Asor near Cisson. Iudic. 4. v. 7. & 23.

11 They perished (w) in Endor: they were made as (x) the dung of the earth.

(w) Within the territory of Manasses (Ios. 17.) which they invaded. (x) Slain and not buried.

12 Put their Princes as (y) Oreb, and Zeb, and Zebee, and Salmana. All their Princes:

(y) These four Princes of the Madianites were slain by Gedeon's forces. Iudic. 7. & 8.

13 which have said: Let us possess the Sanctuary of God for an inheritance. 14 My God put them (z) as a wheel: and as stubble before the face of the wind.

(z) By four similitudes the Prophet describeth the punishment that shall fall upon persecuters.

15 Even as fire that burneth a wood: & as a flame that burneth the mountains. 16 So shalt thou pursue them in thy tempest: and in thy wrath thou shalt trouble them. 17 Fill their faces with ignominy: and (a) they will seek thy name, o Lord.

(a) God by punishing seeketh the conversion of sinners, not their eternal death.

18 Let (b) them be ashamed, and troubled for ever and ever: and let them be confounded, and perish.

(b) But such as be still obstinate, and finally impenitent do perish for ever.

19 And let them know that (c) Lord is thy name, thou only the Highest in all the earth.

(c) God only the Creator of heaven and earth, is properly called LORD: Whose essential and incommunicable name is: WHICH IS. Exo. 3. v. 14. & 6. v. 3.

CHAPTER LXXXIII.

Devout persons fervently desire eternal glory, 6. accounting it in the mean time, a happy state to be in the militant Church, 12. where God first giving grace, will give glory in the triumphant. [1]

[1] Eternal glory.
The 10. key.

Unto the end, (a) for wine presses, to (b) the children of Core, a Psalm.

(a) For men afflicted in this vale of misery. (b) By the children of Core not being musicians (but porters in the temple, 1. Par. 26.) S. Augustin here and in other titles of Psalms, understandeth the faithful Children of Christ.

2 How beloved are (c) thy tabernacles, o Lord of hosts!

(c) The glorious mansions in heaven, which God hath prepared for the just.

3 my soul coveteth and (d) fainteth unto the courts of our Lord. My heart and (e) my flesh have rejoiced toward the living God.

(d) Vehement desires do sometimes deprive us of external sense. (e) The mind rejoicing in hope, the body is also recreated, relieved, and revived, which before was dull and heavy.

4 For (f) the sparrow also hath found her an house: and (g) the turtle-dove a nest for herself, where she may lay her young ones. Thine (h) altars, o Lord of hosts: my King, and my God.

(f) As sparrows by natural instinct seeking habitations, find houses to dwell in, (g) and turtles have nests, wherein to lay their young ones: so faithful souls seek to dwell in heaven, and in the mean time to lay up good works within the Catholic Church; out of which (saith Saint Augustin in this place) how good soever works do seem (as when pagans and heretics feed the hungry, clothe the naked, receive strangers into their houses, visit the sick, comfort prisoners) being not laid in the nest, conculcabuntur, & conterentur: non servabuntur, non custodientur: they shall be trod under-foot, they shall be bruised in pieces: they shall not be conserved, they shall not be kept: but (that such works may be profitable and be conserved) they must be done in true faith, in the Catholic faith, in society of the unity of the Church. (h) Works are good, and rightly laid up when they are done in unity, and participation of God's Altars, the most proper places of Divine service, of external Sacrifice in this life, and spiritual sacrifice of perfect praises in eternal glory; where all Saints without ceasing sing: Holy, holy, holy, Lord God of hosts Isaiae 6. Apoc. 4.

5 Blessed are they that dwell in (i) thy house, o Lord: for ever and ever they shall praise thee.

(i) The Catholic Church.

6 Blessed is the man, whose help is from thee: he (k) hath disposed ascensions in his heart,

(k) The just by God's grace and help, may resolve to ascend by steps and degrees, from virtue to virtue (v. 8.) even to heaven,

7 in (l) the vale of tears, in the place which he hath appointed.

(l) though he be now in this vale of tears, by reason of man's sin, who otherwise was before sin in Paradise, a place of delight.

8 For (m) the law-giver shall give (n) blessing, they shall go (o) from virtue into virtue: (p) the God of gods shall be seen in Sion.

(m) Christ our Law-giver, (n) giveth aboundance of graces, (o) with continual increase. (p) But our only omnipotent God, is to be seen by this effect of his grace, in the Church and not elsewhere.

9 Lord God of hosts hear my prayer: receive with thine ear, o God of Jacob. 10 Behold, o God our protector: and (q) look upon the face of thy Christ.

(q) Agreeably to this the Church maketh all her petitions, concluding all prayers, By Christ our Lord.

11 Because (r) better is one day in thy courts, above thousands. I have chosen to be (s) an abject in the house of my God: rather than to dwell (t) in the tabernacles of sinners.

(r) In respect of the future retribution, which every one shall receive according to their deserts, one day in God's Church is better than thousands out of it. (s) And better to be in the poorest state of Catholic Christians, (t) than in greatest palaces or highest dignities amongst sinners.

12 Because God (v) loveth mercy and truth: our Lord will give (w) grace (x) and glory.

(v) The Divine wisdom so useth mercy, and verity, that neither may prejudice the other: (w) and so giveth grace in this life, (x) and glory in the next.

13 He will not deprive them of good things, that (y) walk in innocency: o Lord of hosts, blessed is the man that hopeth in thee.

(y) Besides innocency conserved without sin, there is also innocency after remission of sin, of which the Prophet here speaketh.

CHAPTER LXXXIV.

With commemoration of God's former benefits, 5. Christ's Incarnation is prophesied, 9. bringing peace and salvation, 11. mercy and justice concurring together. [1]

[1] Incarnation of Christ.
The 5. key.

Unto the end, to the children of Core, a Psalm. 2 O Lord thou (a) hast blessed thy land: thou (b) hast turned away the captivity of Jacob.

(a) God bestowed many great benefits upon the people of Israel: (b) he brought them out of the bondage of Aegypt.

3 Thou (c) hast forgiven the iniquity of thy people: thou (d) hast covered all their sins.

(c) Remitted their manifold sins: (d) pardoned also a great part of due punishment.

4 Thou hast mitigated all thy wrath: thou hast turned away from the wrath of thine indignation.

5 (e) Convert us, o God our Saviour: and (f) avert thy wrath from us.

(e) As thou hast spared thy peculiar people, so we beseech thee, o God Creator and general Saviour of all mankind, (f) mitigate thy wrath towards us all.

6 Wilt thou be wrath with us for ever? Or wilt thou extend thy wrath from generation unto generation?

7 O God thou (g) being turned shalt quicken us: and thy people (h) shall rejoice in thee.

(g) Till God first shew his mercy, sinners lie dead in guilt of sin, but by his grace they are stirred up, and quickened: (h) and joyfully return to God.

8 Shew us, o Lord, thy mercy and give us thy salvation. 9 I will (i) hear what our Lord God will speak in me: (k) because he will speak peace upon his people. And upon (l) his saints: and upon them, that are converted to the heart.

(i) The words of the Prophet, (k) signifying that God had revealed unto him the redemption of mankind. (l) Not all men are justified, and saved, but those that are heartily and sincerely converted.

10 But yet his salvation is nigh to them that (m) fear him: that glory may inhabit in our land.

(m) Though all be not saved (because many will not cooperate to God's grace) yet very many having the fear of God, which is the beginning of godly wisdom, freely accept of God's mercy, and so the Church is gloriously propagated.

11 (n) Mercy and truth have met each other: (o) justice and peace have kissed.

(n) Whereas God's mercy would save all, and his truth or justice requireth that sins be duly punished, by Christ's Passion and death, sufficient satisfaction is offered for all sins, and those that will be partakers by penance, and conformity to God's law, may have remission, (o) and so justice is observed, and peace made between God and his subjects.

12 (p) Truth is risen out of the earth: (q) and justice hath looked down from heaven.

(p) Integrity of conscience reigneth in good men, (q) God sending just means from heaven to save them.

13 For (r) our Lord certes will give benignity: and (s) our land shall give her fruit.

(r) God giveth grace, (s) and so men yield fruit.

14 (t) Justice shall walk before him: and shall set his steps in the way.

(t) Yea they walk in justice, and right path of God's law.

CHAPTER LXXXV.

In consideration of his own imperfections, the royal prophet, or other faithful person prayeth God, 5. according to his mercy and goodness, 9. shewed in converting Gentiles, 13. and in delivering the supplicant himself from the state of damnation, 16. that he will still direct and defend him against all enemies. [1]

[1] A prayer for continual grace.
The 7. key.

A prayer (a) to David himself. Incline thine ear, o Lord, & (b) hear me: (c) because I am needy and poor.

(a) A form of prayer for King David, and for any faithful person. (b) There be sundry just causes which move God to hear our prayers: (c) first our necessity requireth God's help.

2 Keep my soul, because (d) I am holy: save thy servant my God, that (e) hopeth in thee.

(d) Secondly, because we profess, and promise to lead a holy life. (e) Thirdly, because we trust and hope in God.

3 Have mercy on me, o Lord, because I have cried to thee (f) all the day:

(f) Fourthly, because we persevere in prayer.

4 make joyful the soul of thy servant, because to thee, o Lord, have I (g) lifted up my soul.

(g) Fifthly, if we pray with attention of mind.

5 Because thou, o Lord, art (h) sweet, and (i) mild: and (k) of much mercy to all that invocate thee. (l)

(h) Sixthly, because God of his own nature is benign, ready to bestow benefits. (i) Seventhly, he is meek to remit offences. (k) Eighthly he is merciful to mitigate the punishment, to those that make recourse unto him. (l) For these causes we pray as followeth.

6 Receive, o Lord, my prayer with thine ears: and attend to the voice of my petition. 7 In the day of my tribulation I have called to thee: because thou hast heard me. 8 There is not the like to thee amongst gods, o Lord: and there is not according to thy works. 9 (m) All nations whatsoever thou hast made, shall (n) come, and shall adore before thee, o Lord: and they shall (o) glorify thy name.

(m) Vocation of Gentiles. (n) They shall come by faith, (o) and glorify God by good works. Mat. 5. v. 17.

10 Because thou art great and doing marvelous things: thou only art God. 11 Conduct me, o Lord, in thy way, and I will walk in thy truth: let my heart rejoice that it may fear thy name. 12 I will (p) confess to thee, o Lord my God, with all my heart, and will glorify thy name for ever.

(p) Confession of praise.

13 Because thy mercy is great upon me: & thou hast delivered my soul out of (q) the lower hell.

(q) From the state of eternal damnation.

14 O God the wicked are risen up upon me, and the synagogue of the mighty have sought my soul: and they have not set thee in their sight. 15 And thou, o Lord, the God of compassion and merciful, patient, and of much mercy, and (r) true.

(r) In performing all promises.

16 Have respect to me and have mercy on me, (s) give thine empire to thy servant: and save the son of thy handmaid.

(s) A digression (usual to Prophets) of Christ's Empire & Kingdom the Church, given to him, being the son of an Immaculate Virgin, the handmaid of God.

17 Make with me (t) a sign unto God, that they may see which hate me, and may be confounded: (v) because thou o Lord hast holpen me.

(t) The chief and principal sign of Christ's, and his Church's glory, is his Resurrection, prefigured in Ionas. (v) Whereby all enemies are confounded, either to their conversion, or to eternal damnation. See S. Augustin.

CHAPTER LXXXVI.

The Church of Christ beginning in Jerusalem, 3. is extended to all Nations, 5. glorious, 9. and permanent 7. in holy joy. [1]

[1] The Catholic Church glorious.
The 6. key.

To the children of Core, a Psalm of Canticle. The foundations thereof in the holy (a) mountains:

(a) Christ's Church was first founded in Jerusalem on Whitsunday, Act. 2. in mount Sion, which hath two tops, in one of which the Temple stood, in the other David's tower or palace.

2 our Lord loveth the gates of Sion above all the Tabernacles of Jacob. 3 Glorious things are said of thee, o city of God. 4 (b) I will be mindful of (c) Rahab, and Babylon knowing me. Behold (d) the foreigners, and Tyre, & the people of the Aethiopians, these (e) were there.

(b) The Prophet in the person of Christ saith he will commend unto his Apostles, and other Apostolical men, that they convert all nations (as our Saviour gave express commission and commandment. Math. 28. Luc. 24. v. 47. Act. 1. v. 8.) (c) naming here Rahab (which is Aegypt) and Babylon: (d) The Philistiims, Tyrians, Aethiopians, (e) & the rest, shall be regenerate in this Church, which for the assured certainty thereof (after the Prophet's manner of speaking) is affirmed in the pretertense, as if it were then done.

5 Shall it not be said of Sion: (f) Man and man, is born in her; and (g) the Highest himself founded her?

(f) It shall be reported, or one shall say to another: Lo this and that man, all these and all these men are regenerate by Baptism in the Church of Christ. (g) God himself; Christ God and man, founded this Church.

6 Our Lord will declare (h) in scriptures of peoples, and (i) of Princes: of those that have been in her.

(h) The multitude of the elect is so great, that only God knoweth the number, (i) and the qualities of all sorts, of Princes, Prelates, and Peoples.

7 The (k) habitation in thee, is as it were of all rejoicing.

(k) Great spiritual joy with peace of conscience, is in true Christian Catholics in the militant Church; but the blessed have the most absolute & secure joy of all, in the Church triumphant.

CHAPTER LXXXVII.

A faithful person sore and long afflicted, lamentably complaineth, praying God, 15. not still to repel him, being left desolate 19. without all consolation of friends. [1]

[1] A prayer in long affliction.
The 7 key.

A Canticle of a Psalm, to the children of Core, unto the end, for (a) Maheleth (b) to answer, (c) of understanding to Eman the Ezrahite.

(a) An instrument of music apt for lamentable songs. Not expressed in the title of any other Psalm. Perhaps because this Psalm mixeth not any consolation with mourning, as other Psalms do, which are also prayers in affliction. As the 30. 53. 63. 73. (b) Neither is this word in any other title. It is added here to admonish us, that as this Psalm and some others were sung by two choirs, one answering the other, so we must in answer and imitation of Christ, suffer long and great afflictions with patience, seeing he in his passion was left without ordinary consolation. (c) By some interpreted (his brethren) For Christ (saith S. Augustin) vouchsafeth to make them his brethren, which understand the mystery of his Cross, and not only are not ashamed thereof, but also faithfully glory therein.

2 O Lord the God of my salvation: (d) in the day have I cried, and in the night before thee.

(d) I have cried to thee very often both by day and by night.

3 Let my prayer enter in thy sight: incline thine ear to my petition. 4 Because my soul is replenished with evils: & (e) my life hath approached to hell.

(e) I am almost dead.

5 I (f) am accounted with them that descend into the lake. I am become as a man without help,

(f) Accounted as dead, and ready to be buried.

6 (g) free among the dead, as the wounded sleeping in the sepulchres, of whom thou art mindful no more: and they are cast off from thy hand.

(g) If I were dead, I should be free from these afflictions. Especially it agreeth to Christ, who was free, yea of infinite power amongst the dead.

7 They have put me in (h) the lower lake: in the dark places, and in the shadow of death.

(h) Mine enemies have endeavoured not only to bereave me of temporal life, whereby I should go into limbus, but also to kill my soul spiritually, whereby I should descend into the lower hell of the damned.

8 Thy (i) fury is confirmed upon me: and all thy waves thou hast brought in upon me.

(i) Thy just wrath also, o God, hath exceedingly afflicted me.

9 Thou hast made my familiars far from me: they have put me abomination to themselves. I was delivered and came not forth: 10 mine eyes languished for poverty. I cried to thee o Lord all the day: I stretched out my hands to thee. 11 Wilt thou (k) do marvels to the dead: or shall physicians raise to life, and they confess to thee?

(k) O God deliver me whilst I am yet living, for I may not look for extraordinary and miraculous help, as to be raised again after death.

12 Shall any (l) in the sepulchre declare thy mercy, and thy truth in perdition?

(l) When I shall be dead & buried, I cannot denounce thy praise, as now I can, to mortal men.

13 Shall thy marvelous works be known (m) in darkness: and thy justice in the land of oblivion.

(m) Much less shall the damned praise thee in eternal perdition.

14 And I o Lord have cried to thee: and in the morning shall my prayer prevent thee. 15 Why doest thou, o Lord, reject my prayer: turnest away thy face from me? 16 I am poor, and in labours (n) from my youth: and being (o) exalted, humbled, and troubled.

(n) As well young (o) as waxing elder I have been still afflicted.

17 Thy wraths have passed upon me: and thy terrors have troubled me. 18 They have compassed me as water all the day: they compassed me together. 19 Thou (p) hast made friend, and neighbour far from me and my familiars because of misery.

(p) My miserable estate hath alienated all friends, neighbours, & acquaintances from me.

CHAPTER LXXXVIII.

God's mercy and truth, with his great promises to David, 6. his power in the whole world, and just judgements, are the true joy of his servants. 20. Christ's kingdom shall remain for ever: 31. yea many offending yet all shall not perish, 39. but after great affliction, 47. God will respect man's infirmity. 50. his own promise, and the enemies reproaching his servants and himself: 53. who is blessed for ever.[1]

[1] The Church of Christ never faileth.
The 6. key.

Of understanding (a) to Ethan the Ezrahite.

(a) Otherwise called Idithun. 1. Paral. 25. or rather Ethan, who was very wise, mentioned with others, to whom Salomon is preferred for wisdom. 3. Reg. 4. v. 31. and signifieth strong: applied here to those that are strong in assured hope of Christ's promises, notwithstanding it seemeth sometimes to the weak, that his promises are not performed.

2 The mercies of our Lord I will sing for ever. In generation (b) and generation I will shew forth thy truth in my mouth.

(b) In all generations.

3 Because thou saidst: Mercy shall be built up for ever (c) in the heavens: thy truth shall be prepared in them.

(c) The heavens shall rather fall, than God's truth fail. Mystically, in the Apostles, and by their preaching, the Church of Christ is built for ever.

4 I have ordained a testament with mine elect, I have sworn to David my servant: 5 (d) for ever will I prepare thy seed. And I will build thy seat unto generation and generation.

(d) David's seed conserved till Christ was born of his Virgin Mother: and in his spiritual seed, his kingdom the Church is for ever conserved. Otherwise not verified of David's temporal kingdom, which decayed in the captivity of Babylon, and is now wholly destroyed.

6 The heavens shall confess thy marvelous works o Lord: yea and thy truth in the Church of Saints. 7 For who in the clouds shall be equal to our Lord: shall be like to God among (e) the sons of God?

(e) The Angels.

8 God who is glorified in the counsel of Saints, great and terrible over all that are round about him. 9 O Lord God of hosts, who is like to thee? Thou art mighty, o Lord, and thy truth round about thee.
10 Thou rulest over the power of the sea: and the moving of the waves thereof thou doest mitigate.
11 Thou (f) humbledst the proud one, as one wounded: in the arm of thy strength thou hast dispersed thine enemies.

(f) The Prophet alludeth to the plagues and miracles in Aegypt, and in other enemies.

12 The heavens are thine, and the earth is thine, the round earth, and the fullness thereof thou hast founded: 13 the north and the sea thou hast created.
(g) Thabor and Hermon shall rejoice in thy name:

(g) Conversion of Gentiles.

14 thy arm is with might. Let (h) thy hand be confirmed, and thy (i) right hand exalted:

(h) Whether God punish, as with the left hand, (i) or bestow benefits, as with the right hand, all is to his glory, and according to mercy and truth.

15 justice and judgment is the preparation of thy seat. Mercy and truth shall go before thy face:
16 (k) blessed is the people that knoweth jubilation. Lord they shall walk in the light of thy countenance,

(k) They are spiritually happy, that do thus consider of God's marvelous proceedings, praise the same, and rejoice therein.

17 and in thy name they shall rejoice all the day: and in thy justice they shall be exalted. 18 Because thou art the glory of their strength: and in thy good pleasure shall our (l) horn be exalted.

(l) Power, and kingdom.

19 Because our protection is of our Lord: and of the holy one of Israel our King. 20 Then didst thou speak in vision to thy Saints, and saidst: [1] I have put help on the mighty one: & have exalted an elect one of my people.

[1] Thus God promised to establish the Kingdom of the Jews in David and his family. 1. Reg. 16. 1. Reg. 5. and other places. Which was performed as in a figure, but more fully in Christ. Act. 13. v. 22.

21 I have found David my servant: with mine holy oil have I anointed him. 22 For mine hand shall help him: and mine arm shall strengthen him. 23 The enemy shall nothing prevail in him: and the son of iniquity shall not add to hurt him. 24 And I will cut down his enemies before his face: and them that hate him I will put to flight. 25 And my truth, and my mercy with him: and in my name shall his horn be exalted. 26 And I will put his hand in the sea: and his right hand in the rivers. 27 He shall invocate me: Thou art my Father: my God, and the protector of my Salvation. 28 And I will put him the first-begotten, high above the kings of the earth. 29 I will keep my mercy unto him for ever: and my testament faithful to him. 30 I will put his seed for ever and ever: and his throne as the days of heaven. 31 But if his children shall forsake my law: and will not walk in my judgments. 32 If they shall profane my justices: and not keep my commandments
33 I will visit their iniquities with a rod: and their sins with stripes. 34 But my mercy I will not take away from him: neither will I hurt in my truth. 35 Neither will I profane my testament: and the words that proceed from my mouth I will not make frustrate.
36 Once I have sworn in my holy, if I lie to David:
37 his seed shall continue for ever. [1]

[1] I will not lie.

38 And (m) his throne as the Sun in my sight, and (n) as the Moon perfect for ever: and a faithful witness in heaven.

(m) Christian just souls as the sun, (n) and as the perfect, or full moon, See the first Tome, page. 716. S. Augustin also expoundeth this verse in the Anagogical sense, of the just after the Resurrection in glory, where the soul shall be like the sun, and the body, which now is mutable, shall be like the moon, not as now aways changing, but as the full moon, always perfect.

39 But [1] thou hast repelled and despised: thou (o) hast deferred thy Christ.

[1] God having promised all the aforesaid, the Prophet in the person of the weak, lamenteth that the contrary shall happen as well in the temporal kingdom oppressed by the Assirians, Babylonians, Persians, Grecians, and Romans: as in the Church impugned by innumerable sorts of Heretics and other Infidels. (o) Amongst many pensive things, this one word doth comfort us, thy promise remaineth, thou hast not denied to send Christ, but deferred him.

40 Thou hast overthrown the testament of thy servant: thou hast profaned his sanctuary on the earth. 41 Thou hast destroyed all the hedges thereof: thou hast made the firmament thereof fear. 42 All that pass by the way have spoiled him: he is become a reproach to his neighbours. 43 Thou hast exalted the right hand of them that oppress him: thou hast made all his enemies joyful. 44 Thou hast turned away the help of his sword: and hast not holpen him in battle. 45 Thou hast destroyed him from (p) emundation: and his seat thou hast broken down to the ground.

(p) From the use of Sacrifice and Sacraments, whereby sinners were wont to be cleansed.

46 Thou hast lessened the days of his time: thou hast overwhelmed him with confusion. 47 [1] How long, o Lord, doest thou turn away for ever: shall thy wrath burn as a fire?

[1] The Psalmist prayeth and prophesieth that God will respect the weakness of man, maintain his Church in many nations, & save many souls.

48 Remember what my substance is: for hast thou made all the children of men in vain? 49 Who is the man that shall live, and shall not see death: shall deliver his soul from the hand of hell? 50 Where are thine old mercies, o Lord, as thou swarest to David in thy truth? 51 Be mindful, o Lord, of the reproach of thy servants (which I have held in my bosom) of many nations. 52 Which thine enemies have reproached, o Lord, which they have reproached (q) the commutation of thy Christ.

(q) As though Christ were changed and turned from us.

53 Blessed be our Lord for ever: (r) Be it, be it.

(r) So we wish and pray that all may bless and praise thee. Amen.

ANNOTATIONS.
PSALM LXXXVIII.

34. My mercy I will not take away from him.] Although Christians, signified by the children or successors of David, sin most grievously [1], yea suppose they will sin with desperation (saith Saint Augustine) and obstinately persist in sin, that they offend the eyes of their Father, & deserve to be disinherited &c. Yet for these Christ shall not remain without inheritance, the corn shall not also perish for the chaff, some fishes shall be gathered out of the net into vessels, notwithstanding the evil fishes are cast away. [2] And a little after the same Doctor discoursing of eternal glory both in body and soul, of those that die in God's favour, saith: These things are promised concerning Christ [3], very certain, very firm, very plain, and undoubted. For albeit some things are covered in mysteries, yet some things are so manifest, that by them the obscure things may most easily be cleared.

[1] Though Christians do sin, yet Christ loseth not his Church.

[2] Hard places explicated by the clear.

[3] God's promises to David were not fulfilled in Salomon, but in Christ.

39. But thou hast repelled &c.] Again Saint Augustine addeth upon the next verses following: God performed not these promises in David, that when thou seest they were not fulfilled in David, which necessarily must be fulfilled, thou mayst seek another, in whom it may be shewed that they were fulfilled. God promised something (a Kingdom) for ever of David's seed: and Salomon was born: and became of so great wisdom, and so great prudence, that God's promise concerning David's seed seemed to be fulfilled in him. But Salomon fell, and gave place of expecting Christ; that because God neither can be deceived, nor deceive, he put not his promise in him, whom he knew would fall; but thou shouldest rely upon God, and exact his promise. ◦A little after: Thou seekest the Kingdom of the Jews, it is not: thou seekest the altar of the Jews, it is not: thou seekest the sacrifice of the Jews, it is not: thou seekest the Priesthood of the Jews, it is not. Whereupon he concludeth: All these defects came to the Jews: yet was not Christ taken from them, but differed. Some Jews believed in him, and many Gentiles. As the Psalmist prophesieth from the 47. verse to the end of this Psalm.

CHAPTER LXXXIX.

Under the form of prayer, the Psalmist describeth the shortness of man's life & other calamities: God's strict judgement, 13. but first his comfortable mercy, 16. and perpetual regard of his own work. [1]

[1] Man rightly created fell by sin into miseries. The 6. key.

A prayer (a) of Moyses the man of God. Lord, thou art made a refuge for us: (b) from generation unto generation.

(a) Some Expositors think Moyses was the author of this Psalm, and of the ten next following. But others hold that David was Author of all, and that Moyses his name is here put in the title by Esdras, because his Psalm is like to the prayer of Moyses, when the people provoked God's wrath by their sins in the desert. And because man's creation, fall, punishment, and God's mercy towards him, are here described: which Moyses first writ, as going before the written law. And that Moyses made not this Psalm is probably gathered by the 10. verse, where the ordinary age of men is described to be (in strength and vigor) seventy years, or of fourscore: and the greater part (of the one or the other) is in labour and sorrow. And it is evident (Deut. 34.) that Moyses lived in all an hundred and twenty years, and his eye was not dim, neither were his teeth moved. So Aaron, Josue, and others commonly lived longer than is here mentioned. But David was old and impotent at seventy years. 3. Reg. 1. Saint Hilarion, living near seventy years in his hermitage, S. Remigius governing the Church of Rhemes seventy years, and the like are accounted to have been full of days, and such as lived longer are reputed extraordinary. Again it is more evidently proved that Moyses was not author of the 94. and 95. Psalms. (b) Always from the beginning of the world to the end.

2 Before (c) the mountains were made, or the earth and the world formed, (d) from everlasting even unto everlasting thou art God.

(c) The Prophet sheweth that the world was created in and with time, not eternal. (d) And that only God is eternal.

3 (e) Turn not away man into humiliation: thou saidst: Be converted ye children of men.

(e) God hath often said, that he would not the death of sinners, but rather that they be converted and live for ever.

4 Because (f) a thousand years before thine eyes, are as yesterday that is past. And as a watch in the night,

(f) Though some lived long (none for all that did reach to a thousand years) yet it is nothing before God, and in respect of eternity.

5 things that are counted nothing shall their years be. 6 In (g) the morning as an herb he shall pass, in (h) the morning he shall flourish, and pass: in the evening he shall fall, be hardened, and withered.

(g) The youth of man quickly passeth: (h) old age cannot last long: whereof cometh our English proverb: A young man may die soon, an old man cannot live long.

7 Because we have fainted in thy wrath, and in thy fury we are troubled. 8 Thou hast put (i) our iniquities in thy sight: our age in the light of thy countenance. [1]

(i) Sin the cause of shortness of man's life. [1] Saeculum.

9 Because all our days have failed, and in thy wrath we have failed. Our years shall be considered (k) as a spider:

(k) Man's life as brickle as a spider's web: or man's life wasteth continually, as a spider wasteth herself by spinning, and consuming her own substance.

10 the days of our years in them are (l) seventy years. And if in strong ones (m) eighty years: and the more of them, labour & sorrow. Because (n) mildness is come upon us: and we shall be chastised.

(l m) These numbers literally shew the shortness of the longer sort of men's lives. Mystically, seven signify the rest after labours of this world, and pertain to the old testament: eight signify the reward in the resurrection, pertaining to the new testament. Which multiplied by ten, a perfect number, make seventy and eighty. Which joined together make an hundred and fifty. The number of all these Psalms. (m)↑(n) It is of God's mild providence, that man's life is short, for that many if they were sure, or had probability to live long, would presume to sin more.

11 (o) Who knoweth the power of thy wrath: and for fear

(o) Seeing God of his justice punished all mankind for one sin of our first parent, his wrath must needs be very great to every sinner, for his own proper sins.

12 to number thy wrath? So make thy right hand known: and men learned in heart, in wisdom. 13 Turn, o Lord, how long? And be entreated for thy servants.

14 (p) We are replenished in the morning with thy mercy: and we have rejoiced, and art delighted all our days.

(p) The hope of glorious resurrection turneth our calamities into spiritual joy.

15 (q) We have rejoiced for the days wherein thou hast humbled us: the years, wherein we have seen evils.

(q) Yes the more we suffer in this life for the truth, the greater is our comfort in hope of reward.

16 Look upon (r) thy servants, and upon thy works: and (s) direct their children.

(r) Not only in that we are thy creatures, but also in that we are thy servants, we are thy proper work: therefore in both these respects, o God, look upon us with clemency. (s) Lead also our posterity into the right way, and make them thy servants.

17 And (t) let the brightness of our Lord God be upon us, and (v) direct thou the works of our hands over us: and (w) the work of our hands do thou direct.

(t) O God illuminate our understanding, (v) make our actions by thy grace profitable to us: (w) & make perfect in us the work of charity. In which one work all good works are included, and to which all other are directed. For then works are right (saith S. Augustin) when they are directed to this one end.

CHAPTER XC.

Whosoever faithfully and firmly trusteth in God's providence, is secure from all dangers of secret, subtle, and open enemies. 7. His adversaries shall come to ruin. 11. Angels shall defend him: 13. no kind of serpent, nor beast shall hurt him. God himself assureth him of his protection, and of eternal salvation. [1]

[1] God's providence.
The 3. key.

Praise (a) of a (b) Canticle to David. He (c) that dwelleth in the help of the Highest, shall abide in the protection of the God of heaven.

(a) Praise of God's providence, with thanks, (b) which David sung with voice. (c) He that firmly relieth and resteth upon God's providence, is assuredly protected by him.

2 He shall say to our Lord: Thou art my protector, and my refuge: my God I will hope in him. 3 Because he hath delivered me from (d) the snare of the hunters, and from (e) the sharp word.

(d) All secret and subtle machinations: (e) and from all cruelty of tyrants.

4 With his shoulders shall he overshadow thee: and under his wings thou shalt hope. 5 With shield shall his truth compass thee: thou shalt not be afraid (f) of the fear in the night.

(f) Terrors obscurely suggested by evil men or spirits, with erroneous conceit that men are not bound in time of temporal dangers to confess the truth.

6 Of (g) the arrow flying in the day, (h) of business walking in darkness: (i) of invasion, and the midday devil.

(g) Open persecution threatening present death, except men deny the truth which they know, (h) circumvention of crafty enemies by subtle arguing, and drawing men into error, and so to decline from Catholic Religion, (i) long torments, even to death, except God's servants will relent, and deny the truth, which they assuredly believe, and know in their conscience, that they are bound to profess it.

7 A (k) thousand shall fall on thy side, & (l) ten thousand on thy right hand: but to thee it shall not approach.

(k) On thy left side, in adversity many fall from God, (l) & on thy right side, in prosperity many more forget and forsake God.

8 But thou shalt consider with thine eyes: and shalt see the retribution of sinners. 9 Because (m) thou o Lord art my hope: thou hast made the Highest thy refuge.

(m) In sincerely saying Thou art my hope thou makest God thy refuge.

10 There shall no evil come to thee: and scourge shall not approach to thy tabernacle. 11 Because he hath given (n) his Angels charge of thee: (o) that they keep thee in all thy ways.

(n) Angels have protection of men by God's ordinance. (o) The devil corruptly allege this scripture (Mat. 4.) omitting the latter part of this verse; which sheweth when Angels protect just men, to wit, when they walk in a right path, observing ordinary course in their actions, not in giving themselves headlong into needless danger, as the same devil proposed to our Saviour, to cast himself down from the pinnacle of the temple. Such falling is not the way of the just, but of Lucifer, that fell from heaven. So S. Bernard noteth Ser. 15. in hunc Psal.

12 In their hands they shall bear thee: lest perhaps thou knock thy foot against a stone. 13 Upon the asp and the basiliscus thou shall walk: & thou shalt tread upon the lion, and the dragon. 14 (p) Because he hath hoped in me, I will deliver him: I will protect him, because he hath known my name.

(p) God speaketh the rest that followeth in this Psalm.

15 He shall cry to me, and I will hear him: with him I am in tribulation: I will deliver him, and (q) will glorify him.

(q) In eternal salvation.

16 With length of days I will replenish him: and I will shew him my salvation.

ANNOTATIONS.
PSALM XC.

[1] Four sorts of persecution for the Catholic faith.

[2] 1.

[3] 2.

[4] 3.

[5] 4.

5. Thou shalt not be afraid.] S. Augustine here observeth four manners of tempting the faithful to fall from true Religion [1]. Sometimes with tentation that is but light and obscure [2], which the Prophet here calleth fear in the night: when ignorant men are tempted by suggestion, or apprehension or temporal afflictions, not knowing that they fall into eternal damnation, by flying from worldly, or bodily calamities. Sometimes the tentation threateneth present death to them that are well instructed in the truth [3], and know that they must confess it even to death, which the Prophet calleth an arrow flying in the day: when the faithful clearly seeth what danger hangeth over him, to wit present death, if he stand constant, and damnation if he deny his faith. Sometimes the tentation is more vehement, but yet obscure, which he called business walking in darkness: [4] when by subtle endeavours, framing arguments in excuse of sin, men are persuaded that they may lawfully take some oath, or do some other thing, which indeed is not lawful: and so by earnest and subtle persuasions they ignorantly decline from Catholic Religion, or commit other grievous sins. But the greatest and manifest tentation is called invasion & midday devil [5]: when persecuters seeing neither more easy persuasions can deceive God's servants, nor present death force them to deny the truth, they then assault them more vehemently, and more dangerously, with long and continual afflictions, not remitting their cruelty till the afflicted either yield to their will, or die in long torments. And by these two latter kinds of persecution many are overthrown, which were constant in the former. For whilst tyrants proposed dangers to simple people, and deceived some, yet threatening present death to others, that were better instructed, and confirmed in Religion, innumerable persevered, & gloriously died in confession of Christian Catholic faith. But by subtle arguing of hard points of Christian doctrine or practice; and by long torments many have been seduced, blindly falling into errors, and many wittingly have denied the truth, which they clearly believed in their hearts, to avoid this midday devil, the extremity of long manifest, and grievous afflictions. Nevertheless in all these tentations God protecteth them that firmly trust in him. Those (saith this holy Father) have failed, which presumed of themselves, which dwelt not in the help of the Highest, and in protection of the God of heaven: which said not to our Lord: Thou art my Protector, and my refuge, which trusted not under the shadow of his wings, but relied, or attributed much to their own strength.

CHAPTER XCI.

God is by all manner of voices and instruments to be praised in his admirable works. 7. which the foolish not doing are punished; 11. and the wise are rewarded. [1]

[1] The works of God admirable.
The 2. key.

A Psalm (a) of Canticle, (b) in the sabbath day.

(a) Voices beginning instruments prosecute this song: (b) when we rest from work, then especially we ought to think upon God's works, praise and thank him for the same.

2 It is good (c) to confess to our Lord: and to sing to thy name, o Highest.

(c) To give thanks.

3 To shew forth thy mercy in (d) the morning: and thy truth in (e) the night.

(d) In prosperity. (e) in adversity.

4 In (f) the instrument of ten strings, in (g) Psalter: with Canticle, on (h) the Harp.

(f) On every instrument of ten strings, signifying the observation of the ten commandments: (g) namely on the Psalter (h) also on the harp, which signifieth mortification.

5 Because thou hast delighted me, o Lord, in thy workmanship: and in the works of thy hands I will rejoice. 6 How are thy works magnified, o Lord! Thy cogitations are made very profound. 7 The (i) unwise man will not know; and the (k) fool will not understand these things.

(i) Carnal and sensual man, (k) he that thinketh only of present things, not of future.

8 When sinners shall spring up as grass: and all that work iniquity shall appear. That they may perish for ever: 9 but thou the Highest for ever, o Lord.

10 Because lo thine enemies, o Lord, because lo thine enemies shall perish: and all that work iniquity shall be dispersed. 11 And (l) my horn shall be exalted, as the unicorn's: (m) and my old age in plentiful mercy.

(l) The just in confidence of a good conscience expect exaltation of their power: (m) and great consolation in the end of their life.

12 And (n) mine eye hath looked upon mine enemies: and the malignant rising up against me, mine ears shall hear.

(n) Then shall the justice their enemies depressed: and themselves flourish, like the palm, and cedar trees as followeth:

13 The just shall flourish as a palm tree: as the cedar of Libanus shall he be multiplied. 14 They that are planted in (o) the house of our Lord, shall flourish in (p) the courts of the house of our God.

(o) Militant Church: (p) triumphant.

15 As yet shall they be multiplied in plentiful old age: and they shall be well affected, 16 that they (q) may shew forth: That the Lord our God is righteous, and there is no iniquity in him.

(q) Publicly profess God's praise, as in the words following:

CHAPTER XCII.

Christ reigneth for ever in his Church: 3. notwithstanding many and great persecutions against the faithful.[1]

[1] Perpetuity of the Church.
The 6. key.

Praise (a) of Canticle (b) to David himself in (c) the day before the sabbath, (d) when the earth was founded. Our Lord (e) hath reigned, he (f) hath put on beauty: our Lord hath (g) put on strength, and hath girded himself. For he hath established (h) the round world, which (i) shall not be moved.

(a) Praise to be sung with voice: (b) composed by David: (c) the sixth day of the week, which is our Friday, (d) in which day the Church of Christ was founded by his blood shed on the cross. (e) Our Saviour founding his Church by his death began then to reign therein (f) gloriously descending in soul into limbus, and in body to his grave: (g) he then put on all armour of strength to reform the world, and to enlarge his Kingdom, according to his own prediction where he said: If I be exalted from the earth, I will draw all things unto myself. Ioan. 12. v. 31. (h) Not only in Jury and Samaria, but the whole earth: (i) and the same Church shall not be destroyed.

2 Thy seat is prepared from that time: thou (k) art from everlasting.

(k) Christ being eternal, hath an everlasting Church.

3 The (l) rivers o Lord have lifted up: the rivers have lifted up their voice. The rivers have lifted up their waves,

(l) All sorts of persecuters, the High priests (who sometimes watered the spiritual land, like rivers) which Scribes, Pharisees, and other incredulous Jews, also Pagans, Turks, and Heretics have oppugned the Church.

4 (m) above the voices of many waters. The surges of the sea are marvelous, (n) marvelous is our Lord on high.

(m) With more force than any persecutions in the old Testament. (n) But though all these assaults be great and marvelous, yet Christ in protecting his Church, is more marvelous.

5 Thy testimonies are made (o) credible exceedingly: (p) holiness becometh thy house, o Lord (q) for length of days.

(o) Articles of faith are not evidently apparent to knowledge, but evident to credibility, to those that are disposed by God's grace, illuminating their understanding, and moving their free will, to give consent of belief if they will. (p) It behoveth therefore all members of the Church to converse piously, and religiously in this life, seeing she hath so excellent a spouse, protector, and instructor, (q) even to the end of the world.

CHAPTER XCIII.

The faithful servant of God assuredly professeth, that all the pride, 5. cruelty, 7. foolish imaginations, and secret thoughts of the wicked, are manifest to God. 12. Acknowledgeth himself happy, that he is better instructed of God: whereas he had otherwise been damned. 20. Sharply reprehendeth those that consider not of God's judgements: concluding that the just shall be glorified, and the wicked damned.[1]

[1] Eternal salvation and damnation.
The 10. key.

To (a) David himself, in (b) the fourth of the sabbath. Our Lord God of revenges: the God (c) of revenges hath done (d) freely.

(a) The Hebrew letter Lamed, which ordinarily is prefixed to the dative case, or signifieth to, being set before proper names, is a sign of the genitive case. Yet the Septuagint express it by the dative, and so doth the Latin, ipsi David, and consequently our English hath, to David himself, to shew a difference between sacred and profane writers. For in human books the writer and author is all one; but in divine, the Holy Ghost is the proper author, and a man is the writer. To signify therefore the principal author, David is sometimes named as the instrumental cause, to whom the Holy Ghost inspired this and other Psalms, and by whom they were written. And when the titles express otherwise:

A Psalm of David, yet it is so to be understood, that the Holy Ghost is always the principal author, and David the instrumental, ministerial, or secondary author. But when other names are expressed, either in the genitive or dative case, or howsoever, it proveth not that those men were the writers of the same Psalms, but importeth some other things, as by S. Augustin's judgement we noted in the proemial Annotations, page 3. & 4. Whereby is proved that this Psalm was not written, nor composed by Moyses, as Hebrew Rabbins suppose, but by the Royal Psalmist David. (b) Made and ordinarily sung in the fourth day of the week, our Wednesday, in which day Judas the traitor sold our Saviour Christ to his enemies. The revenge of which wickedness, and of all other sins, is here prophesied. (c) God more commonly called the God of mercy (which virtue in him is above all his works, Psal. 144.) is also the God of revenges, according to his justice. (d) He proceedeth in judgement resolutely, not depending, nor fearing, nor respecting any person, power, dignity, wisdom or other like quality, but their just merits.

2 Be [1]exalted thou that judgest the earth: render retribution to the proud.

[1]A prayer of just zeal.

3 How long shall sinners, o Lord: how long shall sinners glory? 4 Shall they utter, and speak iniquity? Shall all they speak (e)that work injustice?

(e) Shall most wicked men still be suffered to speak so insolently?

5 Thy [1]people, o Lord, they have humbled: and thine inheritance they have vexed.

[1]A description of heathenish and heretical cruelty.

6 The widow, and the stranger they have slain: and the pupils they have killed. 7 And [1]they have said: The Lord shall not see, neither shall the God of Jacob understand.

[1]Scarce any Atheists are so blind as thus to think, but many sinners so behave themselves, as if God saw not, knew not, or at least cared not what they do.

8 Understand ye foolish in the people: and ye fools be wise at sometime. 9 He that planted the ear, shall he not hear? Or he that made the eye doth he not consider? 10 He that chastiseth nations, shall he not rebuke: he that teacheth man knowledge? 11 Our Lord knoweth (f)the cogitations of men: that they be vain.

(f) So unpossible is it that God should be ignorant, or careless what men do, that he also knoweth and observeth most secret thoughts.

12 Blessed is the man whom thou shalt instruct, o Lord, and shalt teach out of thy law. 13 That thou mayst (g)give him quietness from the evil days: till a pit be digged for the sinner.

(g) Mitigate and temper his afflictions, that by patience and fortitude the just may persevere, and not be overwhelmed.

14 Because our Lord (h)will not reject his people: and his inheritance he will not forsake.

(h) The whole Church shall never be rejected, nor forsaken.

15 Until justice (i)be turned into judgment: and (k)they who are near it, are all that are right of heart.

(i) Justice is converted into judgement, when just meaning is put in work and practice, that it may appear in judgement. Also God who doth & suffereth all justly, will conserve his inheritance the Church, even unto the day of judgement. (k) The sense is easy by transposing the words: all that are right of heart, are near it, that is, shall like and approve God's justice, when the wicked shall repine, and blaspheme it.

16 Who shall rise for me against the malignant? Or who shall stand with me against them that work iniquity? 17 But that our Lord hath holpen me: within very little my soul had dwelt in hell. 18 If I said: (l)My foot is moved: thy mercy, o Lord, did help me.

(l) When I felt and complained that I was in danger, thou didst assist me.

19 According to the multitude of my sorrows in my heart: thy consolations have made my soul joyful.

20 Doth the seat of iniquity cleave to thee: which makest (m)labour in precept?

(m) Only faith sufficeth not, but careful labour, in keeping God's commandments is required.

21 They will hunt after the soul of the just: and will condemn innocent blood. 22 And our Lord became my refuge: and my God the help (n)of my hope.

(n) The just do hope for eternal salvation, to which God will bring them.

23 And he (o)will repay them their iniquity: and in their malice he will destroy them: the Lord our God will destroy them.

(o) And God, the revenger of wrongs, will at last cast the wicked into eternal torments.

CHAPTER XCIV.

An invitation to serve and adore Christ our Lord and Messias, 3. as well for the benefits of creating all things, 7. as for his Incarnation, and not to harden our hearts as the Jews did. [1]

[1] Christ our Lord and King.
The 5. key.

Praise (a) of Canticle, (b) to David himself. Come [1], let us (c) rejoice to our Lord: let us make jubilation to God (d) our saviour.

(a) Praise sung with voices: (b) inspired to David, & written by him. [1] This invitation is most fitly ordained by the Church for the proem or beginning of Matins. (c) With great and solemn exultation: (d) God our Creator, is also our Protector & Saviour.

2 Let us (e) prevent his face in confession: and (f) in Psalms let us make jubilation to him.

(e) Let us be more diligent, and prevent our accustomed time. For no man can prevent God's grace with any good work, who first preventeth us, else we can neither do, nor think any good thing. (f) Not only in singing his praise with voice, but also with musical instruments.

3 Because our Lord is a great God: and a great King above all gods. 4 Because in his hand are the ends of the earth: and the heights of the mountains be his. 5 Because the sea is his, and he made it: and his hands formed the dry land. 6 Come let us adore, (g) and fall down: and weep before our Lord, that made us.

(g) So also Isaias (c. 45. v. 23.) and S. Paul (Philip. 2.) teach that kneeling or bowing the knees, as an external religious ceremony, is acceptable to God.

7 Because he is the Lord (h) our God, and we the people of his pasture, and the sheep (i) of his hand.

(h) It is most just and necessary that we adore God, because he made us, and all this world for us, hath also redeemed us, and made us his people, as sheep of his pasture, and as a Pastor feedeth and governeth us. (i) Of his making.

8 (k) Today if ye shall hear his voice, harden not your hearts.

(k) Though some have often repelled, and resisted God's grace, yet if they receive it being offered again, it will avail them to remission of sins.

9 As in the provocation according to the day (l) of the tentation in the desert: where your fathers tempted me, proved me, and saw my works.

(l) The Israelites in the desert tempted God, by desiring water, and flesh, of voluptuous concupiscence without necessity. For Manna did both extinguish their thirst, and tasted unto them whatsoever they desired: Exod. 16. That also which was left ungathered when the sun waxed hot, melted (v. 21.) and served their cattle for drink. So this tentation was a figure of those, which require to communicate under both kinds, as if one did not contain as much as both.

10 (m) Forty years was I (n) offended with that generation, and said: These always err in heart.

(m) By this mention of the offence of forty years, as long before passed, is convinced that Moyses writ not this Psalm, who died in the very fortieth year of their abode in the desert. And Saint Paul citing the words of this Psalm (Heb. 4.) manifestly acknowledgeth David the writer thereof, and that it was written long after Moyses' time in these words: (v. 7.) Again he limiteth a certain day: Today, in David saying after so long time, as is above said. Today if you shall hear his voice, do not obdurate your hearts. For if Jesus (that is Iosue) had given them rest, he would never speak of another day afterward. (n) Being greatly offended, I approached near unto them, in punishing the offenders.

11 And these have not known my ways: as I sware in my wrath: (o) if they shall enter into my rest.

(o) Those that murmured died in the desert, and entered not into the promised land, even so those that finally offend Christ, shall not enter into everlasting rest. Heb. 3. & 4.

ANNOTATIONS.
PSALM XCIV.

8. Harden not your hearts.] Whatsoever God proposeth by preaching or inspiration to a sinner, it resteth still in the power of his freewill [1], to harden his heart, and to reject all such good motions, and so he doth not only frustrate God's grace, and hinder his own justification, but also increaseth his former sins. [2] But by not resisting, when deliberating thereupon he could resist, he disposeth himself and cooperateth to first justification. And therefore the royal Prophet here admonisheth, and earnestly exhorteth all men, to do this which God hath put in our power, not to harden our own hearts, when we hear his voice, by resisting and rejecting his grace freely offered, without all merit of our part.

[1] It is in man's freewill to resist good motions.

CHAPTER XCV.

All peoples & nations are invited to praise the blessed Trinity, 3. for Christ's Incarnation, and spiritual kingdom in all the world. 10. even senseless creatures acknowledging his majesty, 13. and judicial power. [1]

[1] Christ's divine power.
The 5. key.

A Canticle (a) to David [1] himself, (b) when the house was built after the captivity. Sing ye to our Lord (c) a new song: sing to our Lord all the earth.

(a) Inspired to David, and written by him: [1] 1. Par. 16. v. 23. (b) prophesying the restoration of the temple, after the future captivity. And that in figure of the universal redemption of mankind by Christ, from the captivity of the devil. (c) For a new benefit, far greater than the delivery of Israel from Aegypt.

2 (d) Sing ye to our Lord, and bless his name: shew forth his salvation from day to day.

(d) The same words (Sing to our Lord) thrice repeated, signify the Blessed Trinity, as some Fathers note. Likewise v. 7. & 8. Bring ye to our Lord &c. in both places concluding in the singular number, bless his name, bring to his name, importing one God.

3 Shew forth his glory among the Gentiles, his marvelous works in all peoples. 4 Because our Lord is great, and exceeding laudable: he is terrible above all gods. 5 Because all the gods of the Gentiles are (e) devils, but our Lord (f) made the heavens.

(e) What creatures soever spiritual or corporal, visible or invisible the Pagans serve for gods, still they be devils that deceive them, and diverse ways usurp divine honour, making such idolaters to think, that there is divine power, where none is. (f) He only is true God, who is Creator of heaven, and of all creatures. For no creature can create any thing at all, that is, make any thing of nothing, but only God.

6 Confession and beauty in his sight: holiness and magnificence in his sanctification. 7 Bring to our Lord ye families of Gentiles, bring ye to our Lord glory and honour: 8 bring to our Lord glory unto his name. Take up hosts, and enter into his courts: 9 adore ye our Lord in his holy court. Let all the earth be moved before his face: 10 Say ye among the Gentiles that our Lord (g) hath reigned. For he hath corrected the round world, which shall not be moved: he will judge peoples in equity.

(g) Diverse ancient Doctors read more in this place: Our Lord hath reigned from the wood, to wit, Christ by his death on the cross conquered the devil, sin, and death, and thence began to reign. S. Justinus Martyr, dialogo advers. Triphonem, Tertullian li. advers. Iudaeos. c. 9. & 13. & advers. Marcionem li. 3. c. 19. & 21. S. Augustin in this place, according to the old Roman Psalter. Before him Arnobius, and after him Cassiodorus and others, whereby it is probable, that it was sometimes in the Hebrew text, and blotted out by the Jews.

11 (h) Let the heavens be glad, and the earth rejoice, the sea be moved, and the fullness thereof:

(h) The Psalmist in aboundance of spirit inviteth all creatures to praise God, as Daniel in his Canticle. c. 3.

12 the fields shall be glad, and all things that are in them. Then shall the trees of the woods rejoice 13 before the face of our Lord, because he cometh: because he cometh to judge the earth. He (i) will judge the round world in equity, and peoples in his truth.

(i) Christ judgeth now in the world by his ministers, discerning and deciding causes, rewarding and punishing, but especially he will judge all in the last day.

CHAPTER XCVI.

All the earth is invited to rejoice in Christ's Kingdom, 3. with description of the signs coming before the day of Judgement. 7. Idolaters shall be confounded. 8. Holy Angels and just men shall adore Christ, and rejoice.[1]

[1] The last judgement.
The 9. key.

To (a) this David, (b) when his land was restored again to him. Our Lord hath reigned, let the earth rejoice: let (c) many Islands be glad.

(a) In figure of Christ, (b) whose body rose the third day after his death: to whom many returned believing in him after his resurrection, which fell from him in his passion: and to whom all things shall be subdued, as to their true Lord, in the day of judgement. (c) Holy David and other Prophets having great joy to see long before in spirit only, Christ's Kingdom extended in the whole earth, yea to the Islands, we Islanders have great cause to be glad, that God hath not only so blessed us long since, but as yet conserveth seed, whereby we trust the whole Island shall be again restored unto him.

2 (d) Cloud and mist round about him: justice and judgment (e) the correction of his seat.

(d) As in a cloud with terror God gave his law to the Jews: so in a cloud with greater terror and majesty, he will judge the world; (e) not as many corrupted seats of judgement, in this world, but as a corrected tribunal, where justice and right judgement shall be practised.

3 Fire shall go before him, and shall inflame his enemies round about. 4 His lightnings [1] shined to the round world, the earth saw: and was moved.

[1] These things are denounced as if they were already done, for the assured certainty thereof.

5 The mountains melted as wax, before the face of our Lord: before the face of our Lord all the earth. 6 The heavens have shewed forth his justice: and all peoples have seen his glory. 7 Let them all be confounded, that adore (f) sculptiles: and that glory in their idols. Adore him all ye his Angels:

(f) As well the worshippers of graven or painted images of Jupiter, Mars, Bacchus & the like, as the worshippers of the same imagined false gods shall be confounded.

8 (g) Sion heard, and was glad. And (h) the daughters of Juda rejoiced, because of thy judgments, o Lord.

(g) The Catholic Church. (h) And all particular Churches, members of the universal.

9 Because thou Lord most high over all the earth: thou art exalted exceedingly above all gods. 10 You that love our Lord, hate ye evil, our Lord keepeth the souls of his saints, out of the hand of the sinner he will deliver them. 11 Light is risen to the just, and joy to the right of heart. 12 Be glad ye just in our Lord: and confess ye to the memory (i) of his sanctification.

(i) Praise our Lord Christ, who is sanctity it-self, and sanctifieth others.

CHAPTER XCVII.

All men are again invited joyfully to celebrate the marvelous conquest of Christ in all nations, 4. with harp, voice, and instruments: 8. all creatures acknowledging his coming to judge the world.[1]

[1] The Church in all nations.
The 6. key.

A Psalm (a) to David himself. Sing ye to our Lord (b) a new song: because he hath done marvelous things. His right hand hath wrought salvation (c) to himself: and his arm is holy.

(a) Prefiguring Christ, who hath made his salvation known in all nations. (b) A new benefit of grace, making men new in spirit, requireth a new song of gratitude. (c) Raised up himself from death.

2 Our Lord hath (d) made known his salvation: in the sight of the Gentiles he hath revealed his justice.

(d) Made his grace effectually known by raising men from sin, and delivering them from the power of the devil.

3 He hath remembered his mercy, and his truth to (e) the house of Israel. All the ends of the earth have seen the salvation of our God.

(e) some of the Jews converted to Christianity. Rom. 11.

4 Make ye jubilation to God all the earth: (f) chant, and (g) rejoice, and (h) sing.[1]

(f) In voice. (g) In heart. (h) In instruments. [1] Cantate, exultate, psallite.

5 Sing to our Lord on harp, on harp and voice of Psalm: 6 on long drawn trumpets, and voice of cornet of horn. Make jubilation in the sight of the King our Lord: 7 let the sea be moved, and the fullness thereof: the round world, and they that dwell therein. 8 The rivers shall clap with hand: the mountains together shall rejoice 9 at the sight of our Lord: (i) because he cometh to judge the earth. (k) He will judge the round earth in justice, and the peoples in equity.

(i) Christ directeth and disposeth all things rightly in this world. (k) And will accordingly give just sentence in the end.

CHAPTER XCVIII.

Christ reigneth, notwithstanding his enemies' repine, is adored (5. also his foot-stool) 6. whom ancient Prophets did invocate.[1]

[1] Christ our Messias.
The 5. key.

A psalm to David himself. Our Lord hath reigned, (a) let peoples be angry: he that sitteth upon the Cherubs, let (b) the earth be moved.

(a) Though many enemies do rage and impugn Christ: (b) though the whole earth be troubled therewith, yet Christ who sitteth Lord over the highest Angels, Cherubins and Seraphins, obtaineth the victories, reigneth, and doth his will in the earth.

2 Our Lord great in Sion: and high above all peoples.
3 Let them confess to thy great name: because it is terrible and holy. 4 And the honour of the King (c) loveth judgment. Thou hast prepared directions: thou hast done judgment and justice (d) in Jacob.

(c) Requireth discretion. (d) in favour of thine elect people.

5 Exalt ye the Lord our God, and adore (e) his foot-stool: because it is holy.

(e) Hebrew Doctors expound this of the Ark in the old testament, but the Doctors of the Church understand Christ's humanity, in the holy Eucharist.

6 Moyses and Aaron in his (f) Priests: and Samuel among them that invocate his name: They invocated our Lord (g) and he heard them:

(f) Here it is evident (and S. Augustin saith this place taketh away all doubt) that Moyses was a Priest, against those that for maintaining the heresy of Lay-headship, deny it. [1] (g) By example of their praying and obtaining; the Psalmist confirmeth his prophecy, that Priests of the new Testament shall pray, and obtain mercy of Christ for the Church.

[1] q. 23. in Levit.

7 in a pillar of a cloud he spake to them. They kept his testimonies, & the precept which he gave them.
8 O Lord our God thou heardest them: God thou wast propitious to them, and taking vengeance upon all their (h) inventions.

(h) God revenged the machinations made against them, punishing the rebellion of Chore, Dathan, and Abiron. Num. 16.

9 Exalt ye the Lord our God, and adore ye in his holy mount: because the Lord our God is holy.

ANNOTATIONS.
PSALM XCVIII.

[1] Christ's humanity is his foot-stool, adored in the Eucharist.

[2] S. Ambrose.

[3] S. Augustin.

[4] The receivers of the B. Sacrament do sin if they do not adore it.

5. Adore his foot-stool.] For so much as all Expositors, also the Hebrew Rabbins, affirm that the Psalmist here prophesieth of Christ the promised Messias [1], that should redeem mankind, and seeing the Ark of covenant pertaineth not to the service of Christ, but was only a figure of him, the foot-stool of the Messias here mentioned must needs be something pertaining to him: and therefore most ancient Fathers expound it of Christ's humanity. And because the Prophet speaketh of perpetual adoration, not only of the short time he conversed with men in this life, when very few adored him, the same fathers understand here the adoration of Christ in the Blessed Sacrament of the Eucharist. Which S. Ambrose [2] teacheth (lib. 3. de Spiritu Sancto c. 12.) in these plain words: By the foot-stool must be understood the earth, by the earth the flesh of Christ. Which we also at this day adore in the Mysteries, and which the Apostles adored in our Lord Jesus. S. Augustine [3] more largely upon this Psalm: I am made doubtful (saith he) I fear to adore the earth, lest he condemn me that made heaven & earth. Again, I fear not to adore the foot stool of my Lord, because the Psalm saith to me: Adore his foot-stool: I seek what is his foot-stool, and the Scripture (Isaiae 66.) telleth me, the earth is his foot-stool. Doubtful I turn myself unto Christ, because I seek him here, & I find how without impiety the earth may be adored, without impiety his foot-stool may be adored. For he took earth of earth, because flesh is of earth, and he took flesh of the flesh of (the B. Virgin) Mary. And because he walked here in the same flesh, and gave the very flesh to us to eat, unto salvation, & no man eateth that flesh, unless he first adore it [4]: it is found how such a foot-stool of our Lord may be adored: and not only we do not sin in adoring, but we should sin in not adoring. Thus far S. Augustine. Further instructing, not to conceive of Christ's flesh, as the Capharnaites did, that he would cut it in pieces from his body, & give them portions thereof. His very flesh is given and eaten, not in fleshly manner, but in sacramental. See Annotations, Ioan. 6.

CHAPTER XCIX.

All are invited to rejoice in God, Creator of all. [1]

[1] One Creator of all things.
The 1. key.

A Psalm (a) in confession.

(a) of praise.

2 Make ye jubilation to God (b) all the earth: serve ye our Lord in gladness. Enter ye in (c) before his sight, in exultation.

(b) Not only Jews, but also all Gentiles. (c) God every-where present, yet more peculiarly, heareth his suppliants, praying in the temple, or places dedicated to his service.

3 Know ye that our Lord (d) he is God: he made us, & not we ourselves. His people, and the sheep of his pasture:

(d) He only whom we serve as our Lord, is the only God, and there is no other.

4 enter ye into (e) his gates in confession, his courts in hymns, confess ye to him. Praise ye his name:

(e) Peculiar dedicated place, as v. 2.

5 because our Lord is sweet, his (f) mercy for ever, and (g) his truth even unto generation and generation.

(f) As God is always merciful in giving and promising: (g) so he is ever faithful in performing.

CHAPTER C.

King David gratefully celebrateth the two general divine virtues, Mercy and Justice: 2. by his own example exhorteth all, especially superiors, to direct their ways in sincerity, 4. and to separate the wicked from conversation of the good. [1]

[1] Instruction to govern.
The 7. key.

A Psalm to David himself. Mercy (a) and judgment I will sing to thee, o Lord: I will sing,

(a) These two capital divine virtues are ever joined in all God's works, for both which experienced towards himself, the Psalmists rendereth thanks and praises.

2 and I (b) shall understand in the immaculate way, (c) when thou shalt come to me. I walked through in the innocency of my heart, in the midst of my house.

(b) I will do mine endeavour to know the immaculate way, (c) which I cannot do, but by thy grace coming unto me. For by help thereof I did as followeth:

3 I did not propose before mine eyes any unjust thing: I hated them that do prevarication. 4 A perverse heart hath not cleaved to me: the malignant declining from me I knew not. 5 (d) One secretly detracting from his neighbour, him did I persecute. One of a proud eye, and unsatiable heart, with him I did not eat.

(d) That is, all and every one thus wickedly disposed I abhorred.

6 Mine eyes are towards the faithful of the earth that they may sit with me. A man that walketh in the immaculate way (e) he did minister to me.

(e) I kept such under, as a servant or slave.

7 He that doth proudly shall not dwell in the midst of my house: he that speaketh unjust things, hath (f) not directed in the sight of mine eyes.

(f) Prospered not, got no benefit by me.

8 In (g) the morning did I kill all the sinners of the earth: that I might destroy (h) out of the city of our Lord all those that work iniquity.

(g) Speedily and without delay I cut off all disordered people: (h) that others might not be corrupted by them.

CHAPTER CI.

A sinner in affliction of mind prayeth God to deliver him, 10. desolate of all other help. 13. Conceiveth comfort in God's eternal goodness, and singular mercy, in redeeming mankind, and propagating the Church. 24. Prayeth to be made mature in virtue before he die, that he may live with God: 26. Who only and wholly being immutable, establisheth his servants for ever. [1]

[1] The fifth penitential Psalm.
The 7. key.

The prayer of the poor, when he shall be anxious, and shall make his petition before our Lord. 2 Lord hear my (a) prayer: and let my (b) cry come to thee.

(a) Every petition is a prayer, (b) and that which proceedeth from more fervent affection, is called a cry, though it burst not out into clamour, nor perhaps into any voice at all. For God said to Moyses, praying in mere silence, but with vehemency of spirit (Exod. 14.) Why cryest thou to me?

3 Turn (c) not away thy face from me: in what day soever I am in tribulation, incline thine ear to me. In what day soever I shall invocate thee, hear me speedily.

(c) Though sin provoke God's wrath, because we by sinning turn from him, and not he first from us: yet we pray God not so to leave us, but to give us new grace, that by humility, and penance we may return to him, and not die in sin.

4 Because my days have vanished as (d) smoke: and my (e) bones are withered as (f) a dry burnt firebrand.

(d) Man's days, and all his works are nothing worth, but vanish like smoke, so long as he is in mortal sin: (e) yea his best works, as if he give alms, fast, pray, and die for the truth, yet all those avail nothing. 1. Cor. 13. but are (f) like dried sticks, or chips, fit to kindle the fire.

5 I (g) am strucken as grass, and my heart is withered: because (h) I have forgotten to eat my bread.

(g) My soul separated by sin from God, withereth as grass that is cut from the root: (h) because I have lost all favour and appetite to spiritual meat.

6 For (i) the voice of my groaning, my (k) bone hath cleaved to my flesh.

(i) In this miserable state (k) I am as bones and flesh cleaving together without moisture, or radical humour.

7 I am become like (l) a pelican of the wilderness: I am become as (m) a night crow in the house.

(l) I fled from conversation of men for sorrow and shame of my sins: (m) as a crow that only flieth by night: or as an owl or bat.

8 I have watched, and am become as (n) a sparrow solitary in the house-top.

(n) Also as a sparrow having lost her mate, remaineth mourning and solitary in the accustomed nest, or near unto it.

9 All the day did mine enemies upbraid me: and they (o) that praised me sware against me.

(o) Those that were wont to praise or flatter me, now are as sworn enemies against me.

10 Because I did (p) eat ashes as bread, & mingled (q) my drink with weeping.

(p) Bread savoured to me no better than ashes. (q) And drink gave me no comfort, but still I wept.

11 At (r) the face of thy wrath and indignation: because (s) lifting me up thou hast thrown me (t) down.

(r) I am most especially afflicted, because thou art angry. (s) In that thou didst sometime advance me in prosperity, (t) my fall is so much greater, and more grievous.

12 My days have declined (v) as a shadow: and I am withered (w) as grass.

(v) As a shadow declineth to nothing, & all becometh darkness, when the sun, and other light departeth, even so I, that am but a shadow, decline to mere darkness when thy favour parteth from me: (w) and I lose my beauty, as grass cut from the ground withereth.

13 (x) But thou o Lord endurest for ever: and (y) thy memorial in generation and generation.

(x) But I am marvelously comforted, considering that thou our Messias, the Son of God, art immutable for ever: (y) and thy memorable promise of redeeming mankind, will have effect in all generations.

14 Thou (z) rising up shalt have mercy on Sion: because it is (a) time to have mercy on it, because (b) the time cometh.

(z) Thou rising to help, who seemedst to have forgot, wilt protect the Church, and every faithful soul. (a) Because thou hast deferred long: (b) and because the time by thee designed seemeth to approach.

15 Because (c) the stones thereof have pleased thy servants: and they shall have pity on (d) the earth (e) thereof.

(c) Men that shall hear thine Apostles preach, shall prove good and fit matter, for the building of thy Church: (d) and the simplest poor people, as it were the earth or dust, (e) shall participate of this mercy.

16 And (f) the Gentiles shall fear thy name o Lord, and all (g) the kings of the earth thy glory.

(f) Besides those Jews that shall believe in Christ, much more the Gentiles shall fear and serve him. (g) His glory is so evident that all kings know it, though all be not converted.

17 Because our Lord hath built Sion: and he shall be seen in his glory. 18 He hath had respect to the prayer (h) of the humble: and he hath not despised their petition.

(h) Of holy Patriarchs, Priests, Prophets, and of all true penitents.

19 Let these things be written unto another generation: and the people that shall (i) be created shall praise our Lord.

(i) That shall be made a new creature in Christ.

20 Because he hath looked forth from his high holy place: our Lord from heaven hath looked upon the earth. 21 That he might hear the groanings of the fettered: that he might loose the children of them that are slain: 22 That they may (k) shew forth the name of our Lord in Sion: and his praise in Jerusalem.

(k) The faithful people of the Church, according to their hability endeavour to serve Christ.

23 In the assembling of the people together in one, and kings to serve our Lord. 24 He answered him in the way of his strength: Shew me the fewness of my days. 25 Call me not back (l) in the half of my days: thy years are unto generation and generation.

(l) Grant me time and means to be mature in virtue in this life.

26 In the beginning, o Lord, thou didst found the earth: and the heavens are the works of thy hands. 27 They (m) shall perish, but thou art permanent: and they shall all wax old as a garment.[1] And as a vesture thou shalt change them, and they shall be changed:

(m) Be changed in quality.[1] Heb. 1.

28 but thou art the self-same, and thy years shall not fail. 29 The children of thy servants shall inhabit: and (n) their seed shall be directed for ever.

(n) The Church of Christ perpetual.

CHAPTER CII.

Thanks to God for private 6. and public benefits. 17. His mercy, justice, and other properties are immutable. 20. Angels and all other creatures are invited to praise him. [1]

[1] Gratitude for God's benefits.
The 7. key.

To (a) David himself. My soul (b) bless thou our Lord: and (c) all things, that are within me, his holy name.

(a) Inspired to David, and written by him. (b) Shew forth praises and thanks: (c) all my cogitations, affections, senses, and powers.

2 My soul bless thou our Lord: and forget not all his retributions. 3 Who is (d) propitious to all thine iniquities: who (e) healeth all thine infirmities.

(d) The first benefit of grace is remission of sins: (e) the second, is curing evil habits, or dispositions.

4 Who (f) redeemeth thy life from deadly falling: who (g) crowneth thee in mercy and commiserations.

(f) The third, to conserve from falling again: (g) the fourth, to give victory and reward in aboundant measure.

5 Who (h) replenisheth thy desire in good things: thy youth (i) shall be renewed as the eagle's.

(h) The fifth, to grant all lawful petitions temporal and spiritual, which are good for the soul, (i) the sixth, resurrection of flesh in glory.

6 Our Lord (k) doth mercies: and (l) judgment to all that suffer wrong.

(k) Our Lord, whose special property is to shew mercy, (l) when the same is neglected; he revengeth the wrongs, delivering the oppressed, and punishing the oppressors.

7 He made his ways (m) known to Moyses, his wills to the children of Israel.

(m) By giving them as written law.

8 Our Lord is (n) pitiful, and (o) merciful: (p) long suffering, and very merciful.

(n) God is naturally pitiful to relieve the afflicted. (o) Merciful towards sinners. (p) Loath to be angry, or to punish.

9 He will (q) not be angry always: neither will he threaten for ever.

(q) God punisheth not penitents with eternal pain, but with temporal: for though (as in the next verse) our sins of their own nature deserve eternal punishment, yet Christ paying our ransom, true penitents are only punished temporally.

10 He hath not done to us according to our sins: neither according to our iniquities hath he rewarded us. 11 For according to the height of heaven from the earth: hath he strengthened his mercy upon them that fear him. 12 As far (r) as the East is distant from the West: hath he made our iniquities far from us.

(r) See here the perfect washing away, and separation of sins.

13 As a father hath compassion of his children, so hath our Lord compassion on them that fear him: 14 because he hath known (s) our making. He remembered that we are dust:

(s) In regard of our frailty he hath compassion: yet his mercy only availeth to them that fear him: as in the next words before, and v. 17.

15 man, his days are as grass, as the flower of the field, so shall he flourish. 16 Because the spirit shall pass in him, and he shall not stand: and he shall know his place no more. 17 But the mercy of our Lord from everlasting, and unto everlasting upon them that fear him. And his justice is upon the children's children, to them that keep his testament. 18 And are mindful of his commandments to (t) do them.

(t) A just man not only knoweth, & remembereth, but also doth the commandments.

19 Our Lord hath prepared his seat in heaven: and his Kingdom shall have dominion over all. 20 Bless our Lord all ye his Angels: mighty in power, doing his word, that fear the voice of his words. 21 Bless our Lord all ye his hosts: you his ministers, that do his will. 22 Bless ye our Lord (v) all his works: in every place (w) of his dominion, my soul bless thou our Lord.

(v) All creatures, though naturally senseless, yet praise God, because they are his work, (w) and because they are in his dominion.

ANNOTATIONS.
PSALM CII.

[1] An Eagle fresh in old age as in youth.

[2] Renovation of a sinner by grace.

[3] Diverse senses of the same Scripture.

5. Thy youth shall be renewed, as the Eagle's.] Aristotle and Pliny write, that an Eagle decayeth not [1], nor ever dieth by old age, but the upper part of her beak still growing, at last hindereth her from eating, and so she dieth of famine. Saadias, and other Hebrew Rabbins report, that an Eagle Every ten years washeth herself in the sea as in a bath, & then flying very high burneth her feathers in the elemental fire, & new feathers growing she becometh fresh, as in her first youth, till at last about an hundred years old, she is not able to rise from the water, and so is drowned. Saint Augustine more probably affirmeth, that in long time her beak growing long, and stopping her mouth that she cannot eat, she breaketh the upper hooked part thereof against a stone, and so receiveth meat and recovereth strength, as in her youth. But whatsoever is the natural property of this kingly bird, the Royal Prophet here instructeth us by the similitude of her long life, or by the renovation of her strength, that just men, God's servants, are spiritually renovated in Christ [2], the principal rock, on whom the Church, & all the faithful are built, either by receiving new strength by his grace in their souls, after they are weakened by sin, as Saint Jerome and Euthymius expound this place: or by restoration of their bodies glorified in the resurrection, as Saint Augustine teacheth [3]: or by both, as most Catholic Doctors understand it. For one sense of holy Scripture excludeth not another. Especially when one is subordinate to the other. As here these two senses do very well concur, seeing the state of the body after the resurrection, dependeth upon the state of the soul, at the time of death.

[1] Origen's heresy, that all shall be saved.

[2] The damned can never repent.

9. He will not be angry always.] [1] Origen misunderstood this place, and some other like, holding an erroneous opinion, that all, even the most wicked sinners, both men and devils, shall at last be saved, and not eternally damned: which is a condemned heresy, contrary to evident places of holy Scriptures. Psal. 9. v. 6. The impious hath perished: their name thou hast destroyed for ever, & for ever & ever. Mat. 25. The wicked shall go into fire everlasting, into everlasting punishment. Apoc. 20. The beast and the false Prophet (and the same reason is for all the wicked) shall be tormented day and night, for ever and ever. Neither are these words (God will not be angry always) spoken universally, touching all sinners whosoever, but are limited, v. 13. & 17. to those that fear him, and keep his testament: whereas all those that die in mortal sin [2], are still obstinate in malice, and can never rightly repent, nor rightly fear God, nor keep his commandments.

CHAPTER CIII.

The Psalmist inviteth himself and others to praise God, for his marvelous works in the heavens, 5. the earth, and water, 9. limiting their bonds, producing all things necessary for all living creatures, in convenient seasons. 27. With continual providence of all. [1]

[1] God's works marvelous.
The 2. key.

To David himself. My soul bless thou our Lord: o Lord my God thou art magnified exceedingly. 2 Thou hast put on (a) confession and beauty: being clothed with light as with a garment. Stretching out the heaven as a skin:

(a) Thou possessest all majesty, and matter of praise.

3 which coverest the higher parts thereof (b) with waters. Which (c) makest the cloud for thee to ascend on: which walkest upon the wings of winds.

(b) Thou hast compassed the sphere of the fixed stars with a sphere of crystalline substance; which is as water congealed. (c) According to our capacity the Prophet describeth the speedy coming, or working of God, as if he came in a swift cloud, or with wings of the wind, to signify that he worketh what and when he pleaseth without delay. He said, and things were made: he commanded and they were created, Psal. 32.

4 Which makest spirits thine (d) Angels: and thy (e) ministers a burning fire.

(d) Thy messengers to execute thy will: (e) & the same Angels are as a burning fire in operation, yea they dispatch more easily, and more speedily than we can conceive.

5 Which hast founded the earth upon (f) the stability thereof: it shall not be inclined for ever and ever.

(f) Most firmly established by natural weight, in the center of the world.

6 The (g) depth, (h) as a garment, is his clothing: upon the mountains shall waters stand.

(g) The water (h) should naturally cover all the earth.

7 At (i) thy reprehension they shall fly: at the voice of thy thunder they shall fear.

(i) But by thy commandment the waters are contained in their limited places.

8 The (k) mountains ascend: and the plain fields descend into the place, which thou hast founded for them.

(k) The waters being contained in their appointed channels, both hills and fields appear, which otherwise would be covered.

9 Thou hast set a bound, which (l) they shall not pass over: neither shall they return to cover the earth.

(l) The waters.

10 Which sendest forth fountains in the valleys: between the midst of mountains shall waters pass.
11 All the beasts of the field shall drink: the wild asses shall (m) expect in their thirst.

(m) Hope for and receive.

12 Over them shall the fowls of the air inhabit: out of the midst of rocks they shall give forth voices.
13 Watering the mountains from higher places: of the fruit of thy work shall the earth be filled. 14 Bringing forth grass for beasts, and herb for the service of men. That thou mayst bring forth (n) bread out of the earth:

(n o p) By these three principal kinds of food, bread, wine, and oil, all sorts of nutriment are understood.

15 & (o) wine may make the heart of man joyful. That he may make the face cheerful with (p) oil: and bread may confirm the heart of man.

(o) ↑ (p) ↑

16 The trees of the field shall be filled, and the cedars of Libanus, which he hath planted: 17 there^ sparrows shall make their nest. The house of the heron is the leader of them: 18 the high mountains for harts: the rock a refuge for the Irchins. 19 He made the moon for seasons: the sun knoweth his going down. 20 Thou didst appoint darkness, and night was made: in it shall all the beasts of the wood pass. 21 The whelps of lions roaring, to raven, and to seek of God meat for themselves. 22 The sun is risen, & they are gathered together: and in their couches they shall be placed. 23 Man shall go forth to his work: and to his working until evening. 24 How magnified are thy works, o Lord! Thou hast made all things in wisdom: the earth is filled with (q) thy possession.

(q) With thy creatures.

25 This great sea, and very large, there are (r) creeping beasts, whereof (s) there is no number. Little beasts with great:

(r) Fishes, serpents, worms, and all living creatures that lack feet. (s) No kind of living creatures multiplieth so much as fishes. Aristotel li. 9. Animal. c. 17.

26 there ships shall pass. This (t) dragon, whom thou madest to (v) delude:

27 all expect of thee that thou give them meat in season. 28 Thou giving unto them, they shall gather it: thou opening thy hand, all shall be filled with bounty. 29 But thou turning away the face, they shall be troubled: thou shalt take away their spirit, and they shall fail, and shall return into their dust. 30 Thou shalt send forth thy spirit, and they shall be created: and thou shalt renew the face of the earth. 31 Be the glory of our Lord for ever: our Lord will rejoice in his works. 32 Who looketh upon the earth, & maketh it to tremble: who toucheth the mountains, and they smoke. 33 I will chant to our Lord in my life: I will sing to my God as long as I am. 34 Let my speech be acceptable to him: but I will take delight in our Lord. 35 (w) Let sinners fail from the earth, and the unjust, so that they be not: my soul bless thou our Lord.

(w) A prediction that impenitent sinners shall be damned, wherein the Prophet conforming his will to God's, uttereth it in form of a prayer.

CHAPTER CIV.

The Israelites are exhorted to sing praises to God, 5. for his marvelous benefits towards Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. 11. Whose particular family, being then small, went from Chanaan into Aegypt. (17. Whither Joseph by God's providence was carried before) there increased in number, was persecuted, 26. delivered by Moyses and Aaron, working many great miracles, 36. protected, and fed in the desert, 44. and finally possessed Chanaan.[1]

[1] God's special benefits towards the Jews.
The 4. key.

Alleluia. (a) Confess ye to our Lord, and invocate his name: (b) shew forth his works among the Gentiles.[1]

(a) Alleluia signifieth more than Laudate Dominum, Praise ye our Lord. For by these two Hebrew words, Alleluia, the Prophet inviteth all men to praise God, with gladness, and jubilation, with heart, voice, and gesture, with instruments, and howsoever we are able. And therefore S. Jerom, S. Augustin, and all Catholic writers keep the same words, and translate it not, neither in the titles of Psalms, nor ordinarily in any place or holy Scripture. This is the first Psalm thus titled, and is the same Psalm in sense, and in good part of the words, which the Royal Prophet made, and caused to be sung, when he brought the Ark of God from the house of Obededom into his own house. 1. Par. 16. v. 8. (b) How much grateful is it now to God, that we celebrate the greater mysteries of the new Testament.[1] For an exposition of this Psalm read the places quoted in the inner margin.

2 Chant to him, and sing to him: tell ye all his marvelous works. 3 Praise ye him in his holy name: let the heart of them rejoice that seek our Lord. 4 Seek ye our Lord, and be confirmed: seek (c) his face always.

(c) His present help.

5 Remember ye his marvelous works, which he hath done: his wonders, and the judgments of his mouth. 6 The seed of Abraham his servants: the children of Jacob his elect. 7 He is the Lord our God: in (d) all the earth are his judgments.

(d) Not only in Israel, but in all the world.

8 He hath been mindful for ever of his testament; of the word which he commanded (e) unto a thousand generations. [1]

(e) For ever, to the end of the world. [1] Gen. 12. v. 7. Gen. 17. v. 4. Gen. 26. v. 3. Gen. 28. v. 13. Gen. 46. v. 26. 27.

9 Which he disposed to Abraham: and of his oath to Isaac. 10 And he appointed it to Jacob for a precept: and to Israel for an eternal testament, 11 saying: To thee will I give the land of Chanaan, the cord of your inheritance. 12 When they were (f) of small number, very few and sojourners thereof:

(f) But 70. persons.

13 And they passed from nation into nation, & from Kingdom to another people. 14 He left not a man to hurt them: and he rebuked kings for their sake: 15 Touch not my anointed, and toward my Prophets be not malignant. 16 And (g) he called a famine upon the land: and he destroyed all the strength of bread. [1]

(g) By his providence suffered. [1] Gen. 41. v. 54.

17 He sent a man before them: Joseph was sold to be a servant. 18 They humbled his feet in fetters, iron passed through his soul, [1]

[1] Gen. 37. v. 28. Gen. 39. & seq.

19 until his word came. The word of our Lord inflamed him: 20 the king sent, and loosed him; the Prince of the people, and released him. 21 He appointed him lord of his house: and Prince of all his possession. 22 That he might instruct his Princes as himself: and might teach his ancients wisdom. 23 And Israel entered into Aegypt, and Jacob was a sojourner in the land (h) of Cham. [1]

(h) Aegypt, possessed by Mesraim Cham's second son. Gen. 10. v. 13. [1] Gen 46.

24 And he increased his people exceedingly: and strengthened them over their enemies. [1]

[1] Exo. 1. v. 7.

25 He (i) turned their heart that they hated his people: and to work guile toward his servants.

(i) May it be understood, or believed (saith S. Augustin) that God turneth the heart of man to commit sins? Or is it no sin, or is it a small sin, to hate the people of God? Or to work guile towards his servants? Who will say this? What then, is God author of these so grievous sins, who is not to be supposed the author of a most small sin? This learned Father therefore answereth, that God perverted not a right heart, but turned that was of it-self perverse, to the hatred of his people, where he might use that evil well, not by making them evil, but by bestowing upon his own people good things, which the evil might easily envy. Which hatred & to the glory of his own name, the things that follow do teach us; which are here remembered to his praise.

26 He sent Moyses his servant: Aaron (k) himself whom he chose. [1]

(k) In whom God established the Priesthood of Moyses' law. [1] Exo. 3. 4. 7. 8. 9. 10. 12.

27 He did put in them the words of his signs, and of his wonders in the Land of Cham. 28 He sent (l) darkness, and obscured: and did (m) not exasperate his words.

(l) The ninth plague of the Aegyptians. (m) God willingly, not as one loath or unwilling, performed all that he threatened.

29 He turned their (n) waters into blood: and killed their fishes.

(n) The first plague.

30 Their land brought forth (o) frogs in [1] the inner chambers of their kings.

(o) The second plague. [1] David knew this by revelation, or by tradition, for it is not in Exodus.

31 He said, and (p) the [1] caenomyia came: and the (q) sciniphs in all their coasts.

(p) The fourth plague. [1] a swarm of flies. (q) The third plague.

32 He made their rains (r) hail: fire burning in their land.

(r) The seventh plague.

33 And he struck their vines, and their fig-trees: and he destroyed the wood of their coasts. 34 He said, & (s) the locust came, & the (t) bruchus whereof there was no number.

(s) The eighth plague. (t) A worm that spoileth corn, grass, and fruit.

35 And it did eat all the grass in their land: and it did eat all the fruit of their land. 36 And he struck every (v) first begotten in their land: the first fruits of all their labour.

(v) The tenth plague. The fifth & sixth of pestilence and boyles are omitted.[1]

[1] Exod. 12. v. 35.

37 And he brought them forth with gold and silver, and there was not in their tribes a feeble person.

38 Aegypt was glad at their departure: because the fear of them lay upon them. 39 He spread a cloud for their protection, and fire to shine unto them by night.[1]

[1] Exod. 13. v. 21.

Exod. 16. v. 13.
Exod. 17. v. 6.
Gen. 12.

40 They made petition, and the quail came: and he filled them with the bread of heaven. 41 He divided the rock, and waters flowed: rivers ran in the dry ground. 42 Because he was mindful of his holy word, which he had uttered to Abraham his servant. 43 And he brought forth his people in exultation, and his elect in joy. 44 And he gave them the countries of the Nations: and they possessed the labours of peoples:[1]

[1] Iosue 6. & seq.

45 That they might keep his justifications, and seek after his law.

CHAPTER CV.

The Prophet exhorteth the people to render thanks and praise to God, 6. for remitting their manifold sins, in the desert. 34. and in the conquered land: 38. foreshewing like sins to come, God's wrath and punishment for the same. 44. & that he will give grace of repentance to some 47. for which he prayeth, and praiseth God.[1]

[1] The Israelites often sinned, and were mercifully punished.
The 4. key.

Alleluia. Confess ye to our Lord (a) because he is good: because his mercy is for ever.[1]

(a) God is of himself and essentially good. All other goodness is participated of him.[1] Iudith 13. v. 21.

2 (b) Who shalt speak the powers of our Lord, shall make all his praises to be heard?

(b) No creature can fully express God's perfections.

3 (c) Blessed are they, that keep judgment, & (d) do justice at all time.

(c) It is a happy state in this life, either to keep God's law: (d) or to repent and do worthy penance for transgressing.

4 Remember us, o Lord (e) in the good pleasure of thy people: visit us in thy salvation:

(e) According to thy wonted benevolence, promised to thy people.

5 To (f) see in the goodness of thine elect, to rejoice in the joy of thy nation: that thou mayst be praised with thine inheritance.

(f) That we may see and enjoy the benefits promised to thine elect.

6 We have (g) sinned with our fathers: we have (h) dealt unjustly, we have (i) done iniquity.

(g) We have erred and hurt ourselves: (h) we have wronged our neighbours: (i) we have offended against God.

7 Our fathers in Aegypt did not understand thy marvelous works: they were not mindful of the multitude of thy mercy. And they provoked thee to wrath going up unto the sea, the Red sea. 8 And he saved them (k) for his name sake; that he might make his power known.[1]

(k) Albeit the people by their murmuring deserved more punishment, yet God for the glory of his own name saved them from utter destruction.[1] Exod. 14. v. 11.

9 And he rebuked the Red sea, and it was made dry: and he led them in the depths as in a desert. 10 And he saved them from the hand of them that hated them: and he redeemed them out of the hand of the enemy. 11 And water overwhelmed those that afflicted them: there did not one of them remain. 12 And they believed his words: and they sang his praises. 13 They had (l) quickly done, they forgot his works: and they (m) expected not his counsel.

(l) They persevered not long in their duty towards God, seeing his omnipotent power by his marvelous works: (m) nor were content with his providence, but carnally coveted things not necessary.

14 And they coveted concupiscence in the desert: and tempted God in the place without water. [1]

[1] Exo. 16. & 17.

15 He gave them their petition: and sent saturity into their (n) souls. [1]

(n) According to their carnal desires. [1] Nu. 10.

16 And they provoked Moyses in the camp: Aaron the (o) holy of our Lord.

(o) Holy by his function.

17 The earth was opened, and swallowed Dathan, and overwhelmed the congregation of Abiron. 18 And a fire flamed up in their synagogue: the flame burnt the sinners. 19 And they made a calf in Horeb: and they adored (p) the sculptile. [1]

(p) They adored the image that represented a calf, not God. [1] Exo. 23.

20 And they (q) changed their glory into the similitude of a calf that eateth grass.

(q) God being their true glory, they changed him for a false god of the Aegyptians (who especially honoured a calf called Apis) making an image thereof, and attributed their delivery from Aegypt to this imagined god. Exo. 32. v. 4. 8. Of which and the like foolish and abominable idolatry S. Paul writeth, Rom. 1. v. 23. They changed the glory of the incorruptible God into a similitude of the image of a corruptible man, and of fowls, and of four footed beasts, and of them that creep. Where we see what manner of images holy Scriptures condemn, and not the images of Christ and his Saints.

21 They forgat God, which saved them, which did great things in Aegypt, 22 marvelous things in the land of Cham, terrible things in the Red sea. 23 And (r) he said to destroy them: if Moyses his elect had not stood in the way before him [1]. To turn away his wrath that he should not destroy them:

(r) He said, he would destroy them, but for Moyses' prayer spared them. [1] Exo. 32.

24 and they esteemed for naught the land that was to be desired. [1] They did not believe his word.

[1] Nu. 14.

25 and they murmured in their tabernacles: they heard not the voice of our Lord. 26 And he lifted up his hand over them: to overthrow them in the desert: [1]

[1] Num. 14. v. 21. 22.

27 And to cast down their seed among the Nations: & to disperse them in the countries. 28 And they were professed to (s) Beelphegor: and they did eat the sacrifices (t) of the dead. [1]

(s) The Idol of Moabites, and Madianites. (t) As God is indeed the living God, that liveth of himself, and giveth life to others: so false gods are called dead gods, that cannot give life to any, but do kill all that serve them; at least spiritually, and often corporally. [1] Num. 25. v. 3.

29 And they provoked him in their inventions: & ruin was multiplied on them. 30 And Phinees stood, and (v) pacified: and the slaughter ceased.

(v) Phinees moved by the zeal of God (as the holy text witnesseth, Num. 25. v. 11.)

31 And it was reputed to him unto justice, in generation and generation even for ever. 32 And they provoked him at the waters of contradiction: and (w) Moyses was vexed for them: [1]

(w) Moyses afflicted in spirit, by the enormous murmuring of the people, doubted whether God would give them water out of the rock or no: not doubting of his power, but of his will: and so when he should have spoken to the rock, Num. 20. v. 8. he spoke to the incredulous people. v. 10. and therein offended God: for which he was temporally punished. v. 12. Deut. 1. v. 37. &c. c. 3. v. 26. c. 4. v. 21. [1] Nu. 10. v. 2. 12.

33 because they exasperated his spirit. And he plainly affirmed in his lips: 34 they destroyed not the nations, of which our Lord spake to them. 35 And they were mingled among the nations, and learned their works: [1]

[1] Deut. 2. v. 2. & 12. v. 2. & 3. Iudic. 2. v. 11. 12. Iudic. 3. v. 5. 6. &c. Iere. 19. v. 5.

36 and they served their sculptiles: and it became a scandal to them. 37 And they immolated their sons, and their daughters to devils. 38 And (x) they shed innocent blood: the blood of their sons and of their daughters, which they sacrificed to the sculptiles of Chanaan. And the land was infected with blood,

(x) Some Jews offered these most cruel, unnatural, and abominable sacrifices; perhaps in the times of Judges, when they were mingled with idolatrous people, and served their gods. Iud. 2. v. 12. c. 3. v. 6. But it is more express after David's time, whereof he here prophesieth, and was verified by Achaz. 4. Reg. 16. v. 3. and by Manasses. 4. Reg. 21. v. 6. Which with other idolatry King Iosias destroyed. 4. Reg. 23. v. 1.

39 & was contaminated in their works: and they did fornicate in their inventions. 40 And our Lord was wrath with fury upon his people: and he abhorred his inheritance. 41 And he delivered them into the hands of the nations: and they that hated them had the dominion of them. 42 And their enemies afflicted them, and they were humbled under their hands: 43 he did often deliver them. But they exasperated him in their counsel: and they were humbled in their iniquities. 44 And he (y) saw when they were afflicted: and he heard their prayer.

(y) God respected them with his merciful eye, and gave them grace to repent.

45 And he was mindful of his testament: and it repented him according to the multitude of his mercy. 46 And he gave them into mercies in the sight of all, that had taken them. (z)

(z) Here the Psalmist concludeth both the history and prophecy of this Psalm, with prayer and praise, as followeth.

47 [1]Save us, o Lord our God: and gather us out of the Nations. That we may confess to thy holy name: & may glory in thy praise.

[1]A very fit prayer in time of schism.

48 Blessed be our Lord the God of Israel from everlasting unto everlasting: and all the people shall say: Be it, be it.

ANNOTATIONS. PSALM CV.

[1]The red sea a figure of Baptism.

[2]All former sins destroyed in Baptism.

10. He redeemed them.] What price (or ransom) saith S. Augustine, was given in this redemption? Or is it a prophecy, that this was done in figure of Baptism [1], where we are redeemed from the hand of the devil by a great price, which is the blood of Christ? Whereupon it was more conveniently figured, not by what sea soever, but by the red sea: For blood hath red colour. And touching the effect of Baptism destroying all former sins, he teacheth in the exposition of the next Psalm (and either the same holy father, or some other good author, Ser. 42. de temp.) that as the Israelites passed safely through the red sea, and all the Aegyptians going in with them were drowned: so the baptised are saved in the water of Baptism, and all their sins are destroyed. [2]

CHAPTER CVI.

Again the Psalmist inviteth all men to render thanks to God for their delivery from dangers, or evils in general: 4. particularly from dangers in journey, 10. in prison or captivity, 17. in sickness spiritual and corporal, 23. in navigation, 33. describing the changeable course of things in this world, 38. especially of men's states; 42. for all which the just will praise God. [1]

[1]God's perpetual providence towards all men.

Alleluia. Confess (a) ye to our Lord, because he is good: because his mercy is for ever. [1]

(a) Praise God by confessing his mercy, providence, and goodness. [1] 1. Par. 16. v. 34.

2 Let them say that are (b) redeemed of our Lord, whom he redeemed out of the hand of the enemy: and out of the countries he gathered them:

(b) God of his mercy promised the Redeemer of mankind straight after Adam's fall:

3 From (c) the rising of the sun, and the going down:

from the north, and the sea.

(c) which redemption was intended for all, & faileth not of God's part in any, but of men's own willful refusing to be duly penitent, and to keep God's precepts.

4 They (d) wandered in the wilderness, in a place without water: the way of city for habitation they found not.

(d) Literally of such as wander in this world, having no settled place to dwell in: spiritually of all mankind after his fall.

5 Hungry and thirsty: their soul fainted in them.
6 And (e) they cried to our Lord when they were in tribulation: and he delivered them out of their necessities.

(e) Whensoever they call upon God, he helpeth them, as is best for their spiritual health.

7 And he conducted them into the right way: to go into a city of habitation. 8 Let (f) the mercies of our Lord confess to him: and his marvelous works to the children of men.

(f) All God's benefits, which are of his mercy, not of man's desert, are just matter of praising God.

9 Because he hath filled the empty soul: and the hungry soul he hath filled with good things. 10 Them that sat in darkness, and in the shadow of death: bound in neediness, and iron. 11 Because they (g) exasperated the words of God: and they provoked the counsel of the Highest.

(g) Calamities in this world are commonly inflicted for sins.

12 And their heart was humbled in labours: they were weakened, neither was there any to help. 13 And they cried to our Lord when they were in tribulation: and he delivered them out of their necessities. 14 And he brought them out of darkness, and the shadow of death: and brake their bonds asunder. 15 Let the mercies of our Lord confess to him: & his marvelous works to the children of men. 16 Because he hath destroyed the gates of brass; and the bars of iron he hath broken. 17 He hath received them out of the way of their iniquity: for they were humbled for their injustices. 18 Their soul did abhor all meat: & they approached even to the gates of death. 19 And they cried to our Lord when they were in tribulation: and he delivered them out of their necessities. 20 He sent his word, and healed them: and delivered them out of their destructions. 21 Let the mercies of our Lord confess to him: & his marvelous works to the children of men. 22 And let them sacrifice the sacrifice of praise: & shew forth his works in exultation. 23 They that go down into the sea in ships, making traffic in the great waters. 24 They have seen the works of our Lord, and his marvelous things in the depth. 25 He said, and the blast of the storm stood: and the waves thereof were exalted. 26 They ascend even to the heavens, and they descend even to the depths: their soul pined away in evils. 27 They were troubled, and were moved as a drunken man: and all their wisdom was devoured. 28 And (h) they cried to our Lord when they were in tribulation, and he brought them out of their necessities.

(h) As before in the 6. 13. and 19. verses.

29 And he turned his storm into calm: & the waves thereof were quiet. 30 And they rejoiced because they were quiet: and he conducted them into the haven of their will. 31 Let (i) the mercies of our Lord confess to him: and his marvelous works to the children of men.

(i) This verse also is four times in this Psalm. v. 8. 15. 21. and 31. to admonish us, that as there is one means to escape from all dangers by crying to God, as v. 6. 13. 19. and 28. with mourning and penance: so there is one cause of praise and thanks for our delivery, which is God's mercy and grace.

32 And let them exalt him in the Church of the people: and the chair of the ancients let them praise him. 33 (k) He turned (l) the rivers into a desert: and the issues of waters into dryness.

(k) God to shew sometimes his power, also to benefit some, and to punish others, changeth the accustomed course of things, and states of men, at his divine pleasure, as here the Royal Prophet reciteth some examples. And some others are recorded in diverse times and places. (l) No doubt much change was made in the earth by Noe's flood. And many think that the land of Chanaan was made more fruitful in the time of the Jews' inhabiting, and now is more barren again.

34 The (m) fruitful land into a salt ground, for the malice of them that inhabit it.

(m) He alludeth to the country about Sodome and Gomorre, which was most fruitful, and most pleasant, Gen. 13. v. 10. but shortly after was burnt with fire and brimstone, Gen. 19. v. 14. subverted, and turned into a dead and salt sea.

35 He turned the desert into pools of waters: and the land without water into issues of waters. 36 And he placed the hungry there, and they built a city of habitation. 37 And they sowed fields and planted vineyards: and they made fruit (n) of nativity.

(n) Made aboundance of fruit to grow.

38 And he blessed them, and they were multiplied exceedingly: and their beasts he lessened not. 39 And (o) they were made few: and were vexed by the tribulation of evils, and with sorrow.

(o) Again some countries punished for sins.

40 Contempt was poured out upon Princes: and he made them wander where was no way, and not in the way. 41 And he (p) did help the poor out of poverty: and made families as sheep.

(p) Another change in relieving the poor being humbled.

42 The just shall see, and shall rejoice: & all iniquity shall stop her mouth. 43 Who is wise and will keep these things? And will understand the mercies of our Lord?

CHAPTER CVII.

The royal Prophet promiseth, 5. and rendereth praises to God, 7. for his delivery from troubles, and advancement in the kingdom, 13. praying God still to help man's infirmity. [1]

[1] David singeth praises for benefits received. The 8. key.

A canticle (a) of Psalm, to David himself.

(a) This Psalm was sung with instruments beginning the music, and voices following.

2 My heart is ready, o God, my heart is ready [1]: I will chant and will sing in my glory. [2]

[1] Psa. 56. [2] The former part of this Psalm to the 7. verse, is the same in sense, and almost in words, with the later part of the 56. from the 8. verse.

3 Arise my glory, arise psalter and harp: I will arise early. 4 I (b) will confess to thee in peoples, o Lord: and I will sing to thee (c) in the Nations.

(b) King David subdued not only some parts of Chanaan, not subject to the Jews before (2. Reg. 5. 1. Par. 11.) but also brought the Philistiims, Moabites, Ammonites, Idumeans, Amalechites, the Kings of Soba, Syria, & Emath, to pay tribute. 2. Reg. 8. 1. Par. 18. (c) Yet all these victories & conquests were but a figure of Christ's power and dominion in all nations. And therefore the rest of this Psalm, by S. Augustin & other fathers' judgement, was rather prophetically uttered by David, in the person of Christ, & more perfectly performed by Christ in his Church, than historically averred of David himself.

5 Because thy mercy is great above the heavens: & thy truth even to the clouds. 6 Be exalted above the heavens o God, and thy glory over all the earth: [1]

[1] Psa. 59. v. 7.

7 [1] that thy beloved may be delivered. Save with thy right hand, and hear me:

[1] The rest of this Psalm is the same with the later part of the 59. from the 7. verse.

8 God spake in his holy: I will rejoice, and will divide Sichem, and I will measure the vale of tabernacles. 9 Galaad is mine, and Manasses is mine: and Ephraim the protection of my head. Juda is my king: 10 Moab the pot of my hope. Upon Idumea I will extend my shoe: the strangers are made my friends. 11 Who will conduct me into a fenced city? Who will conduct me into Idumea? 12 Wilt not thou, o God, which hast repelled us, and wilt not thou go forth, o God, in our hosts? 13 Give us help out of tribulation: because man's salvation is vain. 14 In God we shall do strength: and he will bring our enemies to nothing.

CHAPTER CVIII.

Christ (by the mouth of David) requesteth of God to be justly declared innocent, and his enemies punished, 6. particularly describing Judas the traitor's malice, 21. and his own temporal afflictions: 26. prayeth, 30. and praiseth God for his delivery. [1]

[1] Christ persecuted & his enemies punished.
The 5. key.

Unto the end, a Psalm of David. 2 O (a) God conceal not my praise: because the mouth of the sinner, and the mouth of (b) the deceitful man is open upon me.

(a) The words of Christ. (b) The Pharisees and Herodians (Mat. 22.) with their mouth acknowledged Christ a true speaker, & a teacher of the way of God in truth, thereby to draw him into danger, and to shed his blood.

3 They (c) have spoken against me with deceitful tongue, and with words of hatred they have compassed me: and they have impugned me without cause.

(c) At other times they accused him of great crimes, lastly of treason against Caesar.

4 For that they should love me, they backbited me: but I prayed. 5 And they set against me evil things for good: and hatred for my love. 6 Appoint (d) a sinner over him: and (e) let the devil stand on his right hand.

(d) A prediction that Judas would not make recourse to any good counseller, but complain of his miserable tormented conscience to the wicked, who gave him no comfort at all, (e) and so despairing, the devil persuaded him to hang himself.

7 When he is judged, let him come forth condemned: and let his prayer be turned into sin. 8 Let his days be made few: and let another take his (f) bishoprick. [1]

(f) The office of Apostleship. [1] Act. 1. v. 16.

9 Let (g) his children be made orphans: and his wife a widow.

(g) The posterity or successors of wicked persecuters prosper not long in this world.

10 Let his children be transported wandering, and let them beg: and let them be cast out of their habitations. 11 Let the usurer search all his substance: and let strangers spoil his labours. 12 Let there be none to help him: neither let there be any to have pity on his pupils. 13 Let his children come to destruction: in (h) one generation let his name be clean put out.

(h) Arch-heretics that devise new opinions, are shortly forsaken, their followers still coining new heresies of their own, differing from their false master.

14 Let the iniquity of his fathers return to memory in the sight of our Lord: and let not the sin of his mother be blotted out. 15 Let them be before our Lord always, and let the memory of them perish out of the earth: 16 For that he remembered not to do mercy. 17 And he persecuted the poor, and needy man, and the compunct in heart to kill him. 18 And he (i) loved cursing, and it shall come to him: and he would not blessing, and it shall be far from him. And he put on cursing as a garment, and it entered as water into his inner parts, and as oil in his bones.

(i) Let them observe this, that use more swearing and blaspheming, than praying or meditating.

19 Be it to him as a garment, wherewith he is covered: and as a girdle, wherewith he is always girded. 20 This is the work of them that detract from me before our Lord: and that speak evils against my soul. 21 And thou Lord, Lord, do with me for thy name's sake: because thy mercy is sweet. Deliver me 22 because I am needy and poor: and (k) my heart is troubled within me.

(k) Christ's soul was pensive when he prayed in the garden, and he did works of penance for our sins all his life.

23 As a shadow when it declineth, am I taken away: and I am shaken as locusts. 24 My knees are weakened with fasting: and my flesh is changed by reason of oil. 25 And I am made a reproach to them: they saw me, and wagged their heads. 26 Help me, o Lord my God: (l) save me according to thy mercy.

(l) He prayed also for his resurrection, and glorification.

27 And let them know that this is thy hand: & thou, o Lord, hast done it. 28 They will curse, and thou shalt bless: let them that rise up against me be confounded: but thy servant shall rejoice. 29 Let them that detract from me, be clothed with shame: and let them be covered with their confusion, as with a (m) double patched cloak.

(m) With all possible confusion.

30 I will confess to our Lord exceedingly with my mouth: and in the midst of many I will praise him.

31 Because he hath stood on the right hand of the poor, that he might save my soul from the persecutors.

CHAPTER CIX.

Christ rising and ascending into heaven sitteth on the right hand of God: 2. beginning in Jerusalem reigneth in the Church of the whole earth: 4. useth the Priesthood of Melchisedech's order to the end of the world. 6. And shall judge the world.[1]

[1] Christ's exaltation.
The 5. key.

A Psalm of David. Our (a) Lord said (b) to my Lord: Sit on my right hand: (c) till I make thine enemies, the foot-stool of thy feet.[1]

(a) God the Father. (b) To God the Son, the Lord of David, and of all mankind, yet the son of David, according to his humanity. (c) He limiteth not the time, but excludeth all time, wherein the enemy might imagine, that Christ's kingdom should cease: signifying that Christ shall reign, till all his enemies be subdued, much more afterwards in all eternity.[1] Matt. 22. Act. 2. 1. Cor. 15. Heb. 1. & 10.

2 Our Lord will send forth the rod of thy strength (d) from Sion: rule thou in the midst of thine enemies.

(d) The Church of Christ beginning in Jerusalem on Whitsunday, the fiftieth day from his Resurrection, continueth evermore.

3 With thee (e) the beginning in the day (f) of thy strength: in (g) the brightness of holy things: from the womb (h) before the day star I begat thee.

(e) Thou shall have principality, (f) in the day of thy powerful conquest, and rising from death. (g) In excellency of holy spiritual mysteries and graces: (h) because I God the Father, of my substance begat thee God the Son in eternity. The same which Micheas saith (c. 5. v. 2.) His coming forth from the beginning, from the days of eternity.

4 Our Lord (i) sware, and it shall not repent him: Thou art a Priest (k) for ever according to (l) the order of Melchisedech.[1]

(i) God most firmly, and unchangeably affirmed: that thou (Christ our Messias) art not only a King, but also a Priest: (k) not for a time, as Aaron was, but for ever, (l) neither of Aaron's order, but according to the order of Melchisedech.[1] Heb. 5. v. 7.

5 Our Lord on thy right hand (m) hath broken kings in the day of his wrath.

(m) Kings that sometimes persecute Christians, are subdued with other people to Christ.

6 He (n) shall judge in nations, he (o) shall fill ruins, he (p) shall crush the heads in the land of many.

(n) He shall judge and punish the incredulous people, (o) make great slaughters amongst those that resist: (p) and bring Princes with their populous kingdoms to nothing.

7 (q) Of the torrent in the way he shall drink: (r) therefore shall he exalt the head.

(q) He shall in the mean time (and also his best servants) suffer much tribulation in this life (r) and for the same be highly exalted in life everlasting.

ANNOTATIONS.
PSALM CIX.

◦Christ's Priesthood for ever both in function and in effect.

4. A Priest for ever.] In two respects Christ is a Priest for ever:◦ in that from the first instant of his Incarnation he was, and remaineth a Priest, now also in heaven: and all other Priests are his ministerial Vicars, not successors. So that all Priestly functions, which they do, he by them doth the same, as the principal Priest. Whereupon saith S. Paul (1. Cor. 4.) So let a man think of us as of the ministers of Christ, and dispensers of the mysteries of God. Secondly, Christ daily offering Sacrifice by the hands of his Priests, doth continually pacify God's wrath, in behalf of those sinners, for whom it is duly applied, even to the end of the world. Whereas the Priesthood of Aaron, and of all others in the old Testament, ceased by their deaths, both in the office, and in the effect.

4. According to the order of Melchisedech.] As Melchisedech,◦ King of peace and justice, without father, mother, or genealogy expressed in holy Scriptures, or otherwise known to the world, was Priest of the Highest, offered bread & wine, an unbloody sacrifice, communicating with both Chananeites and Hebrews, blessed Abraham, and took tithes of him & his subjects: so Christ the true King of peace & justice, without father of his humanity, without mother of his Divinity, the Son of God, of ineffable genealogy, born of a Virgin in his humanity, the Priest of God, offereth Sacrifice (not only bloody on the Cross, but also) unbloody in the forms of bread and wine, continueth the same by the ministry of other Priests, maketh all nations partakers thereof, blesseth them and receiveth of them all dutiful & religious service, as of his subjects.

◦ The resemblance of Christ's and Melchisedech's Priesthood.

CHAPTER CX.

Praise of God for benefits, 4. especially for the B. Sacrament of the Eucharist, 6. with other graces imparted to the Catholic Church. [1]

[1] Graces given to the Church.
The 6. key.

Alleluia. I will confess to thee, o Lord, with all my heart: in (a) the counsel of the just, and (b) the congregation. [1]

(a) I will praise God both in secret for discharge of mine own conscience; (b) and in public for edification of others. [1] This Psalm in the Hebrew is composed with every verse and middle of verse, beginning with a distinct letter, in order of the Alphabet.

2 The works of our Lord are great: exquisite according (c) to all his wills.

(c) God's will is the whole cause of all his works.

3 (d) Confession and magnificence his work: and his justice continueth for ever and ever.

(d) Every work of his is praise-worthy and magnifical.

4 He hath made (e) a memory of his marvelous works; a merciful & pitiful Lord:

(e) God hath left one most special and beneficial memory of all other benefits, his own body and blood, in memory of his Passion, and our redemption,

5 he hath given (f) meat to them that fear him. He will be mindful for ever (g) of his testament:

(f) the spiritual food and sustenance of all the souls that rightly fear him. (g) Of his promise to conserve his Church perpetually.

6 (h) the force of his works he will shew forth to his people:

(h) The powerable operation of his death, and of all his mysteries.

7 To give them the inheritance of the gentiles: the works of his hands truth and judgment. 8 All his commandments (i) are faithful: confirmed for ever and ever, made in truth and equity.

(i) God's commandments do justify all that keep them.

9 He sent (k) redemption to his people: he commanded his testament for ever. Holy and terrible is his name:

(k) He also of his mercy redeemed man, that he might be able to keep his precepts.

10 (l) the fear of our Lord is the beginning of wisdom. Understanding is good to all that do it: his praise remaineth for ever and ever.

(l) Beginning with fear of God, bringeth at last by other degrees to true wisdom, which two are the first and last of the seven gifts of the Holy Ghost.

CHAPTER CXI.

True happiness consisteth in fearing God, keeping his commandments, 5. and in doing works of mercy. 10. The contrary bringeth to misery. [1]

[1] The means to be happy.
The 7. key.

Alleluia. (a) Of the return of Aggeus and Zachary. [1] Blessed is the man that feareth our Lord: (b) he shall have great delight in his commandments. [2]

(a) The Septuagint Interpreters added this mention of Aggeus and Zacharie, returning from captivity, to signify that this Psalm was very proper, & meet to be commended to the people at that time, whereby they might learn, that their sins were the cause of their captivity, and of all their miseries: and if they desired temporal or spiritual prosperity, they must observe the means here prescribed to obtain the same. [1] Psal. 1. (b) He that sincerely feareth God, will take great delight in keeping his commandments. [2] This Psalm is also composed by the Alphabet, as the next before.

2 (c) His seed shall be mighty in the earth: the generation of the righteous shall be blessed.

(c) So doing he and his shall prosper.

3 Glory and riches in his house: and (d) his justice abideth for ever and ever.

(d) The just shall not only prosper in this world but also in the next.

4 (e) Light is risen up in darkness to the righteous: he is merciful, and pitiful, and just.

(e) God will also comfort the just in tribulations.

5 Acceptable is the man, that is merciful and lendeth, that (f) shall dispose his words in judgment:

(f) That shall give discreet and wholesome counsel to the afflicted.

6 Because he shall not be moved for ever. 7 The just shall be in eternal memory: he shall not fear at the hearing of evil. His heart is ready to hope in our Lord, 8 his heart is confirmed: he shall not be moved till he look over his enemies. 9 He distributed, he gave to the poor: (g) his justice remaineth for ever and ever, (h) his horn shall be exalted in glory. [1]

(g) Works of mercy are also called justice, because they concur to man's justification, (h) and to his salvation. [1] 2. Cor. 9.

10 The sinner shall see, and will be angry, he shall gnash his teeth and pine away: the desire of sinners shall perish.

CHAPTER CXII.

God is to be praised, who being high, regardeth and provideth for the needy in this world. [1]

[1] God's providence.
The 3. key.

Alleluia. Praise our Lord ye (a) children: praise ye the name of our Lord.

(a) All God's servants.

2 Be the name of our Lord blessed, from henceforth now and for ever, 3 From the rising of the sun unto the going down, the name of our Lord is laudable. 4 Our Lord is high above all nations, and his glory above the heavens. 5 Who is as the Lord our God, that dwelleth on high, 6 and beholdeth the low things (b) in heaven and in earth?

(b) In respect of God all creatures are low, though they be in heaven.

7 Raising up the needy from the earth, and lifting up the poor out of the dung: 8 (c) To place him with Princes, with the Princes of his people.

(c) See the example of Ioseph so advanced.

9 Who maketh the (d) barren woman to dwell in a house, a joyful mother of children.

(d) of Sara, Rebecca, Rachael, and other women made fruitful.

CHAPTER CXIII.

For the marvelous passage of Israel out of Aegypt, 3. the red sea, the river of Jordan, 7. and the hills giving them place, 8. the rocks yielding them water, 9. God, not themselves, is to be praised. 12. Idols and Idolaters are vain, and shall be confounded. 17. The faithful trust in God, 20. are blessed, and for ever praise God. [1]

[1] The marvelous passage of Israel from Aegypt. The 4. key.

Alleluia. In the coming forth of Israel out of Aegypt: of the house of Jacob from (a) the barbarous people.

(a) People of false religion counted barbarous, especially such as also persecute the true Religion; for otherwise the Aegyptians were both civil in manners, and learned in many sciences.

2 (b) Jewry was made his sanctification, Israel his dominion.

(b) The people of Jews were more notoriously renowned in the world from the time of their delivery out of Aegypt, for the peculiar people, whom God sanctified, & in whom, as in his elected inheritance or dominion, he dwelled and reigned.

3 The (c) sea saw, and (d) fled: Jordan (e) was turned backward. [1]

(c) The Psalmist writing in verse doth often describe things in poetical manner, (d) when the Israelites went forth of Aegypt, (e) when they entered into Chanaan, but more truly than profane poets: for that in very deed all creatures, otherwise senseless, as the sea, do in a sort feel the power of their Creator, & obey his will. [1] Exo. 14. Iosue 3.

4 (f) The mountains leaped as rams: and the little hills as the lambs of sheep.

(f) Either there was an earthquake, or some other moving of hills, not mentioned by Moyses, or else the Psalmist speaketh of the rocks of the torrents, which bowed, that the Israelites might rest in Ar, and lie in the borders of the Moabites, Num. 21. v. 15.

5 (g) What aileth thee o sea that thou didst fly: and thou o Jordan, that thou was turned backward?

(g) By the figure Apostrophe he speaketh to the sea, river, and hills: using also Prosopopoeia, as if senseless things understood, and should answer.

6 Ye mountains leaped as rams, and ye little hills as the lambs of sheep. 7 At the face of our Lord was the earth moved, at the face of the God of Jacob. 8 Who turned (h) the rock into pools of waters, and stony hill into fountains of waters.

(h) Another miraculous benefit, that rock yielded them water in their necessity.

9 [1] NOT TO US O LORD, NOT TO US: but to thy name give the glory.

[1] Here some Hebrew Rabbins begin another Psalm, but by the coherence of the matter Saint Augustine proveth that it is but one Psalm, where is shewed that the true invisible God is known by such works as are here recited: and contrarywise, that the gentiles' idols are not Gods, because they are made of silver, gold, or other matter, by men's hands; having resemblance of living things are altogether senseless.

10 For (i) thy mercy, and (k) thy truth: lest at any time (l) the Gentiles say: Where is their God?

(i) Thou didst all this, o God, of mere mercy towards thy people: (k) for thy truth's sake, seeing thou didst promise to protect them: (l) that the Gentiles should not take occasion to blaspheme.

11 But our God is in heaven: he hath done all things what soever he would. 12 The idols of the gentiles are silver, and gold, the works of men's hands. 13 They have mouth, and shall not speak: they have eyes, an shall not see. 14 They have ears, and shall not hear: they have nostrils and shall not smell. 15 They have hands, and shall not handle: they have feet, and shall not walk: they shall not cry in their throat.

16 (m) Let them that make them become like to them: and all that have confidence in them.

(m) This is a just prayer of the zealous, conforming their desires to God's will. But if God give idolaters grace to amend, then all the just will also rejoice in their conversion.

17 (n) The house of Israel hath hoped in our Lord: he is their helper and their protector.

(n) Though many Jews fell to idolatry, yet there always remained so many in God's true service, that it might still be truly said: The house of Israel hath hoped in our Lord, as is here averred.

18 The house of Aaron hath hoped in our Lord: he is their helper and their protector. 19 They that fear our Lord have hoped in our Lord; he is their helper and their protector. 20 Our Lord hath been mindful of us: and hath blessed us. He hath blessed the house of Israel: he hath blessed the house of Aaron. 21 He hath blessed all that fear our Lord, the little with the great. 22 Our Lord add upon you: upon you, & upon your children. 23 Blessed be you of our Lord, which made heaven and earth. 24 (o) The heaven of heaven is to our Lord: but (p) the earth he hath given to the children of men.

(o) This in effect all worldly politics say in their hearts: as it were quitting their interest of heaven to God, (p) and contenting themselves with earthly possessions.

25 (q) The dead shall not praise thee, o Lord: nor all they (r) that go down into hell:

(q) But when such profane men are dead, they make no shew at all of praising God: (r) for parting from the earth, they descend into hell, and there eternally blaspheme God.

26 but we (s) that live do bless our Lord, from this time, and for ever.

(s) Contrarywise the just, aspiring to heaven, which is the proper Kingdom of God, & using this world as they ought to do, for a means to ascend into heaven, shall bless and praise God for evermore.

ANNOTATIONS.
PSALM CXIII.

[1] The definition of Idolatry.

[2] Diverse sorts of Idolatry.

[3] Angels honoured as gods.

[4] Corporal creatures sensible and without sense.

[5] Men living or dead.

[6] Images of false gods.

[7] Images themselves reputed gods.

[8] Idolaters are void of reason.

[9] And servants of devils.

[10] Psa. 95. v. 5.

12. The Idols of the Gentiles are silver and gold.] All Catholic Divines agree in this authentical definition of Idolatry, [1] that is divine honour given to any creature, as to God. Of the diverse sorts also of Idolatry the ancient learned Doctors have written much. [2] Namely Justinus Martyr in his Orations against the Gentiles, Tertullian in Apologetico, Arnobius Orat. ad Gentes. Lactantius, lib. 2. c. 17. Divinar. Instit. and many others. But mostly copiously and profoundly S. Augustine, especially in his ten first books de Civitate Dei. Into which error & crime the Platonists fell, holding that spiritual invisible created substances, to wit, Angels good and evil, [3] whom they called Intelligentias separatas, had divine power, & so gave to them divine honour. Others honour dead men, and some before their death, as gods, for their notable acts achieved in this life, as Saturn, Jupiter, Hercules, and the like. Some yield divine honour to mere corporal creatures, [4] living or without life, as to beasts, and serpents, the sun, the moon, fire, water, earth, the whole machine of the world, as if it were animate, and that with divine spirit or soul. Again all these have been worshipped as gods, [5] not only in themselves but also in their images. But to omit other diversities, the most gross sort of all, is the Idolatry which the Psalmist here describeth, when Images made by men's hands are immediately honoured as gods in themselves. [6] For such gods the Gentiles had, and of them the Prophet here speaketh. Comparing these visible senseless imagined gods [7], with the one eternal invisible God; who is made notorious by his divine conspicuous works, whereas these idols, by how much they are more visible, so much more they are contemptible: because being fashioned with mouth, eyes, ears, nose, hands, feet, throat, and other members, they are altogether senseless, not able to speak with their mouth, and therein more base in nature than the men that made them; nor able to see, hear, smell, taste, feel, to walk, to move, nor to cry, all which beasts can do. And therefore those that make them, or have confidence in them (as the Prophet here signifieth that some have, v. 16.) are most absurd: becoming like to the same idols, in their understanding and internal cogitations, as these idols are void of external sense. [8] And all Idolaters are most wicked, giving divine honour to any creature, & are therein servants of devils: [9] Whether they immediately honour devils, as when sorcerers and witches, making pact with the devil, adore him, and he for the same doth something which they demand: or that they honour some other creature, wherein by the devil's false persuasion, they think there is divine power. Both which ways devils usurp God's honour: and therefore the same Prophet said in another Psalm: [10] All the gods of Gentiles are devils.

CHAPTER CXIV.

The prayer of a just man in tribulation, with confidence and gratitude towards God. [1]

[1] A prayer, with praise of God.
The 7. key.

Alleluia. I (a) have loved, because our Lord (b) will hear the voice of my prayer.

(a) I am induced to love God, (b) because he always heareth my prayers.

2 Because he hath inclined his ear to me: and (c) in my days I will invocate.

(c) So long as I shall live.

3 The sorrows (d) of death have compassed me: and (e) the perils of hell have found me. (f) I have found tribulation and sorrow:

(d) When I erred like a stray sheep from thee, the pains of death, (e) and the danger of hell-torments, both due for sin, environed me, and I was not ware thereof. (f) But by tribulation falling upon me, I came to know my dangerous estate:

4 and I (g) invocated the name of our Lord. O Lord deliver my soul:

(g) turned to thee, and prayed as followeth.

5 our Lord is merciful, and just, and our God doth mercy. 6 Our Lord keepeth little ones: (h) I was humbled, and he hath delivered me.

(h) Afflicted with tribulations.

7 Turn o my soul into thy rest: because our Lord hath done good to thee. 8 Because he hath delivered my soul from death: mine eyes from tears, my feet from sliding. 9 I (i) will please our Lord in the country of the living.

(i) I will endeavour to please God, in the congregation of those that live here in grace, and in heaven in glory.

CHAPTER CXV.

A just man acknowledging that spiritual life beginneth by faith, and by public profession thereof, 4. gratefully accepteth of Christ's Redemption, 5. dedicateth his life and all he hath to God's service. [1]

[1] Thanks-giving for our Redeemer.
The 5. key.

Alleluia. I (a) believed, (b) for which cause I spake: but I (c) was humbled exceedingly. [1]

(a) I believed that God would help me: (b) therefore I freely professed that I trusted in him. For then indeed faith is perfect, when we confess with mouth, that which we believe in heart. (c) I was vehemently afflicted in tribulations. [1] This in the Hebrew is joined to the next Psalm before.

2 I said (d) in mine excess: Every man is a liar.

(d) In the midst of my great affliction I professed, that all man's help is vain, false, deceitful, and defective, and therefore our trust must be in God only.

3 What (e) shall I render to our Lord, for all things that he (f) hath rendered to me?

(e f) Considering that God hath not only given, and bestowed many great benefits upon me, and all mankind, but also hath rendered good for evil, mercy for our sins, we have rendered evil for good: what now shall I render, saith a true penitent, for all that he hath thus rendered to me, deserving so evil? (f) ↑

4 I (g) will take the chalice of salvation: and (h) I will invocate the name of our Lord.

(g) Seeing I am not able to render any thing worthy of God's favour to me, yet I will do that I can: I will gratefully accept his great benefit, the cup of Christ's passion, which he drunk for mankind, (h) and will praise, and call upon his name.

5 I will (i) render my vows to our Lord (k) before all his people:

(i) I will pay voluntary vows, (k) for God's glory, and edification of others:

6 (l) precious in the sight of our Lord is the death of his Saints.

(l) yea I will offer my life, and suffer death, when God's glory shall require it, in whose sight the death of Saints is precious, and most highly esteemed.

7 O Lord because (m) I am thy servant: I am thy servant, and (n) the son of thy handmaid. Thou hast (o) broken my bonds:

(m) Always understood, that such as suffer persecution, be in good state of their souls, the true servants of God, (n) the children of the Church his handmaid. (o) Delivered me from captivity of sin.

8 I will sacrifice to thee the host of praise, and I will invocate the name of our Lord. 9 I will render my vows to our Lord in the sight of all his people: 10 in the courts of the house of our Lord, in the midst of (p) thee, o Jerusalem.

(p) In the Church of the faithful.

CHAPTER CXVI.

God's mercy is largely extended to all Gentiles by Christ, and his promise withal is performed to the Jews. [1]

[1] The Church of Christ in tentations.
The 6. key.

Alleluia. Praise our Lord (a) all ye Gentiles: praise him (b) all ye peoples. [1]

(a) Not only some, but all nations of the Gentiles: (b) and all Jews (Christ's Redemption being abundantly sufficient for all) are invited to praise God. [1] Rom. 15. v. 11.

2 Because (c) his mercy is confirmed, upon us: and his (d) truth remaineth for ever.

(c) Because he hath multiplied his mercy to us Gentiles, to whom he made no promise: (d) and most truly performed his promise made to the Jews.

CHAPTER CXVII.

Faithful people collected in the Church of Christ, exhort each other to render thanks to God, for their delivery from spiritual and temporal tribulations. 16. The Laity demand participation of Christ's Mysteries, promising to serve him duly: 25. Which the Pastors freely impart, and together with the people, solemnly celebrate God's praise. [1]

[1] Christ beneficial Mysteries are celebrated by his Church.
The 6. key.

Alleluia. Confess ye to our Lord because he is (a) good: because (b) his mercy is for ever. [1]

(a) Let us praise God, for his goodness, in making us of nothing, giving us many benefits, (b) and remitting our sins. [1] Psal. 105. 106. 135.

2 Let Israel (c) now say that he is good: that his mercy is for ever.

(c) Let the Church of the new testament especially confess his goodness, which hath received more mercy and grace.

3 Let the house of Aaron (d) now say: that his mercy is for ever.

(d) Let all the Clergy praise God now in the time of more grace, and of greater spiritual functions.

4 Let them now say (e) which fear our Lord: that his mercy is for ever.

(e) Yea let the whole body of the Church, all that fear and serve God, praise his mercy.

5 From (f) tribulation I invocated our Lord: and our Lord heard me in largeness.

(f) As well spiritual as temporal.

6 Our Lord is my helper: I will not fear what man can do to me. 7 Our Lord is my helper: and I will look over mine enemies. 8 It is good to hope in our Lord, rather than to hope in man. 9 It is good to hope in our Lord, rather than to hope in Princes. 10 (g) All nations have compassed me: and in the name of our Lord am I (h) revenged on them.

(g) Though innumerable oppose, and endeavour to hurt me (saith the Church, or any just person) (h) yet by God's power, not by mine own, I am defended, and they punished, and so the just hath the victory, and triumpheth.

11 Compassing they have compassed me: and in the name of our Lord I was revenged on them. 12 They compassed me as (i) bees, and were inflamed as (k) fire in thorns: and in the name of our Lord I was revenged on them.

(i) In great troops, and fury, (k) with sharp though short force, and with special noise, to terrify me, but in God I overcame all.

13 Being thrust^ (l) I was overturned to fall: and our Lord (m) received me.

(l) I was sometimes by vehemency of tentation declining to sin: (m) but God's grace assisted and strengthened me.

14 Our Lord is my strength, and my praise: and he is made my salvation. 15 The voice of exultation, and of salvation in the tabernacles of the just. 16 The right hand of our Lord hath wrought strength: the right hand of our Lord hath exalted me, (n) the right hand of our Lord hath wrought strength.

(n) The same word (right hand) thrice mentioned, signifieth the B. Trinity. Also (Our Lord) signifying Christ in his humanity, the chief instrument of God, is here often repeated, to signify the singular efficacy, thereof.

17 I shall not die, but shall live: and I will tell the works of our Lord. 18 Our Lord (o) chastising hath chastised me: and (p) to death he hath not delivered me.

(o) God chastiseth his children, (p) because he would not that they should die eternally. So he punisheth as a father, not as an enemy.

19 (q) Open ye the gates of justice to me, being entered into them I will confess to our Lord:

(q) The Prophet now speaketh in the person of just souls, requiring spiritual doctrine, and food,

20 (r) this is the gate of our Lord, the just shall enter into it.

(r) and promising to serve God.

21 I will confess to thee because thou hast heard me: and art become my salvation. 22 (s) The stone, which the builders rejected: the same is made into the head of the corner.

(s) An evident Prophecy of Christ uttered by the Royal Psalmist, and now confessed by every Christian, that our Saviour rejected by the Jews, is nevertheless the builder of his Church, by joining the two peoples of Jews and Gentiles, as two walls into one house.

23 This was done by our Lord: and it is marvelous in our eyes. 24 This (t) is the day, which our Lord made: let us rejoice, and be glad therein.

(t) God ordained this acceptable time of grace.

25 (v) O Lord save me, o Lord give good success: Blessed be he that cometh in the name of our Lord. [1]

(v) The song of the Hebrew children, when Christ entered Jerusalem with palms of triumph, and acclamations. [1] Matt. 21. Lu. 20. Act. 4. Rom. 9. 1. Pet. 2.

26 (w) We have blessed you of the house of our Lord:

(w) The voice of Christ, and his Apostles, and other Clergy blessing the people as they desire.

27 our Lord is God, and he hath given light to us. Appoint a solemn day with (x) thick boughs, even to (y) the horn of the altar.

(x) This was fulfilled when Christ was brought with bows of palm, and other signs of triumph, from Bethania, (y) through the whole city, even into the Temple and unto the Altar. Mat. 21.

28 Thou art my God, and I will confess to thee: thou art my God, and I will exalt thee. I will confess to thee because thou hast heard me: and art become my salvation. 29 (z) Confess ye to our Lord because he is good: because his mercy is for ever.

(z) Our first, chief, and final duty is to praise God. v. 1. & ult.

GENERAL ANNOTATIONS UPON THIS CXVIII. PSALM.

[1] The obscurity of this profound Psalm appeareth not to the vulgar reader.

As this Psalm is the longest in the whole Psalter, so it seemeth to the ancient Fathers most profound in sense.[1] And so much the harder to be understood, because also the very hardness thereof lieth hidden, which in diverse other Psalms and parts of holy Scripture, easily appeareth to the reader. But here the words being clear, and the sense also plain and easy in some points of doctrine, yet the more diligence is employed, the more difficulty is found in searching the whole sense and meaning of every word and sentence, with the manner observed in composing it, and the frequent repetition of the same or like words. All which maturely considered caused that great Clerk, and light of the Church Saint Augustin,[2] to omit this Psalm, when he explicated all the rest. And when at last he added also this, he wittingly omitted one special difficulty, which he doubted not to be contained in the manner of composing it, not only by order of the Hebrew Alphabet, as diverse more Psalms, and some other parts of holy Scripture, but more artificially than any other, the first eight verses all beginning with the first letter Aleph; the next eight, with the second letter Beth: and so to the last of the two and twenty letters. Of which omission he yieldeth this only reason, because he found nothing (as he humbly affirmeth) that might properly pertain thereunto. Confessing also expressly, that whensoever he applied his cogitations to expound the text it-self, it always exceeded his hability. But finally to satisfy the often and earnest request of his brethren and friends, trusting (as always) in God's special help, he largely expoundeth it, in thirty two distinct Sermons.[3]

[2] S. Augustin deferred the explication of this Psalm. Omitted to discuss one difficulty.

[3] At last made 32. sermons in explication thereof.

[1] S. Ambrose writ 22. sermons upon this Psalm.

S. Ambrose, also moved with like piety,[1] made two and twenty Sermons in exposition of this Psalm. Affirming in his Prologue, that amongst other Psalms, especially this sheweth how great a master King David was of moral good life. For all Moral doctrine, being of his own nature sweet, yet most delighteth the ears, and gently toucheth the mind, being uttered, as here it is, with pleasantness of verse, and sweetness of song. Again whereas this Royal Prophet in many places of this book poureth out sentences of moral Psalms or songs,[2] as bright stars, that shine and glister to all the world, here most excellently he produceth a more singular mirror, as the sun, of full light, burning with meridian heat. And for the profit of all,[3] the better to draw our attentions, to learn that we may, though we cannot attain to all that we would, he disposed this Psalm through all the Alphabet: that as children beginning with the first letters, make entrance to further knowledge; so by the same beginnings we should lay the first foundation, and thereupon proceed in our spiritual building, towards perfection in good life, the true service of God. Which is yet further insinuated (as the same Doctor teacheth) by the eight verses continually beginning with the same letter,[4] and so other eight in order through the whole Alphabet, to signify that after seven days travail in this temporal life, we may come to that unity, which we expected in the eighth day of resurrection, when we hope to rise revived in our Lord Jesus, in newness of eternal life.

[2] King David a great master of moral doctrine.

[3] Why this Psalm was composed in order of the Alphabet.

[4] Why eight verses are begun with every letter.

◦ Saint Basil's judgement that this Psalm containeth the argument of many Psalms.

Likewise Saint Basil in the Argument of this Psalm admonisheth,◦ that whereas holy David, according to diverse states, which he passed, writ diverse Psalms: as when he fled from his enemies, when he lamented his distresses, mourned in pensiveness, enjoyed peace and comfort, ran a right course of virtue, fell from God by sin, & again returning observed God's laws; in this one Psalm he comprehendeth all his prayers made to God at sundry times, & here proposeth the same, a certain profitable moral doctrine, to all sorts and states of men. Neither doth he pretermit doctrinal points of faith, but interposeth them also with moral documents, in such sort, that this one Psalm may suffice to teach the well disposed, how to attain to perfection in virtue, to stir up the slothful unto diligent care of their souls, to recreate the desolate with spiritual consolations, & briefly it administereth all kind of medicine to the diverse passions of mortal men.

For the like judgements of other Fathers we remit the learned reader,[1] to Saint Hilary, Theodoret, Prosper, Arnobius, Cassiodorus, Beda, Euthymius, and others, but cannot well omit a brief instruction of S. Jerom. Who in his Epistle to Paula Urbica: not only sheweth the interpretation of the two and twenty letters, but also explicateth their sense in this place, by connecting them into certain short sentences,[2] in this manner:

[1] Other expositors of this Psalm.

[2] S. Jerome's interpretation, and explication of the Hebrew Alphabet.

Aleph          Beth              Gimel          Daleth;
Doctrina       Domus             Plenitudo      Tabularum; Doctrine.      Of the house      Fullness       Of tables;
```

Which is the first connection, signifying that the doctrine of the house, that is the Church of God, is found in the fullness of divine books.

The second connection is:

```
He             Vau          Zain      Heth.
Ista           Et           Haec      Vita.
This thing     And          This      Life.

For what other life can there be without knowledge of Scriptures? Whereby also Christ is known, who is the life of them that believe in him.

The third connection is:◦

◦ idem prooem. lamen.

Teth       Iod
Bonum      Principium
Good       Beginning

Albeit we now could know all things which are written, yet we know but in part, and in part we prophesy: [1]for we see now by a glass, in a dark sort, but when we shall be worthy to be with Christ, and shall be like to Angels, then doctrine of books shall cease, & then we shall see face to face the [2]Good Beginning, even as he is.

[1] 1. Cor. 13.

[2] God in himself.

The fourth connection is:◦

◦ Most of these letters have also other significations.

And are diversely explicated by S. Ambrose, S. Beda, and others.

Whereby we may learn (though we understand no more) that holy Scriptures are full of mysteries (as S. Jerom calleth this) & hard to be understood.

Caph          Lamed
Manus         Disciplinae, sive cordis
The hand      Of discipline, or of heart

The hands are understood in work, heart and discipline are understood in sense or meaning, because we cannot rightly do any thing, unless we first know what things are to be done.

The fifth connection is:

Mem            Nun                  Samech
Ex ipsis,      Sempiternum          Adiutorium
Of them        Everlasting          Help

This needeth not explication, for it is manifest as the light, that from Scriptures are eternal helps.

The sixth connection is:

Ain,                      Phe
Fons, sive Oculus,        Oris
Fountain, or Eye          Of the mouth

According to that which we have expounded in the fourth connection: that deeds & intention must concur.

The seventh connection which is last, in which number of seven is also mystical understanding:

Coph	Res	Shin,	Thau
Vocatio,	Capitis,	Dentium	Signa
Vocation	Of the head.	Of teeth	Signs

Distinct voice is produced by the teeth, & in these signs we come to the Head of all which is Christ, by whom we have access to the everlasting Kingdom.

Or thus (not transposing the words) By vocation of Christ the Head, through distinct voice of signs (for words are signs shewing the mind) we are conducted to the eternal Kingdom, the happiness which all men desire.

What I pray thee (saith this holy Doctor) is more sacred than this mystery, what more pleasant than this delight? What meat, & what honey are sweeter, than to know God's wisdom; to enter into his secret closet; to behold the sense of our Creator; and to teach the words of thy Lord God, full of spiritual wisdom, which are derided by the wise of this world.

[1] God's law escpecially commended in this Psalm.

We must also advertise the reader of the like discourses of ancient Fathers (over long to be here recited) concerning the manifold high praises of God's Law,[1] contained in this Psalm, with frequent repetition of certain Synonyma words signifying the same thing, in all fourteen, to wit:[2] The Law of God, his Ways, Testimonies, Commandments, Precepts, Statutes, Justifications, Judgements, Justice, Equity, Verity, Words, Speeches, & Sermons: of which there is commonly one, in every verse, & sometimes two or three in the same verse. But our English tongue hardly sufficing rightly, to distinguish the three last, which in Latin are Verba, Eloquia, Sermones, we translate WORDS only, adding in the margin, Eloquia, and Sermones, when they occur.

[2] 14. Synonyma signifying the law of God.

[1] God's grace necessary in every good work.

[2] It enableth freewill to merit.

Leaving therefore larger commentaries to others; we shall prosecute our wonted manner of brief glosses. Only here premonishing the diligent readers, especially Clergyman (ourselves and our brethren) who every day sing or read this whole Psalm in the Canonical hours, to observe two particular points of Christian doctrine, evidently proved by many places of this Psalm. The one against the Pelagians' heresy, denying the necessity of God's special grace in meritorious works.[1] For the Psalmist often here inculcateth man's insufficiency, that of himself, and by natural forces, he cannot keep the commandments of God, but needeth always the particular grace of God, as well to believe in him, to repent for sins, and to begin good works; as to proceed, and persevere in good state to the end. The other against the heresy of our time, denying merit by grace & freewill. For here it is also manifest, that God's grace maketh man able,[2] to keep his commandments, and by keeping them to become just in this life, and so to merit eternal glory. Sundry other principal Articles of Christian Catholic Religion are likewise comprised in this one Psalm: but especially Moral doctrine.

CHAPTER CXVIII.

A perpetual recommendation of the singular excellency, absolute necessity, and eternal heavenly profit of God's law: with frequent aspirations to perfection, hatred of sin, love of virtue, and fervent desire to rest in God.[1]

[1] Perfect justice is in keeping God's law.

The 7. key.

Alleluia.[1] Aleph. Doctrine. Blessed (a) are (b) the immaculate in the way: which (c) walk in the law of our Lord.

[1] This title was added by the Septuagint, to admonish us that this Psalm containeth that singular manner of praising God, signified by the two Hebrew words Alleluia, as before Psal. 104. (a) Whereas all without exception, desire to be happy and blessed: (b) they are indeed happy (according to the perfectest happiness of this life) that are immaculate:

(c) and they are immaculate, that walk in the law of God. Where the holy Psalmist presupposeth, that some can and do keep the law of God, and so are immaculate, and blessed in the way of this life.

2 Blessed are they (d) that search his testimonies: that (e) seek after him with all their heart.

(d) Those that are immaculate, are again blessed, by searching God's testimonies, that is, his law, testifying that the good shall be rewarded, and the wicked punished: but searching these testimonies, whilst one is contaminate with sins against God's law, maketh not blessed: (e) neither doth every superficial careless search bring this blessing, but searching with true affection of the heart.

3 For (f) they that work iniquity, have not walked in his (g) ways.

(f) contrarywise they that work iniquity are not blessed; (g) because they have not walked in the ways of God, to wit, not kept his commandments and law, which are the way to happiness.

4 Thou hast (h) very much commanded thy commandments to be kept.

(h) For man's own good, that he may come to true happiness, God hath most seriously commanded us to keep his commandments, that is, to observe his Law commanded by most sovereign divine authority.

5 Would God my ways (i) might be directed, to keep thy (k) justifications.

(i) Therefore the faithful servant of God, knowing his own insufficiency, desireth that God by his grace will direct and strengthen him, (k) to keep his law, called Justifications, because thereby man is made just.

6 Then shall I (l) not be confounded, when I shall look throughly in all thy commandments.

(l) They shall be safe from eternal confusion, when they shall keep not only part, but all thy commandments: because breach of any bringeth confusion.

7 (m) I will confess to thee (n) in direction of heart: in that I have learned the (o) judgments of thy justice.

(m) So shall I praise thee, and render thanks, (n) with sincere not feigned affection, (o) for this great benefit, that I have learned, that thy law is according to most just judgement.

8 (p) I will keep thy justifications: (q) forsake me not wholly.

(p) I have therefore a firm purpose, & do faithfully promise to keep thy law, which maketh the keeper thereof just. (q) Albeit thou suffer me sometimes to be in tribulation, or in tentation, yet forsake me not wholly. The Psalmist knew well (saith S. Gregory) that he might be profitably left a while, who prayed, that he should not be wholly forsaken. [1]

[1] li. 20. c. 21. Mor.

9 Beth. House. Wherein (a) doth a young man correct his way? (b) In keeping thy [1] words.

(a) In this second octonary, as also in all the rest, the Holy Ghost by the Prophet's pen teacheth the means how to come to perfection & happiness. Here by way of interrogation, as it were demanding how a young man, that is every man prone to worldly pleasure, & slow in God's service, shall begin to correct his course? (b) Whereto the same Holy Ghost answereth, that he must keep God's law, called here his words. For all the words which God uttereth, are laws to his servants. [1] * sermones.

10 (c) With my whole heart I have sought after thee: (d) repel me not from thy commandments.

(c) The Psalmist now speaketh in the person of perfect just men, or of the whole Church in general. Whose common spirit seeketh God entirely. (d) And considering that this perfect good will is the gift of God, prayeth that he will conserve the same, and not suffer it to be altered, or to err from his commandments.

11 (e) In my heart I have hid thy [1] words: that I may not sin to thee.

(e) Another, sincere profession of a resolute good purpose not to sin. [1] * eloquia.

12 (f) Blessed art thou, o Lord: (g) teach me thy justifications.

(f) A grateful aspiration praising God. (g) Again the just prayeth to be more and more instructed in justifications: that which S. John exhorteth unto: He that is just, let him yet be justified. Apoc. 22.

13 In my lips I have pronounced all the (h) judgments of thy mouth.

(h) God's law is also called his judgements, because sitting in judgement he giveth sentence according to his Law.

14 I am (i) delighted in the way of thy testimonies, as in all riches.

(i) As the just professeth by mouth, so he delighteth in heart.

15 I (k) will be exercised in thy commandments: and I will consider thy ways.

(k) Practiseth in work.

16 I (l) will meditate in thy justifications: I will not forget thy [1] words.

(l) And diligently meditateth God's law. [1] * sermones.

17 Gimel. Fullness. Render (a) to thy servant, (b) quicken me: (c) and I shall keep thy [1] words.

(a) O Lord liberally give me that which I here crave, (b) quicken me with spiritual life, thy grace. (c) so I shall keep thy law, which otherwise I cannot. [1] * sermones.

18 (d) Reveal mine eyes: (e) and I shall consider the marvelous things of thy law.

(d) Illuminate mine understanding by thy grace, (e) that I may be able to see the marvelous great and just reasons of thy law, instructing all, threatening the perverse, encouraging the well disposed, punishing the wicked, rewarding the good, doing right to all.

19 (f) I am a sojourner in the land, (g) hide not thy commandments from me.

(f) I that have but a small time in this world, (g) desire to be instructed in thy law, what is therein commanded.

20 My soul hath coveted to desire thy justifications, at all time. 21 Thou hast (h) rebuked the proud: (i) cursed are they that decline from thy commandments.

(h) I consider that thou, o God, dost sharply reprove the proud contemners of thy commandments: (i) laying curses upon them for declining from thine obedience.

22 Take from me reproach, and contempt: because I have sought after thy testimonies. 23 For (k) Princes sat, and they spake against me: but (l) thy servant was exercised in thy justifications.

(k) Though persecutors were very potent, (l) yet the faithful servant of God persevered in his service.

24 For both (m) thy testimonies are my meditation: and (n) thy justifications my counsel.

(m) In time of persecution and tentation we must think and meditate, that God's law testifieth eternal reward, or punishment, (n) and in our deliberation or consultation, we must consider that keeping God's law maketh just: & consequently meriteth reward.

25 Daleth. Of Tables. My soul (a) hath cleaved to the pavement: (b) quicken me according to thy word.

(a) This also is uttered in the person of the just, who is often brought to great distress: as it were, even near to death, (b) in which case he confidently prayeth to be relieved, according to God's word, law, and promise.

26 I have uttered my ways, and thou hast heard me: teach me thy justifications. 27 Instruct me the way of thy justifications: and I shall be exercised in thy marvelous works. 28 My soul (c) hath slumbered for tediousness: (d) confirm me in thy words.

(c) Being in so great anxiety that my mind is almost distracted or overcome. (d) I call to thee God, that thou wilt conserve me, that I still keep thy law, uttered by thy words.

29 (e) Remove from me the way of iniquity: and according to thy law, (f) have mercy on me.

(e) Protect me that I fall not to iniquity. (f) And of thy mercy conserve me in state of grace.

30 I have chosen the way of truth: I have not forgotten thy judgments. 31 I have cleaved to thy testimonies, o Lord: (g) do not confound me.

(g) Suffer me not to be confounded.

32 (h) I ran the way of thy commandments: (i) when thou didst dilate my heart.

(h) Man is able, and doth run in the right way of God's commandments, (i) yet not of himself, but when God replenisheth his heart with grace.

33 He. This thing. (a) Set me a law, o Lord, the way of thy justifications: (b) and I will seek after it always.

(a) Impress, o God, thy law in mine affection, make me to love it, and to desire to be justified, (b) so shall I heartily and always seek it.

34 (c) Give me understanding, (d) and I will search thy law: and I will keep it with my whole heart.

(c) After thou hast given me a desire to keep thy law, give me also understanding, (d) then shall I fruitfully search it. For this is the right order (as before in the first, and second verses) first to love God's law, to be justified, and to become immaculate, and then to search to know the law, and so it is more easily learned.

35 (e) Conduct me into the path of thy commandments: (f) because I would it.

(e) God's grace first draweth and leadeth, (f) then freewill inflamed with desire effectually concurreth.

36 (g) Incline my heart into thy testimonies: and (h) not into avarice.

(g) Still the Prophet inculcateth the necessity of God's grace, as well to make us desire that is good; (h) as to fly from evil.

37 (i) Turn away mine eyes that they see not vanity: (k) in thy way quicken me.

(i) It is necessary also to pray that God will take away occasions, which might move to sin: (k) and still to grant his helping grace in progress of virtue.

38 (l) Establish thy [1] word to thy servant, in thy fear.

(l) Again the just prayeth for confirmation in grace, to be established in the fear of God. [1] * eloquium.

39 (m) Take away my reproach, which I have feared: (n) because thy judgments are pleasant.

(m) To be delivered also from all the effects of former sins, (n) for sin is therefore reproachful and odious, because it is contrary to God's law, & true judgements, which are most pleasant.

40 Behold I have coveted thy commandments: in thine equity (o) quicken me.

(o) Being thus affected with desire to keep the commandments, the soul prayeth to be still quickened, more and more with good spirit, and so to persevere to the end.

41 Vau. And. And (a) let thy mercy come upon me, o Lord: (b) thy salvation according to thy [1] word.

(a) Again considering that without God's grace preventing, man cannot do any good thing, the Prophet reneweth his prayer, requesting God's mercy, (b) and his help freely promised to all that ask it. [1] * eloquium.

42 And (c) I shall answer a word to them that upbraid me: (d) because I have hoped in thy [1] words.

(c) Wherewith being assisted and strengthened, he that before was weak will boldly answer all calumniators, that reproachfully say: God will not help him: (d) that indeed he hath not in vain trusted in God's promised help. [1] * sermonibus.

43 And (e) take not away out of my mouth the word of truth utterly: (f) because I have much hoped in thy judgments.

(e) He also prayeth, though he be sometimes fearful, that God will not suffer him wholly to omit manifest profession of faith and true religion, (f) seeing by thy former grace I have already reposed my trust in thy promises, made to them that are resolved to keep thy law.

44 And (g) I will keep thy law always: for ever, and for ever and ever.

(g) For I do firmly purpose ever and always to keep thy law.

45 And (h) I walked in largeness: (i) because I have sought after thy commandments.

(h) In this I have had great joy and comfort of mind: (i) because I did indeed seek after thy commandments, which is specially uttered (as also the three next verses) in the person of those, that are in trial of persecution for their faith:

46 And (k) I spake of thy testimonies in the sight of kings: and was not confounded.

(k) Who boldly in time of persecution, even before persecuting Kings and Emperors, profess Christ's true Religion. Verified in innumerable glorious Martyrs, yea also of the frail sex, in S. Catharine, S. Cecily, S. Lucy, S. Margaret, S. Wenefride, S. Ursula, and her fellows, and many more, most constantly answering all words of reproach objected, as if it were a base or contemptible thing to be Christians, to be Catholics, to be Papists. No, all these & the like, are honourable & glorious titles; importing the true service of Christ, in unity of the Catholic Church: and spiritual participation with the visible head thereof, Christ's Vicar in earth.

47 And (l) I meditated in thy commandments, which I loved.

(l) Such confessors as yet mortal, rejoice in that they have meditated in God's commandments, which they have fervently loved.

48 And (m) I have lifted up my hands to thy commandments, which I loved: and (n) I was exercised in thy justifications.

(m) Also shewed the same in external work, not dissembling by silence, by word, nor fact. (n) every way exercising God's law, which maketh the observers just.

49 Zain. This. Be (a) mindful of thy word to thy servant, wherein thou hast given me hope.

(a) That which God hath decreed and promised, being in it-self most certain and assured, yet includeth the means, whereby it shall be put in execution: and therefore the just, his elect, do pray for the performance of his will.

50 This hath comforted me in my humiliation: because (b) thy [1] word hath quickened me.

(b) Expectation of thy promise hath given me courage. [1] eloquium.

51 The (c) proud did unjustly exceedingly: (d) but I declined not from thy law.

(c) Proud contemners of God's law, have every way molested me, by detracting, deriding, calumniating, and violently persecuting me. (d) All which I have borne patiently, and not declined from thy law.

52 I (e) have been mindful of thy judgments from (f) everlasting, o Lord: (g) and was comforted.

(e) I remembered and considered thy just punishments inflicted upon the impious, (f) even from the beginning of the world (both upon the devils and wicked men) and that thou wilt exercise the like hereafter, (g) which consideration of thy justice comforted me.

53 (h) Fainting possessed me, because of sinners forsaking thy Law.

(h) Otherwise if I had not seen thy justice, my zeal against contemners of thy law would have killed me.

54 (i) Thy justifications were song by me, in the place of my peregrination.

(i) In this place of my peregrination from heaven, I am comforted by remembering, celebrating, and singing thy just commandments and laws, which make thy servants just.

55 I have been mindful in (k) the night of thy name, o Lord: and have kept thy law.

(k) In persecution, and in all tribulation, I kept thy law, because I would not dishonour thy name:

56 This was done to me: (l) because I sought after thy justifications.

(l) And my tribulation especially fell upon me, because I sought to be justified by keeping thy law.

57 Heth. Life. My (a) portion, o Lord, I said to keep thy law.

(a) The Prophet proceedeth speaking in the person of the just tending to perfection, and saying: This is my happy choice, that I desire no other inheritance, nor possession, but to keep God's Law.

58 (b) I besought thy face, with all my heart: have mercy on me according to thy [1] word.

(b) And seeing this exceedeth my proper strength, I prayed God of his mercy to make able to keep it. [1] eloquium.

59 I (c) thought upon my ways: and converted my feet unto thy testimonies.

(c) Pondering my former actions, I turned my paths to observe more perfectly the Law, which God hath testified to be the right way.

60 I (d) am prepared, and am not troubled: to keep thy commandments.

(d) With promptness of mind, and without hesitation I resolved to keep the commandments.

61 The (e) cords of sinners have wrapped me round about: and (f) I have not forgotten thy law.

(e) The wicked laid cords, nets, or snares, to entrap and hinder me, (f) but I kept thy law fresh in memory.

62 At (g) mid-night I rose to confess to thee, for the judgments of thy justification.

(g) That this is not understood only mystically in time of affliction, but also literally and prophetically, that some special servants of God should observe a godly profession of praying at mid-night, the word (I rose) maketh it probable. Saint Paul & Silas, [1] either of a holy custom, or at least upon special occasion (and such occasions were to them, and others frequent) prayed, and praised God at mid-night. And now in the Church of Christ some religious men pray, and praise God continually at mid-night; besides other hours, mentioned more distinctly v. 164.
[1] Act. 16.

63 (h) I am partaker of all that fear thee: and that keep thy commandments.

(h) A great benefit, and a singular consolation, that all true living members of Christ, are partakers of all the prayers, good works, and merits, of the whole Church militant and triumphant. Which in our Creed is called, The Communion of Saints.

64 The (i) earth, o Lord, is full of thy mercy: (k) teach me thy justifications.

(i) so great is the mercy of God, extended, communicated, and multiplied in the whole earth. (k) Instruct me, and direct me therefore, o God, that I may learn and observe thy law, and so be justified, and made participant of so great mercy.

65 Teth. Good. Thou hast (a) done bounty with thy servant, o Lord: (b) according to thy word.

(a) Dealt very bountifully (b) as thou didst promise.

66 (c) Teach me goodness, (d) and discipline, and (e) knowledge: (f) because I have believed thy commandments.

(c) He that hath bountifully received grace at God's hand, prayeth for more grace, that he may be beneficial to others in relieving the needy, (d) in instructing the ignorant, (e) in persuading to keep the law of God: (f) because he hath learned and believeth the commandments, by which he is bound to love, and have care of his neighbour.

67 Before I (g) was humbled I offended: (h) therefore have I kept thy [1] word.

(g) Before I was afflicted, I often fell into sin: (h) but vexation gave me understanding, therefore now I keep thy law. [1] eloquium.

68 Thou art good: and in thy goodness teach me thy justifications. 69 The iniquity of (i) the proud is multiplied upon me: (k) but I in all my heart will search thy commandments.

(i) Contemners of thy law have endeavoured to entangle me, (k) but I persist in keeping thy commandments. As before v. 51. 61.

70 Their heart is (l) curded together as milk: (m) but I have meditated thy law.

(l) Though the wicked combine themselves together against me, (m) yet I consider, that it is necessary to persevere in thy law.

71 It is good for me that thou hast humbled me: that I may learn thy justifications. 72 The law of thy mouth is (n) good unto me, above thousands of gold and silver.

(n) A clear comparison, that it is better to keep God's law, which bringeth life everlasting, than to have all the riches & Kingdoms of this world.

73 Iod. Beginning. Thy hands have made me, and formed me: (a) give me understanding, and I will learn thy commandments.

(a) God being our Creator, we may with confidence pray him to illuminate our minds, that we may learn what is his pleasure, and so endeavour to fulfill it.

74 They that fear thee (b) shall see me, & shall rejoice: because I have much hoped in thy words.

(b) Others that love God will be glad to see me also serve him.

75 (c) I know, o Lord, that thy judgments are equity: and in thy truth thou hast humbled me. (d)

(c) The just being afflicted, and not seeing the particular cause thereof, yet knoweth and confesseth, that God doth it for most just cause. (d) And therefore with patience prayeth for comfort, as followeth:

76 Let thy mercy be done to comfort me, according to thy [1] word unto thy servant.

[1] * eloquium.

77 Let thy commiserations come to me, and I (e) shall live: because thy law is my meditation.

(e) Who am almost dead in tribulation.

78 Let the proud (f) be confounded, because they have done unjustly toward me: but I will be exercised in thy commandments.

(f) The just also prayeth that the wicked may be ashamed, and converted, for so the Hebrew word here signifieth, though it is also lawful to desire the just punishment of obstinate sinners.

79 Let them (g) be converted to me that fear thee: and that know thy testimonies.

(g) He prayeth again for conversion of the wicked, and to have peace with them.

80 Let my heart be made immaculate in thy justifications, that I be not confounded. 81 Caph. Hand, or Palm of the hand. My soul hath fainted for (a) thy salvation: and I have much hoped in thy word.

(a) Many just of the old testament most fervently desired the coming of Christ our Saviour, as our Lord himself testifieth, Mat. 13. v. 17. And now the just desire his coming in glory. 2. Tim. 4. v. 8.

82 Mine eyes have failed for thy [1] word, saying: (b) When wilt thou comfort me?

[1] * eloquium. (b) Delayed hope afflicteth.

83 Because I am made (c) as a bottle in the hoar frost: I have not forgotten thy justifications.

(c) As a leather bottle made of a beast's skin, congealed with the frost, and after parched in smoke, so is the body of the just mortified by diverse sorts of afflictions, made a new bottle fit to receive new wine, that is perfect doctrine of Christian life, as of fasting, and other austerity, whereof our Saviour speaketh. Mat. 9. v. 17.

84 How many are (d) the days of thy servant: when wilt thou do judgment on them that persecute me?

(d) Such is man's infirmity, yea of the just, that he apprehendeth tribulations to be very long, and therefore desireth consummation; and that without sin, so he still submit his will to God's will.

85 The unjust have told me (e) fables: but not as thy law.

(e) Frivolous idle tails, which are not according to God's law.

86 All thy commandments are truth: they have unjustly persecuted me, help me. 87 They have well near (f) made end of me in the earth: but I have not forsaken thy commandments.

(f) I was in great danger; but am not overthrown.

88 According to (g) thy mercy quicken me: and I shall keep the testimonies of thy mouth.

(g) And by thy merciful grace shall persist.

89 Lamed. Discipline. For ever Lord (a) thy word is permanent in heaven.

(a) The praise of God's works, which are firm and permanent in the order, wherein he set them.

90 Thy truth in generation and generation: thou hast founded the earth, and it is permanent. 91 By thy ordinance the day continueth: because (b) all things serve thee.

(b) All things of this world, man excepted, do God's will.

92 (c) But that thy law is my meditation: I had then (d) perhaps perished in my humiliation.

(c) Man, except he meditate God's law, and thereby be holden up, is in danger, (d) perhaps in every tentation to perish eternally. For he can never rise out of mortal sin, by his own power, and all should perish if God's mercy did not spare some, and give them new effectual grace to repent.

93 I will not forget thy justifications for ever: because in them thou hast quickened me. 94 I am thine, save me: because (e) I have sought out thy justifications.

(e) Always understood, that God's grace prevented, else no man can seek to observe the commandments.

95 Sinners have expected me to destroy me: I understood thy testimonies. 96 (f) Of all consummation I have seen the end: (g) thy commandment is exceeding large.

(f) All worldly things have their consummation and end: (g) God's commandment continueth ever. For we are perpetually bound to love and serve God: to love our neighbours, yea and enemies. The reward also for keeping God's commandments, & punishment for breaking them, are eternal without end.

97 Mem. Of them. (a) How have I loved thy law, o Lord! All the day it is my meditation.

(a) It is marvel to a perfect just man, that he hath so much loved and observed God's law. By acknowledging whereof, he yieldeth praise and thanks to God, whose gift it is.

98 (b) Above mine enemies thou hast made me wise by thy commandment: because it is to me for ever.

(b) The fruits of observing God's law are many and great. Amongst others, it maketh the observer, wiser than his enemies.

99 Above (c) all that taught me have I understood: because thy testimonies are my meditation.

(c) It maketh the observer wiser than his temporal masters, that taught him, to wit, than those that teach well, and do not perform the same.

100 Above (d) ancients have I understood: because I have sought thy commandments.

(d) Younger in years that keep God's commandments, are wiser than the more ancient that keep them not.

101 I have stayed my feet from all evil way: that I may keep thy words. 102 I have not declined from thy judgments: because thou hast set me a law.

103 (e) How sweet are thy [1] words to my jaws. More than honey to my mouth!

(e) Another fruit is the sweetness, which the just feeleth in his own soul. [1] eloquia.

104 By thy commandments I have understood: therefore have I (f) hated all the way of iniquity.

(f) It brideth also just hatred to sin.

105 Nun. Everlasting. (a) Thy word is a lamp to my feet, and a light to my paths.

(a) The word or law of god declared by Prophets, Pastors, or other Preachers, is the ordinary means for others to learn, how to direct their ways and actions.

106 I (b) sware, and have determined to keep the judgments of thy justice.

(b) Such profession God's people made in the old law, in Circumcision, or at other times: Christians make it in Baptism.

107 I am (c) humbled exceedingly, o Lord: quicken me according to thy word.

(c) All that will live godly in Christ Jesus, shall suffer persecution. 2. Tim. 3. v. 12.

108 The (d) voluntaries of my mouth make acceptable, o Lord: and teach me thy judgments.

(d) Besides the commandments, the just also offer voluntary works of supererogation, acceptable to God.

109 My (e) soul is in my hands always: and I have not forgotten thy law.

(e) By this Hebrew proverb is signified, that a just man's temporal life is in continual danger, as the thing that is in one's hand, is ready to be laid by, put out of his hand, or to be by and by disposed of, or may forthwith fall from his hand.

110 Sinners laid a snare for me: and I have not erred from thy commandments. 111 For inheritance I have purchased thy testimonies for ever: because they are the joy of my heart. 112 I have inclined my heart to do thy justifications for ever, (f) for reward.

(f) A most evident place, that the keeping of God's commandments merit reward, and are rightly observed in respect of reward.

113 Samech. Help. I have (a) hated the unjust: and I have (b) loved thy law.

(a) Not any mortal man is to be hated, in his person, but his iniquity, by which he is an enemy to God's law, (b) which every just man loveth.

114 Thou art my helper, and protector: and upon thy word I have much hoped. 115 (c) Depart from me ye malignant: and I will search the commandments of my God.

(c) Whosoever will seriously and securely search the law of God, must avoid the conversation of evil men.

116 (d) Receive me according to thy [1] word, (e) and I shall live: and (f) confound me not of mine expectation.

(d) A general and very fit prayer, when we addict ourselves by a firm resolution to serve God, beseeching him to receive us into his protection: [1] eloquium. (e) whereby spiritual life is conserved: (f) which we pray with great confidence, because he hath promised to hear those that seek, ask, and knock at the door of his grace.

117 (g) Help me, and I shall be saved: and I will meditate in thy justifications always.

(g) We must pray also that he suffer us not to be confounded, or made frustrate of the reward which we expect; for hope confoundeth not, if charity be poured in our hearts, by the Holy Ghost which is given us. Rom. 5. v. 5.

118 Thou hast (h) despised all that revolt from thy judgments: (i) because their cogitation is unjust.

(h) God rejecteth sinners: (i) so long as they think perversely: that is, until by his grace, some return to a better mind, which of themselves they can never do.

119 All the sinners of the earth I have (k) reputed prevaricators: therefore have I loved thy testimonies.

(k) as God accounteth of sinners, so the just also esteemeth them, conforming his judgement to God's.

120 (l) Pierce my flesh with thy fear: for I am afraid of thy judgments.

(l) Servile fear is profitable as this place maketh evident: though perfect charity afterwards succeeding, expelleth that fear, and moveth to do well for the love of God, not for fear of punishment. 1. Ioan. 4.

121 Ain. A fountain, or an eye. I (a) have done judgment and justice: (b) deliver me not to them that calumniate me.

(a) The just again in fervent zeal, not arrogantly, but confidently professing his innocency, (b) prayeth to be defended from calumniators.

122 Receive thy servant (c) unto good: let not the proud calumniate me.

(c) Grant therefore, o God, the good and lawful request which I demand.

123 Mine eyes have failed (d) after thy salvation: and for the [1] word of thy justice.

(d) By long expecting to be delivered and saved from tribulation. [1] eloquium.

124 Do with thy servant according to thy mercy: and teach me thy justifications. 125 I am thy servant: give me understanding, that I may know thy testimonies. 126 (e) It is time to do, o Lord: (f) they have dissipated thy law.

(e) It is time, and high time, saith fervent zeal of the just man, that God deliver the innocent: (f) when the wicked have not only persecuted the good, but have also contemptuously made havoc of God's law and true religion.

127 (g) Therefore have I loved thy commandments, above gold and topazius.

(g) For this zeal of God's law so despised and dissipated, the just more and more loveth, that which the wicked so deadly hate.

128 (h) Therefore was I directed to all thy commandments: (i) all wicked way I have hated.

(h) Even by the mortal hate of the wicked I saw that God's law is most excellent, and therefore addicted myself so much the more to love it, (i) and to hate all wicked ways.

129 Phe. Mouth. Thy (a) testimonies are marvelous: (b) therefore hath my soul searched them.

(a) God's marvelous power and wisdom, testified by his works and commandments, (b) worthily invite just souls to meditate and contemplate the same.

130 The (c) declaration of thy [1] words doth illuminate: and giveth understanding to little ones.

(c) First entrance into knowledge of holy Scripture, illuminateth the understanding of the humble, whereby they proceed to know more. [1] Sermonum.

131 I (d) opened my mouth, and drew breath: because I desired thy commandments.

(d) By this Metaphor, of gaping or wide opening the mouth, and drawing breath, the Prophet describeth the great desire of the just, to know and keep God's commandments.

132 Look upon me, and have mercy on me, according to (e) the judgment of them that love thy name.

(e) According to thy accustomed equity, in shewing mercy to them that love thy name.

133 Direct my steps according to thy [1] word: and let not any injustice have domination over me.

[1] eloquium.

134 Redeem me from the calumnies of men: that I may keep thy commandments. 135 Illuminate (f) thy face upon thy servant: and teach me thy justifications.

(f) Let thy divine Majesty look upon me with favourable countenance.

136 (g) Mine eyes have gushed forth issues of waters: because they have not kept thy law.

(g) True repentance consisteth not only in purpose to avoid sin hereafter, which indeed is first required, but also in sorrow and lamentation for sins past.

137 Sade. Justice. Thou art just, o Lord: and (a) thy judgment is right.

(a) God being essentially just of himself, maketh men just according to right judgement, by giving them grace of mercy, wherewith they cooperating are just by justice indeed inherent in their souls, not by imputation only: for it were not right judgement to impute, or account man just, who is not so indeed.

138 Thou hast commanded (b) justice thy testimonies: and thy verity exceedingly.

(b) The same is more confirmed by these three synonyma, Justice, Testimonies, Verity, signifying the law of God, most earnestly commanded.

139 My zeal hath made me to pine away: because mine enemies have forgotten thy words. 140 Thy [1] word is (c) fired exceedingly: and thy servant hath loved it.

[1] * eloquia. (c) God's law is as pure as any thing purged by fire.

141 I am (d) a youngman, and contemned: I (e) have not forgotten thy justifications.

(d) A just man is often judged ignorant, immature, unexperienced, by the worldly wise; (e) but indeed is wise, in that he forgetteth not to keep the law, which maketh him just.

142 Thy justice is justice for ever: and thy law is verity. 143 Tribulation and distress have found me: thy commandments are my meditation. 144 Thy testimonies are equity for ever^ (f) give me understanding, and I shall live.

(f) Having professed the necessity of perfect justice, he concludeth this Octonary, praying to be illuminated in his understanding, that so he may attain justice and live thereby.

145 Coph. Vocation. I (a) have cried in my whole heart, hear me, o Lord: I will seek after thy justifications.

(a) Most serious and fervent invocation of God for his grace is necessary to the fulfilling of his law.

146 I have cried to thee, save me: that I may keep thy commandments. 147 I have prevented in (b) maturity, and (c) have cried: because I hoped much in thy words.

(b) I have prevented the nature and ordinary time of the night, and have prayed (c) very attentively.

148 Mine eyes (d) have prevented early unto thee: that I might meditate thy [1] words.

(d) Again in the morning I have prevented the accustomed time of prayer. [1] eloquia.

149 Hear my voice according to thy mercy, o Lord: and according to (e) thy judgment quicken me.

(e) According to thy accustomed manner of shewing mercy, shew it me, that thereby I may live.

150 They that persecute me have approached to iniquity: but from thy law they are made far off.

151 Thou art (f) nigh, o Lord: and all thy ways are truth.

(f) God is always ready to hear all that sincerely invocate him.

152 (g) From the beginning I knew of thy testimonies: that thou hast founded them for ever.

(g) God's law is the same in substance from the beginning of the world, and will be for ever.

153 Res. Head. See (a) my humiliation, and deliver me: because I have not forgotten thy law.

(a) Another prayer of the just in affliction.

154 Judge my judgment, & redeem me: for thy [1] word (b) quicken thou me.

[1] eloquium. (b) Conserve me in thy grace.

155 Salvation is far from sinners: because they have not sought after thy justifications. 156 Thy mercies are many, o Lord: (c) according to thy judgment quicken me.

(c) As before v. 149.

157 There are many that persecute me, and afflict me: I have not declined from thy testimonies. 158 I saw the prevaricators, and I pined away: because they kept not thy [1] words.

[1] eloquia.

159 (d) See that I have loved thy commandments, o Lord: in thy mercy quicken me.

(d) Sincere profession of innocency is no arrogancy.

160 The (e) beginning of thy words is truth: (f) all the judgments of thy justice are for ever.

(e) God's essential verity is the beginning from whence, as from the fountain, all other truths are derived: (f) And all commandments proceeding from this first truth, are for ever immutable.

161 Sin. Tooth. Princes have persecuted me (a) without cause: and my (b) heart hath been afraid of thy words.

(a) Potent wicked men persecute the godly without cause, that is, without any just reason moving them; & without the effect intended by them which is to draw God's servants from truth and equity; (b) whose heart being possessed with the true fear of God, they persist in keeping God's commandments.

162 I (c) will rejoice at thy [1] words: as he that findeth many spoils.

(c) Yea they also rejoice in keeping the commandments, with such difficulty, as those do, that gaining the victory over their enemies, carry away great and rich spoils. [1] eloquia.

163 I have heard iniquity, and abhorred it: but thy law I have loved. 164 (d) Seven times in the day I have said praise to thee, for the judgments of thy justice.

(d) Every day the just praise God often, signified by the number of seven.
From hence also the Church of Christ took example to institute the seven Canonical Hours, [1] which is the ordinary Ecclesiastical Office; consisting, as S. Isidorus, and many other Fathers testify, of Hymns, Psalms, Canticles, Antiphons, Lessons, Responsories, & other Prayers, & Praises, distributed into distinct times, beginning in the night, whereof that part is called the Nocturne (one or three according to the diversity of the Office) and pertaineth to one or more of the four Vigils, into which soldiers divide the whole night. Whereto also the Lauds are added. The Prime, in the morning. Afterwards, the Third hour, Sixth, Ninth, & in the evening, Evensong, and Compline.
Against which most ancient and religious Constitution, especially against the part called Vigils, or Nocturnes, certain Heretics repined, & calumniated the Church's custom, as superfluous and unfruitful to spiritual work, violating of God's ordinance, who made the night for rest, and the day for labour. For which cause they were called

Nyctazontes, Somnicolosi, Drowsy heretics.[2] As the same S. Isidorus testifieth li. 1. c. 22. de Offi. Eccles. S. Ierom Epist. ad Riparium, noteth the same heresy in Vigilantius,[3] calling him Dormitantius, because he reprehended holy Vigils, as if it were better to sleep, than wake in time of Divine service.[4] Wicliff also raised up the same heresy as witnesseth Thomas Waldensis, To. 3. Tit. 3. c. 21.[5] Lastly Luther and all his brood. But the holy observation of Canonical Hours is proved by many ancient Fathers to be altogether agreeable to the holy Scriptures, both of the old and new Testament.[6] So S. Beda in 18. Luc. & li. 4. c. 7. Hist. Angl. S. Gregory the Great li. 3. Dialog. c. 14. S. Augustin (Ser. 55. de temp.) exhorting the people to rise early to the Vigils (or Nocturnes) and in anywise to come to the Third hour, sixth, and Ninth. Let none (saith he) withdraw himself from the holy work, but whom either sickness, or public utility, or perhaps some great necessity holdeth back.[7] S. Jerom. Epist. 22. ad Eustoch. & in Epitaph. Paulae c. 10. maketh express mention of the Third hour, Sixth, Ninth, Morning, & Evening; also of Mid-night, adding that no Religious is ignorant that sometimes they must rise to Divine Service, twice, yea thrice in the night.[8] S. Basil in Regulis fusius disput. ad Interrog. 37. & de Instit. Monachorum, first sheweth his ordinance to be agreeable to the holy Scriptures, & namely to this place of the Psalmist.[9] S. Cyprian in fine exposit. Orat. Domin. affirmeth that besides the three hours in which Daniel and his fellows prayed, the Church of Christ hath added more. And (as many suppose)[10] S. Clement li. 8. Constitut. Apostol. c. 40. sheweth the set Hours of prayers, & the reasons thereof: Make your prayers Early in the morning, at the Third hour, Sixth, Ninth, Evening, & at the Time of cock crowing. Early giving thanks, because our Lord hath illuminated us, the night being passed, & the day coming in;[11] the Third, because that hour our Lord received Pilate's sentence; the Sixth hour, because then he was Crucified; the Ninth, because all things were moved, when our Lord was crucified, abhorring the audacity of the wicked, & not bearing the ignominy of our Lord; at Evening, giving thanks, for that God hath given us the night for rest of day's labours: at the Cock crowing, because at that time the coming of the day is denounced, to exercise the works of light, thus. S. Clement. Touching the distinct and set times of public prayer, the continual practice of tradition teacheth, that Matins with Lauds were said in the night, about the first Cock-crowing. Prime early in the morning. The other parts in the day time. At evening Evensong, & last of all Compline. And touching the place: If for the infidels (saith the same holy Father) there be not access to the Church,[12] the Bishop must gather the Assembly at home, that the godly may not enter into the Church of the wicked: for the place doth not sanctify man, but man the place. Wherefore if the wicked occupy the place, that place is to be shunned, because it is profaned by them: for as Priests do sanctify holy things, so the wicked do contaminate them. If neither at home, nor in the Church Assemblies can be celebrated, let every one by himself sing, read, pray, or two or three be gathered together. For where two or three are gathered in my name (saith Christ) there am I in the midst of them.[13] Let not the godly pray with an heretic,[14] no not at home. For what society is there of light with darkness?[15]

165 There is (e) much peace to them that love thy law: & (f) there is no scandal to them.

(e) Amongst other benefits, it is a special commodity, that those which perfectly love God's law have always peace in their own conscience: (f) and are never scandalized, that is, do not fall nor commit sin, by any occasion whatsoever given them by others. For it is a general assured doctrine, that the perfect are not scandalized, because they are constant in virtue, and not moved by any example, persuasion, provocation, or other means to offend God: but only the weak and unperfect are moved and drawn to sin by occasions given them, who otherwise would not have sinned. Neither is he excused that falleth by such occasions, because he ought to be constant.

166 I expected thy salvation, o Lord: and have loved thy commandments. 167 My soul hath kept thy testimonies: & (g) hath loved them exceedingly.

(g) Not of servile fear, but of true charity & filial love.

168 (h) I have kept thy commandments, and thy testimonies: because all my ways are in thy sight.

(h) Because whatsoever I do is in thy sight, whom I will in no case offend.

169 Tau. Sign. (a) Let my petition approach in thy sight, o Lord: according to thy word give me (b) understanding.

(a) In this last Octonary, and conclusion of this Psalm, the faithful servant of God prayeth, (b) not for human knowledge, or other temporal things, but to understand God's law.

170 Let my request enter in thy sight: (c) according to thy word (d) deliver me.

(c) Thou that hast promised to hear all that invocate thee, (d) vouchsafe to deliver me in time of tribulations and tentations.

171 My lips shall utter an hymn, when thou shalt teach me thy justifications. 172 My tongue shall pronounce thy [1] word: (e) because all thy commandments are equity.

[1] eloquium. (e) God giving grace, it behoveth his servants thankfully to serve and praise him.

173 (f) Let thy hand be to save me: because I have chosen thy commandments.

(f) Though man be endued with grace, yet he needeth more grace, that by God's hand and power, not by his own, he may resist tentations.

174 I have coveted thy salvation, o Lord: and thy law is my meditation. 175 (g) My soul shall live, and shall praise thee: and thy judgments shall help me.

(g) By this assistance of grace, the soul continueth in spiritual life, and praiseth God.

176 (h) I have strayed as a sheep that is lost: (i) seek thy servant, (k) because I have not forgotten thy commandments.

(h) All mankind, and universally every one, hath been as a lost sheep, (i) & Christ came into this world to seek and save all: (k) but effectually findeth and saveth those only, that forget not to keep his commandments.

A BRIEF NOTE CONCERNING

the Gradual Psalms.

Here follow in order fifteen Psalms entitle Gradual Canticles. [1] The Hebrew word Mahaloth signifieth Steps, or Ascensions. The reason whereof Aadias, and some other Rabbins yield, for that they were sung with highest elevated notes, that can be in Music. The Talmud saith they are so called, because they were sung in the fifteen steps going up into the Temple. But S. Augustin, S. Basil, and other Christian Fathers expound them according to the history, and immediate prophetical sense, of the delivery of the Jews from captivity of Babylon, [2] ascending into Jerusalem: which is so situated on mountains, that the way from all parts was by ascending unto it. According to the Mystical sense, [3] of ascending spiritually by virtues to perfection, and to eternal felicity. For the way tending to virtue (saith S. Basil) is like to certain steps (or degrees) by little and little bringing the man that loveth wisdom unto heaven. These Canticles therefore are prayers, mixed with consolations, for the joyful delivery of God's people, from that great captivity in Babylon, which the Psalmist King David saw in prophetical spirit, and which his posterity felt, and sometime endured. Which again as a figure signifieth the return and ascending of mankind from sin to grace, and from the miserable state of this world into heaven. Whereupon S. Augustine interpreteth this prophecy of the ascension, or elevation of the heart, from the vale of tears. [4] In the mean time, whiles we are in this world, these Psalms are consolatory prayers, and prophetical assurance, that God's people, Catholic Christians, shall be delivered from the thraldom and [3] The mystical sense.

[4] These Psalms are consolatory prayers and prophecies.

persecution of Pagans, Turks, and Heretics. As partly we see by the delivery from the Roman persecuting Emperors, from the Vandals, Goths, and Huns: & therefore with assured confidence we hope and expect the like delivery from Turks, and all Heretics of Luther's brood.

CHAPTER CXIX.

The Jews in captivity of Babylon, Christians in persecution, or other great tribulation, pray with confidence to be delivered from danger, and slander of wicked tongues, 5. lamenting their long endurance. [1]

[1] Prayer in tribulation.

The 7. key.

A gradual Canticle. When I was in tribulation I cried to our Lord: and (a) he heard me.

(a) Former experience of God's mercy in hearing the prayers of those that invocated him, giveth hope that he will hear in like case.

2 O Lord deliver my soul from (b) unjust lips, and from a deceitful tongue.

(b) Nothing is more dangerous than untrue and deceitful tongues, nothing more damage than to diminish, and detract from the good fame of the just: and therefore this is a most necessary prayer, that God will deliver us from the wicked tongues of Turks, Heretics, and other wicked men.

3 (c) What may be given thee, or what may be added unto thee to a deceitful tongue?

(c) What punishment is great enough for wicked tongues?

4 (d) The sharp arrows of the mighty, with coals of desolation.

(d) Surely the malice of wicked tongues deserveth sharpest punishments to be afflicted by strong hands.

5 (e) Woe is to me, that my sojourning is prolonged: I have dwelt with the (f) inhabitants of Cedar:

(e) Jews lamented their long absence from the holy land, especially from Jerusalem and the Temple. Christians mourn for their restraint from God's service, and long peregrination from heaven. (f) Of Cedar the son of Ismael, came Mahomet, the Turks' false Prophet, whose tyranny is great and long. The name Cedar is interpreted, blackness, and obscurity, which signifieth darkness of error and sin.

6 My soul hath been long a sojourner. 7 With them that hated peace I was peaceable: when I spake to them, they impugned me (g) without cause.

(g) The wicked afflict those that give no cause of offence.

CHAPTER CXX.

The just rejoice that their prayer is heard, and that God continually protecteth them. [1]

[1] God's protection.

The 3. key.

A gradual Canticle. I have lifted up mine eyes unto (a) the mountains, (b) from whence help shall come to me.

(a) Towards Jerusalem, and towards heaven. (b) All help cometh from heaven, that is, from God, who of his divine ordinance especially heareth prayers made in holy places. 3. Reg. 7.

2 My help is from our Lord, who made heaven and earth. 3 Give he not (c) thy foot to be moved: neither do he slumber that keepeth thee.

(c) The just speaketh and wisheth well to his own soul. Especially the whole Church rejoiceth in God's assured protection.

4 Lo he shall not slumber nor sleep, that keepeth (d) Israel.

(d) The militant Church.

5 Our Lord keepeth thee, our Lord is thy protection, upon thy right hand. 6 By day (e) the sun shall not burn thee: nor (f) the moon by night.

(e) Prosperity, (f) nor adversity can overthrow the Church.

7 Our Lord doth keep thee from all evil: our Lord keep (g) thy soul.

(g) Spiritual life.

8 Our Lord keep thy coming in, and thy going out: from hence forth now, and for ever.

CHAPTER CXXI.

Under the figure of return to Jerusalem, vehemently desired by the Jews in captivity, the Psalmist describeth the desire, and hope of the just to possess heaven. [1]

[1] Joys of heaven promised to the just.
The 10. key.

A gradual Canticle. I rejoiced in these things, which (a) were said to me: We shall go into the house of our Lord.

(a) Diverse Prophets told the Jews in captivity, that they should return to Jerusalem. All Prophets, Christ also, and his Apostles, and Priests, preach the entrance, and joys of heaven to the just. All which the Psalmist saw in prophetical spirit, and rejoiced.

2 (b) Our feet were standing, in thy courts, o Jerusalem.

(b) The Jews consider that sometimes they were joyful in the Temple of Jerusalem: Christians rejoice in the comfort they have in the militant Church.

3 Jerusalem, which is built as a city: whose (c) participation is together in it-self.

(c) Community and participation of spiritual graces, is a great joy to Catholics, whereof the same Prophet speaketh, Psal. 118. v. 63. and often elsewhere.

4 For (d) thither did the tribes ascend, (e) the tribes of our Lord: the testimony of Israel to confess unto the name of our Lord.

(d) All the twelve Tribes frequented Jerusalem, (e) and all nations of the world do come to the Catholic Church.

5 Because seats (f) sat there in judgment, (g) seats upon the house (h) of David.

(f) Seats of Judgement were placed in Jerusalem, (g) and seats of Judgement in the Catholic Church (h) of Christ.

6 (i) Ask ye the things that are for the peace of Jerusalem: and (k) aboundance to them that love thee.

(i) Christ exhorteth to ask, (k) and promiseth to give that is rightly asked, Christians also invite each other to pray for the Church. [1]

[1] Mat. 21. v. 22.

7 Peace be made in thy strength: and aboundance in thy towers. 8 (l) For my brethren, and my neighbours' sakes, (m) I spake peace of thee:

(l) Christ prayeth for his Church, (m) and gave his peace to the Apostles, and in them to their successors.

9 For the house of our Lord God, I have sought (n) good things to thee.

(n) For in heavenly Jerusalem, all good things are prepared, & are given to Saints reigning there for ever.

CHAPTER CXXII.

A fervent and attentive prayer, to be delivered from captivity, or any other affliction. [1]

[1] A prayer in affliction.
The 7. key.

A gradual Canticle. To thee have I lifted up mine eyes, which dwellest in the heavens.

2 Behold as the eyes (a) of servants, are on the hands of their masters, As the eyes (b) of the handmaid on the hands of her mistress: so are our eyes to our Lord God until he have mercy on us.

(a) Servants expecting necessaries at their masters hands are commonly very attentive to receive that which they hope for: so must the faithful praying God, be very attentive, and not distracted in their prayers. (b) Another example of handmaids, who generally are more diligent than men.

3 Have mercy on us, o Lord, have mercy on us: because we are (c) much replenished with contempt.

(c) Though God suffer his servants to sustain some affliction and reproach, yet he heareth and delivereth them before they be oppressed.

4 Because our soul is (d) much replenished: reproach to them that abound, and contempt to the proud.

(d) Seeing persecution still increase, or continue long, the faithful are then specially to conceive hope of speedy relief.

CHAPTER CXXIII.

The whole Church, and every just person, gratefully confesseth, that by God's protection they are secure, without which none could escape ruin.[1]

[1] God's protection.

The 3. key.

A gradual Canticle. But that our Lord (a) was in us, let Israel now say,

(a) If God had not sent his help and defence to us.

2 but that our Lord was in us. (b) When men rose up against us,

(b) We could not have escaped the force of our enemies.

3 (c) perhaps they had swallowed us (d) alive: When their fury was angry against us,

(c) The word (perhaps) doth not here import a doubt, or uncertainty, but in modest manner of asseveration, leaveth he judgement of the event that should happen (if God did not protect his servants) to their own consideration: which is an usual phrase in most languages. (d) So suddenly should the weak, without God's protection be destroyed, as men are devoured & swallowed up by ravening wild beasts, even before they be throughly dead. So was Jonas swallowed into the whale's belly.

4 perhaps (e) water had swallowed us.

(e) Furious persecution.

5 Our soul hath passed through (f) a torrent: perhaps our soul had passed through an intolerable water.

(f) Sudden great troubles.

6 Blessed be our Lord which hath not given us for a prey to their teeth. 7 Our soul as a sparrow is delivered from the snare of the fowlers: The snare is (g) broken, and we are delivered.

(g) Man's subtlety often deceiveth another man, but there is no counsel able to circumvent God.

8 Our help is in the name of our Lord, who made heaven and earth.

CHAPTER CXXIV.

The Church, and holy members thereof, are always protected by God: 5. The wicked being suffered for a while, are at last punished.[1]

[1] God's protection.

The 3. key.

A gradual Canticle. They (a) that trust in our Lord, as mount Sion: he shall not be moved for ever (b) that dwelleth

(a) Those that confidently trust in God, are in such security as is mount Sion, which is a hill, defended also with other hills round about. (b) Another thing required to this security, is to dwell within Jerusalem, not the terrestrial city, for (as S. Augustin observeth) the Jews that dwelt therein are destroyed or made captives, and hitherto rejected of God, but in the Catholic Church.

2 in Jerusalem. Mountains round about it: and our Lord round about his people, from hence forth now and for ever. 3 Because our Lord (c) will not leave the rod of sinners upon the lot of the just: that the just reach not their hands to iniquity.

(c) God will not always, nor finally leave his servants in tribulation, but only a while for their good.

4 (d) Do well, o Lord, to the good, and right of heart.

(d) This prayer is also an asseveration, for it is certain that God will defend, and reward the good, and right of heart:

5 But (e) those that decline into obligations, our Lord will bring with them that work iniquity: (f) peace upon Israel.

(e) And no less assuredly God will punish not only the notorious wicked, and principal Authors of wickedness, but also all those that for fear or for commodity, or for any other cause, decline into obligations, bonds, covenants, or any way consent in external shew with the wicked against God: as in outward profession of Heresy, or Schism, though such temporizers do not think in their heart, that the pretended religion is true, whereto they are drawn to yield external conformity. For, as the Psalmist here teacheth, our Lord will bring all such accessary offenders, to the same judgement and punishment, with the principal workers of iniquity. (f) All which being punished, then Jerusalem, the Catholic Church, shall have peace.

CHAPTER CXXV.

Israelites released from captivity of Babylon, much more the blessed both of the old and new Testament delivered by Christ from captivity of sin, do rejoice: 5. Who nevertheless must pass through tribulation to eternal felicity. [1]

[1] The delivered from captivity rejoice.
The 7. key.

A gradual Canticle. When our Lord turned the captivity of Sion: we were made as (a) men comforted.

(a) The Jews released from captivity, were exceedingly, and almost incredibly comforted, as men for great, and unexpected sudden joy, think it rather a dream than a truth that they are delivered from miseries. So S. Peter when he was delivered out of prison by an Angel, thought it rather a vision, than a true delivery. [1] Such spiritual joy devout souls have when they are delivered from sin.
[1] Act. 12.

2 Then was our mouth replenished with joy: and our tongue with exultation. Then (b) shall they say among the Gentiles: Our Lord hath done magnificently with them.

(b) Whereas in the two former verses (and very commonly) the Prophet speaketh in the pretertense, for the assurance of that he foresheweth, as if it were already done, yet here he uttereth his Prophecy in the future tense, that the Gentiles will confess that God dealeth magnificently with his people.

3 (c) Our Lord hath done magnificently with us: we are made joyful.

(c) The people also themselves gratefully confess that God dealeth magnificently with them.

4 (d) Turn our captivity, o Lord, (e) as a torrent in the South.

(d) The Prophet foreseeing all this in spirit, prayeth for the performance hereof. (e) And that it may speedily be done, as a torrent that runneth in the south part of the world, is commonly very great, much desired, but scarce expected.

5 (f) They that sow in tears, (g) shall reap in joyfulness.

(f) This is the ordinary disposition of God, that his servants shall make their seeding, which is, do good works (saith S. Augustin) with tears, in tribulation upon earth: (g) and reap a plentiful harvest, the reward of their suffering and well working, in the next life. In assured hope whereof the Psalmist, and the whole Church joyfully conclude this Psalm with the two verses following.

6 Going they went and wept, casting their seeds. But coming they shall come with exultation, carrying their sheaves.

CHAPTER CXXVI.

Neither house nor city can be built, or kept without God's special providence and help, 3. those that trust in him shall prosper in their endeavours. [1]

[1] God's help in all good works.
The 3. key.

A gradual Canticle (a) of Salomon. Unless (b) our Lord build the house, they have laboured in vain that build it. Unless our Lord keep the city, he watcheth in vain that keepeth it.

(a) God not permitting David to build the Temple, promised that his son should build it, and therefore besides other good admonitions, given to his son Salomon, he directeth this Psalm to him, to be sung with others in the dedication of the temple. 3. Reg. 8. 2. Par. 5. (b) Unless God be the principal Angel, no work can prosper.

2 It is vain for you to rise (c) before light: (d) rise ye after ye have sitten, which eat (e) the bread of sorrow.

(c) It is vain to attempt any thing without God's grace assisting: (d) they that so doing, & thinking they have done something, rest (e) after their painful travail, must rise again & begin anew, because that which they seem to have done well, is nothing worth, nor shall have reward.

3 (f) When he shall give (g) sleep to his beloved: behold (h) the inheritance of our Lord (i) are children: (k) the reward, the fruit of the womb.

(f) Contrarywise where God giving grace, those that truly love him, do good works, (g) with great ease, and delight, as they take their sleep, (h) they merit inheritance in heaven, (i) for their good works. (k) The reward is promised to the true children of God, born to him in the womb of the Catholic Church.

4 As (l) arrows in the hand of the mighty: so are the (m) children of them that are shaken.

(l) Moreover as a strong archer striketh deep with his arrows; so they that patiently suffer much in this world, (m) do multiply good works.

5 (n) Blessed is the man that hath filled his desire of them: he shall (o) not be confounded when he shall speak to his enemies (p) in the gate.

(n) Such shall be very happy, (o) & very easily answer all that can be objected against them (p) in the day of Judgement.

CHAPTER CXXVII.

Happiness both of this life and of the next, is obtained by fearing, and sincerely serving God. [1]

[1] Fear of God the way to happiness.
The 7. key.

A gradual Canticle. Blessed are all that fear our Lord, that walk in his ways. 2 Because thou shalt eat the labours of thy hands: blessed art thou, and it shall be well with thee. 3 Thy (a) wife as a fruitful vine, in (b) the sides of thy house. (c) Thy children as young plants of olive-trees, round about thy table.

(a) If such servants of God be married, they shall ordinarily have issue, & succession in their family, but especially the souls of such shall bring forth many meritorious works, (b) in the bosom of the Catholic Church, which was founded in Christ's side. (c) Children also signify good works.

4 Behold so shall the man be blessed, that feareth our Lord. 5 Our Lord out of Sion bless thee: and that thou mayst see the good things of Jerusalem all the days of thy life. 6 And that thou mayst see thy (d) children's children, peace upon Israel.

(d) Reward in heaven for good works in earth.

CHAPTER CXXVIII.

The Church often (3. and much) impugned, is not overcome. 4. Her persecuters are destroyed, 6. contemned, 8. and cursed. [1]

[1] The Church still firm in persecution.
The 6. key.

A gradual Canticle. (a) Often have they impugned me (b) from my youth, let Israel now say:

(a) Israel which is the Church of God, rejoicing saith: that enemies have often, (b) even from the beginning of the world, persecuted me, as when Cain persecuted Abel, other wicked persecuted Seth, Enoch, Noe: the Chaldeas persecuted Abraham: the Aegyptians persecuted the Israelites: and so in other generations.

2 Often have they impugned me from my youth: (c)

but they have not prevailed against me.

(c) But they have never overcome me. So the Psalmist testifieth for all times past, & prophesieth the same for times to come.

3 Sinners (d) have builded upon my back: they have (e) prolonged their iniquity.

(d) Persecuters not being able to overthrow or suppress the Church, have laid great weighty burdens of tribulations upon her back, which she hath patiently and strongly borne, (e) they have still persisted, one sort after another, but with longanimity the Church hath stood fast, and constantly passed through all distresses. In moral sense sinners build iniquity upon the back of the Church, yea and upon God's back, when they presume to sin, trusting in the end to be absolved by virtue of holy Sacraments left in the Church. Likewise when they excuse their sins, imputing the cause to other creatures of God, whereby they are allured. Which is in effect (saith S. Augustin) to accuse God, and to build iniquities on God's back, who made those creatures.

4 (f) Our just Lord will cut the necks of sinners:

(f) God therefore who is just, will at last cast such presumptuous sinners from his back, and break their stiff necks:

5 let them all (g) be confounded and (h) turned backward, that hate Sion.

(g) then shall they be confounded, (h) separated, eternally from God, become like fruitless and withered grass, cast away, despised, yea cursed of all, and blessed by none, as the Prophet denounceth in the next verses.

6 Let them be made as grass in the tops of houses: which is withered before it be plucked up. 7 Whereof the reaper hath not filled his hand, and he that gathereth the sheaves his bosom. 8 And they said not that passed by: The blessing of our Lord be upon you: we have blessed you in the name of our Lord.

CHAPTER CXXIX.

The Jews, or other people in tribulation for sin, or temporal captivity, cry to God to be delivered: 4. trusting and encouraging each other in God's accustomed mercy, assuredly hoping that he will redeem & deliver them. [1]

[1] The sixth penitential Psalm.
The 7. key.

A gradual Canticle. From (a) the depths I have cried to thee, o Lord:

(a) This prayer agreeth to all true penitents, crying to God for help, being either in depth of sorrow for sin, and so it is one of the Penitential Psalms; or the depth of fervent desire to ascend towards perfection in virtue, and from this vale of misery into heaven, and so it is a Gradual Psalm; or in the depth of temporal pains, and so it is a special prayer for souls in Purgatory, offered by the Church in their behalf.

2 Lord hear my voice: Let thine ears be intent to the voice of my petition. 3 If thou shalt observe iniquities, o Lord: Lord (b) who shall sustain it?

(b) None is able to abide the rigour of God's justice.

4 Because with thee there is (c) propitiation: and for (d) thy law I have expected thee, o Lord. My soul hath expected in his word:

(c) But all must rely upon his mercy. (d) For thy promises made in the law, that thou wilt remit sins to the penitent, give more grace to them that seek it, and mitigate also the pains due for sins.

5 my soul hath hoped in our Lord. 6 From (e) the morning watch even until night: let Israel hope in our Lord.

(e) The hope of penitents is like to the watches of the day time, from morning until night, which are more comfortable than watches of the night:

7 Because with our Lord there is mercy: and with him (f) plenteous redemption.

(f) The greatest comfort is in Christ our Redeemer, whose plentiful Redemption bringeth more aboundance of grace.

8 And he shall redeem (g) Israel, from all his iniquities.

(g) Christ's Redemption being sufficient for all the world, is effectual only to true living members of the Catholic Church.

CHAPTER CXXX.

Any just soul in humble confidence offereth his innocency, as a spiritual and grateful sacrifice to God, 3. exhorting all God's servants ever to hope in him.[1]

[1] Confidence of innocency.

The 7. key.

A gradual Canticle of (a) David. Lord my heart is not exalted: (b) neither are mine eyes lofty. Neither have I walked in great matters: nor in marvelous things above me.

(a) David by God's special grace having a sincere mind towards all men, even towards his enemies, and an humble heart, not desiring any thing ambitiously, but all to the honour of God, proposeth his own example, for others to imitate: that they may with him offer the sacrifice of humility and innocency unto God, from whom all good things proceed. (b) All this with a thankful mind to God who gave this grace.

2 If I was not humbly minded: but exalted my soul: As (c) the weaned child is toward his mother, so (d) retribution in my soul.

(c) As children after they are weaned come still willingly to their mother, so doth the child of God rely upon God's help, though he always feel not the same sweetness: (d) & according to his demeanor herein, he expecteth reward.

3 (e) Let Israel hope in our Lord, from henceforth now and for ever.

(e) King David, or any other, being for his virtue advanced, & rewarded by God, is a good example to move others to do the like, so shall they receive like reward.

CHAPTER CXXXI.

The Psalmist earnestly prayeth God to give him leave, & to shew him where to build a Temple. But more especially prayeth for, and prophesieth the coming of Christ, the promised Son of David: 14. signifying God's promise thereof, and of establishing his Church.[1]

[1] Christ's coming to restore man.

The 5. key.

A gradual Canticle. Remember (a) David, o Lord, and all his meekness:

(a) It is an usual thing that David, Moyses, & other Prophets speak of themselves in the third person.

2 As he sware to our Lord, (b) vowed a vow to the God of Jacob.

(b) King David desiring, and so far as lay in him, promising to build a Temple to God, with great instance prayeth that he might perform the same. But God disposing otherwise, that not he, but his son should build it, he nevertheless prepared the matter, workmen, and money, shewed the form, and disposed the Levites how to serve therein.

3 (c) If I shall enter into the tabernacle of my house, if I shall ascend into the bed of my couch.

(c) Moreover by vow deprived himself of entering into his own house, or taking his ordinary rest, till he might (if it so pleased God) know the place where it should be built.

4 If I shall give sleep to mine eyes, and slumbering to mine eye lids: 5 And rest to my temples: until I find a place for our Lord, a tabernacle for the God of Jacob.

6 Behold we have heard of it (d) in Ephrata: we have found it in (e) the fields of the wood.

(d) It was revealed to David, that the Temple should be built in that part of Jerusalem, which looketh towards Bethleem (otherwise called Ephrata) where our Saviour was born. (e) Within Jerusalem, which is compassed with woods. In this vision also the whole form of the Temple was revealed unto him, as he testifieth. 1. Par. 28. v. 19. All things, quoth he, came written with the hand of our Lord unto me: that I might understand all the works of the pattern.

7 (f) We will enter into his tabernacle: we will (g) adore in the place where his feet stood.

(f) Holy David moved with exceeding devotion, repaired to the place, where God's Temple should be built, (g) & adored God, where the Propitiatory, as a footstool representing God's presence, should stand. What marvel then if devotion move Christians to visit the holy places, where our Saviour, God and Man was Incarnate, was born, suffered death, was buried, ascended into heaven, or any other place where his feet stood.

8 (h) Arise Lord into thy rest, thou, and (i) the ark of thy sanctification.

(h) O God, leaving Silo, Gabaon, and the like places, come into thy holy Temple, (i) with the ark of covenant, where thou sanctifiest thy people. And here again the Prophet illuminated with a higher Mystery, and inflamed with more devotion, prayeth for Christ's coming into the world, and prophesieth that after his Passion he will rise, not only in glory of soul, but also of body, prefigured by the Ark of testimony, which was in the tabernacle, and after in the Temple.

9 Let thy Priests be clothed with (k) justice: & let thy (l) saints rejoice.

(k) Grant therefore that thy Priests, which must offer sacrifice in this sacred place, be endued with virtues, and good life worthy of their degree: (l) and the Levites who are ordained to serve there, be likewise made fit for their diverse functions, both in the old and new Testament.

10 (m) For David thy servant's sake, (n) turn not away the face of thy Christ.

(m) And seeing thou hast given such meekness, devotion, zeal, sincerity, and other virtues, making him a man according to thine own heart, and thereupon promised to establish his see, (n) defer not to send thy promised Messias, Christ our Redeemer.

11 Our Lord (o) hath sworn truth to David, and (p) he will not disappoint it: (q) Of the fruit of thy womb I will set upon thy seat.

(o) Hence forth to the end of this Psalm the Prophet relateth God's revelation to him: That he hath truly promised with an oath, (p) and will perform, (q) to set one of David's sons upon his Throne: which was not only fulfilled in Salomon, who reigned in great peace, and builded the Temple, but especially in Christ the Son of David, to whom our Lord God gave the seat of David his father, & he shall reign in the house of Jacob for ever, and of his Kingdom there shall be no end. Luc. 1. v. 32. 33. By this promise Saint Peter also proveth Christ's Resurrection. Act. 2. v. 30.

12 (r) If thy children shall keep my testament, and these my testimonies which I will teach them: Their children also even for ever, shall sit upon thy seat.

(r) Concerning the children of Christ, members of his Kingdom the Church, the promise is conditional, if they observe God's commandments, they shall sit upon his seat: be coheirs of his Kingdom. Rom. 8. v. 17.

13 Because our Lord hath chosen Sion: he hath chosen it for an habitation to himself. 14 This is my (s) rest for ever and ever: here will I dwell because I have chosen it.

(s) Sion, the Catholic Church, is a perpetual place where God dwelleth.

15 Blessing I will bless her (t) widow: her (v) poor I will fill with breads.

(t) The Church wanting Christ's visible presence, is replenished with many blessings, (v) and all her humble children are relieved with holy Sacraments.

16 Her (w) Priests I will clothe with salvation: and her (x) saints shall rejoice with joyfulness.

(w) The Church hath always some holy Priests (x) and some holy people.

17 (y) Thither will I bring forth a horn to David, I have prepared (z) a lamp to my Christ.

(y) Of this Church, elected by God, Christ is the Protector, and strong defence. (z) And the same Church shall be a perpetual lamp, whereby others may come to him.

18 His enemies I will clothe with confusion: but upon him shall my sanctification flourish.

CHAPTER CXXXII.

Fraternal concord is commended to all in the Church, as necessary and delectable in itself, and blessed of God. [1]

[1] Fraternal concord.
The 7. key.

A gradual Canticle (a) of David. Behold (b) how good and how pleasant a thing it is, for brethren to dwell in one.

(a) David being a most peaceable man, even toward his enemies, is added by Esdras in this title, as an example for others to imitate. (b) That concord is both good and pleasant, needeth no other proof, but only to consider & to behold the fruit thereof in every community, and especially in the Church of God.

2 (c) As ointment on (d) the head, which ran down upon (e) the beard, the beard of Aaron, which ran down unto (f) the hem of his garment.

(c) The ointment, wherewith Aaron and other High Priests were consecrated, was precious, and most odoriferous, signifying grace bought by Christ's blood, and producing virtues, which make sweet savour: (d) was poured upon the High Priest's head, who being head of the Church, (e) unity and concord descended from him to other Priests, (f) and so to the people, even to the lowest and meanest in God's Church.

3 (g) As the dew of Hermon, which runneth down upon mount Sion. Because (h) there hath our Lord commanded blessing, and life even for ever.

(g) Another similitude to declare the excellency of concord: As the dew of mount Hermon, which is perpetually covered with snow, that falleth from the heaven, thence descending refresheth & fructifieth the hill of Sion: so mutual concord, and fraternal charity amongst the faithful, nourisheth each other, making them fruitful in all good works. (h) Where there is unity God giveth aboundance of grace, as where the Apostles with other faithful were gathered, and continued in prayer, the Holy Ghost came upon them all. And the multitude of believers (then increasing) had one heart and one soul. Act. 2. & 4. v. 32.

CHAPTER CXXXIII.

All, and especially clergy men that serve the Church, are invited to praise God by day and by night, so shall they be blessed of God.[1]

[1] God continually to be praised.
The 1. key.

A gradual Canticle. Lo (a) now bless our Lord, all ye the servants of our Lord: Which stand in the house of our Lord, in the courts of the house of our God.

(a) This last Gradual Psalm, as a conclusion exhorteth all to praise God.

2 In the nights lift up your hands unto the holy places, and bless ye our Lord. 3 Our Lord out of Sion bless thee, who (b) made heaven and earth.

(b) For to this end he made all creatures in heaven & in earth.

CHAPTER CXXXIV.

God who only is omnipotent, and fountain of all goodness, is of all to be praised. 8. He is the special protector of his elected people. 15. Contrarywise false gods are impotent, vain, and cannot help those that serve them. 19. Only the Church doth rightly praise him.[1]

[1] God's perfection and goodness.
The 1. key.

Alleluia. Praise ye the name of our Lord, (a) ye servants praise our Lord.

(a) God's servants.

2 Ye (b) that stand in the house of our Lord, in (c) the courts of the house of our God.

(b) Clergy that serve in the Temple, (c) and ye Laity that attend to his service, must praise him for these causes.

3 Praise ye our Lord, because our Lord is (d) good: sing ye to his name, because it is (e) sweet.

(d) his goodness. (e) his benignity.

4 Because our Lord (f) hath chosen Jacob to himself, Israel for his own possession.

(f) He hath adopted us his children.

5 Because I have known that our Lord is (g) great, and our God above all gods.

(g) He is omnipotent, as appeareth by his works, here and elsewhere recited: and many ways known to the world.

6 All things whatsoever our Lord would he hath done, in heaven, in earth, in the sea, and in all the depths. 7 Bring forth clouds from the uttermost of the earth: lightnings he hath turned into rain. Who bringeth forth the winds out of his treasures: 8 who struck the first begotten of Aegypt from man even to beast. 9 He sent forth signs and wonders in the midst of thee, o Aegypt: upon Pharao, and upon all his servants. [1]

[1] Exo. 11.

10 Who struck many nations: and slew strong kings: 11 Sehon the king of the Amorrheites, & Og the king of Basan, and all the Kingdoms of Chanaan. [1]

[1] Ios. 12. Num. 21. Ios. 13.

12 And he gave their land for inheritance, for an inheritance to Israel his people. 13 Lord thy name is for ever: Lord thy memorial is unto generation and generation. 14 Because our Lord shall judge his people: and will be entreated toward his servants. 15 The idols of the Gentiles are silver, and gold, the works of men's hands. 16 They have mouth, & shall not speak: they have eyes, and shall not see. 17 They have ears, and shall not hear: for neither is there breath in their mouth. 18 Let them that make them become like to them: and all that have confidence in them. 19 Ye house of Israel bless our Lord: ye house of Aaron bless our Lord. 20 Ye house of Levi bless our Lord: you that fear our Lord, bless ye our Lord. 21 Blessed be our Lord out of Sion, who dwelleth in Jerusalem.

CHAPTER CXXXV.

God being marvelous in himself, 4. hath shewed his power and goodness in his works, as well in general to all the world, 10. as in particular towards his elected people. [1]

[1] God's marvelous works.
The 2. key.

Alleluia. Confess ye to our Lord (a) because he is good: (b) because his mercy is for ever.

(a) Whose goodness is incomparable. (b) This second part of every verse, first pronounced by the Priests, confessing & praising God's mercy above all his works, was still repeated by musicians, or other assistants, in manner as now in Litanies (o Lord deliver us) and (We beseech thee to hear us.) And as Gloria Patri, &c. is added in the end of Psalms, and our Lord's prayer, and the Angelical salutation are often repeated in diverse Offices, and in the Rosary.

2 Confess ye to (c) the God of gods: because his mercy is for ever.

(c) Whose divine power created all other things.

3 (d) Confess ye to (e) the Lord of lords: because his mercy is for ever

(d) By this invitation to praise our Lord God, thrice repeated, we profess the Blessed Trinity, who is one God in substance, and three Divine Persons. (e) Whose dominion is over all the world.

4 Who (f) only doth great marvels: because his mercy is for ever.

(f) Only God can do true miracles; to wit, works above the course of all nature.

5 Who made the heaven (g) in understanding: because his mercy is for ever.

(g) In admirable wisdom.

6 Who established (h) the earth over the waters: because his mercy is for ever.

(h) Made the waters above nature to remain within their bonds, & not to cover the earth.

7 Who made the great lights: because his mercy is for ever. 8 The sun to rule the day: because his mercy is for ever. 9 The moon and stars to rule the night: because his mercy is for ever. 10 Who struck Aegypt with their first-begotten: because his mercy is for ever. [1]

[1] Exo. 11.

11 Who brought forth Israel out of the midst of them: because his mercy is for ever. 12 In a mighty hand, and lofty arm: because his mercy is for ever. [1]

[1] Exo. 13.

13 Who divided the Red sea into divisions: because his mercy is for ever. 14 And brought forth Israel through the midst thereof: because his mercy is for ever. 15 And he overthrew Pharao, and his host in the Red sea: because his mercy is for ever. [1]

[1] Exo. 14.

16 Who led his people through the desert: because his mercy is for ever.[1]

[1] Num. 21.

17 Who struck great kings: because his mercy is for ever. 18 And slew strong kings: because his mercy is for ever. 19 Sehon the king of the Amorrheites: because his mercy is for ever. 20 And Og the king of Basan: because his mercy is for ever: 21 And he gave their land for an inheritance: because his mercy is for ever. 22 For an inheritance to Israel his servant: because his mercy is for ever. 23 For in our humiliation he was mindful of us: because his mercy is for ever. 24 And he redeemed us from our enemies: because his mercy is for ever. 25 Who giveth food to (i) all flesh: because his mercy is for ever.

(i) All God's benignity, as well of particular benefits towards his people, as general to them and all others, proceedeth from his mercy.

26 Confess ye to the God of heaven: because his mercy is for ever. Confess ye to the Lord of lords: because his mercy is for ever.

CHAPTER CXXXVI.

The Prophet describeth how lamentably the people in captivity of Babylon will bewail the want of means to serve God, and of their native soil: 7. with just desire of their enemies' punishment.[1]

[1] The Jews' lamentation in captivity.
The 4. key.

A Psalm of David (a) for Jeremy. Upon the rivers (b) of Babylon, there we (c) sat and wept: whilst we (d) remembered Sion.

(a) By adding to this title (for Jeremy) the Septuagint Interpreters signify that this Psalm treateth of the same captivity, in which Jeremias writ his Lamentations. (b) Near the rivers in Chaldea, whereof Babylon was the head city, (c) the Jews remained mourning, (d) remembering the holy rites and service of God, which had been in Sion, whereof they were deprived in the captivity.

2 On the willows in the midst thereof, we hanged up (e) our instruments.

(e) All their musical instruments, as having no use of them.

3 Because there they that led us captive, (f) demanded of us words of songs. And they that led us away: Sing ye an hymn to us of the songs of Sion.

(f) Either in earnest or in scorn the Chaldees willed them to sing, as they were accustomed in their country.

4 (g) How shall we sing the song of our Lord in a strange land?

(g) They excused themselves, and refused to sing sacred Psalms before profane people, neither had they mind to sing in that mourning state of captivity.

5 (h) If I shall forget thee, o Jerusalem, let my right hand be forgotten.

(h) The people shew not only their fervent present desire to serve God in Jerusalem, but also their firm purpose still to desire the same, wishing that if they forget it, or lose this affection, their right hands, or what soever is most dear, or necessary for them, may be forgotten, not conserved, but suffered to perish.

6 (i) Let my tongue cleave to my jaws, if I do not remember thee: If I shall not set Jerusalem in the beginning of my joy.

(i) If I lose this affection, let me also lose the use of my tongue.

7 Be mindful, o Lord, of (k) the children of Edom, in (l) the day of Jerusalem: (m) That say: Rase it, rase it, even unto the foundation thereof.

(k) The Idumeans incensed the Chaldees to be cruel against the Jews, whereof they pray for just revenge, and withal the Psalmist prophesieth that it will be revenged, which Isaias also prophesieth, c. 21. v. 11. (l) for their rejoicing in Jerusalem's misery. (m) The voice of the Idumeans, inciting the Babylonians utterly to destroy Jerusalem.

8 (n) Daughter of Babylon miserable: blessed is he, that shall repay thee thy payment, which thou hast payed us.

(n) A Prophecy that the people of Babylon should also be punished, for their cruelty against the Jews, whereof Isaias likewise prophesieth c. 13.

9 Blessed is he (o) that shall hold, and (p) shall dash thy little ones against the rock.

(o) God will bless, or reward them that shall severely afflict the Babylonians, (p) not sparing their children.

Morally he is blessed, that mortifieth his own passions, cutteth off first ill motions, or punisheth venial sins, that they grow not strong within his soul, and so draw it to commit mortal sin. S. Aug. hic, & S. Greg. in fine expos. Psal. 4. paenit.

CHAPTER CXXXVII.

The whole Church, or any just person, rendereth thanks to God for his benefits 4. praying that all Kings and Kingdoms may do the same, 4. because God being high respecteth, and advanceth the humble.[1]

[1] Thanks to God for benefits.
The 7. key.

To (a) David himself. I will (b) confess to thee, o Lord, in my whole heart: (c) because thou hast heard the words of my mouth. In (d) the sight of Angels I will sing to thee:

(a) This Psalm is a fit form of thanks for David, or any other servant of God. (b) I will render thanks and praise. (c) God ever heareth the prayer that is rightly made, for which the suppliant is therefore to give thanks. (d) Angels are present where the faithful pray, observe our prayers, and offer them to God, if they be sincere, as the prayers of Tobias, and Cornelius.

2 I will adore (e) toward thy holy temple, and will confess to thy name:[1] For thy mercy, and thy truth: because thou hast magnified above every thing (f) thy holy name.

(e) When there was not access to the Temple, yet the Jews praying in captivity, turned themselves towards the Temple.[1] 1. Cor. v. 10. Tob. 12. Act. 10. Psal. 24. v. 10. (f) The Name and Majesty of GOD, the WORD (which is the Son of God) also the name of JESUS, is magnified above all names, or temporal things.

3 In what day soever I shall invocate thee, hear me: thou wilt multiply strength in my soul. 4 Let (g) all the kings of the earth, o Lord, confess to thee: because they have heard all the words of thy mouth:

(g) Sooner or later Kings and Princes of all Kingdoms and nations, have been or shall be connected to Christ.

5 And let them sing in the ways of our Lord: because great is the glory of our Lord. 6 Because our Lord is high, and he beholdeth low things: and high things he knoweth (h) far off.

(h) God knoweth proud men, not as his friends or servants, but far off, as strangers and enemies.

7 If I shall walk in the midst of tribulation, thou wilt quicken me: and upon the wrath of mine enemies thou hast extended thy hand, and thy right hand hath saved me. 8 Our Lord will repay for me: o Lord thy mercy is for ever: despise not the works of thy hands.

CHAPTER CXXXVIII.

God's knowledge, 7. and presence (10. without the help, or hinderance of any thing) extendeth to all things, times, and places. 17. He giveth exceeding great honour to his saints, 20. the wicked, as enemies of God, are justly hated, 23. the just pray for God's perpetual direction.[1]

[1] God's special providence of his servants.
The 3. key.

Unto (a) the end, a Psalm of David. Lord thou (b) hast proved me, and hast known me:

(a) By this part of the title (to the end) is signified (as is noted Psal. 4.) that the matter contained in the Psalm, pertaineth to the new Testament. (b) God who knoweth all things most absolutely and perfectly, without discourse or searching, yet as it were, maketh experimental trial of his servants, to make them in some sort to know him, and to know themselves. And so here holy David or other faithful man, acknowledgeth God's Omniscience, that is, perfect knowledge of all things, without exception, past, present, & to come: all works, words, thoughts, and whatsoever can be, though it never was nor shall be, in general, and in particular.

2 thou hast known my sitting down, and my rising up. 3 Thou hast understood my cogitations far off: my path, and (c) my cord thou hast searched out.

(c) The uttermost measure and reach of mine intention.

4 And thou hast foreseen all my ways: because there is not a word in my (d) tongue.

(d) The word holden in by the tongue, and not uttered by mouth, is not hidden from God.

5 Behold, o Lord, thou hast known all the last things, & them of old: thou hast formed me, and hast put thy hand upon me. 6 Thy knowledge is (e) become marvelous of me: it is made great, and I cannot reach to it.

(e) By experience we see that God's knowledge exceedeth our reach.

7 (f) Whither shall I go from thy spirit? And whither shall I fly from thy face?

(f) As God's knowledge comprehendeth all things, so his presence extendeth itself to all places, neither is contained in place, but exceedeth all place, in his divine immensity.

8 If I shall ascend into heaven, thou art there: if I descend into hell, thou art present. 9 If I shall take my wings early, and dwell in the extreme parts of the sea. 10 Certes thither also shall thy hand conduct me: and thy right hand shall hold me. 11 (g) And I said: Perhaps darkness shall tread over me: and the night is mine illumination in my delights.

(g) The Prophet also in the person of any curious imaginative man, examineth and findeth that no darkness nor cover can hide any thing from God.

12 For darkness shall not be darkened from thee, and the night shall be lightened as the day: as the darkness thereof, so also the light thereof. 13 Because thou hast possessed (h) my reins: thou hast received me from (i) my mother's womb.

(h) Nothing seemeth more hidden, than a man's entrails, (i) or a child in the mother's womb.

14 I will confess to thee, because thou art terribly magnified: thy works are marvelous, & my soul knoweth exceedingly. 15 My (k) bone is not hid from thee, which thou madest in secret: and my substance in the lower parts of the earth.

(k) Or bones in the flesh.

16 (l) Mine [1] imperfection thine eyes have seen, & in thy book [2] all shall be written: (m) days shall be formed, & no man in them.

(l) Or man's bodily imperfection before his birth, [1] Colem, Embryonem. [2] Of knowledge. (m) daily formed by God, not by man. Job. 10. v. 8. 2. Mac. 7. v. 22. 23.

17 (n) But to me thy [1] friends, o God, are become honourable exceedingly: their principality is exceedingly strengthened.

(n) Above all considerations it most exceedeth, that God so high and infinite, honoureth his humble poor servants so exceedingly, that it seemeth to themselves far more than can be due. For he rewardeth even over & above merits; which merits also are founded in God's mercy given without merit. [1] New translaters pervert this place, translating (thoughts) for (friends) contrary to the Hebrew, Greek, and Latin, and all ancient Fathers, only pretending that the same word in the Chaldee tongue also signifieth thoughts.

18 (o) I will number them, and they shall be multiplied above the sand: (p) I rose up and I am yet with thee.

(o) The number also of Saints whom God hath chosen, called, justified and will glorify, exceed man's conceit. Apoc. 7. (p) Incensed with this excellent glory, and desiring to be of this innumerable multitude, by thy grace I have risen from sin, and in confidence of thy perpetual help, I stand and hope to persevere in thy service.

19 (q) If thou shalt kill sinners, o God: (r) ye men of blood depart from me.

(q) And if it be so, yea seeing it is so, that as thou, o God, doest exalt thy Saints to exceeding and unspeakable honour: so thou hast also decreed to punish obstinate sinners with eternal death and damnation: (r) I renounce all wicked association, get ye away from me all cruel bloody men, that would draw me into everlasting torments.

20 (s) Because you say in thought: they (t) shall receive thy cities in vain.

(s) Away from me, you that think, (t) the glorious mansions in heaven, prepared and promised to the just, are vain hopes, and in vain expected.

21 (v) Did not I hate them that hate thee, o Lord: and (w) pined away because of thine enemies?

(v) This hate of such sinners the just shall confidently plead, and happy are they that shall be able truly to allege for themselves in the day of judgement, that they hated all, whom God hateth, (w) yea hated them with fervent zeal, that are God's enemies.

22 (x) with perfect hatred did I hate them: they are become (y) enemies to me.

(x) Still the Prophet inculcateth this necessary perfect hatred (y) and enmity towards God's enemies.

23 (z) Prove me, o God, and know my heart: examine me, and know my paths.

(z) For that none in this life (without special and extraordinary revelation) knoweth certainly their own state, whether they be worthy of God's love or hatred (Eccle. 9.) the just submit themselves to God's examination of their heart and actions:

24 And (a) see, if the way of iniquity be in me: (b) and conduct me in the everlasting way.

(a) Humbly praying God, that if they be in the way of iniquity, (b) he will vouchsafe to reduce and guide them into the right way of everlasting life.

CHAPTER CXXXIX.

The just diversly afflicted by the wicked, pray to be defended, 7. repose their confidence in God. 10. Who will adjudge the reprobate to eternal punishment, 13. and reward the good with the fruition of himself. [1]

[1] Eternal pain of the wicked, and joy of the blessed. The 10. key.

Unto the end, a Psalm of David. 2 Deliver me, o Lord, from the evil man: from the unjust man rescue me. 3 Which (a) have devised iniquity in their heart: (b) all the day they did appoint battles. They have whet their tongues as that of a serpent:

(a) Unquiet evil disposed, men still devise wicked plots (b) and never cease to make discord and debates.

4 the venom of asps is under their lips. 5 Keep me, o Lord, from the hand of the sinner: and from unjust men deliver me. 6 Who have devised to supplant my steps: the proud have hid a snare for me: And they have stretched out ropes for a snare: they have laid [1] a stumbling block for me near the way.

[1] Scandalum.

7 (c) I said to our Lord: Thou art my God: hear, o Lord, the voice of my petition.

(c) In time of tentation prayer is most necessary.

8 O Lord, Lord (d) the strength of my salvation: (e) thou hast overshadowed my head in the day of battle.

(d) Man is not able to resist tentations, (e) unless God by his grace, as by a helmet, defend him from yielding consent.

9 Yield me not, o Lord, from (f) my desire to the sinner: they have devised against me, forsake me not, (g) lest they perhaps be proud.

(f) Suffer me not to fall from that which I now desire (which is to be constant in virtue) not to consent to sinners' persuasions. (g) Who then would triumph over me.

10 (h) The head of their compass: (i) the labour of their lips (k) shall cover them.

(h) The sum of their mischievous devices, (i) consisting in their subtle persuasions with sweet words, (k) shall overwhelm, and bring themselves to perdition.

11 (l) Coals shall fall upon them, (m) thou shalt cast them down into fire: in miseries (n) they shall not stand up.

(l) Hell fire shall be their lot, (m) into which they shall fall, (n) & ever be in intolerable torments.

12 A man full of tongue shall not be directed in the earth: evils shall take the unjust man into destruction.

13 (o) I have known that our Lord will do the judgment of the needy: and the revenge of the poor.

(o) I have learned by good instructions, and by experience, that in the end thou, o God, wilt comfort the just, who are now afflicted, and punish the unjust, that live in temporal delights, as it happened to Lazarus and the glutton.

14 But as for the just, they shall confess to thy name: and the righteous shall dwell with (p) thy countenance.

(p) Eternal glory consisteth in seeing God.

CHAPTER CXL.

The Church prayeth that her children may avoid sinful words, 4. not make excuses of sins committed, not communicate with others in sin, nor to hearken to flatterers: 6. but to pray that they may amend (the Psalmist by the way prophesieth that many shall be converted.) 8. Though sometimes persecution be great, the Church faileth not.[1]

[1] The Church prayeth and prevaileth.
The 6. key.

A Psalm of David. Lord I have cried to thee, hear me: attend to my voice when I shall cry to thee. 2 [1] Let my prayer be directed as (a) incense in thy sight: the elevation of my hands as (b) evening sacrifice.

[1] In these words the Church prayeth, offering incense in her solemn Offices. (a) As the fume of incense is sweet and ascendeth upwards: so the Church prayeth that her petitions may be grateful, and ascend to God. (b) In the old testament morning sacrifice was rather more solemn, and more frequent, but the Prophet seemeth to allude unto Christ's Sacrifice, which he was to offer towards evening on the Cross; and the same also in unbloody manner, the evening before his Passion, in the Eucharist.

3 Set o Lord (c) a watch to my mouth: and (d) a door round about to my lips.

(c) A just care and consideration what to speak, before the mouth be opened. (d) Lips must not be always stopt, for it is a sin sometimes not to speak, but as a door that is to be opened and shut at due seasons, for example, opened to confess our sins, and God's truth.

4 Decline not my heart (e) into words of malice, to make excuses in sins. With men that work iniquity: and I will not communicate with the chief of them.

(e) Shut from words of malice, and from excusing sins committed.

5 The just shall rebuke me in mercy, and (f) shall reprehend me: but let not the oil of a sinner (g) fat my head. Because (h) yet also my prayer is in their (i) good pleasures:

(f) Admonition of the just is a profitable reprehension, (g) but the fawning of flatterers is pernicious. (h) The Church ceaseth not to pray for sinners, (i) though as yet they take pleasure in their sins,

6 (k) their judges are swallowed up joined to the rock. (l) They shall hear my words (m) because they have prevailed:

(k) but the very chiefest of them, which seem most potent, if they remain obstinate to their death, shall then perish, as men thrown against rocks. (l) They shall then hear and understand, that the prayers of the Church (m) are effectual, obtaining grace of constancy to her children, not to fear any persecution, nor any kind of death; obtaining also justification of their cause, when the persecuters shall see that the words and doctrine of the Church are true, and prevail in true judgement, as true, modest, peaceable, not seditious, turbulent, nor against the commonwealth.

7 (n) as the grossness of the earth is broken out upon the earth. Our (o) bones are dissipated (p) near to hell:

(n) As much earth sticking together is made fruitful by breaking it into small mould, so the children of the Church by persecution bring forth more fruit than before, S. Aug. (o) Some persecuters are so cruel as to rage against the bones, and other relics of Martyrs, (p) casting them into the vilest places they can, willing if they could to throw them into hell,

8 (q) for to thee, o Lord, Lord are mine eyes; in thee have I hoped, take not away my [1] soul.

(q) but the Church and all her members repose confidence in God. [1] * life.

9 Keep me from (r) the snare, which they have set for me: and from (s) the scandals of them that work iniquity.

(r) Therefore she prayeth that her children be not entrapped by guileful deceits, (s) nor overthrown by any stumbling block cast in their way.

10 (t) Sinners shall fall in his net: (v) I am alone until I pass.

(t) In the end all persecuters and other wicked shall be caught in their own net of perdition, (v) the Church is singularly protected even to the end.

CHAPTER CXLI.

Holy David being fled into a cave, and besieged round about by Saul's army, explicating his distress, 6. prayeth to be delivered. [1]

[1] David's prayer in extreme distress.
The 8. key.

Of (a) understanding to David, when he was in the cave, a prayer. [1]

(a) This Psalm in form of a prayer, sheweth what cogitations David had in extreme danger. [1] 1 Reg. 24.

2 With my voice I (b) have cried to our Lord: with my voice I have prayed to our Lord:

(b) Not with exterior voice, for so he should have detected himself, but with fervour of spirit.

3 I pour out my prayer in his sight, and I pronounce my tribulation before him. 4 (c) When my spirit faileth of myself, and (d) thou hast known my paths. In this way, which I walked, they hid a snare for me.

(c) When by reason of extremity I was not able to think how to help myself, (d) thou o God knowing my actions and demeanor, didst deliver me.

5 I looked toward (e) the right hand, and (f) saw: and (g) there was none that would know me. (h) Flight hath failed me: and there is none to require my soul.

(e) I looked for help, (f) and diligently looked about me, (g) but none would seem to know me, when I required their help. (h) Endeavouring to save myself by flight, I found no secure place, for being in a cave or hole of a mountain, the whole army besieged me; all seek to take away my life, none to save it.

6 (i) I have cried to thee, o Lord, I have said: Thou art (k) my hope, (l) my portion (m) in the land of the living.

(i) Thus left desolate of all man's help, and destitute of all worldly shift, I cried to thee, o Lord, (k) my only hopeful refuge, (l) neither do I desire to live for any worldly respect, but having chosen thee, o God, for my portion, and inheritance, (m) I desire to be out of this desert place, and to be in the land, where is right use of religious divine service.

7 Attend to my petition: because I am (n) humbled exceedingly. Deliver me from them that persecute me: because they are made strong over me.

(n) Afflicted.

8 Bring forth my soul out of prison, (o) to confess unto thy name: (p) the just expect me, (q) till thou reward me.

(o) David's desire of liberty, was especially to this end; that he might have convenient place, and other means to serve and praise God: (p) the good, and well disposed people of Israel, cannot now serve thee as they desire, but expect me, (q) whom thou, o Lord, wilt advance to the Kingdom, that then we may serve thee more freely and more commodiously.
All this happened in figure of Christ, of whom prophetically S. Augustin, S. Hilary, Cassianus, Cassiodorus, and others expound the whole Psalm. [1] Amongst others S. Beda briefly in these words: Whereas in the title, Understanding is premised to Prayer, thereby is signified, that David in his distresses, and in the den whither he fled, understood what our Lord should suffer of the Jews, and how he would pray to his Father. In the first part our Lord cryeth to his Father, complaining of the detestable deceits of Judas the persecutor. In the second he prayeth to be delivered from the prison of hell (Limbus, where he was free) because the faith of all the Saints depended on his Resurrection.
[1] The prophetical sense of this Psalm.

CHAPTER CXLII.

King David (or any other) in spiritual or temporal tribulation, not trusting in his own justice, layeth open his calamity, 5. considering God's benignity, 6. prayeth to be speedily delivered; 11. and confidently assureth himself thereof.[1]

[1] The seventh penitential Psalm.

The 7. key.

A Psalm of David, when Absalom his son persecuted him.[1] Lord hear my prayer: with thine ears receive my petition in (a) thy truth: hear me in (b) thy justice.

[1] 2. Reg. 17. (a) God having so promised is bound by his truth (b) and his justice, to hear penitents praying for remission of sins.

2 And (c) enter not into judgment with thy servant: (d) because no man living shall be justified in thy sight.

(c) Deal not with me in rigor of justice, (d) for no mortal man is able of himself to be justified, abstracting from God's mercy.

3 Because the enemy (e) hath persecuted my soul: he (f) hath humbled my life in the earth. (g) He hath set me in obscure places as the dead of the world:

(e) Sought my life, (f) and brought it into great danger. Spiritually, the devil as a roaring lion still seeking whom he may devour, hath tempted me vehemently. (g) I am pressed with great calamities, temporal or spiritual.

4 and my spirit is in anguish upon me, within me my heart is troubled. 5 (h) I was mindful of old days, I have meditated in all thy works: in the facts of thy hands did I meditate.

(h) In this case I consider, how God hath heretofore shewed his goodness towards me and others.

6 I have (i) stretched forth my hands to thee: my soul is (k) as earth without water unto thee.

(i) Stretching forth hands a ceremony in prayer, whereby the suppliant is made more attentive, and also endureth some pain for part of satisfaction. (k) Man's mind without God's illumination is dry and barren.

7 Hear me (l) quickly, o Lord: my spirit hath fainted. Turn not away thy face from me: (m) and I shall be like to them that descend into (n) the lake.

(l) In great tentations God's grace and help is more presently needful to prevent our weakness, lest we yield consent. (m) If God leave man without special and continual grace, he will fall (n) into sin, as into a deep lake from whence without help he cannot rise up again.

8 Make me hear thy mercy (o) in the morning: because I have hoped in thee. Make the way known to me, wherein I may walk: (p) because I have lifted up my soul to thee.

(o) In the first assault of tentation. (p) Seeing by thy grace I have begun to pray unto thee.

9 Deliver me from mine enemies, o Lord, to thee I have fled: 10 teach me to do thy will, because thou art my God. Thy (q) good spirit will conduct me into the right way:

(q) The penitent thus humbling himself and praying may assuredly trust that God doth remit his sins by the holy Sacraments, and justifieth him, protecteth him, and will bring him out of all dangers of spiritual or temporal enemies.

11 for thy name sake, o Lord, thou wilt quicken me in thine equity. Thou wilt bring forth my soul out of tribulation: 12 and in thy mercy thou wilt destroy mine enemies. And thou wilt destroy all that afflict my soul: because I am thy servant.

CHAPTER CXLIII.

The royal Prophet thanketh God for all his victories, & possession of the Kingdom. 3. Admiring God's benignity towards man, 5. prayeth to be still defended from all enemies, 9. promiseth a new song of praise, 11. describeth the vanity of worldly men, 15. concluding that true felicity is in serving God.[1]

[1] King David praiseth God for his victories.

The 8. key.

A Psalm of David, (a) against Goliath. Blessed be our Lord my God, who (b) teacheth my hands to battle, and my fingers to war.

(a) Because this was David's first, and a very notable victory, the Septuagint Interpreters make mention of Goliath in this title. (b) God made David a warrior, and victorer against Goliath, without any former training in arms.

2 My mercy, and my refuge: my defender, and my deliverer. My protector; and I have hoped in him, who (c) subdueth my people under me.

(c) Made him afterwards King of a great people.

3 Lord (d) what is man, that thou art (e) made known to him? Or the son of man, (f) that thou esteemest him?

(d) All mankind was unworthy before Christ, (e) That God should be revealed unto them, (f) especially that he should have care of the progeny of men, after their sin.

4 (g) Man is made like to vanity: his days pass as a shadow.

(g) Indeed man in himself, in his own nature and frailty, is but a vain and transitory creature, passing from life to death, as a shadow that cannot consist of itself, neither can man without God.

5 (h) Lord incline thy heavens, and descend: touch the mountains, and they will smoke.

(h) By a poetical description he prayeth for God's help, as if God should make the heavens to bow, and so descend; or make the mountains smoke, as when Moyses received the law; or declare himself by Meteors, as followeth:

6 Lighten lightning, and thou shalt disperse them: shoot out thine arrows, and thou shalt destroy them.

7 Send forth thy hand from on high, take me out, and deliver me from many (i) waters: from the hand (k) of children (l) strangers.

(i) Tribulations or tentations. (k) Children of the Church, (l) but of evil life.

8 Whose mouth hath spoken (m) vanity: and their right hand is the right hand of iniquity.

(m) They speak in vanity that promise to keep God's law, and perform it not.

9 O God I will sing to thee a new song: in (n) the psalter of ten strings, I will sing to thee.

(n) In that principal instrument, apt for a new song, and for extraordinary benefits.

10 Who givest salvation to kings: who hast redeemed David thy servant from the malignant sword:

11 deliver me. And rescue me out of the hand of (o) children strangers, whose mouth hath spoken vanity: and their right hand, is the right hand of iniquity.

(o) Both Jews & Christians that live not well, are as strangers that frame to themselves such as false felicity, as is here described: making riches or worldly pleasures their God.

12 Whose sons, are as new plants in their youth. Their daughters comely trimmed: decked about after the similitude of a temple. 13 Their store-houses full, flowing out of this into that. Their ewes full of young, abounding in their going forth: 14 their oxen are fat. There is no ruin of wall, nor [1] passage, nor cry in their streets.

[1] * transmigration.

15 They have said, that it is a happy people, which hath these things: (p) blessed is the people, whose (q) God is our Lord.

(p) True happiness consisteth not in worldly things. (q) But in preferring God before all.

CHAPTER CXLIV.

God is, and for ever ought to be praised, 3. for his immensive, infinite, glorious Majesty, marvelous works, merciful benefits; for his power, wisdom, justice, 19. who will reward the good, and destroy the wicked. [1]

[1] God's Majesty excelleth all things.
The 1. key.

Praising, (a) to David himself. I will exalt thee my God (b) the King: and I will bless thy name (c) for ever and (d) for ever.

(a) By this title Esdras signifieth that the Holy Ghost, who indited all the Psalms to God's praise, more specially in these seven last suggested to David, & by him to all God's servants, that all their other service must ten and be directed to the praise of God: and that therein we must continue, and finally rest, as in the sabbath of the seventh day, signified (as S. Beda supposeth) by these seven last Psalms of praise, eternally praising our Lord God. For which principal end both Angels and Men, yea and all other creatures were made. (b) King is the proper epitheton of Christ, the Son of God, to whom, in his humanity, God the Father promised the Church of all nations for his kingdom. Psal. 2. in whom also the whole Blessed Trinity is praised. (c) All the time of this world they praise God, (d) & after in eternity.

2 Every day will I bless thee: and will praise thy name for ever, and for ever and ever. 3 Great is our Lord and exceeding laudable, and of his greatness there is no end. 4 Generation and generation shall praise thy works: and they shall pronounce thy power. 5 They shall speak the magnificence of the glory of thy holiness: and shall tell thy marvelous works. 6 And they shall tell the force of thy (e) terrible things: and shall declare thy greatness:

(e) Of wonderful and miraculous things, which strike terror into men's minds.

7 They shall utter the memory of the aboundance of thy sweetness: and in thy justice they shall rejoice. 8 Our Lord is pitiful and merciful: patient and very merciful. 9 Our Lord is sweet to all: and his (f) commiserations are over all his works.

(f) The effects of God's mercy in redeeming, and recalling sinners, are eminent above all other works.

10 Let all thy works, o Lord, confess to thee: and let thy (g) Saints bless thee.

(g) Therefore the sanctified have special cause to praise God.

11 They shall tell the glory of thy kingdom: and shall speak thy might. 12 That they may make thy might known to the children of men: and the glory of the magnificence of thy kingdom. 13 Thy kingdom is a kingdom (h) of all worlds: and thy dominion in all generation and generation. Our Lord is faithful in all his words, and holy in all his works.

(h) Christ's kingdom the militant Church is magnified, but much more the triumphant which is eternal.

14 Our Lord (i) lifteth up all that fall: and setteth up all that are bruised.

(i) God is ready of his part to lift up all.

15 The eyes of all hope in thee, o Lord: and thou givest their meat in time convenient. 16 Thou openest thy hand: and fillest (k) every living creature with blessing.

(k) He giveth necessary things to all living creatures, even to brute beasts.

17 Our Lord is just in all his ways: and holy in all his works. 18 Our Lord is near to all that invocate him: to all that invocate him in truth. 19 He will do the will of them that fear him, and will hear their prayer, and save them. 20 Our Lord keepeth all that love him: and he will destroy all sinners. 21 My mouth shall speak the praise of our Lord: and let all flesh bless his holy name for ever, and for ever and ever.

ANNOTATIONS.
PSALM CXLIV.

◦The seven last Psalms pertain more specially to praises. This Psalm and other six are composed in order of the Alphabet. It is probable that the Hebrew text now wanteth a verse in this Psalm. And therefore is not more certain than the Greek or Latin.

1. will exalt thee.] As this Psalm is the first of the seven, which contain more particular instruction of perpetually praising God:◦ so it is the seventh of those, which are composed in order of the Alphabet, to wit, the 24. 33. 36. 110. 111. 118. and this 144, Of which the three former want some letters: signifying (as Cassiodorus interpreteth) such in God's Church, as sing his praises, but with some imperfections: the other four have the perfect Alphabet, signifying those, that sing God's praises with perfect devotion. Which only four S. Jerom calleth Alphabetical Psalms. Epist. ad Paulam Urbicam, & Prooem. in Lament. Jerem.

14. Our Lord is faithful.] This verse is not now in the ordinary Hebrew text, and therefore either the same is defective, or else this Psalm should seem not to be composed with a perfect Alphabet in the fountain tongue. For here it wanteth the letter Nun. But seeing S. Jerome counteth this one of the four Alphabetical Psalms, omitting the other three, which consist of unperfect Alphabets, it is very probable that this verse was once in the Hebrew text, as it is both in Greek & Latin. Whereby amongst other places appeareth, that there is no certainty to correct the Greek or Latin Bible by the Hebrew, which is now extant; but rather by them, that may be supplied, which the Hebrew wanteth.

CHAPTER CXLV.

The Psalmist exciteth himself, and all others to praise God for his singular regard, & providence of all that trust in him: 3. shewing that neither Princes, nor other men are able to help, 5. but God can and doth continually relieve all sorts of necessities. [1]

[1] All are exhorted to praise God & trust in his assured providence.
The 3. key.

Alleluia, (a) of Aggaeus and Zacharie.

(a) The Septuagint added the names of these two Prophets, for the like reason as they added Jeremy, Psal. 136. because Aggaeus and Zacharias prophesying in the reduction of the people from captivity, exhorted them, as here the Psalmist doth, to trust in God's providence, and prefer his service before worldly cares.

2 My soul praise thou our Lord, I will praise our Lord in my life: I will sing to my God as long as I shall be. Put not confidence in Princes: 3 in (b) the sons of men: in whom there is no salvation.

(b) In one Son of Man (Christ) is salvation (saith S. Augustin) and in him, not because he is the son of man, but because he is the Son of God.

4 His spirit shall go forth, and he shall return into (c) his earth: in that day all their cogitations shall perish.

(c) He saith not that the spirit or soul shall turn into the earth, but the soul shall depart from the body, and so every one (in whom worldly men put their trust) shall according to the body, return into his earth.

5 Blessed is he, whose helper is the God of Jacob, his hope in our Lord his God: 6 who made heaven and earth, the sea, and all things that are in them. 7 Which keepeth truth for ever, doth judgment for them that suffer wrong: giveth food to the hungry. Our Lord looseth the fettered: 8 our Lord illuminateth the blind. Our Lord lifteth up the bruised, our Lord loveth the just. 9 Our Lord keepeth strangers, the pupil and widow he will receive: and the ways of sinners he will destroy. 10 Our Lord will reign for ever^ thy God, o Sion in generation & generation.

CHAPTER CXLVI.

God is also to be praised by his peculiar people, for particular benefits, 4. & for his omnipotent power, wisdom, goodness, in creating and governing this whole world, 11. and most special benignity towards those that trust in him. [1]

[1] God's excellency in creating and governing the world.
The 2. key.

Alleluia. Praise ye our Lord because Psalm (a) is good: to our God let there be pleasant and comely praise.

(a) It is good to sing Psalms of praise to God.

2 Our Lord building up Jerusalem: (b) will gather together the dispersions of Israel.

(b) A prophecy of the restoration of Jerusalem after the captivity.

3 Who (c) healeth the contrite of heart: and bindeth up their sores.

(c) Remitteth sins to the penitent.

4 Who (d) numbereth the multitude of stars: & (e) giveth names to them all.

(d) Besides experience of every one that shall behold the firmament in a clear night, the holy Scripture (Gen. 15. v. 5.) sheweth, that the stars are innumerable to man. For albeit Ptolomey and other Astronomers numbereth certain more notorious stars, which serve especially for some knowledge in the science of Astronomy, numbering 349. such in the Zodiach; 316. in the South part thereof; and 360. on the North part, which are in all 1025. Yet all acknowledge that no man can come near to any probable conjecture of the whole number, nor is able to attain any perfect knowledge of their natural influences, and special proprieties. And therefore the Psalmist proposeth here the admirable and unsearchable knowledge of God: who both most exactly knoweth the number, (e) and so perfectly their nature, that his divine Omniscience giveth to every star a proper name, according to their singular differences and proprieties.

5 Great is our Lord, and great is his strength: and of his wisdom there is no (f) number.

(f) Things subject to God's knowledge and wisdom are innumerable.

6 Our Lord receiving the meek: & humbling sinners even to the ground. 7 Sing ye to our Lord in confession: sing ye to our God on harp. 8 Who (g) covereth the heaven with clouds: and prepareth rain for the earth. Who bringeth forth grass in the mountains: and herb for the service of men.

(g) All these and the like benefits do shew God's incomparable greatness, wisdom, and goodness.

9 Who giveth to beasts their food: and to (h) the young ravens that call upon him.

(h) Both sacred and profane authors testify, that ravens seeing their young ones, either without feathers, or to have whitish unlike to theirs, as suspecting that they are not their own birds, but of some other kind, leave them destitute of meat; therefore God the author of nature, and conserver of all kinds of creatures, by his special providence, feedeth them: either by a certain dew hanging near them in the air, as Isidorus supposeth; or by little beasts, or flies, sent by God's providence, which they catching into their mouths, are nourished and brought up as S. Chrysostom teacheth, ser. in Heliam; or by what other means soever, all agree that young ravens are neglected by their parents, and are fed marvelously by God's ordinance; by which example the Psalmist sheweth, that much more God hath care of men: especially of such men (saith S. Chrysostom.) as honour him with hymns and praises, [1] whom also he hath called to be his peculiar people, and his own portion or inheritance.

[1] Ho. in hunc Psalm.

10 He shall not have pleasure in the strength of an horse: nor in the legs of a man shall he be well pleased. 11 Our Lord is well pleased toward them that fear him: and in them that hope upon his mercy.

CHAPTER CXLVII.

Again God is to be praised for his goodness towards his peculiar people, 4. yea towards all the world: but most aboundantly towards his Church. [1]

[1] God's providence especially towards the Church. The 6. key.

Alleluia. O (a) Jerusalem praise our Lord: praise thy God, o Sion. [1]

(a) Jerusalem in the latter part of David's time, all the time of Salomon, and part of other Kings' reigns till the captivity, had peace & prospered. Again after the captivity, the City was repaired, the Temple re-edified, and the whole land received and enjoyed many blessings. But all this was no more than a figure of the excellent benefits here prophesied, and more evidently verified in Christ's Catholic Church: partly here militant in the whole world, & especially in the glorious Jerusalem, and Sion, the perfect vision of peace, and contemplation of God in eternal life.

[1] The Hebrews join this Psalm with the precedent.

2 Because he (b) hath strengthened the locks of thy gates: he (c) hath blessed thy children in thee.

(b) In comparison of other cities and peoples of the world, the gates of Jerusalem were strongly fenced, (c) and the citizens blessed: much more the Church of Christ is built upon a sure rock, her faithful children endued with all spiritual graces; and most of all, heaven it-self is free from all danger of calamity, and the Saints are most secure & most happy, enjoying eternal fruition of God.

3 Who (d) hath set thy borders peace: and filleth thee with (e) the fat of corn.

(d) Hath given peace in thy borders, (e) and the very best corn, and all other fruits: wine, oil, milk, honey, and the rest. Allegorically in the Church, reconciliation with God, by remission of sins, & peace of conscience, in the Sacraments of Baptism & Penance; with the most spiritual food of Christ's Body & Blood in the Eucharist, and graces of other Sacraments. In heaven most assured peace and joy without end.

4 Who sendeth forth (f) his speech to the earth: his word (g) runneth swiftly.

(f) This pertaineth most specially to Evangelical doctrine, preached (g) and quickly received in all the world. Rom. 10. v. 18.

5 Who giveth (h) snow as wool: scattereth (i) mist as ashes.

(h) Snow nourisheth the earth, making it warm by Antiperistasis, as is evident in natural Philosophy, (i) and noisome air is changed into clear weather. In the Church by penance & austere life men are purged from sins and vices, evil spirits are also driven away. If your sins shall be as scarlet, they shall be made white as snow, and if they be red as vermilion, they shall be white as wool. Isaie 1. v. 18.

6 He casteth (k) his crystal as morsels: before the face of his cold (l) who shall endure?

(k) Yea some that are hardened in sins, as ice or crystal, shall be melted, broken, or made fit to be engrafted in God's Church. So S. Peter was admonished by a vision (Act. 10. v. 13.) to kill and eat. (l) Otherwise without God's grace giving remorse and sorrow, no man can overcome his own vices.

7 He (m) shall send forth his word, and shall melt them: (n) his spirit shall blow, and (o) waters shall flow.

(m) But God's word preached, (n) and his grace touching men's hearts, (o) innumerable are converted.

8 Who declareth his word to (p) Jacob: his justices and judgments to Israel.

(p) The Church only enjoyeth these spiritual benefits.

9 He hath (q) not done in like manner to any nation: and his judgements he hath not made manifest to them. (r) Alleluia.

(q) Considering that all mankind was in the mass of sin, and that God letteth many justly perish, those to whom he giveth his grace to justification, are specially bound to praise him. (r) And therefore the Prophet concludeth this Psalm, and the rest following, with Alleluia.

CHAPTER CXLVIII.

All creatures spiritual and corporal, are invited to praise God, their Creator and Conserver, 13. as incomparably excellent. [1]

[1] Our Creator to be praised by all creatures.
The 2. key.

Alleluia. Praise ye our Lord (a) from the heavens: praise ye him in the high places.

(a) All ye heavenly spirits praise God for the excellency of your nature.

2 Praise ye him all his Angels: praise ye him (b) all his hosts:

(b) And for your innumerable multitude.

3 Praise ye him (c) sun and moon: praise him all ye stars, and light.

(c) All creatures, wanting sense or reason, shew forth the Majesty and excellency of their Creator.

4 Praise him ye heavens of heavens: and the waters that are above the heavens, 5 let them praise the name of our Lord. Because he said, and they were made: he commanded, and they were created. 6 He established them for ever, and for ever and ever: he put a precept, and it shall not pass. 7 Praise our Lord from the earth: ye dragons, and all depths. 8 Fire, hail, snow, ice, spirit of storms: which do his word: 9 Mountains, and all little hills: trees that bear fruit, and all cedars.
10 Beasts, and all cattle: serpents, and feathered fowls: 11 (d) Kings of the earth, & all peoples: Princes, and all judges of the earth.

(d) Again God is to be praised for the diversity of states in men, whereby the whole community is conserved & governed.

12 Young men and virgins: old with young let them praise the name of our Lord: 13 because the name of him (e) alone is exalted.

(e) God only, & no false imagined god made & disposed all things in order.

14 The confession of him above heaven and earth: and he hath exalted (f) the horn of his people. An hymn to all his (g) saints: to the children of Israel a people (h) approaching unto him. (i) Alleluia.

(f) More especially for that God hath so fortified his Church. (g) Sanctified children, (h) that by grace and free will, which he giveth them, approach unto him. (i) All this considered the Psalmist concluding with Alleluia, inviteth all to praise Our Lord.

CHAPTER CXLIX.

The Church is most singularly bound to praise God, 4. for the grace, sanctity, victory, glory, 7. and judicial power, which he giveth to his Saints. [1]

[1] The Church must ever praise God.

The 6. key.

Alleluia. Sing ye to our Lord a new song: let his praise be in the (a) Church of saints.

(a) God our Lord whom all creatures are bound to praise, only accepteth those men's praises, that live in his holy Church.

2 Let Israel be joyful in him, that made him: and let the children of Sion rejoice in their King. 3 Let them praise his name in choir: on timbrel and psalter let them sing to him. 4 Because our Lord is well pleased in his people: and he will exalt the meek unto salvation. 5 The saints shall rejoice in glory: they shall be joyful in (b) their beds.

(b) Eternal rest.

6 The (c) exaltations of God in their throat: and (d) two edged swords in their hands.

(c) Highest praises of God shall be continually uttered by Saints in glory: for still as praises pass by their tongues and mouths, more like praises shall succeed from their throat, and heart affection, so out of the aboundance of the heart their mouth shall still speak God's praise. (d) Glorified Saints shall also have judiciary power. First, all in general shall like and approve God's justice in punishing the wicked. Secondly, the wicked shall be justly condemned in comparison of the blessed, who passed through and overcame the like, yea and greater tribulations and tentations than those by which the damned were overcome. Thirdly, certain more excellent Saints, namely the Apostles and all those that forsaking propriety of temporal goods, give that they have to the poor, as some religious Orders do; or into a Community as the Apostles, and many primitive Christians did (Mat. 4. v. 20. cap. 19. v. 27. Act. 4. v. 34. 1. Cor. 6. v. 3.) shall sit in judgement seats, assessory judges with Christ, [1] and judge those that render account, of well or evil spending the temporal lands or goods, which they possessed in this world. So teach S. Augustin, S. Jerom, S. Beda, and others.

[1] In Psal. 121. v. 5. li. 3. in Mat. 19. ho. in Nat. S. Bened.

7 To do revenge in the nations: chastisements among the peoples. 8 To bind their kings in fetters: and their nobles in iron manacles. 9 That they may do in them the judgement that is (e) written: (f) this glory is to all his saints. Alleluia.

(e) Decreed by God. (f) This judicial power is part of Saint's glory.

CHAPTER CL.

God absolutely most excellent is to be praised, 3. with all sorts of instruments, and by all other means. [1]

[1] God most excellent and most laudable.

The first key.

Alleluia. Praise ye our Lord (a) in his holies: praise ye him in (b) the firmament of his strength.

(a) All ye Angels and men that are in the holy and highest heaven praise our Lord. (b) All ye creatures that are in and under the first moveable firmament, praise our Lord.

2 Praise ye him in (c) his powers: praise ye him (d) according to the multitude of his greatness.

(c) And you especially (God's peculiar people) amongst whom and for whom divine miracles have been wrought, praise our Lord, (d) with all your possible endeavour, for though his infinite Excellency exceedeth the power of all creatures to praise him sufficiently, yet it resteth that you may infinitely extend your will and desire to praise our Lord, according to the multitude of his greatness.

3 (e) Praise ye him (f) in the sound of trumpet: praise ye him on psalter and harp.

(e) Out of this your great and infinite desire, let your tongues sound and sing divine praises, as well with voice, as musical instruments. (f) Whereof six most usual in the Tabernacle and Temple were these: Trumpet, Psalter, Harp, Timbrel, Organ, and Cymbal.

4 Praise ye him on timbrel and (g) choir: praise ye him on (h) strings and organ.

(g) By the way the Psalmist interposeth again two especial things, which make perfect harmony, without which no instrument is grateful to God: Unity amongst his servants, signified by the Quire of consonant voices: (h) and mortification of passions, signified by Strings, which are made of dead beast's bowels.

5 Praise ye him on well sounding cymbals: praise ye him on cymbals of jubilation: 6 let every (i) spirit praise our Lord. Alleluia.

(i) Man created of corruptible body and immortal soul, is finally admonished to praise our Lord, over and above the praises of all other corporal creatures; who also is more especially bound thereto than Angels, because God hath vouchsafed to make himself man, to redeem man that was lost by sin, and to endow him with new grace, and so bring him to everlasting glory, where with holy Angels men also for ever & ever shall praise our Lord, with heart, voice, and jubilation of spirit, singing as the Psalmist concludeth, Alleluia.

S. Augustin in the conclusion of his Enarrations or Sermons upon the Psalms, explicateth a mystery in the number of an hundred and fifty, signifying the concord of the two Testaments. ◦For in the old testament they kept the Sabbath, which is the seventh day: in the new we keep our Lord's day, after the sabbath, that is, the eighth: which seven and eight (making fifteen) multiplied by ten, signifying the Law of ten commandments, rise unto 150.

◦The number of Psalms signifieth the agreement of the old and new Testament.

Again, seven multiplied by seven make 49. whereto one (to wit the eight) being added make fifty, which multiplied by three [1], signifying the B. Trinity, make 150. Neither seemed it without cause to this great Doctor, that the first fifty end with a Psalm of Penance, craving mercy & remission of sins: the second with Mercy & Justice, which God joineth in the Redemption, Justification, and Salvation of men: the last with Divine Praises, signifying, that by condemning sins in ourselves, through God's mercy we may be justified, and so begin in this life, which is to be perfected in the next, to praise our Lord, as S. Paul admonisheth with Psalms, Hymns, and Spiritual Songs. Concluding with the two verses, appointed by S. Damasus Pope, to be added in the end of all Psalms, and is observed ever since his time by tradition in the whole Church. [2]

[1] Three fifties signify Penance. Mercy with justice, and Praises of God.

[2] Colloss. 3. Circa An. Do 380.

Glory to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost: As it was in the beginning, and now, and ever, into worlds of worlds. (in eternity without end.) Amen. ◦

◦Gloria Patri added by tradition.

THE THIRD PART OF THE OLD TESTAMENT CONTAINING SAPIENTIAL BOOKS.

The argument of Sapiential Books.

[1] The coherence of this part with the rest.

[2] Preface before Iosue.

[3] The contents of Sapiential books.

Hitherto the Law and History of God's peculiar people are set forth in the former parts of the holy Bible: after which followed the Book of psalms, which in manner of style, being all in verse, is a distinct part, but in substance of matter, is an Epitome or brief Sum of all holy Scripture: most conveniently therefore placed in the midst of the rest, as the Sun amongst other Planets, a shining great light in a large house. [1] Now ensueth the third part, containing Divine Instructions, or Rules of good life. A doctrine most agreeable to God's high wisdom, and most fitly commended to Man, his reasonable creature in earth. But besides the principal subject, as before is noted (that each part participated with others in their proper contents) [2] [3] so here be many precepts of the Law renewed, sundry examples of men, and things past repeated, and diverse prophecies uttered of things to come: though in this part more specially is shewed the ground, and as it were, the very life or soul of the Law. Which is Reason, the true Rule or Directory wherein all good laws are grounded.

◦Why they are so called.

For it both sheweth what ought to be done, or avoided, & directeth man's judgment to embrace that is good, and to fly from all evil: not only illuminating the understanding to see that is right and just, but also disposing the internal affection to desire, love, choose, and prefer the right path of God's law, before whatsoever otherwise seemeth pleasant or profitable: & so, not withstanding all dangers, difficulties, distresses, worldly calamities, and death itself, effectually persuading to persevere to the end in holy conversation. All which by a general name is called Wisdom:◦ comprising in one word, all good desires, holy virtues, supernal gifts, godly endeavours, and the whole means whereby God is rightly known, & duly served, whereof these five Books, teaching this most excellent and most necessary manner of life, are called Sapiential. Nevertheless four of them have also other particular names, as appeareth in their titles. Only the fourth is called the Book of Wisdom, by appropriation of the general name.

[1] They are all Canonical Scripture.

[2] Proem. Annot. Prefac. Tobiae.

[3] Salomon is author of the three first.

[4] S. Iero. in proe. S. Aug. li. 17. c. 20. civi.

[5] Other books of Salomon not extant.

[6] A brief sum of these three.

[7] Prologo galeato.

[8] (a) Proverbs.

[9] (b) Ecclesiastes.

[1] All five are Canonical and assured holy Scripture: [2] as is shewed before, and may be further proved of the two later, which Protestants deny. [3] It is also evident that King Salomon was Author of the three former: as S. Jerom, S. Augustin, [4] and other Fathers prove by the holy text itself. It is likewise certain that he either writ, or at least by divine inspiration uttered, much more than is now extant. [5] For the holy Scripture (3. Reg. 4.) testifieth that he spake three thousand Parables: and his Songs were a thousand and five. He disputed of the trees from the cedar that is in Libanus, unto the hyssop which cometh out of the wall: and he discoursed of beasts, and fowls, and creeping worms, and fishes. Josephus (li. 8. c. 2. Antiq.) following some other Edition, saith his songs were five thousand, and parables (as the ordinary text hath) three thousand. For he deduced a parable (saith Josephus) throughout every kind of trees, from the hyssop to the cedar. In the same manner he treated of beasts, and other living creatures of the earth, water, and air. For he was not ignorant of any natural thing, neither omitted to treat thereof, but clearly explicated all their natural properties. [6] Most briefly S. Jerom declareth both the Author and matter of these three books, saying: [7] Salomon the peaceable, and amiable of our Lord [8] correcteth manners: [9] teacheth the nature (of creatures) [10] joineth the Church and Christ; and singeth the sweet bridal song of the holy Marriage.

10 Canticles.

THE ARGUMENT OF THE PROVERBS.

[1] The first book called Proverbs, that is, common & usual pithy sentences, short in words, ample in sense; and Parables, signifying likeness or similitudes, whereby more important things are understood than expressed; instructeth and exhorteth new beginners, to learn, and practise all sorts of virtues, the only right way to true wisdom and eternal happiness. [2]It may be divided into four parts.[3] In the first nine chapters the author interposing certain general precepts, produceth wisdom herself inviting all men to seek her, for the spiritual profit, they shall thereby enjoy. From thence to the 25. chap. he giveth sundry more particular precepts, as well for embracing virtues, as shunning of vices. In the next five chapters, more like precepts of the same author, are added by the care of King Ezechias. In the thirtieth chapter, either another Author, or rather the same under another title, and in prophetical style, uttereth like divine sentences; adding in the last chapter, other excellent precepts received of his mother: whereto he adjoineth the praise of a right wise woman; prophetically the Catholic Church.

THE BOOK OF PROVERBS, WHICH THE HEBREWS CALL MISLE.

CHAPTER I.

Parables are profitable to those that love and will learn wisdom. 10. All are admonished not to follow the allurements of sinners, 20. but to embrace wisdom. 24. And ruin is threatened to the contemners.[1]

[1] The first part.
And invitation to seek wisdom: with some general precepts.

The Parables of Salomon, the son of David, king of Israel. 2 (a) To know wisdom, and discipline:

(a) By these sententious similitudes the studious may better conceive and understand true wisdom, and the virtues belonging thereto.

3 to understand the words of prudence: and to receive instruction of doctrine, justice, and judgment, and equity: 4 that (b) subtility may be given to little ones, knowledge and understanding to the youngman.

(b) profound & solid wit.

5 the (c) wise man hearing shall be wise: and he that understandeth (d) shall possess governments.

(c) Not only young men and inexperienced, but also the wise may learn more wisdom by these parables. (d) shall be fit to govern.

6 He shall understand a parable, and interpretation, the words of the wise, and their dark sayings.
7 (e) The fear of our Lord is the beginning of wisdom. Fools despise wisdom and doctrine.

(e) Fear of our Lord, that is, reverence of his divine Majesty with desire duly to serve him, and never to offend him, is the first degree in ascending to perfect wisdom: which consisteth not only in the understanding but also in action.

8 My son, (f) hear the discipline of thy father, and leave not the law of thy mother:

(f) The first precept is to learn of our elders.

9 that grace may be added to thy head, and a chain of gold to thy neck. 10 My son, (g) if sinners shall entice thee, condescend not to them.

(g) The second to resist evil suggestions.

11 If they shall say: Come with us, let us lie in wait for blood, let us hide snares against the innocent without cause: 12 let us swallow him alive as hell, and whole as one descending into the lake. 13 We shall find all precious substance, we shall fill our house with spoils. 14 Cast in thy lot with us, let there be one purse of us all. 15 My son, walk not with them, stay thy foot from their paths. 16 For their feet run to evil, and make haste to shed blood. 17 But (h) a net is cast in vain before the eyes of them that have wings.

(h) The proper remedy against such allurements is to be watchful, and to fly from them.

18 Themselves also lie in wait against their own blood, & practise deceits against their own souls. 19 So the paths of every covetous man, take violently the souls of the possessors. 20 Wisdom preacheth abroad, she giveth her voice in the streets. 21 In the head of multitudes she cryeth, in the doors of the gates of the city she uttereth her words, saying: 22 O children how long do you love infancy, and fools covet those things, which are hurtful to themselves, and the unwise hate knowledge? 23 Turn ye at my correption: behold I will utter my spirit to you, and will shew you my words. 24 Because I called, and you refused: I stretched out my hand, and there was none that regarded. 25 You have despised all my counsel, and have neglected my reprehensions. 26 I also will laugh in your destruction, and will scorn, when that shall come to you, which you feared. 27 When sudden calamity shall fall on you, and destruction as a tempest shall be at hand: when tribulation and distress shall come upon you: 28 Then shall they invocate me, and I will not hear: in the morning shall they arise, and shall not find me: 29 for that they have hated discipline, and not received the fear of our Lord, 30 nor consented to my counsel, & detracted from all my correption. 31 They shall eat therefore the fruits of their way, and shall be filled with their own counsels. 32 The aversion of little ones shall kill them, and the prosperity of fools shall destroy them. 33 But he that shall hear me, shall rest without terror, and shall enjoy aboundance, fear of evils being taken away.

ANNOTATIONS.

CHAP. I.

[1] Three kinds of wisdom.

[2] Divine Attributes are not qualities in God, but his substance.

[3] Wisdom increated is God himself.

[4] Wisdom the gift of the Holy Ghost.

[5] Human wisdom.

2. Wisdom.] As well in these Sapiential books, as in other holy Scriptures, and sacred writers, the word wisdom hath three significations. [1] Sometimes it importeth the Divine Attribute called God's wisdom; sometimes supernatural wisdom given to men by the Holy Ghost; and sometimes it signifieth mere human wisdom, gotten by the natural light of reason and man's industry. [2] The first, and likewise other Divine Attributes, God's Power, Goodness, Justice, Truth, Mercy, and the like, are not qualities, or other accidents in God, as the same terms signify in creatures. For in God there in no Accident, but all in him is his Divine Substance and Essence, whose diverse Excellencies are called by such names as man's capacity can better conceive: and so God's wisdom is God himself: [3] and is appropriated to the second Person of the blessed Trinity, as Power is appropriated to God the Father, and Goodness to the Holy Ghost. In this sense chap. 3. v. 16. is said: Our Lord by wisdom foundeth the earth, &c. The second is called (Sap. 3. v. 25.) the vapour of God's power, and a pure emanation (or influence) of the glory of Almighty God, and so is a participation of Divine increated wisdom, called also divine, according to a certain analogy, or similitude of God's own wisdom, and is the principal gift of the Holy Ghost, [4] by which God is rightly known, and duly served, including all other supernal gifts and virtues, whereof is treated in these books, and to which all men are invited, with assured promise of celestial and eternal reward. [5] The third wisdom is mere human, gotten by natural wit and study, such as Philosophers have, knowing many truths, but mixt with many errors, and much ignorance, truly called worldly wisdom, serving only for this world. But the second kind which is a sparkle of God's wisdom, maketh men, otherwise ignorant and of small capacity, rightly wise indeed, the true servants of God, and inheriters of the kingdom of heaven, as these books do most copiously teach.

24. Because I called and you refused.] [1] God vouchsafeth four benefits of grace to every man, all necessary and sufficient for his salvation: [2] 1. He calleth all by preaching, or good inspiration. [3] 2. He offereth help. [4] 3. He instructeth the ignorant what is good, that they may choose it if they will. [5] 4. And reprehendeth evil, that they may shun it. They therefore that neglect this manifold grace in this life, shall without all remedy be damned, being too late to repent in the other world. For then they shall cry and not be heard. v. 28.

[1] Four benefits of God.
[2] Vocation.
[3] Help.
[4] Instruction.
[5] Reprehension.

33. But he that shall hear me.] Contrarywise those that accept God's grace, and cooperate therewith, shall have eternal rest and joy.◦ The very same which S. Paul teacheth 2. Cor. 5. v. 10. Every one shall receive the proper things of the body, according as he hath done, either good or evil.

◦ Reward of works.

CHAPTER II.

Gaining of wisdom bringeth much good, 10. and avoideth much evil: 16. delivering from error of Idolaters and Heretics.

My son, (a) if thou wilt receive my words, and wilt hide my commandments with thee,

(a) This frequent manner of proposing the way and means to wisdom, If thou wilt receive my words, &c. sheweth most evidently the power of man's free will.

2 that thine ear may hear wisdom: incline thine heart to know prudence. 3 For if thou shalt call for wisdom, and incline thine heart to prudence: 4 If thou shalt seek her (b) as money, and as treasures shalt dig her up:

(b) Not every desire, or sleight seeking of wisdom sufficeth, but such laborious seeking is required, as a covetous man seeketh treasure which he knoweth to be hid in the ground.

5 then shalt thou understand the fear of our Lord, and shalt find the knowledge of God. 6 Because our Lord giveth wisdom: and out of his mouth prudence and knowledge. 7 He will keep the salvation of the righteous, & protect them that walk simply. 8 Keeping the paths of justice, & guarding the ways of Saints. 9 Then shalt thou understand justice, and judgment, and equity, and every good path. 10 [1] If wisdom shall enter into thy heart, and knowledge please thy soul:

[1] Sap. 3. v. 32. 10. v. 9.

11 counsel shall keep thee, and prudence shall preserve thee, 12 that thou mayst be delivered from the evil way, and from the man that speaketh perverse things: 13 who (c) leave the right way, and walk by dark ways:

(c) A description of perverse sinners especially of heretics.

14 who are glad when they have done evil, and rejoice in most wicked things: 15 whose ways are perverse, and their steps infamous. 16 That thou mayst be delivered from the strange woman, and from the foreigner, which mollifieth her words, 17 forsaketh the guide of her youth, 18 and hath forgotten the covenant of her God. For her house is bowed down to death, and her paths to hell. 19 All that go in unto her, shall not return^ neither shall they apprehend the paths of life. 20 That thou mayst walk in a good way: and mayst keep the paths of the just. 21 For they that are right, shall dwell in the earth, and the simple shall continue in it. 22 But the impious shall be destroyed from the earth: and they that do unjustly shall be taken away from it.

ANNOTATIONS.
CHAP. II.

[1] Four marks of an heretic.
1. He forsaketh the known faith.
[2] Isaie. 35. v. 8.
[3] 2. He glorieth in his own invention.
[4] 3. Teacheth pleasing things.
[5] 4. Admitteth no judge but himself.
[6] Rom. 16. v. 18.
[7] Tit. 3. v. 11.

13. Who leave the right way.] Generally this description of wicked men, agreeth to all that commit and persist in mortal sin, whether they walked right at any time before or no; but most especially sheweth the properties of heretics: [1] who forsake and leave the direct, ancient, beaten, known way of the Catholic Church, [2] and teach new obscure doctrines, not heard of, or not approved in our forefathers' time. [3] Secondly (v. 14.) they glory in their own devices, and rejoice in most wicked things, as in seducing multitude of peoples to rebel against their Catholic Princes, and other Superiors spiritual and temporal, in breaking vows; in despising good works; trusting to only faith, and that not the Catholic faith of all true Christians, but every one his particular persuasion, that himself is just, & shall be saved, which by their own doctrine, none is bound to believe of another's state, but of his own only. In so much that the chiefest point of a Protestant's imagined faith, is not a general Article, which all do or should believe, but a most particular and singular phantasy, which each one must conceive of himself, or herself. [4] Thirdly (v. 16.) Heresy, called here the strange and foreign woman, tempereth her words, to please the itching ears of her auditory, framing her doctrine to the humour of those, whom she seeketh to pervert. The same which the Apostle saith in other words, by sweet speeches and benedictions they seduce the hearts of innocents. [5] Fourthly (v. 19.) Those that do enter into error of heresy, shall not return, that is, very hardly and rarely return into the right way of life; [6] the reason whereof the same Apostle yieldeth, because an heretic is condemned by his own judgment. [7] For being in error, and admitting no judge but himself, he parteth from the Church, excludeth the means of better instruction, & through his erroneous judgement, remaineth in damnable opinion, and so in the state of damnation.

CHAPTER III.

Wisdom exhorteth to keep God's law (giving long life) to observe mercy, and truth. 5. to confide in God, 7. to fear, 9. and honour him, 11. to take his correction gladly (13. for all good things follow wisdom.) 27. to relieve the needy without delay, 30. not to contend with the wicked, nor to imitate them. 33. The evil shall fail, and the godly shall prosper.

My son, (a) forget not my law, and let thy (b) heart keep my precepts.

(a) It availeth little to hear good instructions, except we keep them in memory. (b) not in books only but in the heart:

2 For they shall add to thee length of days, and years of life, and peace. 3 Let not (c) mercy and truth leave thee, put them about thy throat and write them in the tables of thy heart:

(c) and put them in execution.

4 and thou shalt find grace; and good discipline before God and men. 5 (d) Have confidence in our Lord with all thy heart and lean not upon thine own prudence.

(d) Know also that all thy strength is in God, in whom thou mayst securely trust, not in thine own prudence.

6 In all thy ways think on him, and he will direct thy steps. 7 Be not wise in thine own conceit: fear God, and depart from evil: 8 for it shall be health to thy navel, and watering of thy bones. 9 Honour our Lord with thy substance, and give to him of the first of all thy fruits: 10 and thy barns shall be replenished with fullness, and thy presses shall run-over with wine.

11 My son, cast not away the discipline of our Lord: neither do thou faint when thou art chastised of him:
12 (e) for whom our Lord loveth he chastiseth: and as a father in the son he pleaseth himself.

(e) Chastisement and tribulation in those that endeavour to serve God, is a sign of his favour towards them; and therefore his other promises which seem to be temporal, are to be understood of the next life.

13 Blessed is the man that findeth wisdom, and floweth with prudence: 14 better is the purchasing thereof than merchandise of silver, and her fruit than chief and the purest gold: 15 she is more precious than all riches: and all things that are desired, are not able to be compared with her. 16 (f) Length of days in her right hand, & in her left hand (g) riches and glory.

(f) God rewardeth as it were with both hands, promising eternal life, (g) and competent means in this life.

17 Her ways are beautiful ways, and all her paths peaceable. 18 She is a tree of life to them that shall apprehend her: and he that shall hold her is blessed.
19 Our Lord by wisdom foundeth the earth, established the heavens by prudence. 20 By his wisdom the depths have broken forth, and the clouds wax thick with dew. 21 My son, let not these things depart from thine eyes: keep the law & counsel:
22 and there shall be life to thy soul, and (h) grace to thy jaws.

(h) Merit for the words of thy mouth.

23 Then shalt thou walk confidently in thy way, and thy foot shall not stumble: 24 if thou sleep, thou shalt not fear: thou shalt rest, and thy sleep shall be sweet.
25 Dread not at sudden terror, and the power of the impious falling upon thee. 26 For our Lord will be at thy side, and will keep thy foot that thou be not taken.
27 Do not prohibit him to do good, that is able: if thou be able, thyself also do good. 28 Say not to thy friend: go, and return; and (i) tomorrow I will give to thee: whereas thou mayst give forthwith.

(i) Alms in season is double worth to that which is deferred long.

29 Practise not evil against thy friend, when he hath affiance in thee. 30 Contend not against man without cause, whereas he hath done thee no evil. 31 Do not envy an unjust man, nor imitate his ways: 32 because every deluder is an abomination of our Lord, and his communication is with the simple. 33 There is poverty from our Lord in the house of the impious: but the habitations of the just shall be blessed. 34 He shall delude the deluders, and to the mild he will give grace.
35 The wise shall possess glory: the exaltation of fools ignominy.

CHAPTER IV.

The wiseman exhorteth others by his own example to seek wisdom. 14. to decline from the wicked, and to imitate the just, 23. to guide well the heart, mouth, and feet.

Children hear ye the father's discipline, and attend that you may know prudence. 2 I will give you a good gift, forsake not my law.
3 For (a) I also was the son of my father, tender and as the only-begotten in my mother's sight:

(a) As Salomon was instructed by his father King David, so he teacheth others the right order how to learn wisdom.

4 and he taught me, & said: Let thy heart receive my words, keep my precepts, and thou shalt live.
5 Possess wisdom, possess prudence: forget not, neither decline from the words of my mouth. 6 Leave her not, and she will keep thee: love her, and she will preserve thee. 7 (b) The beginning of wisdom, possess wisdom, and in all thy possession purchase prudence:

(b) The first part of wisdom is to desire it. For nothing hindereth from being just but that justice is not desired. S. Aug. in Psal. 118. v. 20.

8 take her quickly, and she will exalt thee: thou shalt be glorified of her, when thou shalt embrace her.
9 She will give to thy head increase of graces, and with a noble crown she will protect thee. 10 Hear my son, and receive my words, that years of life may be multiplied to thee. 11 The way of wisdom I will shew to thee, I will lead thee by the paths of equity. 12 Which when thou shalt have entered, thy steps shall not be straitened, and running thou shalt not have a stumbling block. 13 Hold discipline, leave it not: keep it, because the same is thy life. 14 Be not delighted in the paths of the impious, neither let the way of the evil please thee. 15 Fly from it, neither pass thou by it: go aside, and forsake it. 16 For they sleep not unless they have done ill: and they take no sleep unless they supplant. 17 They eat the bread of impiety, and drink the wine of iniquity. 18 But the path of the just, as shining light, proceedeth even to perfect day. 19 The way of the impious is darksome: they know not where they fall. 20 My son hear my words, and incline thine ear to my sayings. 21 Let them not depart from thine eyes, keep them in the midst of thy heart. 22 For they are life to those that find them, and health to all flesh. 23 With all guard keep thy (c) heart, because life proceedeth from it.

(c) As the heart is the principal part of the body, so the will is the chiefest power of the soul: from which good or evil proceedeth.

24 Remove from thee a froward mouth, and let detracting lips be far from thee. 25 Let thine eyes see right things, & let thine eye-lids go before thy steps. 26 Direct the path to thy feet, and all thy ways shall be established. 27 Decline not to the right hand, nor to the left: turn away thy foot from evil. For our Lord knoweth the ways that are on the right hand: but those are perverse, which are on the left hand. But he will make thy courses right, and thy ways he will bring forward in peace.

CHAPTER V.

Again wisdom dehorteth from fornication (carnal and spiritual) 6. shewing that in the end sinners shall see and feel the effect of their folly: 20. which God seeth and will punish.

My son, attend to my wisdom, and to my prudence incline thine ear, 2 that thou mayst keep (a) cogitations, and thy lips preserve discipline.

(a) To avoid all impiety it is first of all necessary, not to think, speak, nor hear unlawful things.

3 Attend not to the deceit of a (b) woman: for the lips of an harlot are as a honey comb distilling, and her throat neater than oil.

(b) By woman is generally understood concupiscence of what sin soever, as. ch. 1. v. 10. & ch. 3. v. 33. ch. 4. v. 14.

4 But her later ends are bitter as wormwood, and sharp as a two edged sword. 5 Her feet go down into death, and her steps penetrate unto hell. 6 They walk not by the path of life, her steps are wandering, and unsearchable. 7 Now therefore my son hear me, and depart not from the words of my mouth. 8 Make thy way far from her, and approach not to the doors of her house. 9 Give not thy honour (c) to strangers, and thy years to the (d) cruel.

(c) The world the flesh and the devil are strangers, (d) and cruel enemies that render for reward eternal damnation.

10 Lest perhaps strangers be filled with thy strength, and thy labours be in another man's house, 11 and thou mourn in the end, when thou shalt have spent thy flesh and thy body, and say: 12 Why have I detested discipline, and my heart consented not to reprehensions, 13 nor I heard the voice of them that taught me, and have not inclined mine ear to masters? 14 I have almost been in all evil, in the midst of the Church and of the synagogue. 15 Drink water of thine own cistern, and the streams of thy well: 16 (e) Let thy fountains be derived abroad, and in the streets divide thy waters,

(e) Good doctrine is to be imparted to men of sincere intention.

17 (f) Have them alone, neither let strangers be partakers with thee.

(f) not to contemners and obstinate infidels.

18 Let thy vein be blessed, and rejoice with the woman of thy youth: 19 a hind most dear, and a most grateful fawn: let her breasts inebriate thee at all time, in her love be thou delighted continually. 20 Why art thou seduced my son of a strange woman, and art cherished in the bosom of another? 21 Our Lord beholdeth the ways of man, and considereth all his steps. 22 His own iniquities take the impious, and he is fast bound with the ropes of his sins. 23 He shall die because he hath not had discipline, and in the multitude of his folly he shall be deceived.

CHAPTER VI.

He that is surety for another, must have care to discharge that he promiseth. 6. The slothful must learn diligence of the emmot, 12. The description of an Apostata. 16. Above other six bad things, God detesteth the sower of discord. 20. All are exhorted to keep God's law, 24. namely to flee fornication, and all occasions thereof.

My son (a) if thou shalt be surety for thy friend, and hast made fast thy hand to a stranger,

(a) The wiseman doth not absolutely dissuade from all manner of suretyship, but from rashly, or unadvisedly answering for others. And especially exhorteth to use all diligence in performing, or causing others to perform that which is promised or covenanted.

2 thou art entrapped with the words of thy mouth, & caught with thine own words. 3 Do therefore my son that which I say, and deliver thyself, because thou art fallen into the hand of thy neighbour. Run diverse ways, make haste, raise thy friend. 4 Give not sleep to thine eyes, neither let thine eye-lids slumber.
5 Deliver thyself as a little doe from the hand, and as a bird from the hand of the fowler. 6 Go to the emmot, o sluggard, and consider her ways, and learn wisdom.
7 Who whereas she hath no guide, nor master, nor captain, 8 prepareth meat for herself in the summer, and gathereth in the harvest for to eat. 9 How long wilt thou sleep, o sluggard? When wilt thou rise out of thy sleep? 10 Thou shalt sleep a little, a little shalt thou slumber, a little shalt thou join thy hands to sleep: 11 and penury shall come to thee, as a wayfaring man, and poverty as a man armed. But if thou be not sluggish, thy harvest shall come as a fountain, and penury shall fly far from thee. 12 A man that is an (b) Apostata, a man unprofitable, goeth with perverse mouth,

(b) Every one that sinneth wittingly and of malice, refusing to obey God, employeth his mouth, eyes, feet, hands, and all parts with a wicked heart and intention to pervert others: most proper to heretics, apostates from the faith.

13 winketh with the eyes, treadeth with the foot, speaketh with the finger, 14 with wicked heart he deviseth evil, and at all time he soweth brawls. 15 To him his destruction shall come forthwith, and he shall suddenly be destroyed, neither shall he have remedy any more. 16 Six things there are which our Lord hateth, and the seventh his soul detesteth: 17 Lofty eyes, a lying tongue, hands that shed innocent blood, 18 a heart that deviseth most wicked devices, feet swift to run into evil, 19 a deceitful witness that uttereth lies, and him that among brethren (c) soweth discords.

(c) The former six are all damnable, but this seventh is most detestable, because it is opposite to the chief virtue charity, it breaketh unity, & is the proper sin of the devil.

20 My son keep the precepts of thy father, and leave not the law of thy mother. 21 Bind them in thy heart continually, and put them about thy throat. 22 When thou shalt walk, let them go with thee: when thou shalt sleep, let them keep thee, and awaking talk with them. 23 Because the commandment is a lamp, and the law a light, and the way of life the increpation of discipline: 24 that they may keep thee from the evil woman, and from the fair spoken tongue of the stranger. 25 Let not thy heart covet her beauty, be not caught with her becks: 26 for the price of an harlot is scarce worth one loaf: but a woman catcheth the precious soul of man. 27 (d) Can a man hide fire in his bosom, that his garments burn not?

(d) All occasions of sin, especially probable, are to be shunned.

28 Or walk upon hot coals, that his soles be not burnt? 29 so he that goeth in unto his neighbour's wife, shall not be clean when he shall touch her. 30 It is (e) no great fault, when a man shall have stolen: for he stealeth to fill his hungry soul:

(e) Theft is also mortal sin against the seventh commandment, but not so great as adultery.

31 also being taken he shall restore sevenfold, and shall give up all the substance of his house. 32 But he that is an adulterer, for penury of heart shall destroy his own soul: 33 shame and ignominy he gathereth to himself, & his reproach shall not be blotted out. 34 Because the zeal and fury of the husband will not spare in the day of revenge, 35 neither will he yield to any man's prayers, neither will he take for redemption very many gifts.

CHAPTER VII.

He further exhorteth young men to seek wisdom, 5. especially to fly from the enticements of harlots, largely describing the same, 22. and the ruin of them that are so deluded.

My son (a) keep my words, and my precepts hide with thee. Son,

(a) Because tentations still occur in this life, and man is frail, good exhortations, and earnest admonitions must also be continually inculcated, as here the wiseman often repeateth and much urgeth the same good and necessary advices to embrace wisdom and to walk still in the way of virtue, especially to flee from vices, and dangers of sin.

2 keep my commandments, and thou shalt live: and my law as the apple of thine eye: 3 bind it on thy fingers, write it in the tables of thy heart. 4 Say to wisdom, thou art my sister: & call prudence thy friend, 5 that she may keep thee from the strange woman, and from the foreigner which maketh her words sweet. 6 For out of the window of my house I looked out through the lattice, 7 and I see little ones, I behold a foolish youngman, 8 which passeth through the streets by the corner, and goeth nigh the way of her house, 9 in the dark the day being toward evening, in the darkness of the night, and dimness. 10 And behold the woman meeteth him in harlot's attire, prepared to deceive souls: babbling and wandering, 11 impatient of rest, nor able to consist in the house on her feet,

12 now abroad, now in the streets, now lying in wait near the corners. 13 And taking the youngman she kisseth him, and with malapert countenance speaketh fair, saying: 14 I vowed victims for welfare, this day I have payed my vows. 15 Therefore I am come forth to meet thee, desirous to see, and I have found thee. 16 I have woven my bed with cords, I have adorned it with tapestry pictured out of Aegypt. 17 I have sprinkled my bed with myrrh, aloes, and cinnamon. 18 Come let us be inebriated with breasts, and let us enjoy desired embracings, till the day appear. 19 For my husband is not at home, he is gone a very long journey. 20 he carried with him a bag of money: in the day of the full moon he will return to his house. 21 She entangled him with many words, and with flattery of lips drew him. 22 Immediately he followeth her (b) as an oxe led to be a victim, & as a lamb playing the wanton, and not knowing that he is drawn as a fool to bonds,

(b) Sinners after consent given to tentations are as inconsiderate of their own state, & of their peril and ruin, as an oxe when he is led to the shambles, or a bird allured with a bait, that flieth into the snare or net.

23 till the arrow pierce his liver: as if a bird should make haste to the snare, and knoweth not that his life is in danger. 24 Now therefore my son, hear me, and attend to the words of my mouth. 25 Let not thy mind be drawn away in her ways: neither be thou deceived with her paths. 26 For she hath cast down many wounded, and all the most strong are slain by her. 27 Her house the ways of hell, penetrating to the inner parts of the death.

CHAPTER VIII.

Wisdom is preached in conspicuous and most frequented places, that none may pretend want of admonition, 7. her doctrine is true, godly, profitable, & necessary to all sorts of men. 12. Wisdom (increated which is God himself) is eternal, 32. and bringeth eternal happiness.

Doth not wisdom cry, and prudence give her voice? 2 Standing (a) in the high & lofty tops over the way, in the midst of the paths,

(a) True wisdom directing to good life & so to eternal salvation, is only found in the visible Church standing upon a mountain, not hid in corners or obscure places.

3 beside the gates of the city in the very doors she speaketh, saying: 4 O men, to you I cry, and my voice is to the children of men. 5 O little ones understand subtilty, and ye unwise^ mark. 6 Hear ye, because I will speak of great things: and my lips shall be opened to preach right things. 7 My throat shall meditate truth, and my lips shall detest the impious. 8 All my words are just, there is no wicked, nor perverse thing in them. 9 They are right to them that understand, and just to them that find knowledge. 10 Receive ye discipline, & not money: choose doctrine rather than gold. 11 For wisdom is better than all most precious riches: and whatsoever is to be desired cannot be compared to it. 12 I (b) wisdom dwell in counsel, and am present in learned cogitations.

(b) These singular praises pertain to the increated wisdom, God himself, from whom proceedeth wisdom given to men by the Holy Ghost. See Annot. ch. 1. v. 2.

13 The fear of our Lord hateth evil: arrogancy, and pride, and wicked way, and a double tongued mouth I do detest. 14 Mine is counsel & equity, prudence is mine, strength is mine. 15 By me kings do reign, and the makers of laws decree just things. 16 By me Princes rule, and the mighty decree justice. 17 I love them that love me: and they that watch toward me shall find me. 18 With me are riches, and glory, glorious riches, and justice. 19 For my fruit is better than gold and precious stone, and my blossoms than chosen silver. 20 I walk in the ways of justice, in the midst of the paths of judgment, 21 that I may enrich them that love me, and may replenish their treasures. 22 Our Lord possessed me in the beginning of his ways, before he had made any thing from the beginning. 23 From eternity I was ordained & of old before the earth was made. 24 The depths were not as yet, and I was now conceived, neither had the fountains of waters as yet gushed forth: 25 the mountains with heavy hugeness stood not as yet: before the little hills I was brought forth: 26 he had not yet made the earth, and the rivers, and the poles of the round world. 27 When he prepared the heavens, I was present: when with a certain law and circuit he compassed the depths: 28 When he established the firmament above, & poised the fountains of waters: 29 when he compassed the sea with her limits, and set a law to the waters that they should not pass their bounds: when he hanged the foundations of the earth, 30 I was with him framing all things: and was delighted every day, playing before him at all time, 31 playing in the world: & (c) my delights to be with the children of men.

(c) God much preferreth man before all other corporal creatures.

32 Now therefore children hear me: Blessed are they that keep my ways. 33 Hear ye discipline, and be wise, and reject it not. 34 Blessed is the man that heareth me, & that watcheth at my doors daily, & waiteth at the posts of my door. 35 He that shall find me shall find life, and shall draw salvation of our Lord: 36 but he that shall sin against me, shall hurt his own soul. All that hate me, love death.

CHAPTER IX.

Wisdom having built her house with seven pillars, inviteth all to a prepared banquet: 11. promising to multiply joyful days. 12. Folly inciteth to her contrary banquet of stolen water and hid bread.

Wisdom hath built herself an house, she hath cut out seven pillars. 2 She hath immolated her victims, mingled her wine, and set forth her table. 3 She hath sent her hand-maids to call to the tower, and to the walls of the city: 4 If any be a little one, let him come to me. And to the unwise she spake: 5 Come, (a) eat ye my bread, & drink the wine which I have mingled for you.

(a) S. Cyprian li. 2. ep. 3. citeth this whole passage of Christ's Sacrifice in the forms of bread and wine.

6 Leave infancy, and live, and walk by the ways of prudence. 7 He that teacheth a scorner doth injury to himself; and he that rebuketh the impious, purchaseth a blot to himself. 8 Rebuke (b) not the scorner lest he hate thee. (c) Rebuke a wise man, and he will love thee.

(b) Where is no hope of amendment prudence directeth us not to admonish, nor rebuke sinners, lest without any fruit we procure enmity, charity also requireth rather to expect better opportunity, lest the offender become worse by our admonition. (c) But when there is hope of good, every one is bound, especially superiors, to correct offenders. S. Aug. li. 1. c. 9. de civit. S. Basil. regulis fuse disput. 158.

9 Give occasion to a wise man, and wisdom shall be added to him. Teach the just, and he shall make haste to take it. 10 The beginning of wisdom, the fear of our Lord: and the knowledge of the holy, prudence. 11 For by me shall thy days be multiplied, and years of life shall be added to thee. 12 If thou be wise, to thyself thou shalt be: and if a scorner, thou alone shalt bear the evil. 13 A foolish woman and clamorous, and full of allurements, and knowing nothing at all, 14 sat in the doors of her house upon a seat in a high place of the city, 15 to call them that pass by the way, and go on their journey: 16 he that is a little one, let him turn to me. And to the fool she spake: 17 Stolen waters are sweeter, and hidden bread more pleasant. 18 And he was ignorant that giants are there, and her guests in the depths of hell.

CHAP. IX.

[1] God built his Church with spiritual Pastors & Rites of Religion in the old Testament.

[2] Prov. 8. v. 31.

[3] Psa. 74.

[4] Galat. 2.

[5] The same are more excellent in the Church of Christ.

[6] 1. Cor. 1.

1. Wisdom hath built herself a house.] According to the literal sense, wherein the mystical is grounded (both intended by the Holy Ghost) Wisdom which is God himself, Creator & Conserver of all things, whose special good pleasure and delight is to be with men, built his house the Church, [1] first in the Patriarchs, Priests, Prophets, and his other faithful servants in the old Testament; partly before, but more conspicuously in the people of Israel, [2] establishing the same with seven, that is (according to the frequent phrase of holy Scripture) with many pillars, Pastors and chief governers, by whom the whole people were directed in all spiritual causes; as the Psalmist likewise induceth God, saying: I have confirmed the pillars thereof. [3] And as [4] S. Paul afterward calleth S. Peter, S. James, and S. John, pillars. In this house wisdom also prepared a banquet, appointed victims of diverse sorts, as grateful Sacrifices to God, & thereto invited all men in much better order, and to their more profit, than the adultress woman, folly and wicked concupiscence, inciteth to her carnal and worldly pleasures, which bring to eternal ruin. And for this purpose God never ceased to send Priests and Prophets to invite the people of Israel, to this strong tower fenced with walls. In the Allegorical sense, the same divine increated Wisdom, the second Person in the B. Trinity, the Divine WORD co-eternal to the Father, built himself a house, his human body in the Virgin's womb, and thereunto, as to the head, adjoined the members, his mystical body the Church, [5] immolated victims of Martyrs, prepared the Table in bread and wine, where also appeareth his Priesthood; according to the Order of Melchisedec, and called thereto such as before were unwise, and of small understanding: because as the Apostle saith: [6] God chose the weak of this world to confound the strong. As S. Augustine expoundeth this passage, li. 17. c. 20. de civit. & q. 51. veter. & novi. Test. to. 4.

THE PARABLES OF SALOMON.

[1] This repetition of the title signifieth, that the sentences which follow are more properly called Parables, than the former: From which they also differ in manner of utterance, by the figure Antithesis, for most part opposing, and comparing contrary virtues and vices, shewing their contrary effects; with great elegancy, especially in the original tongue; which could not be so fully expressed in Greek, nor Latin, much less in vulgar language: [2] But are the same in sense, though often obscure, by reason of the Hebrew phrase, shortness of sentences, and so without any certain connexion, that we cannot with perspicuity, comprehend the sum thereof in brief contents, after the ordinary manner before the chapters. And therefore have thought it better for the vulgar reader, to set down in the margent of the [3] twenty chapters next following, in brief terms, the virtues, or other good things (rather than the bad, not having place for both) commended in every sentence. For though the same be not always expressed in the text, yet they may be understood by their opposite vices. Whosoever desireth further explication, may find many of these divine sentences excellently expounded by S. Jerome. S. Augustine, S. Gregory and other Fathers in several places. Or read S. Beda's Commentaries upon this whole book, To. 4. Vel apud S. Jerome. To. 7. Or amongst late writers, our learned countryman D. Radulphus Bainus, Bishop Jansenius, and F. Peltanus.

[2] How these Parables following differ from the former.

[3] Why the contents of the twenty chapters following are put in the margent.

CHAPTER X.

A wise son maketh the father glad: but a foolish son is the sorrow of his mother. [1]

[1] Wisdom in general.

2 The treasures of impiety shall profit nothing: but justice shall deliver from death. [1]

[1] Justice.

3 Our Lord will not afflict with famine the soul of the just, and the deceitful practices of the impious he will overthrow. [1]

[1] Confidence in God.

4 The slothful hand hath wrought poverty: the hand of the strong getteth riches. [1] Who so trusteth to lies feedeth the winds: and the self-same man followeth the flying birds. [2]

[1] Industry. [2] Truth.

5 He that gathereth in the harvest, is a wise son: but he that snorteth in summer, is the son of confusion. [1]

[1] Diligence.

6 The blessing of our Lord is upon the head of the just: but iniquity covereth the mouth of the impious. [1]

[1] Equity.

7 The memory of the just is with praises: and the name of the impious shall rot. [1]

[1] Good fame.

8 The wise of heart shall receive precepts: a fool is beaten with lips. [1]

[1] Desire to learn.

9 He that walketh plainly, walketh confidently: but he that depraveth his ways, shall be manifest. [1]

[1] Sincerity.

10 He that winketh with the eye, shall give sorrow: and the fool in lips shall be beaten. [1]

[1] Unfeigned friendship.

11 A vein of life, the mouth of the just: and the mouth of the impious covereth iniquity. [1]

[1] Wholesome talk.

12 Hatred raiseth brawls: and charity covereth all sins. [1]

[1] Charity.

13 In the lips of the wise wisdom is found: and a rod on his back that lacketh wit. [1]

[1] Prudent speech.

14 Wise men hide knowledge: but the mouth of the fool is next to confusion. [1]

[1] Discretion in speaking.

15 The substance of a rich man, is a city of his strength: the fear of the poor their poverty. [1]

[1] Just gain.

16 The work of the just unto life: but the fruit of the impious unto sin. [1]

[1] Just intention.

17 The way of life, to him that keepeth discipline: but he that forsaketh reprehensions, erreth. [1]

[1] Love to be corrected.

18 Lying lips hide hatred: he that uttereth contumely is unwise. [1]

[1] Internal and external charity.

19 In much talk there shall not want sin: but he that moderateth his lips is most wise. [1]

[1] Moderate speech.

20 The tongue of the just, is chosen silver: but the heart of the impious is nothing worth. [1]

[1] Sincerity of heart.

21 The lips of the just teach very many: but they that are untaught, shall die in the penury of wit. [1]

[1] Love of doctrine.

22 The blessing of our Lord maketh men rich: neither shall affliction be joined to them. [1]

[1] Spiritual riches.

23 A fool worketh mischief as it were by laughter: but wisdom is prudence to a man. [1]

[1] Sorrow for sin.

24 That which the impious feareth, shall come upon him: to the just their desire shall be given. [1]

[1] Remorse of conscience.

25 As a tempest passing^ the impious shall not be: but the just as an everlasting foundation. [1]

[1] Justice in general.

26 As vinegar to the teeth, and smoke to the eyes, so a sluggard to them that sent him. [1]

[1] Diligence.

27 The fear of our Lord shall add days: and the years of the impious shall be shortened. [1]

[1] Fear of God.

28 The expectation of the just is joy: but the hope of the impious shall perish. [1]

[1] Piety.

29 The strength of the simple^ the way of our Lord: and fear is to them that work evil. [1]

[1] Observation of God's law, fulfilling all justice.

30 The just for ever shall not be moved: but the impious shall not dwell on the earth. 31 The mouth of the just shall bring forth wisdom: the tongue of the froward shall perish. [1]

[1] Speaking and Meditating good things.

32 The lips of the just consider grateful things: and the mouth of the impious perverse things.

CHAPTER XI.

A deceitful balance, is abomination before God: and an equal weight is his will. [1]

[1] Equity.

2 Where pride shall be, there shall be contumely also: but where humility, there also wisdom. [1]

[1] Humility.

3 The simplicity of the just shall direct them: and the supplanting of the perverse shall waste them. [1]

[1] Sincerity.

4 Riches shall not profit in the day of revenge: but justice shall deliver from death. [1]

[1] Spiritual riches.

5 The justice of the simple shall direct his way: and the impious shall fall in his impiety. [1]

[1] Piety.

6 The justice of the righteous shall deliver them: and the unjust shall be caught in their deceitful practices. [1]

[1] Justice.

7 The impious man being dead, there shall be no hope any more: and the expectation of the careful shall perish. [1]

[1] Care of the other life.

8 The just is delivered from distress: and the impious shall be given for him. [1]

[1] Future joy.

9 The dissembler with his mouth deceiveth his friend: but the just shall be delivered by knowledge. [1]

[1] Truth in words.

10 In the good things of the just the city shall rejoice; and in the destruction of the impious there shall be praise. [1]

[1] Common good.

11 With the benediction of the just the city shall be exalted: and by the mouth of the impious it shall be subverted. [1]

[1] Public joy.

12 He that despiseth his friend, lacketh heart: but the wise man will hold his peace. [1]

[1] True friendship.

13 He that walketh fraudulently, revealeth secrets: but he that is faithful, concealeth the thing committed of his friend. [1]

[1] Fidelity.

14 Where there is no governor, the people shall fall: but there is health where is much counsel. [1]

[1] Good government.

15 He shall be afflicted with evil, that is surety for a stranger: but he that is ware of the snares, shall be secure. [1]

[1] Prudence in suretyship.

16 A gracious woman shall find glory: and the strong shall have riches. [1]

[1] Diligence.

17 A merciful man doth good to his kindred also. Benefacit animae suae vir misericors; qui autem crudelis est, etiam propinquos abjicit. [1]

[1] Mercy.

18 The impious maketh an unstable work: but to him that soweth justice, is a faithful reward. [1]

[1] Justice.

19 Clemency prepareth life: & the pursuing of evil things death. [1]

[1] Clemency.

20 A perverse heart is abominable to our Lord: and his will is in them that walk simply. [1]

[1] Sincerity.

21 Hand in hand the evil man shall not be innocent: but the seed of the just shall be saved. [1]

[1] Just dealing.

22 A ring of gold in a swine's snout, a fair woman & a fool. [1]

[1] Internal virtue.

23 The desire of the just is all good: the expectation of the impious fury. [1]

[1] Expectation of glory.

24 Some divide their own goods, and are made richer: others take violently not their own, and are always in poverty. [1]

[1] Alms deeds.

25 The soul which blesseth, shall be made fat: and he that inebriateth himself shall also be inebriated. [1]

[1] Benevolence.

26 He that hideth corn, shall be cursed among the peoples: but blessing upon the head of them that sell. [1]

[1] Care of the poor.

27 Well riseth he early who seeketh good things: but he that is a searcher after evil things, shall be oppressed of them. [1]

[1] Good desires.

28 He that trusteth in his riches shall fall: but the just shall spring as a green leaf. [1]

[1] Trust in God's goodness.

29 He that troubleth his house, shall possess the winds: and he that is a fool shall serve the wise. [1]

[1] Frugality.

30 The fruit of the just man a tree of life: and he that gaineth souls, is wise. [1]

[1] Spiritual instruction.

31 If the just man receive in the earth, how much more the impious and sinner? [1]

[1] Strait way of salvation.

CHAPTER XII.

He that loveth discipline, loveth knowledge: but he that hateth reprehensions is unwise. [1]

[1] Love of discipline.

2 He that is good, shall draw grace from our Lord: but he that trusteth in his own cogitations, doth impiously. [1]

[1] Progress in virtue.

3 Man shall not be strengthened by impiety: and the root of the just shall not be moved. [1]

[1] Piety.

4 A diligent woman is a crown to her husband: and putrefaction in his bones, she that doth things worthy of confusion. [1]

[1] Diligent industry.

5 The cogitations of the just are judgments: & the counsels of the impious are fraudulent. [1]

[1] Desire of justice.

6 The words of the impious lie in wait for blood: the mouth of the just shall deliver them. [1]

[1] Sincerity in words.

7 Turn the impious, and they shall not be: but the house of the just shall be permanent. [1]

[1] Justice.

8 A man shall be known by his doctrine: but he that is vain and foolish, shall lie open to contempt. [1]

[1] Sound doctrine.

9 Better is the poor and sufficient to himself, than he that is glorious and wanteth bread. [1]

[1] Contentment of mind.

10 The just knoweth the lives of his beasts: but the bowels of the impious are cruel. [1]

[1] Compassion.

11 He that tilleth his land, shall be filled with breads: but he that pursueth idleness is a very fool. [1] He that is delighted in much quaffing of wine, leaveth contumely in his munitions. [2]

[1] Diligent travail. [2] Temperance.

12 The desire of the impious is the [1] muniment of the most wicked: but the root of the just shall prosper. [2]

[1] * defence. [2] Just punishment of the wicked.

13 For the sins of the lips' ruin approacheth to the evil man: but the just escapeth out of distress. [1]

[1] Guard of the tongue.

14 Of the fruit of his own mouth shall every man be replenished with good things, and according to the works of his hands it shall be repayed him. [1]

[1] Godly instructions: and good deeds.

15 The way of a fool is right in his eyes: but he that is wise heareth counsels. [1]

[1] Yielding to good counsel.

16 A fool by & by sheweth his anger: but he that dissembleth injuries is wise. [1]

[1] Toleration of injuries.

17 He that speaketh that which he knoweth, is an utterer of justice: but he that lieth, is a fraudulent witness. [1]

[1] True testimony.

18 There is that promiseth, and is pricked as it were with the sword of conscience: but the tongue of the wise is health. [1]

[1] Advised promising.

19 The lip of truth shall be stable for ever: but he that is an hasty witness, frameth a tongue of lying. [1]

[1] Considerate testimony.

20 Guile is in the heart of them that think evil things: but joy followeth them that give counsels of peace. [1]

[1] Pacification.

21 It shall not make the just sorry what soever shall fall to him: but the impious shall be replenished with evil. [1]

[1] Justice in general.

22 Lying lips are an abomination to our Lord: but they that do faithfully please him. [1]

[1] Fidelity.

23 A circumspect man concealeth knowledge: and the heart of the unwise provoketh folly. [1]

[1] Prudent silence.

24 The hand of the strong shall rule, but that which is slothful, shall serve under tributes. [1]

[1] Resistance of tentations.

25 Pensiveness in the heart of a man shall humble him, & with a good word he shall be made glad. [1]

[1] Alacrity in good works.

26 He that neglecteth damage for a friend, is just: but the way of the impious shall deceive them. [1]

[1] Friendship.

27 The fraudulent man shall not find gain: and the substance of a [1] man shall be the price of gold. [2]

[1] * a just man. [2] Honest industry.

28 In the path of justice, life: but the by-way leadeth to death. [1]

[1] Good life.

CHAPTER XIII.

A wise son is the doctrine of the father: but he that is a scorner, heareth not when he is rebuked. [1]

[1] Filial fear.

2 Of the fruit of his own mouth man shall be filled with good things: but the soul of the prevaricators is wicked. [1]

[1] Sound doctrine.

3 He that keepeth his mouth, keepeth his soul: but he that is unadvised to speak shall feel evils. [1]

[1] Discretion in speech.

4 The sluggard will and will not: but the soul of them that work, shall be made fat. [1]

[1] Constant endeavour.

5 The just shall detest a lying word: but the impious confoundeth, and shall be confounded. [1]

[1] Truth in words and deeds.

6 Justice keepeth the way of the innocent: but impiety supplanteth the sinner. [1]

[1] Justice.

7 There is one as it were with riches whereas he hath nothing: and there is as it were poor, whereas he is in much riches. [1]

[1] True acknowledgment of temporal state.

8 The redemption of a man's life, his riches: but he that is poor, beareth not reprehension. [1]

[1] Mediocrity of riches.

9 The light of the just maketh glad: but the candle of the impious shall be extinguished. [1]

[1] Sincere conscience.

10 Among the proud there are always brawls: but they that do all things with counsel, are ruled by wisdom. [1]

[1] Humility.

11 Substance hastened shall be diminished: but that which by little and little is gathered with the hand, shall be multiplied. [1]

[1] Just gain.

12 Hope that is deferred afflicteth the soul: a tree of life the desire of ckoning. [1]

[1] Speedy performance of promise.

13 Who so detracteth from any thing, he bindeth himself for the time to come: but he that feareth the precept, shall converse in peace. [1] Guileful souls err in sins: the just are merciful & have pity. [2]

[1] Good report. [2] Plain dealing.

14 The law of a wise man a fountain of life, that he may decline from the ruin of death. [1]

[1] Good instruction.

15 Good doctrine shall give grace: in the way of contemners a whirlpool. [1]

[1] True doctrine.

16 The subtle man doth all things with counsel: but he that is a fool openeth folly. [1]

[1] Prudence.

17 The messenger of the impious shall fall into evil: but a faithful legate, is health. [1]

[1] Faithful message.

18 Poverty, and ignominy, to him that forsaketh discipline: but he that yieldeth to him that rebuketh, shall be glorified. [1]

[1] Desire to learn.

19 Desire if it be accomplished, delighteth the soul: fools detest them that fly evil things. [1]

[1] Hate of sin.

20 He that walketh with the wise, shall be wise: a friend of fools shall be made like. [1]

[1] Conversation with the good.

21 Evil pursueth sinners, and to the just good things shall be repayed. [1]

[1] Justice.

22 The good man leaveth heirs, sons, and nephews: and the substance of the sinner is kept for the just. [1]

[1] Succession.

23 Much meat in the tilled grounds of the fathers: and to others they are gathered without judgment. [1]

[1] Frugality.

24 He that spareth the rod, hateth his child: but he that loveth him doth instantly nurture him. [1]

[1] Chastisement.

25 The just eateth and filleth his soul: but the belly of the impious unsatiable. [1]

[1] Contentment of state.

CHAPTER XIV.

A wise woman buildeth her house: the unwise will with her hands destroy that also which is built. [1]

[1] Frugal industry.

2 He that walketh in the right way, & feareth God, is despised of him, that goeth an infamous way. [1]

[1] Fear of God.

3 In the mouth of a fool the rod of pride: but the lips of the wise keep them. [1]

[1] Guard of the tongue.

4 Where oxen are not, the stall is empty: but where much corn is, there is the ox's strength manifest. [1]

[1] Diligent labours.

5 A faithful witness will not lie: but a deceitful witness uttereth a lie. [1]

[1] Truth in all speech.

6 A scorner seeketh wisdom and findeth it not: the doctrine of the prudent is easy. [1]

[1] Seek wisdom.

7 Go against a foolish man, and he knoweth not the lips of prudence. [1]

[1] Fellowship with the wise.

8 The wisdom of a discreet man is to understand his way: and the imprudence of fools erreth. [1]

[1] Knowledge of ourselves.

9 A fool will laugh at sin, & among the just grace shall abide. [1]

[1] Detestation of sin.

10 The heart that knoweth the bitterness of his soul, in his joy shall not the stranger be mingled. [1]

[1] Internal comfort.

11 The house of the impious shall be rased: the tabernacles of the just shall spring. [1]

[1] Contempt of this world.

12 There is a way, which seemeth to a man just: but the later ends thereof lead to death. [1]

[1] The Catholic faith.

13 Laughter shall be mingled with sorrow, and mourning occupieth the later ends of joy. [1]

[1] Spiritual joy.

14 A fool shall be replenished with his ways, and the good man shall be above him. [1]

[1] Reward of works.

15 The innocent believeth every word: the discreet man considereth his steps. [1]

[1] Believe not all reports.

16 A wise man feareth and declineth from evil: the fool leapeth over and is confident. [1]

[1] Mature consideration.

17 The impatient man shall work folly: and the subtle man is odious. [1]

[1] Patience.

18 [1] The childish man shall possess folly, and the prudent shall expect knowledge. [2]

[1] 1. Cor. 14. v. 20. [2] Desire of solid knowledge.

19 The evil shall lie down before the good, and the impious before the gates of the just. [1]

[1] Piety shall be rewarded.

20 The poor shall be odious even to his neighbour: but the friends of the rich be many. [1]

[1] Compassion of the poor.

21 He that despiseth his neighbour, sinneth: but he that hath pity on the poor, shall be blessed. [1]

[1] Alms deeds.

22 They err that work evil: mercy and truth prepare good things. [1]

[1] Mercy and verity.

23 In every work there shall be aboundance: but where many words are, there is oftentimes poverty. [1]

[1] Good deeds with few words.

24 The crown of the wise, their riches: the folly of fools, imprudence. [1]

[1] Right use of riches.

25 A faithful witness delivereth souls: and the [1] dissembler uttereth lies. [2]

[1] Versipellis a turn-skin, or turn-coat. [2] True testimony. as v. 5.

26 In the fear of our Lord is confidence of strength, and to his children there shall be hope. [1]

[1] Fear to offend

27 The fear of our Lord a fountain of life, that he may decline from the ruin of death. [1]

[1] God preventeth punishment.

28 In the multitude of people the dignity of the king: and in fewness of people the ignominy of the Prince. [1]

[1] Procure love and fidelity in subjects.

29 He that is patient, is governed with much wisdom: but he that is impatient, exalteth his folly. [1]

[1] Patience.

30 Health of heart, the life of the flesh: envy, the putrefaction of the bones. [1]

[1] Sincere intention.

31 He that doth calumniate the needy, upbraideth his maker: but he honoureth him, that hath pity on the poor. [1]

[1] Compassion.

32 The impious shall be expelled in his malice: but the just hopeth in his death. [1]

[1] Confidence in justice.

33 In the heart of the prudent resteth wisdom, & it shall instruct all the unlearned. [1]

[1] Instruction of the ignorant.

34 Justice advanceth a nation: but sin maketh peoples miserable. [1]

[1] Public justice.

35 A servant that understandeth is acceptable to the king: he that is unprofitable shall sustain his anger. [1]

[1] Industry in every man.

ANNOTATIONS.
CHAP. XIV.

◦Without true faith none can be saved.

12. A way which seemeth just.] ◦If any Jews, Turks, or Heretics lead a moral good life in this world, it seemeth both to themselves, and to other rude people, that they are in a right way of salvation, but their error in faith leadeth them to eternal damnation.

[1] Sincere intention excuseth some errors.

[2] 2. Greg. li. 5. c. 34. Moral.

30. Health of the heart.] As soundness of the heart conserveth the rest of the same body in life, [1] so a pure intention often excuseth from mortal sin, as in errors committed of probable, not of gross, nor affected ignorance. [2] But secret envy in the heart infecteth and putrefieth man's actions, and destroyeth the work that seemed good: which can no more endure strict examination in the day of judgement, than a rotten cloth can abide washing.

CHAPTER XV.

A soft answer breaketh anger: and a hard word raiseth up fury. [1]

[1] Meekness.

2 The tongue of the wise adorneth knowledge: the mouth of fools boileth forth folly. [1]

[1] Discretion.

3 In every place the eyes of our Lord behold the good and the evil. [1]

[1] God's omniscience.

4 A peaceable tongue is a tree of life: but that which is immoderate, shall break the spirit. [1]

[1] Calmness of speech.

5 A fool scorneth the discipline of his father: but he that regardeth reprehensions, shall become more prudent. [1] In abundant justice there is greater force: but the cogitations of the impious shall be rooted out.

[1] Love to be corrected.

6 The house of the just is very much strength: and in the fruits of the impious is perturbation. [1]

[1] Desire to fulfill all justice.

7 The lips of the wise shall sow knowledge: the heart of fools shall be unlike. [1]

[1] Diligence in teaching others.

8 The victims of the impious are abominable to our Lord: the vows of the just are acceptable. [1]

[1] Purity of heart.

9 The way of the impious is abomination to our Lord: he that followeth justice is beloved of him. [1]

[1] Learn of good men.

10 The doctrine is evil of them that forsake the way of life: he that hateth reprehensions shall die. 11 Hell and perdition are before our Lord: how much more the hearts of the children of men? [1]

[1] All secrets known to God.

12 The pestilent man loveth not him that rebuketh him: nor goeth to the wise. [1]

[1] Harken to good admonitions.

13 A glad heart cheereth the face: in pensiveness of mind the spirit is cast down. [1]

[1] A cheerful heart is desirous to learn.

14 The heart of the wise seeketh doctrine: and the mouth of fools is fed with unskillfulness. 15 All the days of the poor are evil: a secure mind is as it were a continual feast. [1]

[1] A quiet mind.

16 Better is a little with the fear of our Lord, than great treasures and unsatiable. [1]

[1] Contentment with sufficiency.

17 It is better to be called to herbs with charity: than to a fatted calf with hatred. 18 An angry man stirreth brawls: he that is patient appeaseth those that are raised. [1]

[1] Patience.

19 The way of the slothful is as an hedge of thorns: the way of the just is without offence.[1]

[1] Diligence.

20 A wise son maketh the father joyful: and the foolish man despiseth his mother.[1]

[1] Honour of parents.

21 Folly is joy to a fool: and the wise man directeth his steps.[1]

[1] Discretion.

22 Cogitations are dissipated where there is no counsel: but where many counsellers are, they are confirmed.[1]

[1] Desire to live well.

23 A man rejoiceth in the sentence of his mouth: and a word in due time is best.[1]

[1] Counsel in season.

24 The path of life above the learned, that he may decline from the lowest hell.[1]

[1] To him that is well trained in good works, heaven gates are open.

25 Our Lord will destroy the house of the proud: and will make sure the borders of the widow. 26 Evil cogitations are an abomination to our Lord: and pure speech most beautiful shall be confirmed of him.[1]

[1] Honest thoughts and words.

27 He that pursueth avarice disturbeth his house: but he that hateth gifts shall live.[1] By mercy and faith sins are purged: and by the fear of our Lord every one declineth from evil.[2]

[1] A liberal mind [2] Mercy and justice.

28 The mind of the just meditateth obedience: the mouth of the impious redoundeth with evils.[1]

[1] Obedience.

29 Our Lord is far from the impious: and he will hear the prayers of the just.[1]

[1] God assisteth the just.

30 The light of the eyes rejoiceth the soul: a good name fatteth the bones.[1]

[1] Words of edification.

31 The ear that heareth the reprehensions of life, shall abide in the midst of the wise.[1]

[1] Love of discipline,

32 He that rejecteth discipline, despiseth his soul: but he that yieldeth to reprehensions, is a possessor of the heart.[1]

[1] and Admonition.

33 The fear of our Lord, the discipline of wisdom: and humility goeth before glory.[1]

[1] Humility.

CHAPTER XVI.

It pertaineth to man to prepare the heart: and to our Lord to govern the tongue.[1]

[1] God's grace necessary in every good action.

2 All the ways of man are open to his eyes: our Lord is the weigher of spirits.[1]

[1] Man's judgement is not secure.

3 Reveal thy works to our Lord: and thy cogitations shall be directed.[1]

[1] Commend thine affairs to God.

4 Our Lord hath wrought all things for himself: the impious also to the evil day.[1]

[1] God's providence.

5 Every arrogant man is an abomination to our Lord: although hand shall be to hand he is not [1] innocent. [2] The beginning of a good way, is to do justice: and it is more acceptable with God, than to immolate hosts. [3]

[1] unpunished. [2] Punishment of sin. [3] Equity.

6 By mercy and truth iniquity is redeemed: and in the fear of our Lord evil is avoided.[1]

[1] Mercy.

7 When the ways of man shall please our Lord, he will convert also his enemies to peace.[1]

[1] Devotion.

8 Better is a little with justice, than much fruit with iniquity. [1]

[1] Just gain.

9 The heart of man disposeth his way: but it pertaineth to our Lord to direct his progress. [1]

[1] Necessity of God's grace.

10 [1] Divination is in the lips of the king, his mouth shall not err in judgment.

[1] God assisteth superiors in governing their subjects.

11 Weight and balance are judgments of our Lord: and his work all the stones of the bag. [1]

[1] Just balance do please God &

12 They are abominable to the king that do impiously: because the throne is established by justice. [1]

[1] good kings.

13 The will of kings are just lips: he that speaketh right things shall be beloved. [1]

[1] Righteousness.

14 The king's indignation, messengers of death: and the wise man will pacify it. [1]

[1] Fear, and reverence of authority.

15 In the cheerfulness of the king's countenance is life: and his clemency is as the later shower.

16 Possess wisdom, because it is better than gold: and get prudence, because it is more precious than silver. [1]

[1] Love of wisdom.

17 The path of the just avoideth evils: the keeper of his soul keepeth his way. [1]

[1] Justice in general.

18 Pride goeth before destruction, and before ruin the spirit shall be exalted. [1]

[1] Humility.

19 It is better to be humbled with the meek, than to divide spoils with the proud. [1]

[1] Meekness.

20 The learned in word shall find good things: and he that hopeth in our Lord, is blessed. [1]

[1] Hope in God.

21 He that is wise in heart, shall be called prudent: and he that is sweet in speech shall find greater things. [1]

[1] Mildness.

22 A fountain of life the learning of him that possesseth it: the doctrine of fools foolishness. [1]

[1] Teaching others.

23 The heart of the wise shall instruct his mouth: and shall add grace to his lips. [1]

[1] Sincere heart.

24 Well set words are a honey comb: sweetness of the soul the health of the bones. [1]

[1] Sweetness in conversation.

25 There is a way that seemeth to a man right: and the later ends thereof lead to death. [1] [2]

[1] True faith & Religion. [2] Ch. 14. v. 2.

26 The soul of him that laboureth doth labour to himself, because his mouth hath compelled him. [1]

[1] Proper industry.

27 The impious man diggeth evil, and in his lips fire burneth. [1]

[1] Charity.

28 A perverse man raiseth contentions: and one full of words separateth Princes. [1]

[1] Common good.

29 An unjust man allureth his friend: and leadeth him by a way not good. [1]

[1] True friendship.

30 He that with astonished eyes thinketh wicked things, biting his lips bringeth evil to pass. [1]

[1] Sincere thoughts.

31 A crown of dignity old age, which shall be found in the ways of justice. [1]

[1] Holy old age.

32 Better is the patient than a strong man: and he that ruleth his mind, than the overthrower of cities. [1]

[1] Patience.

33 Lots are cast into the bosom, but they are ordered of our Lord. [1]

[1] God's providence.

ANNOTATIONS.
CHAP. XVI.

1. It pertaineth to man to prepare the heart.] For the better understanding of this and other hard places of Holy Scripture, this general rule,[1] ever approved by all Christians, is most necessary, That all holy Scripture is true and certain, as being all indited by the Holy Ghost, the Spirit of truth: and so one place is never contrary to another, though at first sight they may so seem to man's understanding. For by this place the Pelagians would prove, that man can of himself, without the help of God's grace, begin a good thing, though without this help he cannot perform it, because it is here said that it pertaineth to man to prepare the heart: that is, to begin a good thing.[2] But S. Augustine sheweth that it may not be so understood: because so it should be contrary to that saying of our Saviour: Without me you can do nothing; and that of S. Paul: We are not sufficient to think any thing of ourselves, as of ourselves: but our sufficiency is of God. Which two evident places, with other like, do shew that this place hath another different sense, from that which the Pelagians gather. And so S. Augustine, and other Fathers teach, that the wiseman here affirmeth not, that man of himself can prepare his heart, or begin a good work, but that it pertaineth to man to prepare his heart, presupposing help of God's grace,[3] and having so begun, God also governeth the tongue, and by more grace directeth it to speak those things well, which the heart purposed, and disposed to be uttered; without which help none is able, neither to begin any meritorious work, nor to prosecute, nor perfect that is well begun. The like sentence followeth in the 9. verse: The heart of man disposeth his way: but it pertaineth to our Lord to direct his progress; signifying in both places, that after a thing is well begun (which cannot be without the help of God's grace) yet it cannot proceed well without more grace, still directing and strengthening man's freewill.

[1] A general rule that one place of holy Scripture is not contrary to another.

[2] li. 2. c. 8. con. duas Epistolas Palag. Ioan. 15. 2. Cor. 3.

[3] God's grace is necessary both to begin and to prosecute any good work.

CHAPTER XVII.

Better is a dry morsel with joy, than a house full of victims with brawling.[1]

[1] Peace.

2 A wise servant shall rule over foolish children, and divide inheritance among brethren.[1]

[1] Wisdom in general.

3 As silver is tried by fire, and gold in the furnace: so our Lord proveth the hearts.[1]

[1] Purification.

4 The evil man obeyeth an unjust tongue: and the deceitful obeyeth lying lips.[1]

[1] Fellowship with the good.

5 He that despiseth the poor, upbraideth his maker: and he that rejoiceth at another man's ruin, shall not be unpunished.[1]

[1] Commiseration.

6 The crown of old men the children's children: and the glory of children their fathers.[1]

[1] Succession.

7 Eloquent words become not a fool, nor lying lips a Prince.[1]

[1] Gravity in speech.

8 A most grateful pearl, the expectation of him that expecteth: whither soever he turneth himself, he understandeth wisely.[1]

[1] Desire of eternal life.

9 He that concealeth offence, seeketh friendships: he that in other word repeateth it, separateth the confederate.[1]

[1] Remitting offences.

10 Reprehension doth more profit with a wiseman, than an hundred stripes with a fool. [1]

[1] Discreet correction.

11 An evil man always seeketh brawls: but a cruel angel shall be sent against him. [1]

[1] Concord.

12 It is better to meet a bear when her young are taken away, than a fool trusting to himself in his own folly. [1]

[1] Gentleness.

13 He that rendereth evil things for good, evil shall not depart from his house. [1]

[1] Gratitude.

14 He that letteth water go, is the head of brawls: & before he suffer contumely, he forsaketh judgment. [1]

[1] Conservation of peace.

15 He that justifieth the impious, and he that condemneth the just, both are abominable before God. [1]

[1] Just censure.

16 What doth it profit a fool to have riches, whereas he cannot buy wisdom? [1] He that maketh his house high, seeketh ruin: and he that refuseth to learn, shall fall into evils. [2]

[1] Spiritual riches. [2] Humility.

17 He loveth at all time that is a friend: and a brother is proved in distresses. [1]

[1] Constancy.

18 A foolish man will clap the hands, when he is surety for his friend. [1]

[1] Carefulness in promising.

19 He that meditateth discords, loveth brawls: and he that exalteth the door, seeketh ruin. [1]

[1] Concord.

20 He that is of a perverse heart, shall not find good: and he that turneth his tongue, shall fall into evil. [1]

[1] Sincerity.

21 A fool is born to his own ignominy: but neither shall the father rejoice in a fool. [1]

[1] Education of youth.

22 A joyful mind maketh a flourishing age, a sorrowful spirit dryeth up the bones. [1]

[1] Alacrity of heart.

23 The impious receiveth gifts out of the bosom, that he may pervert the paths of judgment. [1]

[1] Just judgement.

24 In the face of the prudent wisdom shineth: the eyes of fools are in the ends of the earth. [1]

[1] Contempt of the world.

25 A foolish son is the anger of the father: and the sorrow of the mother that bare him. [1]

[1] Filial obedience.

26 It is not good to do hurt to the just: nor to strike the Prince, which judgeth right. [1]

[1] Obedience to Magistrates.

27 He that moderateth his words, is learned and prudent: and the learned man is of a precious spirit. [1]

[1] Discretion in speaking.

28 The fool also if he hold his peace, shall be reputed wise: and if he close his lips, a man of understanding. [1]

[1] Moderate silence.

CHAPTER XVIII.

He seeketh occasions that will depart from a friend: he shall ever be subject to reproach. [1]

[1] Constant amity.

2 A fool receiveth not the words of prudence: unless thou say those things which are in his heart. [1]

[1] Harken to good counsel.

3 The impious when he shall come into the depth of sins, contemneth: but ignominy and reproach follow him. [1]

[1] Speedy repentance.

4 Deep water^ words from the mouth of a [1] man: and a stream overflowing the fountain of wisdom. [2]

[1] a wiseman. [2] Wise discourse.

5 To accept the person of the impious in judgment is not good, that thou decline from the truth of judgment. [1]

[1] Equity.

6 The lips of a fool mingle him with strife: and his mouth provoketh brawls. [1]

[1] Study of peace.

7 The mouth of a fool is his destruction: and his lips are the ruin of his soul. [1]

[1] Guard of the tongue.

8 The words of the double tongued, as it were simple: and the same come even to the inner part of the belly.

[1] Fear casteth down the slothful: and the souls of the effeminate shall be hungry. [2]

[1] Avoid secret bate makers. [2] Fortitude.

9 He that is soft and dissolute in his work, is the brother of him that destroyeth his own works. [1]

[1] Constant labour.

10 A most strong tower, the name of our Lord: the just runneth to it, and shall be exalted. [1]

[1] Confidence in God.

11 The substance of the rich man a city of his strength: and as a strong wall compassing him about. [1]

[1] Spiritual riches.

12 Before he be broken, the heart of a man is exalted: and before he be glorified, it is humbled. [1]

[1] Humility.

13 He that answereth before he hear, sheweth himself to be a fool, and worthy of confusion. [1]

[1] Consideration in answering.

14 The spirit of a man upholdeth his imbecility: but a spirit that is easy to be angry who can sustain? [1]

[1] Quietness of spirit.

15 A wise heart shall possess knowledge: and the ear of the wise seeketh doctrine. [1]

[1] Desire to learn.

16 The gift of a man enlargeth his way, & maketh him room before Princes. [1]

[1] Alms deeds.

17 The just is first accuser of himself: his friend cometh, and shall search him. [1]

[1] Acknowledging of faults.

18 Lot suppresseth contradictions, and between the mighty also it determineth. [1]

[1] Use of lot to make agreement.

19 Brother that is holpen of brother, is a strong city: and judgments are as the bars of cities. [1]

[1] Fraternal concord.

20 Of the fruit of man's mouth his belly shall be filled: and the offsprings of his lips shall fill him. [1]

[1] Godly instructions.

21 Death and life in the hand of the tongue: they that love it, shall eat the fruits thereof. [1]

[1] Right use of the tongue.

22 He that hath found a good wife, hath found a good thing, and hath received a pleasure of our Lord. [1]

[1] A wife's virtue is her best dowry.

23 The poor speaketh with supplications, and the rich will speak roughly. [1]

[1] Meekness.

24 A man amiable to society, shall be more friendly than a brother. [1]

[1] Amity with affability.

CHAPTER XIX.

1 Better is a poor man, that walketh in his simplicity, than a rich writhing his lips, and unwise. [1]

[1] Honest poverty.

2 Where is no knowledge of the soul, is not good: and he that is hasty with his feet shall stumble. [1]

[1] Knowledge of ourselves.

3 The folly of a man supplanteth his steps: and he boileth in his mind against God. [1]

[1] Man's own will the cause of evil.

4 Riches add many friends: but from the poor they also which he had are separated. [1]

[1] Spiritual riches secure.

5 A false witness shall not be unpunished: & he that speaketh lies, shall not escape. [1]

[1] True testimony.

6 Many worship the person of the mighty, and are friends of him that giveth gifts. [1]

[1] Liberality.

7 The brethren of the poor man hate him: moreover also his friends have departed far from him. [1]

[1] Industrious travail.

8 He that pursueth words only, shall have nothing: but he that is possessor of the mind, loveth his soul, and the keeper of prudence shall find good things. [1]

[1] Solid doctrine.

9 A false witness shall not be unpunished: and he that speaketh lies shall perish. [1]

[1] True testimony.

10 Delicacies become not a fool: nor a servant to rule over Princes. [1]

[1] Wise & fit magistrates.

11 The doctrine of man is known by patience: and his glory is to overpass unjust things. [1]

[1] Patience in teachers.

12 As the roaring of a lion, so also the anger of a king: and as dew upon grass, so also his cheerfulness. [1]

[1] Loyalty to Kings, and princes.

13 The sorrow of the father, a foolish son: and roofs continually dropping through, a woman full of brawling. [1]

[1] Domestical peace.

14 House and riches are given of the parents: but of our Lord properly a prudent wife. [1]

[1] A good wife is God's gift.

15 Slothfulness bringeth drowsiness, and a dissolute soul shall be an hungered. [1]

[1] Diligence.

16 He that keepeth the commandment, keepeth his soul: but he that neglecteth his way, shall die. [1]

[1] Obedience.

17 He lendeth our Lord that hath mercy on the poor: and he will repay him the like. [1]

[1] Alms deeds.

18 Nurture thy son, despair not: but to the killing of him set not thy soul. [1]

[1] Moderate chastisement.

19 He that is impatient shall sustain damage: and when he shall take away violently, he shall add another thing. [1]

[1] Patience.

20 Hear counsel, and receive discipline, that thou mayst be wise in thy later ends. [1]

[1] Follow good counsel.

21 Many cogitations in the heart of a man: but the will of our Lord shall be permanent. [1]

[1] Trust in God.

22 A needy man is merciful: and better is the poor than the lying man. [1]

[1] Good will to help the poor.

23 The fear of our Lord unto life: and in fullness he shall abide, without the visitation most noisome: [1]

[1] Fear of God.

24 The slothful hideth his hand under the arm-hole, neither doth he put it to his mouth. [1]

[1] Diligent travail.

25 The pestilent man being whipped, the fool shall be wiser: but if thou rebuke a wiseman he will understand discipline. [1]

[1] Just correction.

26 He that afflicteth his father, and flyeth from his mother, is ignominious and unhappy. [1]

[1] Honour of parents.

27 Cease not, o son, to hear doctrine, neither be ignorant of the words of knowledge. [1]

[1] Desire to learn.

28 An unjust witness scorneth judgment: and the mouth of the impious devoureth iniquity. [1]

[1] True testimony.

29 Judgments are prepared for scorners: & hammers striking for the bodies of fools. [1]

[1] Fear of eternal punishment.

CHAPTER XX.

Wine is a luxurious thing, & drunkenness tumultuous: whosoever is delighted therewith shall not be wise. [1]

[1] Sobriety.

2 As the roaring of a lion, so also the terror of a king: he that provoketh him, sinneth also against his own soul. [1]

[1] Obedience to Princes.

3 It is honour to a man that separateth himself from contentions: but all fools meddle with contumelies. [1]

[1] Concord.

4 Because of cold the slothful would not plow: he shall beg therefore in the summer, and it shall not be given him. [1]

[1] Industry.

5 As deep water, so counsel in the heart of a man: but a wise man shall draw it out. [1]

[1] Profound counsel.

6 Many men are called merciful: but a faithful man who shall find? [1]

[1] Fidelity.

7 The just that walketh in his simplicity, shall leave blessed children. [1]

[1] Sincerity.

8 The king that sitteth in the throne of judgment, dissipateth all evil with his look. [1]

[1] Execution of Justice.

9 Who can say: My heart is clean, I am pure from sin? [1]

[1] Necessity of grace.

10 Weight and weight, measure and measure: both are abominable before God. [1]

[1] Equity.

11 By his conversation a child is perceived, if his works be clean and right. [1]

[1] Good towardliness.

12 The ear hearing, and the eye seeing, our Lord made both. [1]

[1] Right use of senses.

13 Love not sleep, lest poverty oppress thee: open thine eyes and be filled with breads. [1]

[1] Diligent travail.

14 It is naught, it is naught, saith every buyer: and when he is departed he will boast. [1]

[1] Prudence.

15 There is gold, and multitude of pearls: but a precious vessel the lips of knowledge. [1]

[1] Knowledge is a jewel.

16 Take his garment, that was the surety of a stranger, and for strangers take a pledge from him. [1]

[1] Security in suretyship.

17 The bread of lying is sweet to a man: and afterward his mouth shall be filled with the gravel stone. [1]

[1] Truth.

18 Cogitations are strengthened by counsels: and battles are to be handled by governments. [1]

[1] Counsel in war.

19 Meddle not with him that revealeth mysteries, and walketh fraudulently, and dilateth his lips. [1]

[1] Consult with the faithful.

20 He that curseth his father, and mother, his lamp shall be extinguished in the midst of darkness. [1]

[1] Honour of parents.

21 The inheritance whereunto haste is made in the beginning, in the later end shall lack blessing. [1]

[1] Lawful gain.

22 Say not, I will requite evil: expect our Lord, and he will deliver thee. [1]

[1] Meekness.

23 Weight and weight are abomination with our Lord: a deceitful balance is not good. [1]

[1] Equity.

24 The steps of man are directed of our Lord: but who of men can understand his own way? [1]

[1] Trust in God's providence.

25 It is ruin to a man to devour saints, and afterward to retract the vows. [1]

[1] Performance of vows.

26 A wise king dissipateth the impious, and bendeth over them a triumphant arch. [1]

[1] Public justice.

27 The lamp of our Lord, the breath of a man, which searcheth all the secrets of the belly. [1]

[1] Purity of mind.

28 Mercy & truth keep the king, and his throne is strengthened by clemency. [1]

[1] Three kingly virtues.

29 The joy of youngmen their strength: and the dignity of oldmen a gray head. [1]

[1] Prudence with fortitude.

30 The blueness of the wound shall wipe away evils: and stripes in the more secret place of the belly. [1]

[1] Punishment of sins.

CHAPTER XXI.

As divisions of waters, so the heart of the king is in the hand of our Lord: whither soever he will, he shall incline it. [1]

[1] God's providence.

2 Every way of a man seemeth to himself right: but our Lord weigheth the hearts. [1]

[1] ch. 14. v. 12. & 16. v. 2.

3 To do mercy and judgment, doth more please our Lord than victims. [1]

[1] Mercy and judgement.

4 Exaltation of the eyes is the dilation of the heart: the lamp of the impious^ sin. [1]

[1] Humility.

5 The cogitations of the strong are always in aboundance: but every sluggard is always in poverty. [1]

[1] Fortitude.

6 He that gathereth treasures with a lying tongue is vain and witless, and shall stumble at the snares of death. [1]

[1] Truth.

7 The robberies of the impious shall draw them down, because they would not do judgment. [1]

[1] Equity.

8 The perverse way of a man is strange: but he that is clean, his work is right. [1]

[1] Right in heart.

9 It is better to sit in a corner of the house top, than with a brawling woman, and in a common house. [1]

[1] Domestical peace.

10 The soul of the impious desireth evil, he will not have pity on his neighbour. [1]

[1] Commiseration.

11 The pestilent man being punished, the little one will be wiser: and if he follow the wiseman, he will take knowledge. [1]

[1] Chastisement of sin.

12 The just deviseth concerning the house of the impious, that he may draw the impious from evil. [1]

[1] Charity.

13 He that stoppeth his ear at the cry of the poor, himself also shall cry and shall not be heard. [1]

[1] Alms deeds.

14 A gift hid quencheth angers: and a gift in the bosom the greatest indignation. [1]

[1] Alms in secret.

15 It is a joy to the just to do judgment: and dread to them that work iniquity. [1]

[1] Just punishment.

16 A man, that shall err from the way of doctrine, shall abide in the assembly of giants. [1]

[1] Observation of orders.

17 He that loveth good cheer, shall be in poverty: he that loveth wine, and fat things, shall not be rich. [1]

[1] Temperance & parsimony.

18 The impious shall be given for the just: and the unjust for the righteous.[1]

[1] Piety.

19 It is better to dwell in a desert land, than with a brawling and angry woman.[1]

[1] Domestical peace.

20 Treasure to be desired, and oil in the habitation of the just: and the unwise man shall dissipate it.[1]

[1] Frugality.

21 He that followeth justice and mercy, shall find life, justice, and glory.[1]

[1] Justice and mercy.

22 The wise hath scaled the city of the strong, and hath destroyed the confidence thereof.[1]

[1] Fortitude.

23 He that keepeth his mouth, and his tongue, keepeth his soul from distresses.[1]

[1] Guard of the tongue.

24 The proud and arrogant is called unlearned, which in anger worketh pride.[1]

[1] Modesty.

25 Desires kill the slothful: for his hands would not work any thing:[1]

[1] Diligent travail.

26 all the day he longeth and desireth: but he that is just, will give, and will not cease.[1]

[1] Liberality.

27 The hosts of the impious abominable, because they are offered of wickedness.[1]

[1] Sincerity in religion.

28 A lying witness shall perish: an obedient man shall speak victory.[1]

[1] True testimony, and sound doctrine.

29 The impious man malapertly hardeneth his countenance: but he that is righteous, correcteth his way.[1]

[1] Amendment of faults.

30 There is no wisdom, there is no prudence, there is no counsel against our Lord.[1]

[1] Conformity to God's will.

31 The horse is prepared to the day of battle: but our Lord giveth salvation.[1]

[1] God's grace necessary.

CHAPTER XXII.

Better is a good name, than much riches: above silver and gold, good grace.[1]

[1] Honest fame.

2 The rich and poor have met one another: our Lord is the maker of both.[1]

[1] Contentment without state.

3 The subtle saw evil, and hid himself: the innocent passed by, and was afflicted with damage.[1]

[1] Prudence.

4 The end of modesty the fear of our Lord, riches and glory and life.[1]

[1] Poverty of spirit.

5 Armour and swords in the way of the perverse: but the keeper of his own soul departeth far from them.

[1]

[1] Care of the soul's health.

6 It is a proverb: A youngman according to his way, when he is old will not depart from it.[1]

[1] Good custom in virtues.

7 The richman ruleth over the poor: and he that borroweth is the servant of him that lendeth.[1]

[1] Diligent travail.

8 He that soweth iniquity, shall reap evils, and with the rod of his wrath, he shall be consumed.[1]

[1] Equity.

9 He that is prone to mercy shall be blessed: for of his breads he hath given to the poor.[1] He that giveth gifts shall purchase victory and honour: but he that receiveth taketh away the soul of the giver.[2]

[1] Alms deeds. [2] Better to give than to take.

10 Cast out the scorner, and brawling shall go forth with him, and cause shall cease and contumelies.[1]

[1] Expel the incorrigible.

11 He that loveth cleanness of heart, for the grace of his lips, shall have the king his friend.[1]

[1] Cleanness of heart.

12 The eyes of our Lord keep knowledge: and the words of the just are supplanted.[1]

[1] The godly prosper.

13 The slothful saith: A lion is without, in the midst of the streets I am to be slain.[1]

[1] Fortitude.

14 A deep pit the mouth of a strange woman: he with whom our Lord is angry, shall fall into it.[1]

[1] Care of chastity.

15 Folly is tied together in the heart of a child, and the rod of discipline shall drive it away.[1]

[1] Chastisement.

16 He that doth calumniate the poor to increase his riches, himself shall give to a richer, and shall be in need.[1]

[1] Compassion.

17 Incline thine ear, and hear the words of wisemen: and set thy heart to my doctrine:[1]

[1] Rules of wisdom are necessary, profitable, and upon practice found pleasant: rightly directing all our thoughts, words and deeds.

18 which shall be beautiful for thee, when thou shalt keep it in thy belly, and it shall flow in thy lips.

19 That thy confidence may be in our Lord, wherefore I have shewed also it to thee this day. 20 Behold I have described it to thee three manner of ways: in cogitations and knowledge: 21 that I might shew thee the stability, and the words of truth, out of these to answer them that sent thee. 22 Do not violence to the poor, because he is poor: neither oppress the needy in the gate:[1]

[1] Care of the poor; because they are dear to God.

23 because our Lord will judge his cause, and will pierce them, that have pierced his soul. 24 Be not friend to an angry man, nor walk with a furious man:[1]

[1] Fly from evil company which may corrupt thee.

25 lest perhaps thou learn his paths, and take scandal to thy soul. 26 Be not with them that stick down their hands, and that offer themselves sureties for debts:[1]

[1] Avoid suretyship, lest thou fall into distress.

27 for if thou have not wherewith to restore, what cause is there that he should take the covering from thy bed? 28 Transgress not the ancient bounds, which thy fathers have put.[1]

[1] Keep ancient traditions.

29 Hast thou seen a man quick in his work? He shall stand before kings, neither shall he be before the unnoble.[1]

[1] Diligent travail.

CHAPTER XXIII.

When thou shalt sit to eat with a Prince, attend diligently what things are set before thy face:[1]

[1] Modesty and discretion at the table of great persons.

2 and set a knife in thy throat, if notwithstanding thou have thy soul in thine own power.[1]

[1] Mediocrity of riches, and contentment with mean state.

3 Desire not his meats, in which is the breath of lying. 4 Labour not to be rich: but set a mean to thy prudence. 5 Lift not up thine eyes to the riches, which thou canst not have: because they shall make to themselves wings as of an eagle, and shall fly into heaven. 6 Eat not with an envious man, and desire not his meats.[1]

[1] Eat not with a niggard, lest he be secretly grieved, outwardly dissembling, and thyself repent it.

7 Because after the similitude of a soothsayer, and diviner, he esteemeth that which he knoweth not. Eat and drink, will he say to thee: and his mind is not with thee. 8 The meats which thou hadst eaten thou shalt vomit up: and shalt lose thy beautiful words. 9 Speak not in the ears of the unwise: because they will despise the doctrine of thy speech.[1]

[1] Advise not the uncapable.

10 Touch not the bounds of little ones: and into the field of pupils enter not.[1]

[1] Hurt not orphans: for they are dear to God.

11 For their near kinsman is strong: and he will judge their cause against thee. 12 Let thy heart enter into doctrine: and thine ears to words of knowledge.[1]

[1] Diligent study of wisdom.

13 Withdraw not discipline from a child: for if thou shalt strike him with the rod, he shall not die.[1]

[1] Moderate chastisement profiteth youth.

14 Thou shalt strike him with the rod: and deliver his soul from hell. 15 My son, if thy mind shall be wise, my heart shall be glad with thee:[1]

[1] Virtues of children are joyful to the parents.

16 And my reins shall rejoice, when thy lips shall speak right things. 17 Let not thy heart envy sinners: but in the fear of our Lord be thou all the day:[1]

[1] Contentment with God's will.

18 because thou shalt have hope in the later end, and thine exaltation shall not be taken away.[1]

[1] Hope of reward.

19 Hear my son, & be wise: & direct thy mind in the way.[1]

[1] Learn and practise wisdom.

20 Be not in the feasts of great drinkers, nor in their comessations, which contribute flesh together to eat: 21 because they that are given to drinking, and that pay shots, shall be consumed, and drowsiness shall be clothed with rags.[1]

[1] Sobriety and Temperance.

22 Hear thy father, that begot thee: and contemn not thy mother when she is old.[1]

[1] Honour of parents.

23 Buy truth, and sell not wisdom, and doctrine, and intelligence.[1]

[1] Wisdom most precious.

24 The father of the just rejoiceth with gladness: he that hath begotten a wiseman, shall rejoice in him.[1]

[1] See. v. 15. and 16.

25 Let thy father be glad and thy mother, and let her rejoice that bare thee. 26 My son give me thy heart: & let thine eyes keep my ways.[1]

[1] Bodily and spiritual purity.

27 For an harlot is a deep ditch: & a strange woman a narrow pit. 28 She lieth in wait in the way as a robber, and whom she shall see not circumspect, she will kill. 29 To whom is woe? To whose father woe? To whom brawls? To whom ditches? To whom wounds without cause? To whom blood-shedding eyes?[1]

[1] Detest drunkenness.

30 Is it not to them that pass their time in wine, and study to drink out their cups? 31 Behold not wine when it waxeth yellow, when the colour thereof shall shine in the glass: it goeth in pleasantly,[1]

[1] Drunkenness is deceitful,

32 but in the end, it will bite like a snake, and as a basilisk it will pour abroad poisons.[1]

[1] dangerous,

33 Thine eyes shall see strange women, and thy heart shall speak perverse things.[1]

[1] beastly,

34 And thou shalt be as one sleeping in the midst of the sea, and as the governor fast asleep, the stern being lost.[1]

[1] hurtful to others,

35 And thou shalt say: They have beaten me, but I was not grieved: they drew me, and I felt not: When shall I awake, and find wines again?[1]

[1] senseless, and unsatiable.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Emulate not evil men, neither desire thou to be with them: [1]

[1] Fly evil company, lest thou be allured to vice.

2 because their mind doth meditate robberies, and their lips speak deceits. 3 By wisdom the house shall be built, and by prudence it shall be strengthened. [1]

[1] Wisdom and virtues, not wickedness, do prosper temporally and spiritually.

4 In doctrine the cellars shall be replenished with all precious and most beautiful substance. 5 A wiseman is strong: and a learned man, strong and valiant.

6 Because war is managed by due ordering: & there shall be salvation where many counsels are. [1]

[1] Counsel in wars, and other great affairs.

7 Wisdom is high for a fool, in the gate he shall not open his mouth. 8 He that thinketh to do evils, shall be called a fool. [1]

[1] Good purposes.

9 The cogitation of a fool is sin: and a detracter the abomination of men. [1]

[1] Report well of others.

10 If thou despair being weary in the day of distress: thy strength shall be diminished. [1]

[1] Fortitude.

11 Deliver them that are led to death: and those that are drawn to death cease not to deliver. [1]

[1] Works of mercy, according to our ability.

12 If thou say, I am not of force: he that seeth into the heart, he understandeth, and nothing deceiveth the keeper of thy soul, and he shall render to man according to his works. 13 Eat honey my son, because it is good, and the honey-comb most sweet to thy throat: [1]

[1] Wisdom is sweet:

14 so also the doctrine of wisdom to thy soul: which when thou shalt find, thou shalt have hope in the later end, and thy hope shall not perish. [1]

[1] and giveth hope.

15 Lie not in wait, nor seek impiety in the house of the just, nor spoil his rest. [1]

[1] Toleration of other's imperfections:

16 For seven [1] times shall the just fall, and shall rise again: but the impious shall fall into evil. [2]

[1] Oftentimes. S. Aug. li. 11. c. 31. civit. [2] Without which none liveth.

17 When thine enemy shall fall, be not glad, and in his ruin let not thy heart rejoice: [1]

[1] Charity towards enemies.

18 Lest perhaps our Lord see, and it displease him, and he take away his wrath from him. 19 Contend not with the most wicked, nor emulate the impious: [1]

[1] Have peace with all, so much as may be.

20 because evil men have not hope of things to come, and the lamp of the impious shall be extinguished.

21 Fear our Lord, my son, and the king: & with detracters meddle not: [1]

[1] Loyalty to God & the King.

22 because their perdition shall suddenly rise; and the ruin of both who knoweth? 23 These things also to the wise: to know a person in judgement is not good. [1]

[1] Equity in judgement.

24 They that say to the impious: Thou art just; peoples shall curse them, and tribes shall detest them. [1]

[1] Condemning the guilty, & delivering the innocent, is very grateful to all.

25 They that rebuke him, shall be praised: and blessing shall come upon them. 26 He shall kiss the lips, who answereth right words. 27 Prepare thy work abroad, and diligently till thy ground: that afterward thou mayst build thy house. [1]

[1] Order in all affairs.

28 Be not witness without cause against thy neighbour: neither allure any man with thy lips. [1]

[1] Discretion in bearing witness.

29 Say not, As he hath done to me, so will I do to him: I will render to every one according to his work. [1]

[1] Revenge not.

30 I passed by the field of a slothful man, and by the vineyard of a foolish man: [1]

[1] Diligent labour, and vigilance to provide necessaries, & to avoid beggary.

31 and behold nettles had filled it wholly, and thorns had covered the face thereof, and the wall of stones was destroyed. 32 Which when I had seen, I laid it in my heart, and by the example I learned discipline. 33 A little I say, thou shalt sleep, a little thou shalt slumber, a little shalt thou join thy hands together to rest: 34 and as a post, poverty shall come to thee, & beggary as a man armed.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. XXIV.

16. Seven times shall the just fall.] [1] A just man, that is to say, God's true servant, free from mortal sin, is subject during this life to many tentations, imperfections, and many often fall into venial sins, and not lose justice, nor the true title of a just man (as here he is called) nor become the devil's servant, nor God's enemy: but through God's grace helping his weakness, he riseth again from small sins, still persevering in God's favour: whereas contrarywise the impious falleth into evil, to wit, into more and more sin, through malice, and lack of grace, & riseth not so easily. And therefore the wiseman here admonisheth, not to lie in wait, nor calumniously to seek impiety in the house (that is, in the soul) of the just. [2] For though he commit some faults, yet he riseth again, and is not impious, unjust, nor guilty of mortal crime, as the wicked man is.

[1] A just man falling into venial sins is not thereby unjust, nor God's enemy.

[2] All sins are not mortal.

CHAPTER XXV.

These [1] also are the parables of Salomon, which the men of Ezechias king of Juda wrote out.

[1] The 2. part. More Parables of Salomon written by others.

2 It is the glory of God to conceal the word, and the glory of kings to search the speech. [1]

[1] God's works are not all revealed.

3 The heaven above, and the earth beneath, and the heart of kings is unscrutable. [1]

[1] Kings have some secrets.

4 Take away the rust from silver, and there shall come forth a most pure vessel: 5 Take away impiety from the king's countenance, and his throne shall be established with justice. [1]

[1] Public justice and punishment of sin.

6 Appear not glorious before the king, and in the place of great men stand not. [1]

[1] Modesty, and

7 For it is better that it be said to thee: Come up hither, than that thou be humbled before the Prince. [1]

[1] Humility.

8 The things which thy eyes have seen, utter not quickly in a brawl: lest afterward thou canst not amend it, when thou hast dishonoured thy friend. [1]

[1] Care of other's fame.

9 Treat thy cause with thy friend, and reveal not a secret to a stranger: [1]

[1] Compose controversies secretly, rather than contend in public court.

10 lest perhaps he insult against thee when he heareth, and cease not to upbraid thee. Grace and friendship deliver [1]: which keep to thyself, lest thou become reproachful.

[1] From fear.

11 Apples of gold in silver beds, he that speaketh a word in his time. [1]

[1] Speak in due time.

12 A golden earlet, and a shining precious stone, he that rebuketh a wiseman, and an obedient ear. [1]

[1] Prudent admonition.

13 As the cold of snow in the day of harvest, so a faithful legate to him that sent him, maketh his soul to rest. [1]

[1] Diligence in public affairs.

14 Clouds, and wind, and no rain following, a glorious man, and not accomplishing his promises. [1]

[1] Performance of promised industry.

15 By patience the Prince shall be pacified, and a soft tongue shall break hardness. [1]

[1] Meekness.

16 Thou hast found honey, eat that which sufficeth thee, lest perhaps being filled thou vomit it up. [1]

[1] Temperance.

17 Withdraw thy foot from the house of thy neighbour, lest sometime having his fill he hate thee. [1]

[1] Modesty.

18 A dart, and sword, and a sharp arrow, a man that speaketh false testimony against his neighbour. [1]

[1] True testimony.

19 A rotten tooth, and weary foot, he that hopeth upon the unfaithful in the day of distress, [1]

[1] Trust not a dissembler.

20 and that loseth his cloak in the day of cold. Vinegar in [1] nitre, he that singeth songs to a naughty heart. [2] As a moth the garment, and a worm the wood: so the sadness of a man hurteth the heart. [3]

[1] * A consuming saltish hard earth. [2] Strive not with the incorrigible. [3] Alacrity.

21 If thine enemy shall hunger, give him meat: if he thirst, give him water to drink: [1]

[1] Charity towards enemies.

22 for thou shalt heap hot coals upon his head, and our Lord will reward thee. [1]

[1] Rom. 12.

23 The north-wind dissipateth rains, & a sad look the tongue that detracteth. [1]

[1] Hear not detraction.

24 It is better to sit in a corner of the house top, than with a brawling woman, and in a common house. [1]

[1] Domestical peace.

25 Cold water to a thirsty soul, and good tidings from a far country. [1]

[1] Joy of well doing.

26 A fountain troubled with the foot, and a vein corrupted, the just falling before the impious. [1]

[1] Profession of truth.

27 As he that eateth much honey, it is not good for him: so he that is a searcher of the majesty, shall be oppressed of the glory. [1]

[1] Humility in knowledge.

28 As a city being open and without compass of walls, so a man that cannot repress his spirit in speaking. [1]

[1] Government of the tongue.

CHAPTER XXVI.

As snow in the summer, and rain in the harvest: so is glory undecent for a fool. [1]

[1] Advance not the vicious.

2 As a bird flying to other places, & a sparrow going whither he lift: so a curse uttered in vain shall light upon some man. [1]

[1] Patience in false slander.

3 A whip for a horse, and a snaffle for an ass, and a rod on the back of the unwise. [1]

[1] Chastisement.

4 Answer not a fool according to his folly, lest thou be made like to him. [1]

[1] Answer a fool wisely: detecting his folly.

5 Answer a fool according to his folly, lest he seem to himself to be wise. 6 Lame of feet, and drinking iniquity, he that sendeth words by a foolish messenger. [1]

[1] Place fit men in office:

7 As a lame man hath fair legs in vain: so a parable is undecent in the mouth of fools.[1]

[1] Wise men in authority:

8 As he that casteth a stone into the heap of Mercury: so he that giveth honour to the unwise.[1]

[1] Virtuous in honour, and

9 As if a thorn should grow in the hand of the drunkard: so a parable in the mouth of fools.[1]

[1] Learned to teach.

10 Judgement determineth causes: and he that putteth a fool to silence, appeaseth angers.[1]

[1] Make fools to keep silence.

11 As a dog that returneth to his vomit, so the unwise that reiterateth his folly.[1]

[1] Return not to former sins.

12 Hast thou seen a man seem to himself wise? The fool shall have hope rather than he.[1]

[1] Humble opinion of thyself.

13 The slothful saith: A lion is in the way, and a lioness in the journeys:[1]

[1] Fortitude.

14 as a door turneth on his hinge so the slothful in his bed.[1]

[1] Profitable labours.

15 The slothful hideth his hand under the arm-hole, and is grieved if he turneth it to his mouth.[1]

[1] At least some good work.

16 The slothful seemeth wiser to himself, than seven men speaking sentences.[1]

[1] Love not idleness.

17 As he that taketh a dog by the ears, so he that passeth by impatient, and meddleth with another man's brawl.[1]

[1] Intermeddle not in brawls.

18 As he is hurtful that shooteth arrows and spears unto death: 19 so a man that hurteth his friend fraudulently: and when he is taken withal saith: I did it in jest.[1]

[1] Unfeigned friendship, especially in familiar acquaintance.

20 When wood faileth, the fire shall be extinguished: and the whisperer taken away, brawls cease.[1]

[1] Punish bate-makers.

21 As coals to burning coals, and wood to fire, so an angry man raiseth brawls.[1]

[1] Pacify the wrathful.

22 The words of the whisperer as it were simple, and the same come to the inmost parts of the belly.[1]

[1] Hear not whisperers of evil reports.

23 As if thou wouldest adorn an earthen vessel with drossy silver, so swelling lips joined with a most wicked heart.[1]

[1] Fly from hypocrites.

24 An enemy is perceived by his lips, when he shall handle deceits in his heart.[1]

[1] Whose flattery and soft speech are suspicious, they will fall at last into their own traps, truth prevailing.

25 When he shall submit his voice, believe him not: because there are seven mischiefs in his heart. 26 He that covereth hatred fraudulently, his malice shall be revealed in the councel. 27 He that diggeth a pit, shall fall into it: and he that rolleth a stone, it shall return to him. 28 A deceitful tongue loveth not truth, and a slipper mouth worketh ruins.

CHAPTER XXVII.

Boast not for tomorrow, being ignorant what the day to come may bring forth.[1]

[1] Trust not to future uncertainties.

2 Let another praise thee, and not thine own mouth: a stranger and not thine own lips.[1]

[1] Praise not thyself.

3 A stone is heavy, and sand weighty: but the anger of a fool is heavier than both.[1]

[1] Beware of a fool's wrath:

4 Anger hath no mercy, nor fury breaking forth: and the violence of a moved spirit who can sustain?[1]

[1] for it hath no mercy.

5 Better is manifest correption, than love hidden. [1]

[1] Love friendly severity, not enemy's flattery.

6 Better are the wounds of him that loveth, than the fraudulent kisses of him that hateth. 7 A soul that is full shall tread upon the honeycomb: and a soul that is hungry shall take bitter also for sweet. [1]

[1] Temperance in meat.

8 As a bird fleeting from her nest, so a man that forsaketh his place. [1]

[1] Just care of thy family.

9 The heart is delighted with ointment and diverse odours: and with the good counsels of a friend the soul is sweetened. [1]

[1] Esteem friendly counsel.

10 Thy friend, and thy father's friend do not leave: and go not into thy brother's house in the day of thine affliction. Better is a neighbour near than a brother far off. [1]

[1] Old friends are better, & surer than a kinsman.

11 Study wisdom my son, & make my heart joyful, that thou mayst make answer to the upbraider. [1]

[1] Be wise even for thy father's sake.

12 The subtle man seeing evil, hideth himself: little ones passing through have sustained evil detriments. 13 Take his garment that hath been surety for a stranger: and for aliens take from him a pledge. [1]

[1] Foresee and prevent dangers. Trust not enemies.

14 He that blesseth his neighbour with a loud voice, rising in the night, he shall be like him that curseth. [1]

[1] Suspect extraordinary courtesy.

15 Roofs dropping through in the day of cold, and a brawling woman are compared together: [1]

[1] Tolerate incorrigible brawlers with patience; lest they become worse by thy striving to amend them.

16 He that retaineth her, as he that should hold the wind, and shall call it the oil of his right hand. 17 Iron is sharpened with iron, and a man sharpeneth the face of his friend. 18 He that keepeth the figtree, shall eat the fruits thereof: and he that is the keeper of his master, shall be glorified. [1]

[1] Conserve that is good.

19 As in waters the countenance of them that look therein shineth, so the hearts of men are manifest to the prudent. [1]

[1] Conscience is best witness.

20 Hell and perdition are never filled: in like manner also the eyes of men are unsatiable. [1]

[1] Contentment with our state.

21 As silver is tried in the forge, and gold in the furnace: so a man is proved by the mouth of him that praiseth. [1] The heart of the wicked seeketh after evils, but the righteous heart seeketh after knowledge. [2]

[1] Humility desireth not praise. [2] Right of heart.

22 If thou shall bray a fool in a mortar, as when a pestle striketh upon ptisane, his folly shall not be taken from him. [1]

[1] Strive not to teach a fool.

23 Know diligently the countenance of thy cattle, and consider thy flocks: [1]

[1] Discharge thy duty:

24 For thou shalt not have power always: but a crown shall be given into generation and generation. [1]

[1] Whiles thou art in this life.

25 The meadows are open, and the green herbs have appeared, and the grass is gathered out of the mountains. 26 Lambs for thy garment: and kids the price of the field. 27 Let the milk of the goats suffice thee for thy meats, and for the necessities of thy house: and for victual to thy hand-maids. [1] [2]

[1] Be content with things necessary, and they shall be given to thee. [2] Matth. 6. v. 33.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

The impious flyeth, no man pursuing: but the just confident as a lion, shall be without terror. [1]

[1] Innocency is without fear.

2 For the sins of the land the Princes thereof shall be many: & for the wisdom of a man, & the knowledge of those things that are said, the life of the Prince shall be longer. [1]

[1] General piety of the people procureth God's favour.

3 A poor man calumniating the poor, is like a vehement shower, whereby famine is gotten. [1]

[1] Neighbourly compassion.

4 They that forsake the law, praise the impious: they that keep it, are set on fire against him. [1]

[1] Zeal of justice.

5 Evil men think not on judgment: but they that seek after our Lord, mark all things. [1]

[1] Remember the day of judgement.

6 Better is a poor man walking in his simplicity, than the rich in crooked ways. [1]

[1] Honesty and poverty.

7 He that keepeth the law is a wise son, but he that feedeth gluttons, shameth his father. [1]

[1] Not want nor waste.

8 He that heapeth together riches by usuries and ocker, gathereth them for him that is liberal to the poor. [1]

[1] Just gain in traffic.

9 He that turneth away his ears from hearing the law, his prayer shall be execrable. [1]

[1] Obedience to magistrates.

10 He that deceiveth the just in a wicked way, shall fall into his destruction: and the simple shall possess his goods. [1]

[1] Give counsel sincerely.

11 The rich man seemeth to himself wise: but the poor man being prudent shall search him. [1]

[1] Humility in authority.

12 In the exultation of the just there is much glory: when the impious reign^ ruins of men. [1]

[1] Place the godly in office.

13 He that hideth his wicked deeds, shall not be directed: but he that shall confess, and shall forsake them, shall obtain mercy. [1]

[1] Acknowledge thy faults.

14 Blessed is the man that is always fearful: but he that is of an obstinate mind, shall fall into evil. [1]

[1] Fear to offend.

15 A roaring lion, and hungry bear, an impious Prince over the poor people. [1]

[1] Clemency in Princes,

16 A Prince lacking prudence, shall oppress many by calumny: but he that hateth avarice, his days shall be made long. [1]

[1] and prudent liberality.

17 A man that doth calumniate the blood of a soul, if he shall fly into a lake, no man abideth. [1]

[1] Revenge bloodshed.

18 He that walketh simply shall be saved: he that goeth perverse ways, shall fall once. [1]

[1] Harmless life.

19 He that tilleth his ground, shall be filled with breads: but he that pursueth idleness, shall be replenished with poverty. [1]

[1] Diligent labour.

20 A faithful man shall be much praised: but he that hasteneth to be rich, shall not be innocent. [1]

[1] Just dealing.

21 He that knoweth a person in judgement, doth not well: this man even for a morsel of bread forsaketh the truth. [1]

[1] Just judgement.

22 A man that hasteneth to be rich, and envieth others, is ignorant that poverty shall come upon him. [1]

[1] Moderate gain.

23 He that rebuketh a man, shall afterward find favour with him, more than he that by flatteries of tongue deceiveth. [1]

[1] Friendly correption.

24 He that pilfereth any thing from his father, and from his mother: & saith this is no sin, is the partaker of a mankiller. [1]

[1] To rob parents is a grievous crime.

25 He that exalteth and dilateth himself, raiseth brawls: but he that trusteth in our Lord, shall be healed. [1]

[1] Exalt not thyself.

26 He that hath confidence in his own heart, is a fool: but who so walketh wisely shall be saved. [1]

[1] Trust not thine own judgement.

27 He that giveth to the poor, shall not lack: he that despiseth him that asketh shall sustain penury. [1]

[1] Alms deeds.

28 When the impious shall rise, men shall be hid: when they shall perish, the just shall be multiplied. [1]

[1] Godly magistrates.

CHAPTER XXIX.

1 The man that with stiff neck contemneth him that rebuketh, sudden destruction shall come upon him: and health shall not follow him. [1]

[1] Love to be corrected.

2 In the multiplication of just men, the common people shall rejoice: when the impious shall take princedom, the people shall mourn. [1]

[1] Choose godly magistrates.

3 A man that loveth wisdom, maketh his father glad: but he that maintaineth harlots, shall destroy his substance. [1]

[1] Love wisdom.

4 A just king setteth up the land, a covetous man shall destroy it. [1]

[1] Just and liberal magistrates.

5 A man that with fair and feigned words speaketh to his friend, spreadeth a net to his steps. [1]

[1] Sincere amity.

6 A snare shall entangle the wicked man sinning: and the just shall praise and rejoice. [1]

[1] Just joy of the wicked's fall.

7 The just knoweth the cause of the poor: the impious is ignorant of knowledge. [1]

[1] Compassion of the poor.

8 Pestilent men dissipate a city: but the wise turn away fury. [1]

[1] Care of common good.

9 A wise man, if he contend with a fool, whether he be angry, or whether he laugh, shall not find rest. [1]

[1] Contend not with a fool.

10 Men of blood hate the simple: but just men seek his soul. [1]

[1] Defend the just.

11 A fool uttereth all his spirit: a wiseman deferreth and reserveth till afterward. [1]

[1] Discretion in just anger.

12 A Prince that gladly heareth words of lying, hath all his servants impious. [1]

[1] Detestation of lying.

13 The poor man and the creditor have met one another: our Lord is illuminator of both. [1]

[1] Contentment in state of life.

14 The king that judgeth the poor in truth, his throne shall be replenished for ever. [1]

[1] Equity in judgement.

15 Rod and rebuke giveth wisdom: but the child that is left to his own will, confoundeth his mother. [1]

[1] Chastisement of youth.

16 In the multiplication of the impious, wickedness shall be multiplied, and the just shall see the ruins of them. [1]

[1] God never permitteth all to be evil.

17 Nurture thy son, and he shall refresh thee, and shall give delights to thy soul. [1]

[1] Instruct children.

18 When prophecy shall fail, the people shall be dissipated: but he that keepeth the Law, is blessed. [1]

[1] Pray to have good Pastors.

19 A servant cannot be taught by words: because he understandeth that which thou sayst, and contemneth to answer.[1]

[1] Compel the froward to obey.

20 Hast thou seen a man swift to speak? Folly is rather to be hoped, than his amendment.[1]

[1] Consideration in speaking.

21 He that nourished his servant delicately from his childhood, afterward shall feel him stubborn.[1]

[1] Subdue the flesh to the spirit.

22 An angry man provoketh brawls: and he that is easy to indignation, shall be more prone to sin.[1]

[1] Meekness.

23 Humiliation followeth the proud: and glory shall receive the humble of spirit.[1]

[1] Humility.

24 He that is partaker with a thief, hateth his own soul: he heareth one adjuring, and telleth not.[1]

[1] Participate not with sin.

25 He that feareth man, shall soon fall: he that trusteth in our Lord shall be lifted up.[1]

[1] Fear not men in God's cause,

26 Many seek after the face of the Prince: & the judgement of every one cometh forth from our Lord.[1]

[1] remembering that God is Judge of all.

27 The just abhor an impious man: & the impious abhor them that are in the right way.[1] The son that keepeth the word, shall be out of perdition.[2]

[1] Hate all wickedness. [2] Obey spiritual and temporal parents.

CHAPTER XXX.

A right wiseman thinketh humbly of himself 4. knowing that God's works are inscrutable, and perfect: 8. desireth truth in all things, & mediocrity in riches. 11. Abhorreth certain sorts of men, 15. & certain execrable things. 18. Noteth certain things hard to be known: 21. other things intolerable, 24. others admirable. 32. The tongue dangerous.[1]

[1] The fourth part.

Other singular precepts, with praise of a prudent woman.

The words of the Gatherer the son of Vomiter. The vision, that the man spake, with whom God is, and who being strengthened by God abiding with him, said: 2 I am (a) most foolish of men, & the wisdom of men is not with me.

(a) The wisest man best knoweth that he wanteth much of perfect wisdom yet in his humility supposeth, that others have attained somewhat more than himself.

3 I have not learned wisdom, and have not known the science of saints. 4 (b) Who hath ascended into heaven and descended? Who hath contained the spirit in his hands? Who hath bound the waters together as in a garment? Who hath raised up all the borders of the earth? What is his name, and what is the name of his son, if thou know?

(b) Christ the Son of God is wisdom itself and as the Son of man hath perfect wisdom.

5 Every word of God tried by fire, is a buckler to them that hope in him: 6 Add not any thing to his words, and so thou be reproved and found a liar.

7 Two things I have asked thee, deny them not to me before I die. 8 Vanity, and lying words make far from me. Beggary, and riches give me not: give only things necessary for my sustenance: 9 lest perhaps being filled I be allured to deny, and may say: Who is the Lord? Or being compelled by poverty I may steal, and forswear the name of my God. 10 (c) Accuse not a servant to his master, lest perhaps he curse thee, and thou fall.

(c) Bondslaves are to be pitied, and not affliction added to the afflicted.

11 There is (d) a generation that curseth their father, and that blesseth not their mother.

(d) Four execrable vices:
Ingratitude,
Hypocrisy.
Insolency:
Oppression of the poor.

12 A generation, that seemeth to it-self clean, & yet is not washed from their filthiness. 13 A generation, whose eyes are lofty, and the eye-lids thereof set up on high. 14 A generation, that for teeth hath swords, and chaweth with their grinding teeth, that they may eat the needy out of the earth, and the poor from among men. 15 The horseleech hath (e) two daughters that say: Bring, bring. Three (e) things are unsatiable, the fourth never saith it sufficeth.

(e) Concupiscence of the flesh, & of the eyes. (e) Envy, Luxury, Avarice, & Ambition.

16 Hell, and the mouth of the matrice, & the earth which is not satisfied with water: but the fire never saith it sufficeth. 17 The eye that (f) scorneth his father, & that despiseth the travail of his mother in bearing him, let the ravens of the torrents pick it out, and the young of the eagle eat it.

(f) Dishonour of parents shall be severely punished.

18 Three things are hard to me, and of the fourth I am utterly ignorant. 19 The way of an eagle in the air, the way of a serpent upon a rock, the way of a ship in the midst of the sea, and (g) the way of a man in youth.

(g) Young men following carnal appetite, can no more give account of their actions, than of the ways which an eagle, a serpent and a ship have passed.

20 Such is also the way of an adulterous woman, which eateth, and wiping her mouth saith: I have done no evil. 21 By three things the earth is moved, and the fourth it cannot sustain. 22 By a servant when he shall reign: by a fool when he shall be filled with meat: 23 by an odious woman when she shall be taken in matrimony: & by a bond-woman when she shall be heir to her mistress. 24 There are (h) four the least things of the earth, and they are wiser than the wise.

(h) By these examples are commended four virtues,
Industry,
Prudence,
Concord, and Humility.

25 The ants, a weak people, which prepareth in the harvest meat for themselves: 26 The leveret, a people not strong, which placeth his bed in the rock: 27 The locust hath no king, and they go out all by their troops: 28 The stellion stayeth on his hands, & tarrieth in king's houses. 29 (i) There are three things which go well, and the fourth that goeth happily.

(i) Other four
Fortitude,
Chastity,
Order, and
Justice.

30 The lion, the strongest of beasts shall fear at the meeting of none: 31 the cock girded about the loins, and the ram: also the king, against whom none can resist. 32 There is that (k) hath appeared a fool after that he was lifted up on high: for if he had understood, he would have laid his hand upon his mouth.

(k) Fools ought not to govern.

33 And he that (l) strongly presseth the paps to wring out milk, straineth out butter, and he that violently cleanseth his nose, wringeth out blood: & he that provoketh angers, bringeth forth discords.

(l) Moderation is necessary in all actions.

CHAP. XXX.

[1] Some suppose one Agur to be author of this chapter. But it seemeth more probable that only Solomon is author of this whole book.

1. The words of the Gatherer.] [1] Some Interpreters take these four Hebrew words, Agur, Iache, Ithiel, and Vcal, contained in this first verse, to be proper names of men, supposing that a certain wiseman named Agur, the son of Iache, spake the sentences following in this chapter, to his sons or scholars, called Ithiel & Vcal. And so this supposed, Agur, not Salomon, should be the author of this chapter. But the old Interpreter, whom S. Jerome approveth and followeth, translated the same words as nouns appellatives. Neither doth any ancient Father account this Agur amongst the writers of holy Scriptures. And if there were a peculiar author of this chapter, it is like the same should have been placed last, and not before that which now followeth, and is by all men confessed to be Salomon's. And therefore we think it more probable, with S. Beda, and the common opinion, that there was no other author of any part of this book, besides King Salomon. Who is here called CONGREGANS, the Gatherer, [2] because he gathered these excellent Parables, and Proverbs; as the son of the Holy Ghost, signified by the word IACHE, pouring forth divine sentences, for instruction of ITHIEL & VCAL, that is, of all those with whom God is by his grace; and who are strengthened by God abiding with them.

[2] Why he is called Gatherer.

23. A bond-woman when she shall be heir.] Of all things in this world, it seemeth most absurd, that heresy doth domineer over Catholic religion; ◦which God sometimes; and in some places suffereth, for the greater merit of his elect.

◦Why God suffereth heresy to reign.

CHAPTER XXXI.

An exhortation to chastity, temperance, 8. and to works of mercy. 10. with praise of a valiant wise woman.

The (a) words of Lamuel the king. The vision wherewith his mother instructed him.

(a) Words pertaining to Salomon, spoken to him by his mother: who here calleth him Lamuel, signifying, God with him.

2 What o my beloved, what o the beloved of my womb, what o beloved of my vows? 3 Give not thy substance to women, & thy riches to destroy kings. 4 Give not to kings, o Lamuel, give not wine to kings: because there is no secret where drunkenness reigneth, 5 & lest perhaps they drink, & forget judgments, & change the cause of the children of the poor. 6 Give strong drink to them that be sad, and wine unto them that are of a pensive mind: 7 let them drink, and forget their poverty, and not remember their sorrow any more. 8 Open thy mouth to (b) the dumb, & to the causes of all the children that pass:

(b) Doctrine is most profitable to those, that are modestly dumb, more willing to hear than to speak.

9 open thy mouth, (c) decree that which is just, & judge the needy & poor.

(c) The chief & most proper office of a King is to do justice.

10 A valiant woman (d) who shall find? Far, and from the utmost borders is the price of her.

(d) A woman of such perfection as is here described, is indeed rare, yet possible to be found.

11 The heart of her husband trusteth in her, and he shall not need spoils. 12 She shall render good, and not evil, all the days of her life. 13 She hath sought wool and flax, and hath wrought by the counsel of her hands. 14 She is become as a merchant's ship, bringing her bread from far. 15 And she hath risen in the night, and given prey to her household, and meats to her handmaids. 16 She hath viewed a field, and bought it, of the fruit of her hands she hath planted a vineyard. 17 She hath girded her loins with strength, and hath strengthened her arm. 18 She hath tasted, and seen that her traffic is good: her lamp shall not be extinguished in the night. 19 She hath put her hand to strong things, and her fingers have taken hold of (e) the spindle.

(e) Flax on the distaff signifieth purpose to do good works, yarn on the spindle the work well begun, which giveth confidence in God that the same shall be perfect and have due reward.

20 She hath opened her hand to the needy, and stretched out her palms to the poor. 21 She shall not fear for her house in the colds of snow: for all her household are clothed with double. 22 Tapestry clothing she hath made to herself: silk and purple is her garment. 23 Her husband is noble in the gates, when he shall sit with the senators of the land. 24 She (f) made sindon, and sold it, and delivered a girdle to the Chananeite.

(f) They make and sell cloth, which learning and observing God's law, do teach it others.

25 Strength and beauty is her garment, and she shall laugh in the later day. 26 She hath opened her mouth to wisdom, and the law of clemency is in her tongue. 27 She hath considered the paths of her house, and hath not eaten her bread idle. 28 Her children arose, and commended her to be most blessed: her husband, and he praised her. 29 Many daughters have gathered together riches: thou hast passed them all.

30 (g) Grace is deceitful, and beauty is vain: the woman that feareth our Lord shall be praised.

(g) External comeliness is not durable: but the fear of God is more worthy of praise.

31 Give ye to her (h) of the fruit of her hands, and let her works praise her (i) in the gates.

(h) Good works shall be rewarded, (i) at the tribunal seat of judgement.

CHAP. XXXI.

[1] The praise of a right wise woman written in verse, & in order of the Alphabet.

[2] Proem. lament.

[3] Psal. 118. v. 104.

[4] The Church hath all good properties requisite.

[5] A faithful soul hath them at least in desire.

[6] Rare and excellent women both in the old and new testament.

10. A valiant woman who shall find?] Upon occasion of his mother's most prudent admonition, the wiseman singularly praiseth a perfect virtuous woman. [1] And that in an exquisite kind of style: in Tetramical Iambic verse, with perfect order and number of the Alphabet letters, signifying, [2] as S. Jerom teacheth, that as none can read, or spell words, unless they first learn to know the letters: so we cannot attain to know the greater Mysteries in holy Scriptures, except we begin with moral good life, according to that the Prophet sayth: By thy commandments I have understood. [3] And therefore wise Salomon, by instinct of the Holy Ghost, as well by the manner of style, as by the doctrine contained, concludeth his Book of Parables, with praise both of the Church in general, [4] which hath all the virtues, and good properties here mentioned, and of every faithful soul, sincerely serving God, which either in deed, or in desire of mind, [5] hath such part of them, as may suffice to the attaining of eternal life. For concerning the whole Church S. Augustine in two Sermons (217. and 218: de temp.) S. Beda upon this place, and other Fathers shew it evidently. Touching also particular souls, not only of holy men, but also of women, [6] the frailer sex, holy Scriptures, and Ecclesiastical monuments yield many examples, besides the most Excellent and Immaculate Virgin Mother of God: as of Sara, Rebecca, Lia, Rachael, Elizabeth, Mary Magdalen, Martha, and innumerable others, most precious pearls, dear spouses of Christ, and singular ornaments of his Church.

THE ARGUMENT OF ECCLESIASTES.

[1] King Salomon a divine Preacher, whereof this Book is called Ecclesiastes, exhorteth all such as have learned the principles of good life, to contemn this world: because all things therein are vain, and insufficient to give repose to man's soul: shewing that true felicity, which all men desire, consisteth not in natural knowledge, gotten by wit and industry; nor in worldly pleasures, much less in carnal; nor in riches; nor in authority or dominion; nor in any other temporal thing; as diverse diversly think: but only in the true service of God, by flying from sin, and doing good works, as in the meritorious cause, and essentially in the clear vision of God: the proper end, for which man was created. And so this Book containeth three principal parts. [2] First this divine preacher confuteth all their opinions, that imagine a false felicity in human, worldly, or temporal things: to the beginning of the 7. chapter. In the rest of that chapter, and three following, he teacheth that true felicity consisteth in the eternal fruition of God: and is procured by declining from vices, and embracing virtues. In the two last chapters, he exhorteth all to begin speedily to serve God, and to persevere therein to the end of this life.

[1] This book called Ecclesiastes, teacheth to contemn this world. Because felicity consisteth not in any temporal thing: but in the eternal sight of God.

[2] Divided into three parts.

ECCLESIASTES, IN HEBREW CALLED COHELETH.

CHAPTER I.

All temporal things (in comparison of true felicity) are vain, 4. because they are mutable, 8. neither can any man attain perfect knowledge to his satisfaction: 12. as appeareth by Salomon's own experience. [1]

[1] The first part sheweth, that Felicity consisteth not in any temporal thing.

The words of Ecclesiastes, the son of David, king of Jerusalem. 2 Vanity of vanities, said Ecclesiastes: vanity of vanities, and all things are vanity. 3 What hath a man more of all his labour, whereby he laboureth under the sun?

4 Generation passeth, and generation cometh: but (a) the earth standeth for ever.

(a) In the end of this world the earth shall be purified, & so remain for ever.

5 The sun riseth, and goeth down, and returneth to his place: and there rising again,

6 compasseth by the South, and bendeth to the North: compassing all things, goeth forward in circuit, & returneth unto his circles. 7 All rivers enter into the sea, and the sea overfloweth not: to the place, whence the rivers issue forth, they do return, that they may flow again. 8 All things are hard: man cannot explicate them in word. The eye is not filled with seeing, neither is the ear filled with hearing.

9 What is that hath been? The same thing that shall be. What is that hath been done? The same that is to be done. 10 (b) Nothing under the sun is new, neither is any man able to say: Behold this is new: for it hath already gone before in the ages that were before us.

(b) Men's souls daily created are of the same kind as Adam's soul: other creatures either were in their kinds from the beginning of the world, or are procreated of diverse kinds preexisting. S. Tho. 1. p. q. 73. a. 1. ad. 3.

11 There is no memory of former things: but neither of those things verily, which hereafter are to come, shall there be remembrance with them, that shall be in the later end. 12 I^ Ecclesiastes have been king of Israel in Jerusalem, 13 and have proposed in my mind to seek and search wisely of all things, that are done under the sun. This very evil occupation hath God given to the children of men, that they might be occupied in it. 14 I have seen all things, that are done under the sun, and behold all (c) are vanity, & affliction of spirit.

(c) All natural things are insufficient means to attain felicity.

15 The perverse are hardly corrected, and the number of fools is infinite. 16 I have spoken in my heart, saying: Lo I have been made great, and have gone beyond all in wisdom, that were before me in Jerusalem: and my mind hath contemplated many things wisely, and I have learned. 17 And I have given my heart to know prudence, and doctrine, and errors, and folly: and I have perceived that in these also there was labour, and affliction of spirit, 18 for that in much (d) wisdom there is much indignation: and he that addeth knowledge, addeth also labour.

(d) Wisdom is the best thing in this world, yet is not perfect felicity, but the means to attain it.

ANNOTATIONS.
CHAP. I.

◦Wisdom maketh men to be angry with sin, to serve God, and to proceed in virtue.

18. In much wisdom is much indignation.] ◦How much more any man profiteth in wisdom, so much more he is angry with himself, for the evils which he hath done: so much better he knoweth the strict judgement of God, which he must pass: so much more he understandeth the want of perfect wisdom: so much more he seeth that labour is required to proceed in virtue: and to conserve that small portion which he hath gotten. Neither is any man ordinarily assured that he hath gotten any part of true wisdom; for he knoweth not whether he be worthy of love or hate. Eccl. 9.

CHAPTER II.

Human delights are all vain: 4. as gorgeous buildings, fruitful vineyards, plenty of fish, cattle, servants, silver, gold, music: not satisfying man's desire. 18. Neither can any man know how his heir will behave himself.

I said (a) therefore in my heart: I will go, & flow in delights, and enjoy good things. (b) And I saw that this also was vanity.

(a) A worldly man may object, that seeing wisdom bringeth not felicity in this life, it seemeth best to take his pleasure & ease & not to labour for it. (b) But the wise man confuteth this conceipt. Because worldly joy is short & uncertain, neither is any joy that men have in this life true joy of the blessed, but only a consolation in miseries.

2 Laughter I have reputed error: and to joy I have said: Why art thou deceived in vain? 3 I have thought in my heart to withdraw my flesh from wine, that I might transfer my mind to wisdom, and might avoid folly, till I might see what should be profitable for the children of men: what is needful to be done under the sun, in the number of the days of their life. 4 I have magnified my works, I have built me houses, & planted vineyards, 5 I have made gardens, and orchards, and set them with trees of all kinds, 6 and I have made me ponds of waters, to water the wood of springing trees, 7 I have possessed men-servants and women-servants, and have had a great family: herds also, and great flocks of sheep, above all that were before me in Jerusalem: 8 I have heaped together to myself silver, and gold, and the substance of kings, and provinces: I made me singing men, & singing women, and the delights of the children of men: cups, and goblets to serve to pour out wines: 9 and I surpassed in riches all that were before me in Jerusalem: wisdom also hath persevered with me. 10 And all things that mine eyes desired, I have not denied to them: neither have I stayed my heart, but that it enjoyed all pleasure, & delighted it-self in these things, which I had prepared: and this I esteemed my portion, if I did use my labour. 11 And when I had turned myself to all the works which my hands had done, & to the labours wherein I had sweat in vain, I saw in all things vanity, and affliction of mind, & nothing to be permanent under the sun. 12 I passed further to contemplate wisdom, and errors, and folly (what is man, quoth I, that he can follow the King his Maker?) 13 and I saw that wisdom so much excelled folly, as light differeth from darkness. 14 The (c) eyes of a wiseman are in his head: the fool walketh in darkness: and I have learned that there was one death of both.

(c) Consideration is the directory of all good works.

15 And I said in my heart: if the fall of the fool & mine shall be one, (d) what doth it profit me, that I have bestowed greater labour for wisdom? And speaking with my mind, I perceived that this also was vanity.

(d) The conceit of worldly men not considering the life to come.

16 For there shall be no memory of the wise in like manner as of the fool for ever, and the times to come shall cover all things together with oblivion: the learned dieth in like manner as the unlearned. 17 And therefore I have been weary of my life, seeing all things under the sun to be evil, and all things vanity and affliction of spirit. 18 Again, I detested all mine industry, wherewith I have laboured under the sun most studiously, being like to have an heir after me: 19 whom I know not, whether he will be a wiseman or a fool, and he shall rule in my labours, wherewith I have sweat and have been careful: and is there any thing so vain? 20 Wherefore I ceased, and my heart hath renounced to labour any more under the sun. 21 For whereas one laboureth in wisdom, and doctrine, and carefulness, he leaveth the things gotten to an idle man: and this therefore is vanity, and great evil. 22 For what profit shall be to a man of all his labour, and affliction of spirit, wherewith he is vexed under the sun? 23 All his days are full of sorrows and miseries, neither by night doth he rest in mind: and is not this vanity? 24 Is it not better to eat and drink, and shew unto his soul good things of his labours? (e) & this is of the hand of God.

(e) It is better to use that is honestly gotten for our necessity, than to be still solicitous to get more.

25 Who shall so devour, and flow with delights as I? 26 To a man good in his sight, God hath given wisdom, and knowledge, and joy: but to the sinner he hath given affliction, and superfluous care, to add, and to gather together, and deliver it to him that hath pleased God: but this also is vanity, & vain carefulness of the mind.

CHAPTER III.

Contrary things succeed in their seasons, and pass away: 9. whereof man getteth no perfect knowledge, how long soever he liveth, and laboureth to know them: 16. neither will there be equity where it ought to be in this world: 21. but in the next, good and evil shall be separated, and judged according to their deserts.

All things have a time, and in their spaces all things pass under (a) heaven.

(a) Generation, Corruption, & Alteration, pertain only to things of this world under heaven, often here described by the term, Under the sun. For spiritual substances are not comprehended in time nor place. S. Ierom. in hunc locum. tom 7.

2 A time to be born, & a time to die. A time to plant, & a time to pluck up that which was planted. 3 A time to kill, and a time to heal. A time to destroy, and a time to build. 4 A time to weep, & a time to laugh. A time to mourn, and a time to dance. 5 A time to disperse stones, and a time to gather. A time to embrace, and a time to be far from embracings. 6 A time to get, and a time to lose. A time to keep, and a time to cast away. 7 A time to rent, and a time to sow together. A time to keep silence, & a time to speak. 8 A time to love, and a time of hatred. A time of war, and a time of peace. 9 (b) What hath man more of his labour?

(b) All this sheweth that nothing of this world is perpetual, but to be used interchangeably, in due time, place, manner, and order. For disorder maketh confusion.

10 I have seen the affliction, which God hath given to the children of men, that they may be distracted in it. 11 He hath made all things good in their time, and hath delivered the world to their disputation, and that man cannot find the work, which God hath wrought from the beginning unto the end. 12 And I have known that there was no better thing than to rejoice, and to do well in his life. 13 For every man, that eateth and drinketh, and seeth good of his labour, this is the gift of God. 14 I have learned that all the works, which God hath made, persevere for ever: we cannot add any thing, nor take away from those things, which God hath made that he may be feared. 15 That which hath been made, the same is permanent: the things that shall be, have already been: and God restoreth that which is past. 16 I saw under the sun in the place of judgement impiety, and in the place of justice iniquity. 17 And I said in my heart: the just and the impious God will judge, and then shall be the time of every thing. 18 I said in my heart of the children of men, that God would prove them, and shew them to be like beasts. 19 Therefore there is one death of man, and beasts, and the condition of both equal: as man dieth, so they also die: all things breathe alike, and man hath nothing more than beast: all things are subject to vanity, 20 and all things pass to one place: of earth they were made, and into earth they return together. 21 Who knoweth if the spirit of the children of Adam ascend upward, and if the spirit of beasts descend downward? 22 And I have found that nothing is better than for a man to rejoice in his work, and that this is his portion. For who shall bring him to know the things that shall be after him?

CHAPTER IV.

In this world many innocents are oppressed, 4. the potent sometimes envied, contemned, 15. and forsaken by their subjects, 17. especially when the superiors obey not God.

I turned myself to other things, and I saw the oppressions, that are done under the sun, and the (a) tears of the innocents, and no comforter: & that they cannot resist their violence, being destitute of all men's help.

(a) God suffereth the innocent to be afflicted for a time, of his special providence: because they thereby merit a great reward. Psal. 72.

2 And I praised rather the dead, than the living: 3 and happier than both have I judged him that is not (b) yet born, nor hath seen the evils that are done under the sun.

(b) It is indeed better not to be at all, than to be in eternal misery (Mat. 26. v. 24.) but temporal affliction which the just suffer is not misery, as worldly men esteem it, but a special mean to attain eternal felicity.

4 Again I have contemplated all the labours of men, and their industries I have perceived to lie open to the envy of their neighbour: and in this therefore there is vanity, and superfluous care. 5 A fool foldeth his hands together, and eateth his own flesh, saying: 6 Better is an handful with rest, than both hands full with labour and affliction of mind. 7 Considering I found also another vanity under the sun: 8 There is one, and he hath not a second, not a son, not a brother, and yet he ceaseth not to labour, neither are his eyes satisfied with riches, neither doth he recount, saying: For whom do I labour, and defraud my soul of good things? In this also is vanity, and very ill affliction. 9 It is better therefore that two be together, than one: for they have profit of their society: 10 if one fall, he shall be stayed up of the other. Woe to him that is alone: because when he falleth, he hath none to lift him up. 11 And if two sleep together, they shall warm each other: one how shall he be warmed? 12 And if a man prevail against one, two resist him: a (c) triple cord is hardly broken.

(c) True charity not contaminate with envy, by how much it is increased in number, so much it increaseth in strength. S. Ierom.

13 Better is a child that is poor and wise, than a king old and foolish, that knoweth not to foresee for hereafter. 14 Because out of the prison and chains sometime there cometh one forth to a Kingdom: and another born in his Kingdom, is consumed with poverty. 15 I saw all men alive, that walk under the sun, with the second youngman, which shall rise up for him. 16 The number of the people, of all that have been before him is infinite: and they that shall be afterward, shall not rejoice in him. But this also is vanity, and affliction of spirit. 17 Take heed to keep thy foot, when thou enterest into the house of God, and approach thou to hear. [1] For much better is obedience, than the victims of fools, who know not what evil they do.

[1] 1. Reg. 15. Osee 6.

ANNOTATIONS. CHAP. IV.

9. It is better that two be together.] Besides the commendation of charity, and friendship amongst men, which is one proper sense of this place: [1] S. Jerome expoundeth it also of the necessity of Christ's dwelling in man's soul, & of his continual assisting grace: that man alone lie not open to the deceits of the adversary. The benefit of fellowship (sayth he) is straight ways shewed in the profit of society. For if the one fall (as [2] the just falleth often) Christ raiseth up his partner: for woe to him, who falling hath not Christ in him, to raise him up. If one also sleep, that is, be dissolved by death, and have Christ with him, being warmed, and quickened, he sooner reviveth. And if the devil be stronger in impugning against a man, the man shall stand, and Christ will stand (pro homine suo, pro sodali suo) for his man, for his companion. [3] Not that Christ's power alone is weak against the devil, but that free will is left to man, and we doing our endeavour he becometh stronger in fighting. And if the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost come withal, this sodality is not soon broken. Yet that which is not soon broken, may sometimes be broken. For this triple cord was in Judas the Apostle, but because after the morsel the devil entered into him, [4] this cord was broken. Thus S. Jerome teacheth, that neither can man without Christ resist tentations, nor rise from any sin in this life, or [5] in the next: neither will Christ without man's consent and endeavour, stay him from falling, nor raise him up being fallen.

[1] Man without Christ's help can neither resist tentations, nor rise from sin.

[2] Pro. 24. v. 16.

[3] And without man's free consent Christ will not stay him, nor raise him up.

[4] Ioan. 13. v. 27.

CHAPTER V.

An exhortation to speak discreetly and reverently of God; 3. to perform vows; 6. not to be troubled with imaginations, nor present oppressions of the poor. 9. Avarice is never satiate, 11. riches sometimes cause sickness, ruin of the body, 18. and oblivion of God.

Speak (a) not any thing rashly, neither let thy heart be swift to utter a word before God. For God is in heaven, and thou upon the earth: therefore let thy words be few.

(a) Because no man is able to attain perfect knowledge of God, it behoveth all to speak and think soberly of him.

2 Dreams do follow many cares, and in many words folly will be found. 3 (b) [1] If thou hast vowed any thing to God, defer not to pay it: for an unfaithful and foolish promise displeaseth him. But whatsoever thou hast vowed, pay it:

(b) Vow or promise once made must be fulfilled. [1] Deu. 23.

4 and it is much better not to vow, than after a vow not to perform the things promised. 5 Give not thy mouth to make thy flesh to sin: neither say thou before (c) the Angel: There is no providence; lest perhaps God being wrath against thy words, dissipate all the works of thy hands.

(c) The proper Angel which associateth every man.

6 Where many dreams are, there are many vanities, and words innumerable: but do thou fear God. 7 If thou shalt see the oppressions of the poor, and violent judgements, and justice to be subverted in the province, marvel not at this matter: because there is another higher than the high, and over these also there are others more eminent: 8 and besides, the King of all the earth reigneth over his servant. 9 A covetous man shall not be filled with money: and he that loveth riches, shall take no fruit of them: and this therefore is vanity. 10 Where great riches are, there are also many that eat them. And what doth it profit the owner, but that he seeth the riches with his eyes? 11 Sleep is sweet to him that worketh, whether he eat much or little: but the satiety of the rich doth not suffer him to sleep. [1]

[1] Job. 20.

12 There is also another very ill infirmity, which I have seen under the sun: riches kept to the hurt of the owner. 13 For they perish in very evil affliction: he (a) hath begotten a son, which shall be in great poverty.

(a) As temporal riches are often the occasion of their owner's ruin: so vain philosophy and heresy avail not heretics, nor their followers, but as they came naked from their mother's womb, the perverse Church, so shall both such masters, and scholers depart without comfort into the wrath which they prepare to themselves. S. Ierom. in hunc. locum.

14 As he came forth naked from his mother's womb, so shall he return, and shall take nothing away with him of his labour. 15 An infirmity utterly miserable; as he came, so shall he return. What doth it then profit him, that he hath laboured into the wind? 16 All the days of his life he eateth in darkness, and in misery, and in heaviness. 17 This therefore hath seemed good to me, that a man eat, and drink, and take joy of his labour, wherewith he hath laboured under the sun, the number of the days of his life, which God hath given him, and this is his portion. 18 And to every man, unto whom God hath given riches, and substance, and hath given him power to eat of them, and to enjoy his portion, and to rejoice of his labour: this is the gift of God. 19 For he shall not greatly remember the days of his life, because God doth occupy his heart with delights.

CHAPTER VI.

Riches make not men happy, because many die shortly: 3. and many rich men will not use their riches. 8. Likewise study to know all secret things is vanity, not felicity.

1 There is also another evil, which I have seen under the sun, and that frequent with men: 2 A man to whom God hath given riches, and substance, and honour, and nothing is lacking to his soul of all things, which he desireth: neither doth God give him power to eat thereof: but a strange man shall eat it up. This is (b) vanity and great misery.

(b) All this sheweth that felicity consisteth not in riches.

3 If a man shall beget an hundred children, and shall live many years, and have many days of age, and his soul use not the goods of his substance, and he lack burial: of this man I pronounce, that the untimely born is better than he. 4 For he came in vain, and passeth to darkness, and his name shall be clean forgotten. 5 He hath not seen the sun, nor known the distance of good and evil: 6 although he lived two thousand years, and hath not enjoyed good things: do not all things hasten to one place? 7 All the labour of man is in his mouth: but his soul shall not be filled. 8 What hath the wiseman more than the fool? And what the poor man, but to pass thither, where life is? 9 Better it is to see that, which thou mayst covet, than to desire that, which thou canst not know. But this also is vanity, and presumption of spirit. 10 (c) He that shall be, his name is already called: and it is known, that he is a man, and cannot contend in judgement against a stronger than himself.

(c) It is plainly preached (saith S. Iero.) of the coming of Christ, whose name was given, and known before he was born in flesh.

11 There be many words, that have much vanity in disputing.

CHAPTER VII.

It is in vain to seek, and unpossible to know all natural things. 2. It importeth to lead this short life in mortification, 4. penance, 8. and patience: 12. seeking wisdom, with competent temporal means; 15. providing for the next world; 24. not yielding to concupiscence.

What [1] needeth a man to seek things greater than himself, whereas he is ignorant, what is profitable for him in his life, in the number of the days of his peregrination, and the time that passeth as a shadow? Or who can tell him what shall be after him under the sun?

[1] None can perfectly know the nature of all things present, or to come.

2 [1] Better is [2] a good name than precious ointments: and the day of death, than the day of nativity.

[1] The 2. part.
True felicity is procured by good life, and consisteth in the eternal sight of God. [2] Pro. 22.

3 It is better to go to the house of mourning, than to the house of banqueting, for in that the end of all men is signified, and he that liveth thinketh what shall be.
4 (a) Anger is better than laughter: because by sadness of the countenance, the mind of the offender is corrected.

(a) Anger rightly used, is commendable & beneficial to correct our own faults and others.

5 The heart of wisemen where sadness is, and the heart of fools where mirth. 6 It is better to be rebuked of a wiseman, than to be deceived with the flattery of fools. 7 Because as the sound of thorns burning under a pot, so the laughter of a fool: but this also is vanity.
8 Oppression troubleth the wise, and shall destroy the strength of his heart. 9 Better is the end of a speech, than the beginning. (b) Better is the patient man than the arrogant.

(b) But hasty, or immoderate anger is sinful and hurtful.

10 Be not quickly angry, because anger resteth in the bosom of a fool. 11 Say not: What is the cause thinkest thou that the former times were better than they are now? For this manner of question is foolish.
12 Wisdom with (c) riches is more profitable, and doth more profit them that see the sun.

(c) Likewise moderate riches profit the servants of God, so that they set not their mind upon them.

13 For as wisdom protecteth, so money protecteth. But learning and wisdom have this much more, that they give life to their owner. 14 Consider the works of God, that no man can correct whom he hath despised.
15 In the good day enjoy good things, and beware before of the evil day. For as this, so that also hath God made, that man find not against him just complaints.
16 These things also I saw in the days of my vanity: The just man perisheth in his justice, and the impious liveth a long time in his malice. 17 Be not just too much: neither be more wise than is necessary, lest thou become more dull. 18 Do not impiously much: and be not foolish, lest thou die not in thy time. 19 It is good that thou hold up the just, yea and from him withdraw not thy hand: because he that feareth God, neglecteth nothing. 20 Wisdom hath strengthened the wise above ten Princes of the city. 21 [1] For there is no just man in the earth, that doth good, and sinneth not.

[1] 3. Reg. 8. 2. Par. 6. Pro. 20. 1. Ioan. 1.

22 But to all words also that are spoken, do not apply thy heart: lest perhaps thou hear thy servant cursing thee. 23 For thy conscience knoweth, that thou also hast cursed others. 24 I have proved all things in wisdom. I have said: I will become wise, & it departed farther from me 25 much more than it was: and a deep profundity, who shall find it? 26 I have viewed all things with my mind, that I might know, and consider, and might seek wisdom and reason: and that I might know the impiety of the fool, and the error of the imprudent: 27 and I have found that a woman is more bitter than death, who is the snare of hunters, and her heart a net, her hands are bands. He that pleaseth God, will avoid her: but he that is a sinner, will be caught of her. 28 Lo this have I found, said [1]Ecclesiastes, one thing and another, that I might find reason,

[1] * The preacher.

29 which yet my soul seeketh, and I have not found it. (d) A man of a thousand I have found one, (e) a woman of all I have not found.

(d) Man's reason which is the superior part of his soul, rarely thinketh good: (e) Sensuality still inclineth to evil.

30 Only this I have found, that (f) God made man right, and he hath entangled himself with infinite questions. Who is such a one as the wise? And who hath known the resolution of [1]the word.

(f) God made man right, & he of his own will fell from God. See S. Aug. li. 14. c. 11. civit. [1] * The obscure thing.

CHAPTER VIII.

A sign of true wisdom appeareth in observing God's commandments, 6. in this short time of meriting eternal reward. 9. Rule of others, 11. and want of fear hurt many. 14. Why God suffereth the wicked to prosper, and the just to be afflicted in this life, no mortal man can know.

The (a) wisdom of a man shineth in his countenance, and the most mighty will change his face.

(a) As probable conjecture of a man's inward disposition is made by his exterior countenance: so his good works shining before men are good sign of internal virtues; which indeed are right and meritorious, when the intention is sincere, referring all to God's glory, & edification of others, without desire of vain praise in the world.

2 I observe the mouth of the king, and the precepts of the oath of God. 3 Hasten not to depart from his face, nor continue thou in an evil work: because all that he pleaseth he will do, 4 and his word is full of power: neither can any man say to him. Why dost thou so: 5 He that keepeth the precept, shall find no evil. The heart of a wiseman understandeth time and answer. 6 There is a time for all business, and opportunity, and much affliction of man: 7 because he is ignorant of things past, and things to come he can know by no messenger. 8 It is not in man's power to prohibit the spirit, neither hath he power in the day of death, neither is he suffered to rest when war is at hand, neither shall impiety save the impious. 9 All these things I have considered, and gave my heart on all the works that are done under the sun. Sometime man ruleth over man to his own hurt. 10 I saw the impious buried: who also when they yet lived, were in holy place, and were praised in the city as men of just works. But this also is vanity. 11 Because sentence is not speedily pronounced against the evil, the children of men commit evils without any fear. 12 But yet a sinner by this that he doth evil an hundred times, & by patience is borne withal, I know that it shall be good to them that fear God, which dread his face. 13 Let there be no good to the impious, neither let his days be prolonged, but as a shadow let them pass, that fear not the face of our Lord. 14 There is also another (b) vanity, which is done upon the earth. There are just men, to whom evils happen, as though they had done the works of the impious: and there are impious men, which are so secure, as though they had the deeds of the just. But this also I judge most vain.

(b) By this term (vanity) is still understood that felicity is not in prosperous things of this world: neither are all men miserable, that suffer adversity.

15 I therefore have praised mirth, that there was no good thing for a man under the sun, but that he should eat, and drink, and be glad: and this only he should take away with him of his labour in the days of his life, which God hath given him under the sun. 16 And I have set my heart to know wisdom, and to understand the [1]distraction that is in the earth: There is a man that days and nights taketh no sleep with his eyes.

[1] * Busy searching.

17 And I understood that man can find no reason of all those works of God, that are done under the sun: and the more he shall labour to seek, so much the less he can find: yea if the wiseman shall say that he knoweth, he is not able to find it.

CHAPTER IX.

None knoweth (certainly and ordinarily) whether they be in God's grace or no. 4. The evil are in worse case dead than alive: 11. neither can we know the event of temporal things, nor the term of our life, nor how grateful others will be towards us. 16. Sure it is, that wisdom is better than strength.

All these things have I discoursed in my heart, that I might curiously understand them: there are just men and wise: and their works are in the hand of God: and yet (a)man knoweth not whether he be worthy of love or hatred:

(a) Mortal men suffering calamities know not whether the same be inflicted for their proof and merit, as in Job and Tobie, or for their sins only, as in Pharao, & the Aegyptians: but shall know in the judgment after their death.

2 but all things are reserved uncertain for the time to come, because all things do equally chance to the just and impious, to the good and the evil, to the clean and unclean, to him that immolateth victims, and him that contemneth sacrifices. As the good, so also is the sinner: as the perjured, so he also that sweareth truth. 3 This is a very evil thing among all which are done under the sun, that the same things chance to all men. Whereby also the hearts of the children of men are filled with malice, and with contempt in their life, and after that they shall be brought down to hell. 4 There is no man that may live always, and that can have confidence of this thing: better is (b)a dog living than a lion dead.

(b) A sinner in this life may amend if he will, & become just: but after death he cannot repent. chap. 11. v. 3. Mystically, the Gentiles were judged by Salomon better than the Jews. S. Ierom.

5 For the living know that they shall die, but the dead know nothing more, neither have they reward any more: because the memory of them is forgotten. 6 Love also and hatred, and envies have perished together, neither have they part in this world, and in the work that is done under the sun. 7 Go therefore and eat thy bread in joy, & drink thy wine with gladness: because thy works please God. 8 At all time let thy garments be white, and let not oil fall from off thy head. 9 Enjoy life, with thy wife whom thou lovest, all the days of the life of thy instability, which are given to thee under the sun, all the time of thy vanity: for this is the portion in life, and in thy labour, wherewith thou labourest under the sun.

10 Whatsoever thy hand is able to do, work it instantly: for neither work, nor reason, nor wisdom, nor knowledge shall be in hell, whither thou dost hasten. 11 I turned me to another thing, and I saw under the sun, that neither running is of the swift, nor war of the strong, nor bread of the wise, nor riches of the learned, nor grace of the artificers: but time and chance in all. 12 Man knoweth not his own end: but as fishes are taken with the hook, and as birds are caught with the snare, so men are taken in the evil time, when it shall suddenly come upon them. 13 This wisdom also I have seen under the sun and have proved it to be very great: 14 A little city, and few men in it: there came against it a great king, and compassed it, and builded forts round about, and the siege was perfited. 15 And there was found in it a man poor and wise, and he delivered the city by his wisdom, and no man afterward remembered that poorman. 16 And I said, that wisdom is better than strength: how then was the wisdom of the poorman contemned, & his words were not heard? 17 The words of the wise are heard in silence, more than the cry of a Prince among fools. 18 Better is wisdom, than weapons of war: and he that shall offend in one point, shall lose many good things.

CHAPTER X.

Considering the great difference between wisdom and folly, 4. it behoveth to resist vehement tentations diligently. 5. As when evil & ignorant men have authority over the wise. 8. The wicked often fall into their own snares, 10. are hard, yet not unpossible to be corrected. 11. Detracters are like serpents. 12. Wise grave Princes are profitable; childish are hurtful to the commonwealth; 18. which by their negligence tendeth to ruin: 20. yet subjects ought not to judge evil of them.

Flies (a) dying mar the sweetness of ointment. Wisdom and glory is more precious, than a little and temporal folly.

(a) Base & vicious men mixt with the good, corrupt the whole company: much more a mortal sin in a man's soul destroyeth all the virtues, that were there before.

2 The heart of a wiseman is in his right hand, and the heart of a fool is in his left hand. 3 Yea and the fool walking in the way, whereas himself is unwise, esteemeth all men fools. 4 If the spirit of him that hath power, ascend upon thee, leave not thy place: because carefulness will make the greatest sins to cease.

5 There is an evil that I have seen under the sun, as it were by error proceeding from the face of the Prince: 6 a fool set in high dignity, and the rich to sit beneath. 7 I have seen (b) servants upon horses: and Princes walking on the ground as servants.

(b) Evil men advanced seem to prosper:

8 He (c) that diggeth a pit, shall fall into it: and he that breaketh the hedge, a serpent shall bite him.

(c) But they fall into their own traps.

9 He that removeth stones, shall be afflicted in them: and he that cutteth trees, shall be wounded of them. 10 If the iron shall be blunt, and that not as before, but shall be made blunt, it shall be sharpened by great labour: and after industry shall wisdom follow. 11 If a serpent bite in silence, nothing less than it hath he, that detracteth secretly. 12 The words of the mouth of a wiseman grace: and the lips of the unwise shall throw him down headlong. 13 The beginning of his words is folly, and the later end of his mouth is most wicked error. 14 A fool multiplieth words. A man is ignorant what hath been before him: and what shall be after him, who can tell him? 15 The labour of fools shall afflict them, that know not to go into (d) the city.

(d) Such as seek by sense and reason to obtain true knowledge, enter not into the city, the Church:
They labour in vain, and are afflicted in study of Scriptures, when they walk in the desert, and cannot find the city. S. Ierom.

16 Woe to thee o land, whose king is a child, and whose Princes eat in the morning. 17 Blessed is the land whose king is noble, & whose Princes eat in their time, to refection, and not to riotousness. 18 In slothfulness the roof of the house shall go to ruin, & in the infirmity of the hands the house shall drop through. 19 They make bread for laughter, and wine, that living they may make merry: and to money all things obey. 20 In thy cogitation detract not from the king, and in the secret of thy chamber curse not the richman: because even the birds of the air will carry thy voice, and he that hath wings will declare the sentence.

ANNOTATIONS.

CHAP. X.

16. Woe to thee o land, whose King is a child.] [1]S. Jerome (as in most part of his commentaries upon this book) expoundeth this passage in two senses: simply according to the first appearance of the letter; and mystically concerning the Church. The wiseman seemeth indeed (saith he) to reprove the principality of young men, and to condemn luxurious judges; for that in the one by want of age is infirm wisdom; in the other, mature age is weakened by delicacies. [2]And contrarywise he approveth a Prince of good parts, & liberal education; & commendeth those Judges, which do not prefer voluptuousness before public affairs: but after great labour and administration of the commonwealth, are constrained as by necessity to take meat. Yet to me (saith this great Doctor) something more sacred seemeth to lie hid in the letter: that in Scripture they are called young men, who forsake old authority, and contemn ancient precepts of forefathers; who neglecting God's commandment, desire to establish traditions of men. Touching which points, our Lord threateneth Israel by Isaias, [3] [4]for that this people hath refused the water of Silo, that runneth with silence, and hath turneth away the old fishpond, choosing the streams of Samaria, and gulfs of Damascus, I will give young men to be their Princes, and deluders shall rule over them. Read Daniel: [5] Thou shalt find God ancient of days. Read the Apocalypse of S. John: [6] Thou shalt find the head of our Saviour white as snow, and as white wool. Jeremy also because he was wise, and gravity was reputed in his wisdom, [7]was forbid to call himself a child. Woe therefore to the land, whose King is the devil, who always coveting novelties, rebelled in Absalom against the father. [8]Woe to that land whose Judges and princes love the pleasures of this world. Who, until the day of death come, say: Let us eat and drink, for tomorrow we shall die. Contrarywise blessed is the land of the Church, whose King is Christ, the Son of the freeborn, descending from Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, the stock of Prophets, and of all Saints, over whom sin ruled not: and for that cause they were truly free: of whom was born the holy Virgin Mary more free: [9] having no shrub, nor branch out of the side, but her whole fruit sprung forth into flower: saying in the Canticles: I am the flower of the field, [10] the lily of the valleys. The Princes also of this land are the Apostles, and all Saints, who have their King the son of the freeborn, the son of the freewoman, not of the bondwoman Agar, but born of the freedom of Sara. Neither do they eat in the morning, nor quickly. For they seek not pleasure in this present world; but shall eat in their due time, when the time of reward shall come, and they shall eat in fortitude, and not in confusion. All the good of this present world is confusion: but of the future world is perpetual fortitude. Thus far S. Jerome whose discourse we have here cited at large for a taste of his profound exposition of this whole book; that such as have opportunity, may read the rest in the author himself. To. 7.

2 Give a portion (b) to seven, and also to eight: because thou knowest not what evil shall be upon the earth:

(b) So the same be grounded in true faith, believing all that is written in the old and new testament, signified by seven & eight.

3 If the clouds be full, they will pour out rain upon the earth. If the tree shall fall to the South, or the North, in what place soever it shall fall (c) there shall it be.

(c) After death, none can either merit or demerit.

4 He that observeth the wind, soweth not: and he that considereth the clouds, shall never reap. 5 As thou art ignorant which is the way of the spirit, & how the bones are framed together in the womb of her that conceiveth child: so thou knowest not the works of God, who is the maker of all. 6 In (d) the morning sow thy seed, and in the evening let not thy hand cease: for thou knowest not which may rather spring, this or that: and if both together, it shall be the better.

(d) Both in youth and old age do good works.

7 The light is sweet: and it is delectable for the eyes to see the sun. 8 If a man shall live many years, and shall have rejoiced in them all, he must remember the darksome time, and many days, which when they shall come, the things past shall be reproved of vanity.

9 Rejoice therefore youngman in thy youth, and let thy heart be in good, in the days of thy youth, and walk in the ways of thy heart, and in the sight of thine eyes: and know that for all these God will bring thee into judgement. 10 Take away anger from thy heart, and remove malice from thy flesh. For youth and pleasure are vain.

CHAPTER XII.

In youth is fittest time, and most meritorious to serve God. In age the same is more and more necessary, but harder than to begin, and less grateful. 8. In this book the preacher hath shewed, that all worldly things are vanity, 13. and that true felicity is only procured by wisdom, which consisteth in the fear of God, and observation of his commandments.

Remember thy creator in the days (a) of thy youth, before the time of affliction come, & the years approach, of which thou mayst say: They please me not:

(a) An admonition to all in general to live well in this world, remembering the day of general judgement, before which such signs shall come as are described here, and by our Saviour Mat. 24. And likewise every one is admonished in particular to serve God diligently whiles he hath time, before death come, when all his senses & former helps shall fail.

2 before the sun, and light, and moon, and stars be dark, and the clouds return after the rain: 3 when the keepers of the house shall be moved, and the strongest men shall stagger, and the grinders shall be idle in a small number: and they shall wax dark that look through the holes: 4 and they shall shut the doors in the street, at the baseness of the grinder's voice, and they shall rise up at the voice of the bird, and all the daughters of song shall be deaf. 5 The high things also shall fear, and they shall be afraid in the way, the almond tree shall flourish, the locust shall be fatted, and the caper tree shall be destroyed: because man shall go into the house of his eternity, and the mourners shall go round about in the street. 6 Before the silver cord be broken, and the golden head-band recur, and the water-pot be broken upon the fountain, and the wheel be broken upon the cistern, 7 and the dust return into his earth, from whence it was, and the spirit return to God, who gave it. 8 Vanity of vanities, said [1]Ecclesiastes, and all things vanity.

[1] * The preacher.

9 And whereas Ecclesiastes was most wise, he taught the people, and declared the things that he had done: and searching forth made many parables. 10 He sought profitable words, and wrote words most right, and full of truth. 11 The words of wisemen are as pricks, and as nails deeply strucken in, which by the counsel of masters are given of one pastor. 12 More than these my son require not. Of making many books there is no end: and often meditation is affliction of the flesh. 13 (b) Let us all hear together the end of speaking. Fear God, and observe his commandments: for this is every man:

(b) This is the brief sum of all profitable doctrine: Fear God, & keep his commandments.

14 and all things that are done, God will bring into judgement for every [1]error, whether it be good or evil.

THE ARGUMENT OF THE CANTICLE OF CANTICLES.

[1] SALOMON, called also Ecclesiastes, and Idida, according to these three names (as S. Jerom noteth) [2] writ three books of three particular arguments, directed to three degrees of people, with three distinct titles, all tending to one end, the true service of God, which bringeth to eternal felicity. In the first he teacheth the principles of good life, to fly from vices, and follow virtues: belonging to such as begin to observe God's law, wherein true wisdom consisteth: and this book is called the Proverbs, or Parables, that is to say, Pithy, brief, sententious precepts, of Salomon, which signifieth Pacificus, Peaceable, or Pacifier: [3] the son of David, King of Israel. In the second he exhorteth to contemn this world, shewing that true felicity consisteth not in any worldly or temporal things, but in the eternal fruition of God, which is obtained by keeping his commandments. And this book he entitleth: The words of Ecclesiastes, which is Concionator, Preacher, [4] Son of David, King of Jerusalem, because he there exhorteth such as have made some progress in virtues, called Proficients, signified by the inhabitants of the Metropolitan city Jerusalem; whereas in the former he styled himself King of Israel, proposing precepts meet for all the twelve tribes, and all vulgar men desirous and beginning to serve God: In both books, for more authority sake, making mention of his godly renowned father the Royal Prophet David, with his own title also of King. But in this third book he only expresseth his proper name Salomon, whom God singularly loved, whereof he was called Idida. [5] Because this alone, without mention of father or King, was most convenient for the Perfect, who not as servants, or young scholars are moved by fear of authority, but as children are sweetly drawn by love. And this he writ in verse, entitling it not simply a Canticle, [6] but The Canticle of Canticles, as preeminent above other Canticles: The bridal song for the Marriage, to be solemnized between God himself and his glorious spouse. For though all holy Scriptures are the spiritual bread, and food of the faithful, [7] yet all are not meat for all, at all seasons. Some parts are not for sinners, nor for beginners, nor for such as are yet in the way towards perfection, but only for the perfect. According to the Apostle's doctrine: [8] Milk is for children, that are yet unskillful of the word of justice. But strong meat is for the perfect, them that by custom, have their senses exercised to the discerning of good and evil. With what moderation therefore and humility, this Canticle of God's perfect spouse may be read, the discreet will consider, and not presume above their reach, but be wise with sobriety. For here be very high and hidden Mysteries, as Origen teacheth in his learned Commentaries (which Saint Jerom translated into Latin and singularly commendeth) and so much harder to be rightly understood, for that the fervent spiritual love, of the inward man, reformed in soul, and perfected in spirit, is here uttered in the same usual words and terms, wherewith natural, worldly, yea and carnal love of the outward man, old Adam, corrupted by sin, is commonly expressed: and are so much more dangerous to be mistaken, as we are more addicted to proper will, & private judgement, or subject to carnal, or passionate motions. [9] Wherefore it seemeth most meet to keep the same order in reading these three books, which the author wise Salomon observed in writing them. And which Philosophers also follow in their form of discipline. For they first learn and teach Moral Philosophy, then Natural & lastly Metaphysics, which is their Divinity. As Salomon had given them example: first teaching precepts of good life and manners, in his Proverbs: after, discoursing of natural things in Ecclesiastes, deduced thence a conclusion, which profane Philosophers well understood not, to contemn this world: and finally cometh to high mystical Divinity, in this supereminent Canticle: written in another style, in verse, and in form of a sacred Dialogue between Christ and his spouse, or as Origen calleth it, in form of an [10][11] Interlude, in respect of diverse speakers & actors, & of diverse persons, to whom the speeches are directed, and of whom

[1] King Salomon according to his three names writ and entitled his three books.

[2] Proem. in Eccle.

[3] Salomon Pacifier king of Israel.

[6] This canticle doth excel other Canticles.

[7] All are not meet to read it.

[9] Best method in learning is to begin with doctrine of good life, then study to know natural things: and finally contemplate divine mysteries.

they are uttered. [12] For by the Spouse or Bridegroom, is not only understood Christ as Man, but also as God, and the whole Blessed Trinity; to whom many prayers, praises and thanks are offered up; and by whom many benefits are given, praises returned, & promises made to his spouse. Likewise by the Spouse or Bride the ancient fathers understand three sorts of spouses: [13] all espoused to Christ, and to God, to wit, his [14] General Spouse, the whole Church of the old and new Testaments: of all that are, and shall be perfect, making one mystical body, free from sin, [15] without spot or wrinkle, sanctified in Christ. [16] Also his special spouse, which is every particular holy soul. [17] And his singular spouse, his most blessed & most immaculate Virgin Mother. This being the general sum of this excellent Canticle, remitting the reader, for explication thereof to the learned devout Commenters, both of ancient and late writers, [18] we shall also endeavour to gather the same contents more particularly, not before the chapters, because we cannot there so conveniently distinguish the same by verses, but in the margent: [19] where we shall especially note the speakers, as seemeth more probable, of every parcel, according to the first sense (not having room for more) pertaining to the General spouse, the Catholic Church: which is the great, and everlasting holy City of God the eternal King.

SALOMON'S CANTICLE OF CANTICLES WHICH IN HEBREW IS CALLED SIR HASIRIM.

CHAPTER I.

Let (a) him kiss me with the kiss of his mouth: because thy breasts are better than wine.

(a) The Church of the old testament desireth Christ's coming in flesh: and the Christian Church prayeth for his coming in glory.

2 smelling fragrantly of the best ointments. Oil poured out is thy name: therefore have young maids loved thee. 3 Draw me: we will run after thee in the odour of thine ointments. The king hath brought me into his cellars: we will rejoice & be glad in thee, mindful of thy breasts above wine: the righteous love thee. 4 (b) I am black but beautiful, o ye daughters of Jerusalem, as the tabernacles of Cedar, as the skins of Salomon.

(b) The Church outwardly afflicted, is inwardly fair.

5 Do not consider me that I am brown, because the sun hath altered my colour: the sons of my mother have fought against me, they have made me a keeper in the vineyards: my vineyard I have not kept.

6 Shew me o thou, whom my soul loveth, where thou feedest, where thou liest in the midday, lest I begin to wander after the flocks of thy companions.

7 (c) If thou know not thyself, o most fairest among women, go forth, and follow after the steps of the flocks, and feed thy kids beside the tabernacles of the pastors.

(c) Christ encourageth his spouse the Church.

8 To my company of horsemen, in the chariots of Pharao, have I likened thee, o my love. 9 Thy cheeks are beautiful as the turtle-doves, thy neck as jewels.

10 We will make thee chains of gold, enamelled with silver. 11 (d) Whilst the king was at his repose, my spikenard gave the odour thereof.

(d) She meditateth of his Passion and Resurrection.

12 A bundle of myrrh my beloved is to me, he shall abide between my breasts. 13 A cluster of cypress my love is to me, in the vineyards of Engaddi.

14 (e) Behold thou art fair, o my love, behold thou art fair, thine eyes are as of doves'.

(e) Christ praiseth his spouse

15 (f) Behold thou art fair my beloved, & comely: (g) our little bed is flourishing.

(f) She again praiseth him; (g) With thanks for her repose, and present consolation.

16 The beams of our houses are of cedar, our rafters of cypress trees.

CHAPTER II.

I am (a) the flower of the field, and the lily of the valleys.

(a) Christ professeth himself the flower of mankind: yea, Lord of all creatures.

2 (b) As the lily among the thorns, so is my love among the daughters.

(b) The Church excelleth all other societies:
In the Church the godly excel sinners:
Among the innocent and holy, the Virgin Mary surpasseth all.

3 (c) As the apple-tree among trees of the woods, so is my beloved among the sons. Under his shadow, whom I desired, I sat: and his fruit was sweet unto my throat.

(c) The Church praising Christ resteth secure under his protection.

4 He brought me into the wine cellar, he hath ordered in me charity. 5 Stay me up with flowers, compass me about with apples: because I languish with love. 6 His left hand under my head, and his right hand shall embrace me. 7 I adjure you o daughters of Jerusalem, by the roes, and the harts of the fields (d) that you raise not, nor make the beloved to awake, until herself will.

(d) He for the weak's sake permitteth her not to be molested, till she be prepared to suffer with patience.

8 (e) The voice of my beloved, behold he cometh leaping in the mountains, leaping over the little hills:

(e) She feeling Christ's assistance, confesseth, & preacheth boldly his Gospel & truth against all Pagans and Heretics.

9 my beloved is like unto a roe, and to a fawn of harts. Behold he standeth behind our wall, (f) looking through the window, looking forth by the grates.

(f) Who though he shew not himself visibly,

10 Behold my beloved speaketh to me: (g) Arise, make haste my love, my dove, my beautiful one, and come.

(g) yet encourageth her to approach unto him:

11 For winter is now past, the rain is gone, and departed. 12 The flowers have appeared in our land, the time of pruning is come: the voice of the turtle-dove is heard in our land: 13 the fig-tree hath brought forth her green figs: the flourishing vineyards have given their savour. Arise my love, my beautiful one, & come. 14 My dove in the holes of the rock, in the hollow places of the wall, shew me thy face, let thy voice sound in mine ears: for thy voice is sweet, and thy face comely. 15 (h) Catch us the little foxes, that destroy the vineyards: for our vineyard hath flourished.

(h) commandeth his pastors to destroy heresies.

16 (i) My beloved to me, and I to him, who feedeth among the lilies,

(i) And so she reposeth in him.

17 till the day break, and the shadows decline. Return: be like, my beloved, to a roe, and to the fawn of harts upon the mountains of Bether.

CHAPTER III.

In (a) my little bed in the nights I have sought him whom my soul loveth, I have sought him, and have not found.

(a) The Church finding Christ not in dark ignorance nor in philosophy, but by his revealing himself to her, holdeth him for ever:

2 I will rise, and will go about the city: by the streets and high ways I will seek him whom my soul loveth: I have sought him, and have not found. 3 The watchmen which keep the city found me: Have you seen him, whom my soul loveth? 4 When I had a little passed by them, I found him whom my soul loveth: I held him: neither will I let him go, till I bring him into (b) my mother's house, and into the chamber of her that bare me.

(b) even till the Jews shall at last also find him.

5 (c) I adjure you, o daughters of Jerusalem by the roes, and the harts of the fields, that you raise not up, nor make the beloved to awake, till herself will.

(c) Christ speaketh as before ch. 2. v. 7.

6 (d) What is she, that ascendeth by the desert, as a little rod of smoke of (e) the aromatical spices of myrrh and frankincense, & of all powder of the apothecary?

(d) The Church of Christ admireth her own conversion from Gentility, (e) now full of good Works.

7 (f) Behold threescore valiants of the most valiant of Israel, compass the little bed of Salomon:

(f) She also professeth that the ascending to eternal rest, is by fighting manfully, in observing the ten commandments, in the six days of this life:

8 all holding swords, and most cunning to battles: every man's sword upon his thigh for fears by night.

9 King Salomon hath made him a portable throne of the wood of Libanus: 10 the pillars thereof he hath made of silver, the seat of gold, the going up (g) of purple: the midst he hath paved with (h) charity for the daughters of Jerusalem.

(g) even to blood, if need be, (h) which is the highest degree of charity.

11 (i) Go forth ye daughters of Sion, and see king Salomon in (k) the diadem, wherewith his mother hath crowned him in the day of his despousing, and in the day of the joy of his heart.

(i) And inviteth all others to come unto Christ, (k) who in the flesh which he took of his mother, was crowned in heaven after his passion.

CHAPTER IV.

How (a) beautiful art thou my love, how beautiful art thou! Thine (b) eyes as it were of doves', besides that which lieth hid within. Thy (c) ears as the flocks of goats, which have come up from mount Galaad.

(a) Christ again praiseth the beauty of his Church. (b) Sincere and simple intention. (c) All her temporal occupations directed to God's glory.

2 Thy (d) teeth as flocks of them that are shorn, which have come up from the lavatory, all with (e) twins, and there is no barren among them.

(d) Pastors who like nurses give bread of good doctrine to little ones. (e) Faith and good works.

3 Thy (f) lips as a scarlet lace: and thy speech sweet. As a piece of a pomegranate, so are also thy (g) cheeks, besides that which lieth hid within.

(f) Preaching Christ's passion. (g) And not ashamed to profess Christ crucified.

4 Thy (h) neck is as the (i) tower of David, which is built with bulwarks: a thousand targets hang on it, all the armour of the valiants.

(h) Administration of Sacraments whereby the Church, Christ's mystical body, is joined to him her head, (i) which is an inexpugnable fortress.

5 Thy (k) two breasts as two fawns the twins of a row, which feed among the lilies,

(k) Both Jews and Gentiles are fed with the principles of Christian doctrine.

6 till the day aspire, and the shadows decline. (l) I will go to the mount of myrrh, and to the little hill of frankincense.

(l) Christ dwelleth in mortified, and devout minds.

7 Thou art all fair o my love, and there is (m) not a spot in thee.

(m) The Church triumphant is without spot, and every particular soul entering into heaven; the B. Virgin Mother was also in this life always Immaculate.

8 Come from Libanus my spouse, come from Libanus, come: thou shalt be crowned from the head of Amana, from the top of Sanir & Hermon, from the dens of lions, from the mountains of leopards. 9 Thou hast wounded my heart, my sister^ spouse, thou hast wounded my heart in one of thine eyes, and in one hair of thy neck. 10 How beautiful are thy breasts my sister^ spouse! Thy breasts are more beautiful than wine, and the odour of thine ointments above all aromatical spices. 11 Thy lips my spouse are as an honey-comb distilling, honey and milk are under thy tongue: and the odour of thy garments as the odour of frankincense. 12 My sister^ spouse is a garden inclosed, a garden inclosed, a fountain sealed up. 13 Thy offsprings a paradise of pomegranates with orchard fruits. Cypress with spikenard, 14 spikenard, and saffron, sweet cane and cinnamon, with all the trees of Libanus, myrrh and aloes with all the chief ointments. 15 The fountain of gardens: the well of living waters, which run with violence from Libanus. 16 (n) Arise Northwind, & come Southwind, blow through my garden, and let the aromatical spices thereof flow.

(n) All tentations, whether they be in manifest cruelty, or in flattering subtlety, make constant souls more grateful to God.

CHAPTER V.

Let (a) my beloved come into his garden, and eat the fruit of his apple-trees. (b) I am come into my garden o my sister^ spouse, I have reaped my myrrh, with mine aromatical spices: I have eaten the honey-comb with mine honey, I have drunk my wine with my milk: (c) eat o friends, and drink, and be inebriated my dearest.

(a) The spouse condescending to God's will, is well content to suffer persecution. (b) Christ again sheweth his good liking in his spouse's patience: (c) and willeth the glorious Saints to congratulate with the patient.

2 (d) I sleep, and my heart watcheth: (e) the voice of my beloved knocking: Open to me my sister, my love, my dove, mine immaculate: (f) because my head is full of dew, and my locks of the drops of the nights.

(d) The spouse desireth to rest in meditation: (e) but is called upon to help others: (f) and urged by Christ's own example working for all mankind.

3 I have spoiled myself of my robe, how shall I be clothed with it? I have washed my feet, how shall I defile them? 4 My beloved put his hand through the hole, and my belly trembled at his touch. 5 (g) I arose, that I might open to my beloved: my hands have distilled myrrh, and my fingers are full of most approved myrrh.

(g) And so she employeth herself also in active life.

6 I opened the bolt of my door to my beloved: but he had turned aside, and was passed. My soul melted, as he spake: I sought, and found him not: I called, and he did not answer me. 7 The keepers that go about the city found me: they struck me, and wounded me: the keepers of the walls took away my cloak. 8 (h) I adjure you o daughters of Jerusalem, if you shall find my beloved, that you tell him that I languish with love.

(h) Still conserving a desire to return unto contemplation.

9 (i) What manner of one is thy beloved of the beloved, o most beautiful of women? What manner of one is thy beloved of the beloved, that thou hast so adjured us?

(i) The devout confer together describing the excellencies of Christ.

10 My beloved is white and ruddy, chosen of thousands. 11 His head is as the best gold: his hairs as the branches of palm-trees, black as a raven. 12 His eyes as doves upon the little rivers of waters, which are washed with milk, and sit beside the most full streams. 13 His cheeks are as little beds of aromatical spices set of the pigmentaries. His lips are as lilies distilling principal myrrh. 14 His hands wrought round of gold, full of hyacinths. His belly of ivory, distinguished with sapphires. 15 His thighs as pillars of marble, that are upon feet of gold. His form as of Libanus, elect as the cedars. 16 His throat most sweet, and he whole to be desired: such an one is my beloved, and he is my friend, o daughters of Jerusalem.

17 (k) Whither is thy beloved gone o most beautiful of women? Whither is thy beloved turned aside? And we will seek him with thee.

(k) And resolve to seek him, wheresoever he be.

CHAPTER VI.

My (a) beloved is gone down into the garden, to the bed of aromatical spices, to feed in the gardens, and to gather lilies.

(a) The Church teacheth her children that Christ is delighted with the godly desires, and fruitful works of the faithful.

2 I to my beloved, and my beloved to me, who feedeth among the lilies. 3 (b) Thou art fair o my love, sweet, and comely as Jerusalem: terrible as the army of a camp set in array.

(b) Christ again commendeth his Church, well composed of distinct orders (some governing, some retired in cloisters from this world, the rest also exercising works of mercy, in the troubles of this life) all together making a complete army, terrible to all enemies.

4 (c) Turn away thine eyes from me, because they have made me fly away. Thy hairs as a flock of goats, which have appeared from Galaad.

(c) The more any contemplate God's Majesty, the better they perceive that he is incomprehensible.

5 Thy teeth as a flock of sheep, which have come up from the lavatory, all with twins, and there is no barren among them. 6 As the bark of a pomegranate, so are thy cheeks, beside thy hidden. 7 There are (d) threescore queens, & (e) fourscore concubines, and of (f) young maids there is no number.

(d) Many true pastors, (e) more hirelings, that also preach truth, but for temporal commodity. (f) And innumerable faithful souls in the Church.

8 My dove is (g) one, my perfect one, she is the only of her mother, elect to her that bare her. The daughters have seen her, and declared her to be most blessed: the queens and concubines, and have praised her.

(g) All which are but one body in unity of faith.

9 (h) What is she, that cometh forth as the morning rising, fair as the moon, elect as the sun, terrible as the army of a camp set in array?

(h) The voice of the old synagogue, admiring the beauty of Christ's Church.

10 I came down into the garden of nuts, to see the fruits of the valleys, and to look if the vineyard had flourished, and the pomegranates budded. 11 I knew not: my soul troubled me for the chariots of Aminadab. 12 (i) Return, return o Sulamitess: return, return, that we may behold thee.

(i) The Church of Christ exhorteth the Synagogue of the Jews to return to Christ.

CHAPTER VII.

What (a) shalt thou see in the Sulamitess but the companies of camps? How beautiful are thy passes in shoes, o prince's daughter! (b) The joints of thy thighs are as jewels, that are made by the hand of the artificer.

(a) Christ interposeth his commendation of the Jews, who at last shall return to him with great fervour of faith and devotion. (b) And so jointly praiseth his Church consisting of both peoples.

2 Thy navel as a round bowl, never wanting cups. Thy belly as an heap of wheat, compassed about with lilies. 3 Thy two breasts, as two fawns the twins of a roe. 4 Thy neck as a tower of ivory. Thine eyes as the fish-pools in Hesebon, which are in the gate of the daughter of the multitude. Thy nose as the tower of Libanus, that looketh against Damascus. 5 Thy head as Carmelus: and the hairs of thy head as a king's purple tied to conduit pipes. 6 How beautiful art thou, and how comely my dearest, in delights! 7 Thy stature is like to a palm-tree, & thy breasts to clusters of grapes. 8 I said: I will go up into the palm-tree, and will take hold of the fruits thereof: and thy breasts shall be as the clusters of a vineyard: and the odour of thy mouth as it were of apples. 9 Thy throat as the best wine, (c) worthy for my beloved to drink, & for his lips and his teeth to ruminate.

(c) The Church as it were taking the word out of Christ's mouth whiles he praised her, she returneth all the praise to him.

10 I to my beloved, and his turning is toward me. 11 (d) Come my beloved, let us go forth into the field, let us abide in the villages.

(d) Praying him to come and still remain with her,

12 Let us rise early to the vineyards, let us see if the vineyard flourish, if the flowers be ready to bring forth fruits, if the pomegranates flourish: there will I give thee my breasts. 13 The Mandragoraes have given a smell. In our gates all fruits: (e) the new and the old, my beloved, I have kept for thee.

(e) Acknowledging him to be the only Saviour of both old and new testament.

CHAPTER VIII.

Who (a) shall give to me thee my brother, sucking the breasts of my mother, that I may find thee without, and kiss thee, and now no man despise me?

(a) The Synagogue prosecuteth her prayer, desiring Christ's Incarnation.

2 I will take hold of thee, and will bring thee into my mother's house: there thou shalt teach me, and I will give thee a cup of spiced wine, and new wine of my pomegranates. 3 His left hand under my head, and his right hand shall embrace me. 4 (b) I adjure you o daughters of Jerusalem, that you raise not up, nor make the beloved to awake till herself will.

(b) Christ admonisheth worldly men not to molest those that serve him in contemplation, & other spiritual virtues.

5 (c) Who is this, that cometh up from the desert, flowing with delights, leaning upon her beloved? Under the apple-tree I raised thee up: (d) there thy mother was corrupted, there she was deflowered that bare thee.

(c) Angels and other Saints of the triumphant Church admire the beauty of the Gentiles converted: which is also understood of every holy soul ascending from this world into heaven: And more singularly of the most glorious Virgin Mother of God. (d) The Synagogue of the Jews was corrupt under the tree of Christ's Cross, when they cried: Crucify him, Crucify him. And again: His blood be upon us, and upon our children. Again: We have no King but Caesar, &c.

6 Put me as a seal upon thy heart, as a seal upon thine arm: because love is strong as death: jealousy is hard as hell, the lamps thereof lamps of fire and flames. 7 Many waters cannot quench charity, neither shall floods overwhelm it: if a man shall give all the substance of his house for love, as nothing he shall despise it. 8 (e) Our sister is little, and hath no breasts. What shall we do to our sister in the day when she is to be spoken unto?

(e) Christ again sheweth his affection towards his Church of the Gentiles: calling her his own sister, and the Synagogue's sister, promising and bestowing on her many excellent benefits.

9 If she be a wall, let us build upon it bulwarks of silver: if she be a door, let us join it together with boards of cedar. 10 (f) I am a wall: and my breasts are as a tower, since I was made before him as one finding peace.

(f) The Church of Gentiles rejoiceth in the strong defence, wherewith her Saviour hath established her.

11 The peace-maker had a vineyard, in that which hath peoples: he delivered the same (g) to keepers, a man bringeth for the fruit thereof a thousand pieces of silver.

(g) Keepers of this vineyard were the Prophets and Apostles, and their Successors are still the keepers thereof.

12 (h) My vineyard is before me. A thousand are thy peace-makers, and two hundred for them, that keep the fruits thereof.

(h) Christ sheweth that together with the pastors, himself especially hath care of his Church, always assisting the visible governers thereof with his invisible grace.

13 Thou dwellest in the gardens, the friends do harken: make me hear thy voice. 14 (i) Fly, o my beloved, and be like to the roe, and to the fawn of harts upon the mountains of aromatical spices.

(i) The whole Church militant well contented, yea desiring Christ's Ascension into heaven, for the good of all that here serve him, prayeth him, from thence to send aboundance of his grace, that we may ascend the high mountains of perfect charity and zeal of God's honour, that he will make our souls such hills, the garden of all virtues, & so vouchsafe to dwell therein. Amen.

THE ARGUMENT OF THE BOOK OF WISDOM.

[1] Both the author & authority of this book were sometimes doubtful.

[2] The same doubt is of Ecclesiasticus.

[3] Argu. li. Reg.

[4] Five Sapiential books of the old testament.

[5] It is most probable, that Philo a Jew writ this book collecting many sentences of Salomon's.

[6] Cha. 7. 8. 9.

[7] The Jews deny these books to be Canonical.

[8] Mat. 22. Exo. 3.

[9] They are judged by very many ancient fathers, and afterward defined by the Church to be Canonical Scriptures.

[10] Et li. 17. c. 29. civ.

[1] AS well of the author, as of the authority of this book, there have been diverse opinions among the learned. But in process of time, the first is probably discussed, the other is clearly decided by the Church. For concerning the former doubt, Many ancient Fathers allege sentences of this Book, as the sayings of Salomon. Namely S. Ireneus (apud Eusebium, lib. 5. c. 8. Hist.) S. Clement of Alexandria, li. 5. & 6. Stromat. Origen. ho. 12. in Levit. & li. 8. in Epist. ad Rom. S. Athanasius in Synopsi, & Orat. 2. cont. Arrian. S. Basil li. 5. cont. Eunomianos. S. Epiphanius heresi 67. S. Gregory Nazianzen. lib. de Fide. S. Gregory Nissen. in Testimonijs ex vet. Testam. cap. de Nativitate ex Virgine. S. Chrisost. hom. 33. & 34. in Mat. S. Cyril of Alexandria li. 10. c. 4. Also S. Cyprian li. de exhortat. Martyrum. c. 12. & li. 3. c. 59. ad Quirin. & li. de Mortalitate. S. Hilary in Psal. 127. S. Ambrose, li. de Salomone. c. 1. and diverse others suppose Salomon to be author of this book. To whom likewise some of them ascribe the book of Ecclesiasticus. [2] But S. Jerom Praefatione in libros Salomonis testifieth that some ancient writers affirm this book to be written by Philo a Jew, and the other by Iesus the son of Sirach. And S. Augustin very plainly (li. 17. c. 20. de civit.) saith, custom prevailed, that the books of wisdom, & Ecclesiasticus, for some similitude of speech are called Salomon's: but the more learned assuredly judge that they are not his. What then shall we say, seeing so many other ancient learned Doctors cite them as his. The answer is easy. And sufficiently insinuated by S. Augustin, that these two books being like unto the other three, [3] which are Salomon's, were also called his. Whereto we may add a like example in the two first books of Kings, which are called the books of Samuel, though he writ not all the first, nor any part of the second. [4] Moreover all these five are called by one general title Sapiential books. In so much that the Church readeth in the sacred Office before all Epistles, taken out of any of these five books, not Lectio Proverbiorum, or Ecclesiastae, &c. but still, Lectio libri Sapientiae. The solution therefore is very probable, that this book of wisdom was written by Philo Iudeus, [5] not he that lived after Christ, but another of the same name, near two hundred years before. And Ecclesiasticus by Iesus the son of Sirach. Who not only imitated Salomon, but also compiled their books, for most part of Salomon's sentences; [6] conserved till their times by tradition, or in separated scrolls of papers; yea they so utter some sentences in his person, as if himself had written them. As touching the authority of these two books, and some others, it is evident that the Jews refuse them. [7] And therefore many ancient Fathers writing against them, spared sometimes to urge such books, as they knew would be rejected. Especially having abundant testimonies of other holy Scriptures, for deciding matters of faith against them. Even as our Saviour himself proved the Resurrection of the dead against the Sadducees, out of the books of Moyses, [8] which they confessed for Canonical Scripture, denying other parts, where the same point might otherwise have been more evidently shewed. And so S. Ierom in respect of the Jews said these books were not Canonical. Nevertheless he did often allege testimonies of them, as of other divine Scriptures: sometimes with this parenthesis (si cui tamen placet librum recipere) in cap. 8. & 12. Zachariae: other times, especially in his last writings, absolutely without such restriction, as in cap. 1. & 56. Isaiae. & in 18. Ieremiae. Where he professeth to allege none but Canonical Scripture. As for all the other ancient fathers here above mentioned, ascribing this book to Salomon, and many others cited by Doctor Iodocus Coccius (To. 1. Thesauri. li. 6. art. 9.) they make no doubt at all, [9] but that it is Canonical Scripture, as appeareth by their express terms, Divine Scripture, Divine word, Sacred letters, Prophetical saying, the Holy Ghost saith, & the like. Finally as well ancient General counsels, namely that of Carthage, an. D. 419. with others, as the later of Florence, and Trent have declared this book to be Canonical. And that conformably to the most ancient, and learned Fathers, as S. Augustin, not only judgeth himself, but also plainly testifieth (li. de Praedestinat. Sanct. c. 14.)[10] saying: The sentence of the book of wisdom ought not to be rejected (by certain inclining to Pelagianism) which hath been so long publicly read in the Church of Christ, and received of all Christians, Bishops, and others, even to the last of the Laity, Penitents, and Catecumes (cum veneratione divinae auctoritatis) with veneration of divine authority. Which also the excellent writers, next to the Apostles' times, alleging for witness (nihil se adhibere, nisi divinum testimonium crediderunt) thought they alleged nothing but divine testimony.

[1] The sum and contents of this book is an Instruction, and Exhortation to Kings and all Magistrates, to minister justice in the commonwealth, teaching all sorts of virtues under the general names of Justice & Wisdom. With frequent Prophecies of Christ's Coming, Passion, Resurrection, & other Christian Mysteries. All may be commodiously divided into three parts.[2] In the six first chapters, the author admonisheth all Superiors to love and exercise justice and wisdom. In the next three, he teacheth that Wisdom proceedeth only from God, & is procured by prayer & good life. In the other ten chapters, he sheweth the excellent effects, and utility of wisdom and Justice.

[1] The contents.

[2] Divided into three parts.

THE BOOK OF WISDOM.

CHAPTER I.

Superiors are admonished to do justice, sincerely seeking God: 7. who being everywhere seeth all things. 11. Murmuration, detraction, and lying bring to perdition. 13. God created men to live, but they brought death upon themselves.[1]

[1] The 1. part. An admonition to love and practise justice.

Love[1] justice, you that judge the earth. Think of our Lord in goodness, and in simplicity of heart seek him:

[1] 3. Reg. 3. Isa. 56. 2. Para. 15.

2 because he is found of them that tempt him not: and he appeareth to them that have faith in him.

3 For (a) perverse cogitations separate from God: and proved power chasteneth the unwise:

(a) Mortal sins are not only committed in deeds & words, but also in thoughts.

4 because wisdom will not enter into a malicious soul, nor dwell in a body subject to sins. 5 For the Holy Ghost of discipline will fly from him that feigneth, and will withdraw himself from the cogitations that are without understanding, and he shall be chastened of iniquity ensuing.

6 [1] For the spirit of wisdom is gentle, and will not deliver (b) the curser from his lips: because God is witness of his reins, and he is a true searcher of his heart, and an hearer of his tongue.

[1] Gal. 5. v. 22. (b) He that maliciously curseth is cursed of God.

7 Because the Spirit of our Lord hath replenished the whole world: and that which containeth all things, hath the knowledge of voice. 8 For this cause he that speaketh unjust things, cannot be hid, neither shall the chastising judgement pass him. 9 For in the cogitations of the impious there shall be examination: and the hearing of his works shall come to God, to the chastising of his iniquities. 10 Because the ear of jealousy heareth all things, and the tumult of murmurings shall not be hid. 11 Keep yourselves therefore from murmuring, which profiteth nothing, and refrain your tongue from detraction, because an obscure speech shall not pass in vain: and the mouth that lieth, killeth the soul. 12 (c) Zeal not death in the error of your life, neither procure ye perdition by the works of your hands.

(c) Be not cause of your own eternal death by evil life.

13 Because God made not death, neither doth he rejoice in the perdition of the living. 14 For he created all things to be: and he made the nations of the earth to health: and (d) there is no medicine of destruction in them, (e) nor Kingdom of hell in the earth.

(d) Desperate death delivereth not the wicked from calamities. (e) Neither are any damned whiles they are in this life:

15 For justice is perpetual and immortal. 16 But the impious with hands & words have (f) provoked it: and esteeming it a friend, have fallen to decay, and have made covenants with it: because they are worthy to be of the part thereof.

(f) But sinners not repenting bring eternal death to themselves.

CHAPTER II.

Such as hope not of life to come, 6. addict themselves to present pleasures: 10. and persecute the just, especially our Saviour Christ, as contrary to their wickedness. 23. Death came upon man by the devil's envy.

For they have said thinking with themselves not well: (a) Little, and with tediousness is the time of our life: and in the end of a man there is no recovery, and there is none known that hath returned from hell:

(a) Carnal men thinking the soul to be mortal, and so neither pain nor reward to be after death, fall to these profane thoughts and speeches of infidelity.

2 because of nothing were we born, and after this we shall be as if we had not been: because the breath is a smoke in our nostrils: & speech a spark to move our heart. 3 Which being extinguished, our body shall be ashes, and the spirit shall be poured abroad as soft air, and our life shall pass as the trace of a cloud, and shall be dissolved as a mist, which is driven away by the beams of the sun, and oppressed with the heat thereof: 4 and our name in time shall be forgotten, and no man shall have remembrance of our works. 5 For our time is the passing of a shadow, and there is no return of our end: because it is sealed, and no man returneth. 6 (b) Come therefore, and let us enjoy the good things that are, and let us quickly use the creature as in youth.

(b) Of infidelity touching pain or reward after death, proceedeth the Epicures' life.

7 Let us fill ourselves with precious wine, and ointments: and let not the flower of the time pass us. 8 Let us crown ourselves with roses, before they wither: let there be no meadow, which our riot shall not pass through. 9 Let none of us be exempted from our riotousness: every-where let us leave signs of joy: because this is our portion, and this our lot. 10 Let us (c) oppress the poor just man, and not spare the widow, nor reverence the old man's grey head of long time.

(c) Infidels are not content to live in riot, but do also envy and persecute the just: whose good examples vex their minds, stirred thereto by the devil.

11 But let our strength be the law of justice: for that which is weak, is found unprofitable. 12 (d) Let us therefore circumvent the just, because he is unprofitable to us, and he is contrary to our works, and reproachfully objecteth unto us the sins of the law, and defameth in us the sins of our discipline.

(d) An evident prophecy of the Jews' malice persecuting our Saviour. Fulfilled by the chief Priests, Scribes, and Ancients, recorded by the Evangelists.
Mat. 27. v. 41. Mar. 14. v. 53.

13 He boasteth that he hath the knowledge of God, and nameth himself the son of God.[1]

[1] Mat. 27. v. 43.

14 He is made unto us to the defaming of our cogitations. 15 He is grievous unto us even to behold, because his life is unlike to others, & his ways are changed. 16 We are esteemed of him as triflers, and he abstaineth from our ways as from uncleanness, and he preferreth the later ends of the just, and glorieth that he hath God for his father. 17 Let us see therefore if his words be true, and let us prove what things shall come to him, and we shall know what shall be his later end. 18 For if he be the true son of God, he will defend him, & will deliver him from the hands of the adversaries. 19 By contumely and torment let us examine him, that we may know his reverence, and prove his patience. 20 To a most shameful death let us condemn him: for there shall be respect had unto him by his words. 21 These things have they thought, and have erred: for their malice hath blinded them. 22 And they have not known (e) the sacraments of God, nor hoped for the reward of justice, nor esteemed the honour of holy souls.

(e) Want of believing divine Mysteries, namely the reward of the just, & punishment of the wicked, is cause of dissolute life, and of hatred against the good.

23 For God created man incorruptible, and to the image of his own likeness he made him. 24 But by the envy of the devil, death entered into the world: 25 and they follow him that are of his part.

CHAPTER III.

The just condemned by the wicked, and proved by tentations are happy: 10. and the wicked unhappy. 12. Chastity shall be rewarded, & adulterous generations shall not prosper.

But (a) the souls of the just are in the hand of God, and the torment of death shall not touch them.

(a) Temporal death of the just, is the way to eternal life. Where damnation (called here the torment of death) shall not touch them.

2 (b) [1] They seemed in the eyes of the unwise to die: and their decease was counted affliction:

(b) For albeit Martyrs seem in the eyes of the unwise to die, or to be extinguished, they pass indeed into eternal, and unspeakable glory.[1] Chap. 5. v. 4.

3 and that which with us is the way, is destruction: but they are in peace. 4 And though before men they suffered torments, their hope is full of immortality. 5 Vexed in few things, in many they shall be well disposed of: because God hath tempted them, and hath found them worthy of himself. 6 As gold in the furnace he hath proved them, and as an host of holocaust he hath received them, & in time there shall be respect of them. 7 [1] The just shall shine, and as sparks in a place of reeds they shall run abroad.

[1] Mat. 13. v. 43.

8 They (c) shall judge nations, & have dominion over peoples, and their Lord shall reign for ever.

(c) All the just shall approve God's judgement condemning the wicked.

9 They that trust in him, shall understand truth: & the faithful in love shall rest in him: because rest and peace is to his elect. 10 But the impious according to the things which they have thought, shall have correption: which have neglected the just, & have revolted from our Lord. 11 For he that rejecteth wisdom and discipline, is unhappy: and their hope is vain, and labours without fruit, & their works unprofitable. 12 Their (d) wives are senseless, and their children most wicked.

(d) Literally is understood, that the wives of adulterers, often become adulteresses, & their children wicked. Morally, their sensuality & all their works are wholly corrupted.

13 Cursed is their creature: because happy is the barren woman: and the undefiled, which hath not known bed in sin, she shall have fruit in visitation of holy souls: 14 and [1] the eunuch that hath not wrought iniquity with his hands, nor thought most wicked things against God: for the chosen gift of faith shall be given to him, and a most acceptable lot in the temple of God.

[1] * See. S. Ierom. in Isa. 56. v. 4.

15 For of good labour there is glorious fruit, and the root of wisdom which falleth not. 16 But the children of adulterers shall be in consummation, and the seed of the unlawful bed shall be destroyed. 17 And if certes they be of long life, they shall be reputed for nothing, & their last old-age shall be without honour. 18 And if they die quickly they shall have no hope, nor speech of comfort in the day of acknowledging. 19 For of a wicked nation the ends are cruel.

CHAPTER IV.

Great difference between chaste, and adulterous generations. 7. Speedier death of the just is recompensed by God's providence, 19. but the wicked incur greater damnation by living long.

O how beautiful is (a) the chaste generation with glory! For the memory thereof is immortal: because it is known both with God and with men.

(a) Chastity of the body is a singular great virtue, & spiritual chastity of true faith and religion is greater, and more generally commended, as the root and foundation of all virtues. For without faith it is unpossible to please God.

2 When it is present, they imitate it, and they desire it when it hath withdrawn it-self, and it triumpheth crowned for ever, winning the reward of undefiled conflicts. 3 But the multitude of the impious, that hath many children, shall not be profitable, and bastard plants shall not take deep root, nor lay sure foundation. 4 And if in the boughs for a time they shall spring being weakly set, they shall be moved of the wind, and by the vehemency of the winds they shall be rooted out. 5 For the unperfect boughs shall be broken, and their fruits shall be unprofitable, and sour to eat, and meet for nothing. 6 For the children that be born of wicked sleeps, are witnesses of wickedness against the parents in their examination. 7 But (b) the just if he be prevented with death, shall be in a place of refreshing.

(b) When soever the just dieth it is profitable for him: & dying young his immaculate life is more commendable than old age in the wicked. v. 16.

8 For venerable old age is not that of long time, nor accounted by the number of years: but the understanding of a man are grey hairs: 9 and an immaculate life is old age. 10 Pleasing God he is made beloved, and living among sinners he was translated. 11 He was taken away lest malice should change his understanding, or lest any guile might deceive his soul. 12 For the bewitching of vanity obscureth good things, and the inconstancy of concupiscence perverteth the understanding that is without malice. 13 Being consummate in short space he fulfilled much time: 14 for his soul pleased God: for this cause he hastened to bring him out of the midst of iniquities: but the peoples that are seeing, and not understanding, nor putting such things in their hearts: 15 that the grace of God, and mercy is toward his saints, and respect toward his elect. 16 But the just dead condemneth the impious alive, and youth soon ended, the long life of the unjust. 17 For they shall see the end of the wise, and shall not understand what God hath thought of him, and why our Lord hath fenced him. 18 For they shall see and shall contemn him: but our Lord shall laugh them to scorn, 19 and they shall fall after this without honour, and in contumely among the dead for ever: because he shall break them puffed up (c) without voice, and shall remove them from the foundations, and they shall be made desolate unto the highest degree: and shall be mourning, and the memory of them shall perish.

(c) The damned shall be without all excuse utterly confounded in their own consciences.

20 They shall come fearful in cogitation of their sins, and their iniquities on the contrary shall convince them.

ANNOTATIONS.
CHAP. IV.

11. He was taken away.] By this place S. Augustine proveth that such as died in good state, might have fallen into wickedness, if they had lived longer: and therefore it was a benefit to them to die sooner. And that it is nevertheless certain, that God both knew the possibility that such might, yea would have sinned, [1] if they had lived longer, and also knew that they should die sooner, and so escape that danger. Which assured foreknowledge of all things that shall be, or may be, standeth well with man's freewill: against certain that inclined to Pelagianism, attributing too much to man's freewill, and detracting from God's foreknowledge and providence. Which he proving by this place, [2] his adversaries excepted against the authority of this book, and therefore he also proveth that it is Canonical Scripture. li. 1. de Predest. Sanct. ch. 14.

[1] God's prescience doth not prejudice man's freewill.

[2] Et. l. 17. c. 20. civit.

CHAPTER V.

In the general judgement, the wicked seeing the just, whom they had contemned, to be in great honour, shall bewail their own misery, 9. considering that their pleasure was short, 16. and the joy of the Blessed shall be for ever. 18. God will arm himself, and all creatures, to punish the impious.

Then shall the just stand in great constancy against those that have afflicted them, and (a) taken away their labours.

(a) Wicked men in their false conceipt judge the travails of the just to be vain & fruitless.

2 They seeing shall be troubled with horrible fear, and shall marvel at the suddenness of unexpected salvation, 3 saying within themselves, (b) repenting, and sighing for anguish of spirit: These are they, whom we had sometime in derision, and in a parable of reproach.

(b) Repentance of the damned is only for the loss & pain whereinto they are fallen, not of love towards God, or virtue, nor of hate towards sin, & therefore is fruitless bringing no comfort nor help at all, but everlasting torment and anguish of mind.

4 [1] We senseless esteemed their life madness, and their end without honour.

[1] Chap. 3. v. 2.

5 Behold how they are counted among the children of God, and their lot is among the saints. 6 We therefore have erred from the way of truth, and the light of justice hath not shined to us, and the sun of understanding rose not to us. 7 We are wearied in the way of iniquity and perdition, and have walked hard ways, but the way of our Lord we have not known. 8 What hath pride profited us? Or what commodity hath the vaunting of riches brought to us? 9 All those things are passed away as a shadow, and as a messenger running before, 10 and as a ship, that passeth through the surging waters: whereof, when it is past, the trace cannot be found nor the path of that ship's keel in the waves: 11 [1] or as a bird, that flyeth through in the air, of which there is no token can be found of her passage, but only a sound of the wings beating the light wind: and by vehemence of going cutting the air, moving the wings she is flown through, and afterward there is no sign found of her way:

[1] Pro. 30. v. 19.

12 or as when an arrow is shot forth to a set mark, the divided air is forthwith closed in it-self again, so that the passage thereof is not known: 13 so we also being born forthwith ceased to be: and of virtue certes have been able to shew no sign: but in our naughtiness we are consumed. 14 Such things (c) said they in hell, which sinned:

(c) For the certainty of things that shall be, Prophets do very often speak in the pretertense, of things to come, as if they were already past.

15 because the hope of the impious is as dust, which is taken away with the wind: and as a thin froth, which is dispersed by the storm: and as smoke that is scattered abroad by the wind: and as the memory of a guest of one day that passeth. 16 But the just shall live for ever, and their reward is with our Lord, and cogitation of them with the Highest. 17 Therefore shall they receive a Kingdom of honour, & a crown of beauty at the hand of our Lord: because with his right hand he will cover them, and within his holy arm he will defend them. 18 And (d) his zeal will take armour, and he will arm the creature to the revenge of the enemies.

(d) As the joy of the blessed, so contrarywise the misery of the damned is marvelous great, & for ever unchangeable.

19 He will put on justice for a breast-plate, & will take sincere judgement for an helmet: 20 he will take equity for an invincible shield: 21 and he will sharpen fierce wrath for a spear, & the round world shall fight with him against the senseless. 22 The shots of lightnings shall go directly, & as it were from a bow of the clouds well bent they shall be cast forth, and shall light on a certain place. 23 And from rocked wrath shall thick hail-stones be cast, the water of the sea shall rage against them, and the rivers shall run together roughly. 24 A spirit of power shall stand against them, and as a hurlwind shall divide them: and their iniquity shall bring all the land to a desert, and naughtiness shall overthrow the seats of the mighty.

CHAPTER VI.

Kings and all Magistrates are again admonished to exercise justice: 7. otherwise they shall be more grievously punished. 13. Wisdom may easily be found 18. by those that sincerely desire it. 22. And is very profitable (25. excepting the envious, or ill disposed) 26. both to Prince and people.

Wisdom [1] is better than strength: and a wise man than a strong.

[1] Eccle. 9. v. 18.

2 Hear therefore ye kings, & understand, learn ye judges of the ends of the earth. 3 Give ear ye that rule multitudes, and that please yourselves in multitudes of nations: 4 because the (a) [1] power is given you of our Lord, and strength by the Highest, who will examine your works, and search your cogitations:

(a) All power is from God: & therefore to be respected, though the magistrates sometimes abuse their authority.
[1] Rom. 13. v. 1.

5 because when you were the ministers of his Kingdom, you judged not rightly, nor kept the law of justice, nor have walked according to the will of God. 6 Horribly and quickly will he appear to you: because most severe judgement shall be done on them, that bear rule. 7 For to the little one mercy is granted: but (b) the mighty shall mightily suffer torments.

(b) As every one's charge is more or less, so his account is easier or harder, and the punishment (if he offend) smaller or greater. S. Gre. ho. 9. in Evang.

8 For God will not except any man's person, neither will fear the greatness of any man: because he made the little and the great, & he hath equally care of all. 9 But to the stronger more strong torment is imminent. 10 To you therefore o kings are these my words, that you may learn wisdom, and not fall. 11 For they that have kept just things justly, shall be justified: and they that have learned these things, shall find what they may answer. 12 Covet ye therefore my words, and love them, and you shall have discipline. 13 Wisdom is clear, and such as never fadeth, and is easily seen of them that love her, and is found of them that seek her. 14 She preventeth them that covet her, that she first may shew herself unto them. 15 He that awaketh early to her, shall not labour: for he shall find her sitting at her doors. 16 To think therefore of her, is perfect understanding: and he that watcheth for her, shall quickly be secure. 17 Because she goeth about seeking them that be worthy of her, and in the ways she will shew herself to them cheerfully, and in all providence she will meet them. 18 For (c) the beginning of her is the most true desire of discipline.

(c) Wisdom is attained by this gradation, and so from first to last, a resolute desire joineth faithful souls to God. v. 22.

19 The care therefore of discipline, is love: and love is keeping of her laws: and the keeping of the laws, is the consummation of incorruption: 20 and incorruption maketh to be next to God. 21 Therefore the desire of wisdom leadeth to the everlasting Kingdom. 22 If therefore you be delighted with thrones, and with sceptres, o ye kings of the people, love wisdom, that you may reign for ever. 23 Love the light of wisdom all ye that bear rule over peoples. 24 But what wisdom is, and how she was made, I will declare: and I will not hide from you the mysteries of God, but from the beginning of her nativity I will search out, and set the knowledge of her into light, and will not let pass the truth: 25 neither will I go with pining envy: because such a man shall not be partaker of wisdom. 26 But the multitude of the wise is the health of the round world: and a wise king is the stability of the people. 27 Therefore take ye discipline by my words, and it shall profit you.

CHAPTER VII.

Whereas all men have the like birth and death, 7. wisdom maketh great difference, bringing all goodness, 13. and knowledge. 17. as well of natural things, 22. as moral: 25. which heavenly gift is a sparkle, and participation of wisdom increated, God himself. [1]

[1] The second part.
Wisdom proceedeth from God, and is procured by prayer.

I also certes am a mortal man, like to all, and of the earthly kindred of him that was made first, and in the womb of my mother was I fashioned flesh, 2 the time of (a) ten months was I brought together in blood, of the seed of man, and the delectation of (b) sleep concurring.

(a) The perfectest children are born in the beginning of the tenth month. (b) Children in the mother's womb are as in sleep.

3 And I being born received the common air, and fell upon the earth that is made alike, and the first voice like to all men did I put forth weeping. 4 I was nourished in swaddling cloths, and great cares. 5 For none of the kings had other beginning of nativity.
6 There is one entrance therefore into life to all men, and like departure. 7 For this cause (c) I wished, and understanding was given me: and I invocated, and the spirit of wisdom came upon me:

(c) Salomon (whose sayings are here recited) prayed for wisdom, & obtained it. 3. Reg. 3.

8 and I preferred her before Kingdoms and thrones, and riches I counted to be nothing in comparison of her. [1]

[1] 3. Reg. 3. v. 9.

9 Neither did I compare the precious stone to her: because all gold in comparison of her, is a little sand, and silver in the sight of her shall be esteemed as clay.
10 Above health and beauty did I love her, and purposed to have her for light: because her light cannot be extinguished. 11 And all good things came to me together with her, and very much honesty by her hands, 12 and I rejoiced in all: because (d) this wisdom went before me, and I was ignorant that she is the mother of all these.

(d) God first gave him grace to desire wisdom before all other things, as he explicateth plainly. cap. 8. v. 21.

13 Which I learned without fiction, and do communicate without envy, and her honesty I hid not.
14 For she is an infinite treasure to men: which who so have, are made partakers of the friendship of God commended for the gifts of discipline. 15 And to me God hath given to speak according to my mind, and to presume things worthy of those, that are given me: because he is the guide of wisdom, and the Creator of the wise: 16 For in his hand are both we, & our words, and wisdom, and the knowledge & discipline of works.
17 For he gave me (e) the true knowledge of those things which are: that I may know the disposition of the round world, and the virtues of the elements,

(e) Salomon was a most excellent Philosopher.

18 the beginning, & end, & midst of times, the permutations of changeable seasons, and consummations of times, 19 the courses of the year, and dispositions of the stars, 20 the natures of beasts, and furies of wild beasts, the force of winds, and the cogitations of men, the differences of plants, and virtues of roots, 21 & whatsoever are hid things and not foreseen, I have learned: for wisdom the worker of all taught me. 22 For in her is the spirit of understanding, (f) holy, only, manifold, subtile, eloquent, moveable, undefiled, sure, sweet, loving, good, sharp, who nothing hindereth well-doing,

(f) Proper Epithetons of the spirit of wisdom.

23 gentle, benign, stable, certain, secure, having all power, foreseeing all things, and that containeth all spirits: intelligible, clean, subtile. 24 For wisdom is more moveable than all moveable things: and reacheth every-where because of her cleanness. 25 For she (g) is a vapour of the power of God, & a certain sincere emanation of the glory of God omnipotent: and therefore no defiled thing cometh unto her.

(g) See the Annotation, Proverb. 1. v. 2.

26 For she is the brightness of eternal light, & the unspotted glass of God's majesty, and the image of his goodness. [1]

[1] Heb. 1. v. 3.

27 And whereas she is one, she can do all things: and permanent in herself she reneweth all things, and by nations transporteth herself into holy souls, she maketh the friends of God, and Prophets. 28 For God loveth none, but him that dwelleth with wisdom.

29 For she is more beautiful than the sun, and above all disposition of the stars, being compared to light she is found the first. 30 For night succeedeth to it, but malice overcometh not wisdom.

CHAPTER VIII.

Wisdom excelling all things that can be desired, 9. is worthily preferred as the cause of much estimation, 13. and of immortal glory, 16. without molestation. 21. All which is God's gift.

She (a) reacheth therefore from end unto end mightily, and disposeth all things sweetly.

(a) God, the increated wisdom is infinite, and wisdom created is also most excellent amongst God's gifts.

2 Her have I loved, and have sought her out from my youth, and have sought to take her for my spouse, and I was made a lover of her beauty. 3 [1] She glorifieth her nobility, having consociation with God: yea and the Lord of all hath loved her.

[1] 3. Re. 3.

4 For she is the mistress of the discipline of God, & the chooser of his works. 5 And if riches be desired in life, what is richer than wisdom, which worketh all things? 6 And if understanding do work: who is the worker of those things that are, more than she? 7 And if a man love justice: her labours have great virtues: for she teacheth sobriety, and prudence, and justice, and strength, than the which nothing is more profitable in life to men. 8 And if a man desire multitude of knowledge, she knoweth things past, & conjectureth of things to come: she knoweth the subtilties of words, and the solutions of arguments: she knoweth signs and wonders before they be done, and the events of times and ages. 9 (b) [1] I purposed therefore to bring her to me to live together: knowing that she will communicate unto me of good things, and will be a comfort of my cogitation & tediousness.

(b) This is also the speech of Salomon, recited by the writer of this book. [1] Prov. 3.

10 I shall have for her sake (c) glory with the multitudes and honour with the ancient being young:

(c) Of Salomon's wisdom, riches, glory, & renowned fame, not only the books of Kings & Paralipomenon, but also our Saviour doth witness. Mat. 6. & 12.

11 and I shall be found sharp in judgement, and in the sight of the mighty I shall be marvelous, and the faces of Princes will marvel at me. 12 Holding my peace they shall expect me, and whilst I speak many words, they shall lay their hands on their mouth.

13 Moreover by her I shall have (d) immortality: and I shall leave an eternal memory to them, that shall be after me.

(d) It is not certain that Salomon hath immortal glory, but rather by immortality is here understood that his glorious fame remaineth to the end of this world.

14 I shall dispose peoples, and nations shall be subject to me. 15 Horrible kings hearing shall fear me: in the multitude I shall seem good, and in battle strong.
16 Entering into my house, I shall rest with her: for her conversation hath no bitterness, nor her company tediousness, but joy and gladness. 17 Thinking these things with myself, and recording in my heart, that (e) immortality is in the kindred of wisdom,

(e) Nevertheless wisdom of her part giveth life and glory everlasting, to all that persevere to the end of this life.

18 and good delectation in her friendship, and in the works of her hands honesty without defect, and wisdom in the disputation of her talk, and glory in the communication of her words: I went about seeking, that I might take her to me. 19 And I was a witty child, and had gotten a good soul. 20 And whereas I was more good, I came to (f) a body undefiled.

(f) It is certain that Salomon was sometime innocent and holy, but was perverted by women. 3. Reg. 11.

21 And as I knew that I could not otherwise be continent, unless God gave it, this very thing also was wisdom, to know whose this gift was: I went to our Lord, and besought him, and said from my whole heart:

CHAPTER IX.

A prayer (made by Salomon) for wisdom, 9. whereby Superiors are able to govern: 13. which by only human wisdom, they cannot rightly perform.

God of my fathers, and Lord of mercy, which madest all things with thy Word,
2 [1] and by thy Wisdom didst appoint man, that he should have dominion of the creature, that was made by thee,

[1] 3. Reg. 3. v. 9. 12.

3 that he should dispose the round world in equity and justice, and execute judgement in direction of heart: 4 give me wisdom the assistant of thy seats, and repel me not from thy children: 5 because I am thy servant, and the son of thy handmaid, a weak man and of small time, and less to the understanding of judgement and laws. 6 And if one be perfect among the children of men, and thy wisdom be absent from him, he shall be counted for nothing. 7 (a) Thou hast chosen me king to thy people, and judge of thy sons and daughters: [1]

(a) Here again it is evident, that the Author reporteth Salomon's speeches. [1] 1. Para. 28. v. 5.

8 and badest me build a temple in thy holy mount, and an altar in the city of thy habitation, a similitude of thy holy tabernacle, which thou didst prepare from the beginning: [1]

[1] 2. Par. 1. v. 9.

9 and (b) thy wisdom with thee, which knew thy works, which then also was present when thou madest the round world, and knew what was pleasing to thine eyes, and what was direct in thy precepts. [1]

(b) Wisdom increated is with God, yea is God himself. [1] Prov. 8. v. 22.

10 (c) Send her from thy holy heavens, and from the seat of thy greatness, that she may be with me, and may labour with me, that I may know what is acceptable with thee:

(c) Wisdom which is given to men proceedeth from God as a gift created.

11 for she knoweth all things & understandeth, and shall conduct me in my works soberly, & shall keep me with her might. 12 And my works shall be acceptable, and I shall govern thy people justly, and shall be worthy of the seats of my father. 13 For (d) who of men is able to know the counsel of God? Or who can think what God will?

(d) Man's wisdom without special wisdom from God is not sufficient to govern ourselves, much less others.

14 For the cogitations of mortal men be fearful, and our providences uncertain. 15 For the body that is corrupted burdeneth the soul, and the earthly habitation presseth down the understanding that thinketh many things. 16 And we do hardly conjecture the things that are in the earth: and the things that are in sight, we find with labour. But the things that are in the heavens who shall search out? 17 And thy sense who shall know, unless thou give wisdom, and send thy holy Spirit from on high: 18 and so the paths of them that are on the earth, may be corrected, and men learn the things that please thee? 19 For by wisdom they were healed, whosoever have pleased thee o Lord from the beginning.

CHAPTER X.

The benefits of wisdom are declared by examples, in Adam, 4. Noe, 5. Abraham, 6. Lot, 10. Jacob, 13. Joseph, 15. and the people of Israel. [1]

[1] The 3. part.
The excellent effects of wisdom & justice.

She kept him, (a) that was first made of God father of the world, when he was created alone,

(a) Adam.

2 and she (b) brought him out of his sin, and gave him power to contain all things.

(b) By this it is certain that our first parent Adam truly repented, and had remission of his sin.

3 After the unjust departed in his anger from her, by the fury of brother's manslaughter he perished. 4 For whose cause, when water destroyed the earth, wisdom healed it again, governing (c) the just by contemptible wood.

(c) Noe.

5 She even in the consent of wickedness, when the nations had confederated themselves, knew (d) the just, and preserved him without blame to God, and in his son's mercy kept the strong.

(d) Abraham.

6 She delivered (e) the just, flying from the impious that perished, when the fire came down upon Pentapolis:

(e) Lot.

7 to whom for a witness of their wickedness the desert land standeth smoking, and (f) trees having fruits at uncertain season; and the memory of an incredulous soul a standing (g) pillar of salt.

(f) In all trees about Sodom there is only shew of fruit, which when it is touched falleth into dust. (g) Lot's wife an example of inconstancy.

8 For pretermitting wisdom they did not only slip in this, that they were ignorant of good things, but they left also unto men a memory of their foolishness, that in those things, in which they sinned in, they could not be hid neither. 9 But wisdom hath delivered them that observe her from sorrows. 10 And (h) [1] the just flying his brother's wrath, she conducted by the right ways, and shewed him the kingdom of God, and gave him the knowledge of the holy, did honest him in labours, and accomplished his labours.

(h) Jacob. [1] Gen. 28.

11 In the fraud of the circumventers of him she was present with him, and made him honourable. 12 She kept him from the enemies, and from seducers she defended him, and gave him a strong fight, that he might overcome, and know that wisdom is mightier than all. 13 [1] She forsook not (i) the just being sold, but delivered him from sinners: and she went down with him into the pit,

[1] Gen. 37. (i) Joseph.

14 [1] and in bands left him not, till she brought him the sceptre of a Kingdom, and might against them that oppressed him: and shewed them to be liars, that spotted him, and gave him eternal glory.

[1] Gen. 41.

15 The (k) just people, and seed without blame she delivered from the nations, that oppressed them.

(k) God's peculiar people.

16 [1]She entered into the soul of the servant of God, and stood against dreadful kings in wonders and signs.

[1] Exo. 1.
Exo. 3.

17 And she rendered to the just the hope of their labours, and conducted them in a marvelous way: and she was unto them for a cover in the day, and for the light of stars by night: 18 [1]and she transported them through the Red sea, and carried them over through a great water.

[1] Exo. 14.

19 But their enemies she drowned in the sea, and from the depth of hell she brought them out. Therefore the just took the spoils of the impious, 20 [1]and they sang thy holy name o Lord, and thy victorious hand they praised together:

[1] Exo. 12.
Exo. 15.

21 because wisdom hath opened the mouth of the dumb, and the tongues of infants she hath made eloquent.

CHAPTER XI.

Other benefits of wisdom, protecting the Israelites in the desert; 3. overthrowing their enemies; 4. giving them water out of a rock; 8. plaguing the Aegyptians, 28. yet not all suddenly, but by often admonitions, that they might have repented if they would.

She[1] directed their works in the hands of a (a)holy Prophet.

[1] Exo. 16.
Exo. 27. (a) Moyses.

2 They made a journey through the deserts, that were not inhabited: and in desert places they pitched cottages. 3 They stood against (b)the adversaries, and revenged themselves of the enemies.

(b) The Amalechites. Exo. 17.

4 [1]They thirsted, and invocated thee, and water was given them out of a most high rock, and quenching of their thirst out of the hard stone.

[1] Num. 20.

5 For by the things whereby their enemies suffered punishment, for defect of their drink, and therein, when the children of Israel abounded, they did rejoice: 6 by these things, when others lacked the same, it went well with them. 7 For in stead of the fountain of an everlasting river, thou gavest man's blood to the unjust. 8 Who when they were diminished in the destruction of the murdered infants, thou gavest them aboundant water unlooked for: 9 shewing by the thirst, that then was, how thou didst exalt thine, & didst kill their adversaries. 10 For when (c)they were tempted, and indeed with mercy taking discipline, they knew how (d)the impious being judged with wrath did suffer torments.

(c) When the Israelites wanted water God gave them abundance out of rocks. (d) But turned the Aegyptians' waters into blood.

11 These certes admonishing as a father thou didst prove: but them examining as a hard king thou didst condemn. 12 For the absent and the present were tormented alike. 13 For double tediousness had taken them, and sighing with the memory of good things past. 14 For when they understood (e)by their punishment that it went well with them, they remembered our Lord, marveling at the end of the event.

(e) After affliction the benefit of peace is more grateful.

15 (f)For whom before they derided, being cast forth in that wicked laying out to perish, him they marveled at in the end of the event: not thirsting in like manner to the just.

(f) Moyses was rejected when he judged between his brethren Exod. 2. v. 14. but was afterwards the deliverer of the whole people. Act. 7. v. 45.

16 But for senseless cogitations of their iniquity, for that (g)some erring did worship dumb serpents and superfluous beasts, thou didst send upon them a multitude of dumb beasts for revenge:

(g) Aegyptians serving beasts for gods, where plagued by frogs, sciniphs, flies, and locusts.

17 that they might know that by what things a man sinneth, by the same also he is tormented. 18 For thine omnipotent hand, which made the world of invisible matter, was not unable to send upon them a multitude of bears, or fierce lions,[1]

[1] Levi. 26. v. 22. Iere. 8. v. 17.

19 or unknown beasts full of anger of a new kind; or breathing the vapour of fires, or casting forth the savour of smoke, or shooting horrible sparks from their eyes: 20 of which not only their hurt was able to destroy them, but also their sight to kill them for fear. 21 Yea and without these with one spirit they might have been slain suffering persecution of their own facts, and dispersed by the spirit of thy power: but thou hast disposed all things in measure, and number, and weight. 22 For, to be of great force rested always in thee only: & who shall resist the power of thine arm? 23 Because as the least weight of the balance, so is the round world before thee, and as a drop of the dew before day, that falleth upon the earth. 24 But thou hast mercy on all, because thou canst do all things, and dissemblest the sins of men for repentance. 25 For thou (h) lovest all things that are, and hatest nothing of those which thou hast made: for thou didst not ordain or make any thing hating it.

(h) God made no creature evil, as the Manichees foolishly imagined, neither is there any God but one who alone created all things.

26 And how could any thing continue, unless thou wouldest? Or be preserved which was not called of thee? 27 But thou sparest all: because they are thine o Lord, which lovest souls.

CHAPTER XII.

God's wisdom and mercy in destroying the wicked inhabitants of Chanaan, by parts (10. that they might have amended) whom he could have slain suddenly. 15. In that God never condemneth the just, 19. his people are instructed to confide in him, 25. and sinners to turn unto him.

O how good and sweet is thy spirit o Lord in all! 2 And therefore those that err, by parts thou doest chastise: and doest admonish, and speak to them, concerning the things wherein they sin: that leaving naughtiness, they may believe in thee o Lord. 3 For those old inhabitants of thy holy land, whom thou didst abhor, 4 because they did works odious to thee by sorceries, and unjust sacrifices, 5 and the murderers of their own children without mercy, and eaters of men's bowels, and devourers of blood from the midst (a) of thy sacrament,

(a) From the land of Iury, called sacred, because God was there rightly served in the old testament, and man's redemption was wrought there by Christ.

6 and the parents authors of aidless souls, thou wouldst destroy by the hands of our parents, 7 that they might receive a peregrination worthy of the children of God, which is a land of all most dear to thee. 8 But them also as men thou didst spare, and didst send forerunners of thine host, wasps, that by little and little they might destroy them. 9 Not because thou wast unable in battle to subdue the impious to the just, or with cruel beasts, or with a sharp word to destroy them together:[1]

[1] Exo. 23. Deu. 7.

10 but judging by parts thou gavest place of repentance, being not ignorant, that the nation of them is wicked, and their malice (b) natural & that their cogitation could not be changed for ever.

(b) By custom malice became as it were natural, after that nature was corrupted.

11 For it was a cursed seed from the beginning: neither fearing any, didst thou give pardon to their sins. 12 For who shall say to thee: what hast thou done? Or who shall stand against thy judgement? Or who in thy sight shall come revenger of the wicked men? Or who shall impute it to thee, if the nations perish, which thou hast made? 13 For there is no other God but thou, who hast care of all, that thou mayst shew that thou doest not give judgement unjustly.

14 Neither king, nor tyrant in thy sight shall inquire of them, whom thou hast destroyed. 15 For so much then as thou art just, thou doest dispose all things justly: thou also esteemest it disagreeable from thy power to condemn him, who ought not to be punished.
